Our people, ambitious to pay an implicit obedience to the resolves of the honourable American Congress, and zealous to enthusiasm of exerting themselves in defence of invaded liberty, by securing Captain Jones, preventing his trade, seizing the tender, and arming a sloop to annoy the transports loading at Nova-Scotia for the use of the Crown Army, have thrown themselves into the arms of immediate want; and, to heighten the distress, a long winter is approaching on us, attended with all the horrors of famine. Oh, sir, though extreme modesty has hitherto prevented my mentioning these things fully to you, lest I should prove too impertinent by being troublesome, I beg leave to epitomise them here; painful the idea, but how heightened to such as are assured of exchanging sympathy, for suffering sensibility preponderates against the scale of selfishness, and makes our interest one. I find a willingness to sacrifice the trifle I own for their support; but could I negotiate it, it would be but small. Gratitude, powerful gratitude, would constrain all as one every way to exert themselves to make the speediest and justest returns, could they be so happy as to obtain credit, while the most indelible characters of thankfulness imprinted themselves on their hearts. With respect to myself, I can only say, were I influenced by the most abandoned principles that ever stood opposed to truth and justice, a regard for my interest, and a more tender one for my family, would constrain me to do everything for the welfare of that place, which only can thrive on the foundations of honour, honesty, and virtue. Were any gentlemen within the circuit of your acquaintance, in commiseration of our distress, pleased to afford us relief by crediting us with provisions, every assurance in my power shall be given them for the speediest payment possible; but can this not be, God only knows what will become of us. May I beg the honour of receiving your advice in these matters, your pardon for the intrusion on your moments, the absolute result of lively distress, and permission to subscribe myself, most respectfully, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

STEPHEN PARKER.

To Jonathan Smith, Esq., Philadelphia.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Perth-Amboy, August 11, 1776.

SIR: About twelve hundred spears are sent off, agreeable to your orders, by Mr. Tilghman. I shall push on as many of the Flying-Camp and volunteers as possible, but cannot, as yet, ascertain the number. Every assistance we can procure will be given to facilitate the passage of the troops at all the ferries.

The tender I mentioned yesterday keeps the same station as hitherto. We perceive no remarkable alteration in the numbers of the enemy on Billop's Point or Staten-Island. The Pennsylvania Associators continue to desert by bodies. Seventeen went off from the Fourth Battalion last night, and am just now informed of another party who have left camp. I hear of several companies about to join, and hope still to keep up a formidable appearance.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most humble servant,
HUGH MERCER.

GENERAL MERCER TO COLONEL DICKINSON.

Perth-Amboy, August 11, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour by Mr. Brown, and in consequence of your intelligence have sent off an express with letters, one to the Convention of New-Jersey, acquainting them of the desertion of numbers of the Pennsylvania Militia, and desiring them to order out their Militia, to guard the ferries and take other effectual steps to secure the deserters; the other to Congress, advising them of the unhappy condition of the Militia, and desiring them to take such steps as might seem necessary on the occasion, as these parts were like to be left exposed to the enemy. In consequence of a requisition from General Washington, I have ordered a number of troops to New-York. Colonel Miles, with about seven hundred riflemen, marches this day. Colonel Atlee, with his battalion, and a number more, will march to-morrow. To facilitate their march, I have thought some might be passed over in boats from Crane's Ferry to Brown's Ferry, on Hackensack. Therefore, all the boats that can be had up the river should be collected.

H. MERCER.

To Colonel John Dickinson, commanding at Elizabeth-Town.

[Thus endorsed by me: "This letter was received on the 10th of August, 1776, therefore dated wrong. Consulted the Committee on the measure proposed, who disapproved it. Acquainted General Mercer with the reasons." J. D.]

GENERAL MERCER TO COLONEL DICKINSON.

Perth-Amboy, August 11, 1776.

SIR: I had intended to order Colonel Grub's battalion, of Lancaster County, to New-York; but I have ordered him to Elizabeth-Town. You will use your utmost address to induce the Militia to perform their duty at this critical time, when the fate of America is so near being determined. Colonel Grub is very willing to go anywhere. I have desired him to consult with you on the defence of the Jersey shore. Be so good as to point out to him the necessity of strong guards on Bergen Neck.

H. MERCER.

To Colonel John Dickinson, commanding at Elizabeth-Town.

GENERAL MERCER TO COLONEL DICKINSON.

Perth-Amboy, August 11, 1776.

SIR: I wrote to you a few hours ago that Colonel Grub would march with his battalion for Elizabeth-Town to-morrow morning, which I hope will be time enough to reinforce your post. This morning I wrote to your brother, the General, to take the most effectual measures to coöperate with us.

H. MERCER.

To Colonel John Dickinson, commanding at Elizabeth-Town.

LETTER FROM AN OFFICER TO COLONEL DICKINSON.

SIR: The company seem determined to go off to-morrow morning. Their going will, in my opinion, be followed by the First Battalion and the rest. The present is a matter of infinite consequence. If Colonel Dickinson will give his sentiments to the battalion this afternoon, I am convinced it would be effectual in quieting the present disturbance.

VICE ADMIRAL LORD VISCOUNT HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Eagle, off Staten-Island, August 11, 1776.

MY LORD: Conceiving it of the utmost importance, in pursuit of the objects of the special commission with which I had the honour to be charged by his Majesty, that the Colonies in rebellion should have the earliest information of his Majesty's most gracious intentions with respect to the restoration of peace, and the granting of pardons to such of his Majesty's subjects as, by a speedy return to their allegiance, might deserve the Royal mercy, I thought proper in the course of my voyage to prepare a Declaration to that effect, together with a Circular Letter addressed to the Governors, or, in their absence, the Lieutenant-Governors or Chief Magistrates of the respective Colonies; copies of which I have the honour to enclose to your Lordship, No. 1 and 2. [Letter and Declaration, dated June 20, 1776.]

I had little expectation that these Letters and Declaration would reach the hands of his Majesty's Governors. My object was, that they should be circulated as much as possible throughout the Provinces; and I hoped to have found an opportunity of landing them soon after the time of their date by means of some vessel I might meet with upon the coasts; but no opportunity offered till I arrived off the harbour of New-York on the 12th of last month, when I despatched the First Lieutenant of the Eagle to Amboy, with those intended for the Colonies to the southward of New-York, directing him to deliver them to any person who might appear in authority, and to desire they might be forwarded by the post.

The enclosed printed paper, No. 3, which came accidentally to my hands, will inform your Lordship of the resolution of the General Congress, [of July 19, 1776,] upon their receipt of the above-mentioned packets, which it seems were transmitted by Mr. (called General) Mercer, the commanding officer at Amboy, to Mr. Washington, at New-York, and by him to the Congress.

Captain Burnaby, in the Merlin sloop, was charged with the packets for the Colonies of Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, and New-Hampshire, and directed to land them at Rhode-Island. On the 28th of last month he returned, with a letter to me from Mr. Cooke, acknowledging the receipt of my Letter and Declaration, and acquainting me that he had communicated them to "the General Assembly of that State," then sitting at Newport, who would transmit copies of them to "the most honourable the General Congress of the United States of America, to whom every application ought to be addressed, and must be referred." A copy of Mr. Cooke's letter to me is enclosed, No. 4, [dated Newport, July 21, 1776.]

As the issuing the above-mentioned Letters and Declaration is the only measure I judged necessary to take before I could have a conference with General Howe, I have nothing further to add in this separate despatch, but my hopes of being informed by your Lordship that my conduct is honoured with his Majesty's approbation.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

HOWE.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE COMMITTEE OF QUEEN'S COUNTY, NEW-YORK.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The publick exigencies having required my apprehending a number of suspected persons in your County, and sending them into another Colony for a short time, they have expressed some apprehensions that, in their absence, their property may be exposed to injury, and their families deprived of the support they would otherwise derive from it. I therefore beg leave to acquaint you that a temporary restraint of their persons is all that is intended by the present measure; and that it would give me much pain if it should be construed to extend to any depredation of property, that matter resting entirely within the jurisdiction of the civil authority of the Province. Until, therefore, some orders are received from them to that effect, I shall be happy in believing you will exert your whole power and influence to prevent the mischief which these gentlemen seem to apprehend.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Committee of Queen's County, Long-Island.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In answer to your favour of the 9th, with which I have been honoured, I beg leave to inform you that I neither wish nor expect anything more than that the levies raised by you will be in Continental pay from the time they were called into service. That troops employed in a general cause should be supported at the general expense, is so evidently just that I cannot see any objection to it.

It is true when the proceedings of your honourable body for raising these levies were first communicated to me, and it was mentioned by the Committee who brought them that it was expected they would be paid by the States, I did not think myself authorized to take into service so large a number of men, and therefore could not say the States would pay them; but the situation of our affairs being much changed, and requiring their service, I cannot but consider them as much entitled to Continental pay as any troops in this Army. In this light I am persuaded Congress will view them. It is so obvious and so equitable, that no application from me can be necessary. The bounty, I imagine, as you yourselves do, will be the expense of the State, for which indemnification will not be made by the publick. My letter of the 8th was not meant to comprehend this subject. It was particularly designed to explain my ideas of the authority from whence General Clinton's powers were derived.

I have requested Mr. Trumbull to take the direction of the Commissaries, and to see that the levies are properly supplied with provisions. I am extremely concerned that the quotas of men to be furnished by the neighbouring States have proved so deficient. The busy season and harvest, to which it has been ascribed, being now over in a great degree, I flatter myself, from the zeal they have heretofore manifested, they will afford every possible assistance. They are well apprized of the importance of this State in the present contest, and the necessity of maintaining it against the attempts of the enemy.

In respect to the Militia of Albany County, as you are pleased, in your proceedings of the 10th instant, to submit the propriety of calling them out to my determination, I would advise that they should not, unless the necessity for bringing them here should be extremely great; they otherwise should remain in their County, to afford succour to the frontier parts of the Government, if it should be necessary. I have enclosed a copy of Lieutenant McMichael's report, transmitted me by General Schuyler, from whence it will appear, if the intelligence contained in it be true, that their aid may be required there.

I have desired General Greene, on the application of the Committee sent to King's County, to afford them every assistance he conveniently can, for executing the business they are upon.

Before I conclude, I would observe, the letter of the 9th, which I have acknowledged to have received, is without any signature. I presume it has been omitted through the hurry of business.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, August 11, 1776.

SIR: Necessity obliges me to trouble your Honour with some more suspected persons, whose characters are such as to make it unsafe for them to remain at their usual places of abode on Long-Island; and there is no retreat in this Province where they may not do some mischief, or be less secure than our safety requires. As they are apprehended merely on suspicion, arising from a general line of conduct unfriendly to the American cause, I have given them reason to expect from you every indulgence which your good judgment will admit you to allow them, consistent with the publick safety. There are few of them who will not defray their own expenses, and those few their companions of better circumstances will assist, if convenience will admit their being together in the same place, which will be a saving to the publick. If there are any quite destitute, I presume they must be put on the footing of other prisoners in like circumstances. They express a very earnest desire to be permitted to choose their own lodging and accommodations, to which I see no objection. But as I have referred them entirely to you, I do not choose to enter into any engagements on this or any other point, only adding generally, that I could wish they might have every accommodation and indulgence, having a respect to their rank and education, which may be deemed consistent with safety; and they are given to understand that your humanity and politeness will most effectually prevent their being liable to any unnecessary hardships.

I am, with much respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

P. S. I am just informed that Judge Jones has obtained some letters of recommendation to Connecticut, from which he expects to be permitted to stay at New-Haven. Unless very particular circumstances should require it, I cannot but think you will agree with me that these prisoners should be removed from seaport and post towns, as the intention of removal from hence is not fully answered, while they have opportunities of carrying on correspondence.

JEDEDIAH HUNTINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp, New-York, August 11, 1776.

HONoured SIR: Judge Jones being taken up and ordered to Connecticut, has applied to me for letters to my friends. I am a stranger to any particulars of his political character, except that he lately held a place under the Crown of England. His character as a gentleman I believe unexceptionable. He has shown me some civilities. I think I can assure him that he will be secure from any insult or abuse, and that he will experience from my friends and others every civility compatible with his situation.

I am, most affectionately, your son,

JED'H HUNTINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp on Long-Island, August 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: There is no proper establishment for the supplying the Regimental Hospital with proper utensils for the sick. They suffer, therefore, for want of proper accommodation. There is repeated complaint upon this head. The Regimental Hospitals are and ever will be rendered useless, nay, grievous, unless there is some proper fund to provide the necessary conveniences. The General Hospital cannot receive all the sick, and those that are in the Regimental Hospitals are in a suffering condition. If this evil continues, it must greatly injure the service, as it will greatly dispirit the well to see the sick suffer, and prevent their engaging again upon any conditions whatever. Great humanity should be exercised towards those indisposed. Kindness on one hand leaves a favourable and lasting impression; neglect and suffering on the other, is never forgotten.

I am sensible there has formerly been great abuses in the Regimental Hospitals; but I am in hopes in general men of better principles are elected to those places, and that the same evils will not happen again. But the Continent had better suffer a little extraordinary expense than the sick should be left to suffer for want of those conveniences that may easily be provided.

I would beg leave to propose that the Colonels of regiments be allowed to draw moneys to provide the Regimental Hospitals with proper utensils; an account of the disbursements weekly or monthly to be rendered. This will prevent abuse and remedy the evil. Something is necessary to be done speedily, as many sick are in a suffering condition.

I am your Excellency's most obedient servant,

NATH. GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

N. B. The General Hospital is well provided with every thing, and the sick very comfortable. I wish it was extensive enough to receive the whole, but it is not.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sunday, 11 o'clock. }

DEAR SIR: Enclosed is a list of the principal Tories in the different towns, given before Mr. Skinner, a young gentleman bred to the practice of the law, and perfectly acquainted with almost all the political characters in the Province. Your Excellency will please to examine it, and if it meets your approbation, signify the time you will have the execution take place, by giving your orders on the back of the list.

I have the honour to be your obedient servant,
N. GREENE.

GENERAL GATES TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Tyonderoga, August 11, 1776.

SIR: I must entreat your Excellency to pardon my so long delaying to send you a particular state of the Army of the United States in this department.

Upon my first joining the troops (or rather the Hospital) at Crown-Point, all was in the utmost disorder—the pestilence raging, not a cannon mounted, the vessels lumbered with stores, the men dispirited with defeat and fatigue, and, in short, the whole a scene variegated with every distress and disappointment that could conspire to ruin an army. In this miserable state, the first thing to be done was, if possible, to remove the pestilence. Accordingly the General Officers unanimously resolved to send all the sick and infected to the General Hospital at the south end of Lake George; to remove the main body of the Army to the important pass of Tyonderoga; to send the vessels with the utmost despatch to be refitted at Skenesborough; and to begin to erect strong works upon the ground described in the enclosed plan. These measures—thank the Giver of all victory—the enemy either have not had the means or the wisdom to prevent.

Our fleet, since the arrival of the reinforcement of carpenters, grows daily more and more powerful. Enclosed is a list of those manned, armed, and ready for action at Crown-Point. A schooner, a row-galley, and three gondolas, are rigging here, and will this week join those at Crown-Point, when General Arnold will sail with the whole down the Lake. Three fine row-galleys will be finished in a fortnight at Skenesborough, and will directly join the rest of the fleet under General Arnold. This is a naval force, when collected, that promises to secure the command of Lake Champlain.

I ordered Colonel Trumbull to send your Excellency a general return of the Army soon after our return hither, and desired him to write your Excellency an account of the then state of our affairs. Happy am I in saying they are so much altered for the better.

In the packet you will find a copy of my last letter to the most honourable the Continental Congress; also the report of Major Bigelow, who returned last night with his flag of truce, which he carried from hence the 23d ultimo with the resolves of Congress relative to the capitulation of the Cedars and the exchange of prisoners engaged for by General Arnold. General Carleton's orders issued in consequence of the despatch sent by the flag of truce, you will find enclosed. They astonish me; for with their prosperity, the Generals of the British Army seem to have lost their good understanding.

Enclosed is copy of a letter this moment sent off express to Major Hawley at Northampton. I must beg your Excellency's authority may be exerted to bring these delinquents to justice. If that cannot be had, let them feel all the shame and disgrace they so richly deserve from their injured country.

A Captain and thirty-nine carpenters from Rhode-Island, hired by the United States at prodigious wages, General

Waterbury writes me word, are inoculated at Williamstown. I beg you, sir, to write to Governour Cooke to dismiss them immediately. Pay, they do not deserve a penny; they should on no account be permitted to come to Skenesborough. I am confidently assured we can do without them. The Massachusetts Militia, I am told by Brigadier-General Brickett, who arrived here last night, are all near at hand, and have all tents and camp equipages with them. I am sorry to be informed that my respectable friends from Connecticut are coming without these necessary articles. New-Hampshire have sent their Militia equally deficient. Colonel Wingate's and Colonel Wyman's regiments from that Colony are now in this camp.

I am harassed to death with writing. The Congress, General Washington, General Schuyler, I am obliged constantly to correspond with; the whole business of this Army to direct, with all the variety of writing demanded thereby; and to make the load the heavier, my principal copyist is sick. Your son, who is very industrious, does all he can to aid me, but his own duty is enough for any one man. This, sir, must be my apology for all imperfections.

With the greatest respect, I am, sir, your Excellency's most faithful and most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Governour Trumbull.

P. S. Your Excellency will please to communicate all, or any part of this intelligence, to the President of the Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL PUTNAM.

Tyonderoga, August 11, 1776.

DEAR PUT: Every fond mother dotes upon her booby, be his imperfections ever so glaring, and his good qualities ever so few. Crown-Point was not indeed your own immediate offspring, but you had a capital hand in rearing the baby. You cut all the logs, which are now rotten as dirt, and tumbled in the dust. No matter for that. Why should not you be fond of Crown-Point? If I live to be as old as you, I shall be as fond of Tyonderoga. I can assure you, I fancy already that my booby is a great deal handsomer than yours, and has a thousand excellences more than yours ever possessed. But don't be uneasy, the absurdities of your booby time will very soon obliterate; but mine will live for some future great engineer, like myself, to laugh at and despise. Joking apart: Have you blown up Staten Island? Have you burnt the enemy's fleet? Have you sent the two brothers to Hartford? What have you and what have you not done? Sense, courage, honour, and abilities, you know to be the great outlines of a General. My friend Tom Mifflin has an uncommon share of all four. Present my affectionate compliments to him. I shall preserve your letter for a winter evening's subject, when we three meet again.

Remember me affectionately, as you ought, and believe me, veteran, your sincere well-wisher and most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To General Putnam.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WATERBURY.

Tyonderoga, August 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The enclosed letter to Major Hawley, I desire you will forward immediately by express, and order the express to wait for the Major's answer, and then return immediately to Skenesborough. You will send it directly to me.

General Brickett arrived here yesterday evening. He says the whole of the Massachusetts Militia have tents. The carts that carry them he thinks will be obliged to go by Skenesborough. As soon as they arrive there, you will send them under the care of proper officers to Tyonderoga.

The naval stores wanted at your post shall be sent to Skenesborough as fast as it comes to hand.

I would have the whole of the Massachusetts Militia sent here as soon as their tents come forward. If the carts with their tents get here by the road General Brickett came, I will let you know it immediately. Yours, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

To General Waterbury.

GENERAL GATES TO MAJOR HAWLEY.

Tyonderoga, August 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: A villain of a Surgeon (or what is commonly called a Doctor) is inoculating the Militia as fast as they arrive at Number Four. Such a slave to private gain, who would sacrifice this Army for the sake of obtaining a few dollars to himself, deserves to be immediately brought to condign punishment. Were he within my reach, it would not be many minutes before he should feel the weight of my resentment. That not being the case, I must apply to you, to beg you would write to the Chairman of the Committee of Number Four, directing him to exert his utmost power to stop this most pernicious practice, and, if possible, to send the doctor instantly to jail. As fine an Army as ever marched into Canada has this year been entirely ruined by the small-pox. If the Militia, which ought long ago to have been here, are once infected, this country will infallibly be exposed to the invasion of the enemy. Such officers as have stayed upon the way to be inoculated, shall, they may depend upon it, be brought to a General Court-Martial as soon as they arrive at Skenesborough. The country is at an enormous expense for these troops. Individuals receive vast sums to go as substitutes in the Militia. The provisions and carriages are also provided at an amazing charge; and all this, that these men, rather than march where they are commanded, may get inoculated, by which a month of the short time they are engaged for elapses, and perhaps the health of the whole Army is endangered.

Our fleet flourishes to my wish; and all would be well in this quarter could the Militia be marched up immediately, and the pestilence kept from us. Our camp here and at Skenesborough have long been perfectly purged of it.

I am, dear sir, your affectionate humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Major Hawley, at Northampton.

COLONEL M. OGDEN TO AARON BURR.

Ticonderoga, August 11, 1776.

DEAR BURR: I yesterday received yours of July 29th and August 2d. The others I made mention of in the letter to Mrs. Ogden that I sent to you unsealed. In my last, you had a very particular account of the numbers, force, names, &c., of our Navy on the Lake. As to our leaving Crown-Point for this place, the Field-Officers knew nothing of it till it was concluded on by the Generals Schuyler, Gates, and Arnold.

General Arnold is taking a very active part—I mean in the command of the fleet. He will sail himself in a few days. He says he will pay a visit to St. John's. I wish he may be as prudent as he is brave. Well, now have at you for news. Last evening the flag of truce returned, bringing a letter directed to George Washington, Esq., and a truly ridiculous copy of a general order, which you will see at General Washington's by the time you receive this. But there is one part of it in which I think they in some measure accuse us justly: I mean that of assassinating, as they term it with too much truth, Brigadier-General Gordon. He was shot by the Whitcomb I mentioned in my last, who had been sent there as a spy. The act, though villanous, was brave, and a peculiar kind of bravery that I believe Whitcomb alone is possessed of. He shot Gordon near by their advanced sentinel; and, notwithstanding a most diligent search was made, he avoided them by mere dint of skulking.

I shall have the honour to command the New-Jersey redoubt, which I am now building, with the Regiment alone. It is situated on the right of the whole, by the water's edge. It is to mount two eighteen-pounders, two twelve, and four nine-pounders. In this I expect to do honour to New-Jersey.

I yesterday received a letter from Colonel Dayton, dated the 28th of July, at the German-Flats. He informs me that he is to take the command at Fort Stanwix.

Should there be anything to be had in New-York in the clothing way, I should be glad if you will lay some aside, no matter what—either small-clothes, shirts, stockings, or anything of the kind. My best compliments to General Putnam. If you will let Robert or Sawyer have the perusal of this, they would learn the news of this Army. Paper is so scarce, that one letter must serve both, unless something particular.

Yours sincerely,

MATT. OGDEN.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 11, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: The young man Thomson, who is clerk to Mr. Midkiff, and the Frenchman, Anthony Gerchard, arrived here the night before last. A canoe was immediately provided, and Thomson said they would set off in the morning. I gave him an additional pass, and fixed upon a proper person to seize them as soon as they were on board. Yesterday they staid all day; several suspicious persons were seen with them; and I expected we should have been able to have made some material discoveries. Just at dusk, yesterday, they got in their canoe, when they were seized, stripped, and their clothes and packs examined. We found some private papers, but no letters besides those which I now send by the bearer: they also, it seems, are of a private nature.

I fear there must have been a plan laid to have taken in the letters somewhere lower down on the Lake. A person might have gone from Ticonderoga, crossed above this, and went down on the east side to any particular place.

The lad had not a single letter to Mr. Midkiff. This seems very odd, as he had so much business to transact, that there should not be an answer from a correspondent.

Thomson possesses much knowledge and sagacity for his years. He is capable of conveying many verbal messages from the disaffected to the enemy. He has been in such places where we know there are numerous Tories.

He has been at Philadelphia, New-York, and Albany. He knows well the situation of our affairs, as well as the state of the Army and Navy in this department. In short, he is capable of giving our enemies almost every information they could wish.

In my opinion, it would be very wrong to let him or the Frenchman go down. They might be sent back to Albany, where they would be secure till such times as it were prudent to let them go home. I have the Frenchman under a guard. Thompson I have confined to Mr. Lewis's house. His money, amounting to upwards of $500, is deposited as a security with Mr. Lewis. The sooner they are removed from hence the better. Midkiff's mill has been burnt; he lives within five leagues of St. John's; he is undoubtedly against us at present.

As great part of my original orders here fall within the Department of the Navy, I have now only one party of three men down the Lake. Should anything more in that way be expected, I will cheerfully send out small parties in canoes or small boats. If we had a few whale-boats or barges, they would be very useful, as I understand the enemy have large bark canoes, which will hold between twelve and twenty men, and run very fast. The enemy had some of those canoes when Wilson was taken, and he had a clumsy batteau.

I have sent up some more oars. I have still a party with the oarmakers.

If anything more is to be done before I am ordered away, I shall be happy in executing your commands.

I am, sir, with great respect, your most humble servant,
THOS. HARTLEY.

To Major-General Gates.

MAJOR FRENCH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Hartford, August 11, 1776.

SIR: I was yesterday honoured with your letter, agreeing to my being exchanged for Colonel Allen or Major Meigs; in consequence of which I take the liberty of troubling you with a letter to General Howe on that subject; and though from my long having been honoured with his acquaintance, having frequently served under his command during the last war, I have not the least reason to apprehend a negative from him, yet I hope, should it prove otherwise, that you will get the consent of Congress to my being allowed the same privilege granted to Major Meigs.

Allow me, sir, to return you thanks for your attention to my situation, and to assure you that I am, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,
CHRIS. FRENCH.

THOMAS CUSHING TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Referred to Committee for Indian Affairs.]

Watertown, August, 1776.

SIR: I have been desired by the Commissioners appointed by the Society in London for propagating the Gospel among the Indians in New-England and the parts adjacent, to inform you that Mr. Samuel Kirkland has been employed by them as a Missionary among the Indians at Oneida, with a salary of £130 sterling per annum; more has been allowed him for a catechist; that Mr. Crosby has been employed as a Missionary among the Indians at Onaquagh, with a salary of £130 sterling per annum; and that Mr. John Sargeant, the bearer of this, has been employed as a Missionary among the Indians at Stockbridge, with a salary of £60 sterling per annum. These several salaries have been paid out of the moneys remitted from London by the Society, who have established a fund for these purposes. No remittances have been made from the Society to the Commissioners for the year past, and have been suspended by means of the cruel war commenced by Great Britain against these Colonies, so that the Commissioners are now without any fund to pay these Missionaries their salaries. Their residence among the Indians is certainly of great importance, and has been very useful and very serviceable to the common cause. The Indians are very desirous of their continuance; but as they are now destitute of a support, they will, unless speedily relieved, be obliged to quit this important service, so necessary to keep the Indians in the interest of the United States of America and from joining our enemies. It is therefore humbly submitted to the honourable Congress whether it would not be of great advantage to all the United States of America, for the reasons before mentioned, for the Congress to allow them, out of the Continental treasury, their usual salaries; and in case any remittances should be made from the Society in London for this purpose hereafter, the Commissioners have directed me to assure you that any sum the Continent may advance upon this occasion will be by them cheerfully refunded. The Commissioners request that your Honours would represent this matter to the honourable Congress, that they may take such order respecting the same as they may judge proper.

I am, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,
 THOMAS CUSHING.

CASE OF STOCKBRIDGE INDIANS, AS RELATED BY MR. SARGEANT.

Indians at Stockbridge, in the State of Massachusetts-Bay, are of the Mohekon tribe, and now number somewhat more than two hundred; the rest of the nation dispersed, residing chiefly in the State of New-York, and supposed to be about five hundred; consider Stockbridge as their capital; formerly, as their tribe was numerous and powerful, hath been held in great veneration by Delawares and Shawanese, especially the latter, with whom it hath long had alliances, offensive and defensive, and whom it hath several times assisted against their enemies; still keep up a correspondence with those two nations, as well as the Canadian Indians. This people have at all times been friendly to the Americans; generally attend the treaties between the Commissioners and the Six Nations. At Albany, in August, last year, declared they would join with the United States, and assist them against Great Britain, although the Six Nations should be neuter, or confederate with the other side; and some of them, for that purpose, went to the camp at Cambridge. Sent a message to the Shawanese this fall, inviting them to engage in the war with the United States. Mr. Sargeant, (father of the present Missionary to the Mohekons,) the first person employed in that function after the establishment of the Society for propagating the Gospel among the Indians, settled at Stockbridge about forty years ago, as it is supposed. The gentleman who succeeded him hath received no part of his stipend for twelve months past and upwards.

The Mohekons, in a speech to the Commissioners at Albany last year, after mentioning a dispute concerning their lands, declared their desire to have teachers and instructors among them, which the Commissioners promised, in their answer, to report to Congress.

London, September 26, 1776.

Advices have been received from Canada, dated August 12, which say that General Burgoyne's Army have found it impracticable to get across the Lakes this season; that the naval force of the Provincials upon the Lakes is too great for them to contend with at present; that they must build larger vessels for this purpose, and that these vessels cannot be ready before next summer. The Army will therefore be obliged to winter in Canada, about Montreal, St. John's, &c., and they will be in want of provisions, unless supplied from England. General Carleton has requested that a sufficient quantity of provisions may be sent. The design was, that the two Armies, commanded by the Generals Howe and Burgoyne, should coöperate; that they should both be on the Hudson's River at the same time; and that they should join about Albany, and thereby cut off all communication between the Northern and Southern Colonies.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CAPE NICHOLA MOLE, DATED AUGUST 12, 1776.

From the best authority, I am informed that four French frigates are ordered to cruise about this Island to protect the American trade, and two Spanish ships are to do the same about Porto Rico, for the like purpose. There are about eight or ten thousand troops in this Island. Twenty-nine ships of the line are getting ready at Brest, and fourteen at Toulon, and twenty thousand land forces, to put to sea, but where bound is not known. Twelve Spanish ships of the line and six frigates, with many land forces, went by here some weeks past for the Havana, but for what end is a secret.

GENERAL ARMSTRONG TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 13, 1776.]

Charlestown, August 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: In the beginning of May last I wrote the honourable the Continental Congress the state in which I found the troops here, as being entirely upon the establishment of this Colony, and in no other respect Continental than that of the uniformity of their purposes to coöperate in the great Continental design. In that situation, and being without Continental troops, I did not debate for a dubious command, which, had it even been offered me, (as it was not,) I could not with propriety accept, but begged to be favoured with the further orders of Congress; and being candidly asked by the President and others to wait the event, I preferred the disagreeable situation of long suspense to a precipitate departure, for reasons I conceived to be prudential and rather tending to the publick tranquillity; determined at the same time to repair to any neighbouring Colony where the enemy should make their first impressions; but have not yet been so happy as to know whether my letter was received. In some weeks the English fleet appeared, when the town began to barricade such places as we supposed would most favour the enemy's landing. In these and various other cases I contributed any advice I could give to the President of the Colony for their defence, who joined me in urging the march of General Lee with Continental troops; to whom, when he came, the President resigned the command, notifying this to the Provincials and Militia of the Colony in writing. Brigadier Howe also came with General Lee.

At this time the enemy took possession of Long-Island, some eight or nine miles from Charlestown, whereby it was evident the town was not their immediate object. Upon this unexpected manœuvre, General Lee ordered me to encamp at Haddrell's Point, on the main, separated from the town by a bay of five miles over, with the command of the main, and the neighbouring Island of Sullivan, which is also divided from Haddrell by an arm of the bay, which, even with the benefit of an unstable bridge, prevents the communication betwixt these two important posts but at low water only—a secret, this, to General Clinton, as was the paucity of our numbers, otherwise, no doubt, his conduct would have been different from what it was.

In this command, at first small, afterwards about two thousand, complicated as it was by different corps, and as many different regulations for their government, I have only to inform you, sir, that these troops, crude as they were in point of discipline, discovered a laudable disposition to have met the enemy; and as long as their health served, were generally so far subordinate that we were tolerably harmonious amongst ourselves, and favoured with an exemption from any degree of surprise or insult from the enemy, who lay partly on the rear of Sullivan and flank of the camp on Haddrell, and whose approaches we waited near six weeks, as certain at one post or the other; more especially at Haddrell's, which if gained, Sullivan must have fallen of course, without the risk of tarnish to the splendid walls of England, unequally arranged with indignant brow in battle's noisy line, against the feeble, the simple cabbage-stalk, but by secret and patriotic texture, the irrefragable palmetto.

General Clinton, probably misled by magnified reports of our numbers, cautiously declined the expected visit, and we, in the attitude of resistance, were too rigid to make the first bow, and unwilling to expose the young dancers to some awkward scrape on his slippery parade. In short, he was so surrounded by shipping, water, and impassable marsh, that we had no practicable access to him without a great many boats, and as these were collecting, he thought proper to decamp, and the last division of the fleet is now sailed from this bar about a week. I shall only add, the anxiety of many here to have eased your arms to the northward of the additional burden of these three thousand, that are now like to fall upon them.

The enemy being now far removed, and their return uncertain, I hope the honourable Congress will not consider me as regardless of their service when I beg leave to express my wishes to be recalled, conscious as I am that my constitution is too far run down by time to answer in any tolerable degree the designs of that appointment with which they have honoured me, in this very warm climate. The health I have enjoyed, and now do, depends, I am persuaded, on the benefit of the salts where I am situated, and of which I have no future certainty. Little, indeed, can I now promise my country in any situation, but still less here. On this consideration, General Lee has as good as promised my liberty from hence as soon as the season will admit me to travel; nor can there be any necessity of my stay at present, the troops being chiefly dispersed, except the town Militia and a few Colonial troops in the sundry forts; and should anything happen in the winter, which I must question, there are gentlemen at hand whose services cannot be inferior to mine, and to whom the climate is more familiar. And to these principal reasons of this request, collateral ones, not inconsistent with the duty of any man, might easily be added, which, if admitted, will serve to increase the obligation of your Honours' most obedient and most humble servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

P. S. Brigade-Major Conner has been very serviceable to the publick and to me. His commission not come to hand.

Charlestown, August 6, 1776.

His Excellency Major-General Lee, having thought proper to take the sense of Brigadiers-General Armstrong and Howe, and the Field Officers of the First, Second, Fourth, and Fifth Regiments of the South-Carolina forces, on a difference of opinion between his Excellency the President and General Lee, on the construction of a resolve of Congress, with respect to the above Regiments being in the Continental establishment, the following are the opinions of the above gentlemen on the subject:

Brigadiers-General Armstrong and Howe are clearly of opinion, from the face of the resolves of Congress, that the above Regiments are on the Continental establishment.

The other officers, being called upon, were as follows:

Colonels Gadsden and Moultrie, Continental.

Lieutenant-Colonel Sumpter, Continental.

Majors Cathell and Elliot, Continental.

Lieutenant-Colonel Pinckney, not Continental.

Lieutenant-Colonels Motte and Robertson, not Continental.

Major Henderson, not Continental.

ADDRESS OF BAPTIST CHURCHES IN VIRGINIA TO THE GOVERNOUR.

To His Excellency PATRICK HENRY, Jun., Esq., Governour of the Commonwealth of VIRGINIA:

The humble Address of the Ministers and Delegates of the Baptist Churches met in Association in LOUISA, August 12, 1776, in behalf of their brethren:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: As your advancement to the honourable and important station as Governour of this Commonwealth affords us unspeakable pleasure, we beg leave to present your Excellency with our most cordial congratulations.

Your publick virtues are such that we are under no temptation to flatter you. Virginia has done honour to her judgment in appointing your Excellency to hold the reins of Government at this truly critical conjuncture, as you have always distinguished yourself by your zeal and activity for her welfare, in whatever department has been assigned you.

As a religious community we have nothing to request of you. Your constant attachment to the glorious cause of liberty and the rights of conscience, leaves us no room to doubt of your Excellency's favourable regards while we worthily demean ourselves.

May God Almighty continue you long, very long, a publick blessing to this your native country, and, after a life of usefulness here, crown you with immortal felicity in the world to come.

Signed by order: JEREMIAH WALKER, Moderator.
JOHN WILLIAMS, Clerk.

ANSWER.

To the Ministers and Delegates of the Baptist Churches and the Members of that Communion:

GENTLEMEN: I am exceedingly obliged to you for your very kind Address, and the favourable sentiments you are pleased to entertain respecting my conduct and the principles which have directed it. My constant endeavour shall be to guard the rights of all my fellow-citizens from every encroachment.

I am happy to find a catholic spirit prevailing in our country, and that those religious distinctions which formerly produced some heats are now forgotten. Happy must every friend to virtue and America feel himself to perceive that the only contest among us, at this most critical and important period, is, who shall be foremost to preserve our religious and civil liberties.

My most earnest wish is, that Christian charity, forbearance, and love, may unite all our different persuasions, as brethren who must perish or triumph together; and I trust that the time is not far distant when we shall greet each other as the peaceable possessors of that just and equal system of liberty adopted by the last Convention, and in support of which may God crown our arms with success.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

P. HENRY, Jun.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL EWING.

[No. 130.]

Annapolis, August 12, 1776.

SIR: We send you an order on the Commissary of Stores for camp-kettles, knapsacks with haversacks, and wooden bottles, for Captain Young's company. Tents, gun-slugs, cartouch-boxes, and bayonet-belts, you will be pleased to get, if you have not already done it, for the three companies, viz: Posey's, Lowe's, and Young's. Captain Forrest we have ordered to remain in St. Mary's County, to supply the place of Thomas's Independent Company; he will be obliged to borrow arms from the Militia. We wish to forward you all in our power, but cannot agree to spare the arms in the hands of the Harford Committee, or in Dallam's possession. The companies of the battalion we propose to keep are not half armed. You must depend on your former order to the Committee. We have advanced the sum of £125 currency each to Captains Posey and Lowe. You are to account with Captain Lowe for £200 which he says you have already furnished him with. We expect to have the pleasure of seeing you in Annapolis before you go, when you have sent off the three companies. We are obliged to transmit our accounts to Congress, and therefore request you to come prepared to settle your whole account. We are, &c.

To Colonel Thomas Ewing.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GERARD HOPKINS.

[No. 131.]

Annapolis, August 12, 1776.

SIR: We have heretofore given Colonel Charles Greenbury Griffith an order for sundries for his battalion; but Captain Burgess's company is coming this way, and being more forward than the rest of the battalion, we request you would deliver him eighty-six gun-slugs, eighty-six bayonet-belts, fifteen camp-kettles, ninety cartouch-boxes, and ninety brushes and priming-wires, and deduct so many of each from the former order. We are, &c.

To Gerard Hopkins, Deputy Commissary.

JAMES CUNNINGHAM TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, August 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I was last before you, you were pleased to allow me a few days to consider on what I had best do to get a living for myself. I think, as this is the County in which I expect to live and spend my days, I cannot do better than enter into the service of this country. Though it may appear a little odd that I should be so ready to enter into the service of the States of America after being so long with Lord Dunmore, yet I am in hopes that it will not appear so when I tell you that I was, long before I left the fleet, looked upon as what they call a Rebel. I have been, by order of his Lordship, tried for such, and with great difficulty could get clear. I had a commission, which I was prevailed upon to accept by my friends, which I gave up in a very few days, since which I never took up arms against America. His Lordship, after that, endeavoured to distress me by every means. At last I formed the scheme of throwing myself upon the country which I once injured, to get clear of the most despotick wretch. Hoping, gentlemen, you will take my case into consideration, I remain your humble and obliged servant,

JAMES CUNNINGHAM.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

BALTIMORE COUNTY COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, August 12, 1776:

Present: William Lux, Chairman; A. Buchanan, C. Ridgely, (of Wm.,) W. Wilkinson, J. Standeford, W. Tolley, Jun., J. Calhoun, B. Griffith, W. Aisquith, A. Britain, G. Vaughan, T. Sollers, J. Moale, D. Shaw.

Henry Carback having enrolled in Captain Job Garrison's Company, an order was given to Captain John Tully Young to redeliver his Gun in the same order in which it was received.

Mr. Ridgely brought in three Muskets which he purchased at £12, and two Matchcoats at 30s.

The Fines imposed on Robert Evans and William Sinclair, as Non-enrollers, are remitted, they having enrolled in Captain Vaughan's Company. Benjamin Riston's fine is remitted, he having enrolled with Captain Shaw. Robert Cowell's fine is remitted, he being upwards of fifty years of age.

Messrs. William Lux, William Aisquith, and James Calhoun, are appointed a Committee to settle all Accounts against the publick, and exhibit them to the Committee on Monday next.

Mr. Caleb Merryman delivered ten Matchcoats and three Firelocks, which he purchased.

Captain James Bosley delivered two Guns, which were appraised on oath by Job Garrison and William Raven, viz: one the property of William Gad, 15s; one the property of Benkid Willson, £1 10s.

Attest:

GEO. LUX, Secretary.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, August 12, 1776.

Mr. A.* sets off to-day, if the rain should not prevent him, with Colonel Whipple of Portsmouth, a brother of the celebrated Miss Hannah Whipple, a sensible and worthy man. By him I have sent you two bundles of letters, which I hope you will be careful of. I thought I should not be likely to find a safer opportunity. By them you will see that my private correspondence alone is business enough for a lazy man. I think I have answered all but a few of those large bundles.

A French vessel, a pretty large brigantine, deeply laden, arrived here yesterday, from Martinique. She had fifty barrels of limes, which are all sold, already, at such prices that the amount of them will be sufficient to load the brig with flour. A trade, we see, even now, in the midst of summer, is not totally interrupted by all the efforts of our enemies. Prizes are taken in no small numbers. A gentleman told me a few days ago that he had summed up the sugar which has been taken, and it amounted to three thousand hogsheads; since which two other ships have been taken and carried into Maryland. Thousands of schemes for privateering are afloat in American imaginations. Some are for taking the Hull ships, with woollens for Amsterdam and Rotterdam; some are for the tin ships; some for the Irish linen ships; some for outward bound, and others for inward bound Indiamen; some for the Hudson's Bay ships; and many for West-India sugar ships. Out of these speculations many fruitless and some profitable projects will grow.

We have no news from New-York. All is quiet as yet. Our expectations are raised. The eyes of the world are upon Washington and Howe and their armies. The wishes and prayers of the virtuous part of it, I hope will be answered; if not, yet virtues grow out of affliction. I repeat my request that you would ask some of the members of the General Court if they can send me horses; and if they cannot, that you would send them. I can live no longer without a servant and a horse.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, August 12, 1776.

Mr. A. and Colonel Whipple are at length gone. Colonel Tudor went off with them. They went away about three o'clock this afternoon. I wrote by A. and Colonel Whipple too. By the latter I sent two large bundles, which he promised to deliver to you. These middle States begin to taste the sweets of war. Ten thousand difficulties and wants occur which they had no conception of before. Their Militia are as clamorous and impatient of discipline and mutinous as ours, and more so. There has been seldom less than four thousand men in this city at a time, for a fortnight past, on their march to New-Jersey. Here they wait, until we grow very angry about them, for canteens, camp-kettles, blankets, tents, shoes, hose, arms, flints, and other dittoes, while we are under a very critical solicitude for our Army at New-York, on account of the insufficiency of men.

I want to be informed of the state of things with you; whether there is a scarcity of provisions of any kind, of West-India articles, of clothing? Whether any trade is carried on, any fishery? Whether any vessels arrive from abroad, or whether any go to sea upon foreign voyages? I wish to know, likewise, what posture of defence you are in? What fortifications are at Nantasket, at Long-Island, Pettick's Island, &c., and what men and officers there are to garrison them? We hear nothing from the Massachusetts lately, in comparison of what we did when the Army was before Boston.

I must not conclude, without repeating my request, that you would ask some of the members of the General Court to send me horses, and if they cannot, to send them yourself.

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE CONGRESS.

[Read August 13, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

Woodbridge, August 12, 1776.

SIR: Since break of day this morning, upwards of eighty sail of ships have been seen standing in from sea towards New-York. At the requisition of General Washington, Colonel Miles's two battalions of Riflemen have gone on to reinforce his Excellency's Army, also Colonel Atlee's battalion of Musketry. About four hundred set off from Anboy this afternoon, and as many of the Flying-Camp and volunteers as will make up two thousand I shall have ready at Newark and Bergen, to assist in the defence of New-York, if required.

Notwithstanding the desertion of many of the Associators, we shall have a respectable force here. The Militia of this State are to be arranged universally; and the greatest number by far of the Pennsylvania gentlemen are actuated by the most laudable spirit, and voluntarily engage to serve their country wherever they are required to go.

Colonel Griffin will transmit a return of the force collected here by to-morrow. We require the indulgence of Congress on this head; but really such has been the various movements and dispersed situation of the troops, that regular reports could not be obtained. Among the variety of military arrangements that appear in this camp, some are inconsistent with regular duty. Colonels Miles and Atlee will not serve under the orders of Brigadiers Roberdeau and Ewing.

The Commissioner appointed by the Convention will have it in his power to regulate the rank to the satisfaction of all parties, by doing justice to the merit of the Colonels, who have long ago served with fidelity and honour. I beg the interposition of Congress on this matter; and have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

HUGH MERCER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I am this moment informed that since I left Amboy the number of the enemy's ships at Sandy-Hook is upwards of one hundred.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Woodbridge, August 12, 1776.

SIR: Give me leave to introduce to your Excellency's notice Colonel Atlee, of the Pennsylvania troops. His experience and attention to every part of the service intrusted to his direction will, I am persuaded, secure to him your regard. Colonel Burd will march this afternoon with about three hundred men of the Flying-Camp, including one company of Riflemen, volunteers from Cumberland, commanded by Captain Steel.

I intend to have ready at New-York, as speedily as possible, two thousand men to reinforce the Army at New-York, if you think their services there necessary.

I received your letter of yesterday, written probably under the apprehension that these posts were in danger of being abandoned. In consequence of the postscript, signifying your desire that no more troops, after Colonel Atlee's, should be sent to New-York from hence, I shall not send any more over the ferries till I hear from Head-Quarters.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

HUGH MERCER.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN THE SECOND BATTALION OF PHILADELPHIA, DATED AMBOY, AUGUST 12, NINE O'CLOCK A. M.

We have now in sight upwards of sixty sail of topsail vessels coming into Sandy-Hook. I suppose many more will appear, for every quarter of an hour they make their appearance round the Highlands. I suppose this is their grand fleet. Our battalion is ordered for New-York. Saturday Colonel Miles's two battalions, and this morning Colonel Atlee's battalion, and part of the Jersey Militia, marched for New-York; and in a few days most of the troops that are here will march for the same place, where they are in great want of men.

P. S. Half-after ten o'clock, ninety sail in sight.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Elizabeth-Town, August 12, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Your letter of the 8th instant I received on a journey to Brunswick on Friday last, when I had an opportunity of conferring with our Convention, and urging your Excellency's requisition relating to the Militia, the propriety of which is so obvious. I returned on Saturday evening, and delayed answering your favour in hopes of receiving the resolution of Convention thereon. I have just been favoured with a rough draught of their ordinance, which I shall send you as soon as I get a correct copy.

The outlines are, that the one-half of the whole Militia, without exception, be immediately called out, and join the Flying-Camp. That every person refusing his attendance be fined £3. That they be formed into thirteen battalions, and to remain on service one month, and then to be relieved by the other half.

There being no mention made of any number to be forwarded to New-York, I take it for granted the whole are to be under your Excellency's direction as to their station, &c.

The two thousand men for the Flying-Camp, under General Dickerson are in great forwardness, and (although very little acquainted with their duty) might answer a valuable purpose in New-York on the present emergency, especially as their places will be so soon filled by the half of the Militia now to be raised. A considerable body of the Militia must be kept here to supply the place of the Penn- sylvania Associators, who are deserting their post in considerable numbers, notwithstanding the most spirited exertions of their officers, and particularly their Colonel, whose behaviour does honour to his Province in particular and America in general. We have taken such measures as I hope will put a stop to any further behaviour of this kind. This corps, since our Militia were dismissed, have not carried on any of the works at the Point, which, as soon as they are relieved by any men under my command, I shall order to be prosecuted with all possible vigour, as it is more than probable the enemy will attempt an incursion into this Province, to which its present defenceless state in this part seems strongly to invite them.

I am, with much truth and regard, your Excellency's most obedient and humble servant,

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 14, 1776.]

New-York, August 12, 1776.

SIR: I have been duly honoured with your favours of the 8th and 10th instant, with their several enclosures.

I shall pay attention to the resolution respecting Lieutenant Josiah, and attempt to relieve him from his rigorous usage. Your letters to such of the gentlemen as were here, have been delivered; the rest will be sent by the first opportunity.

Since my last of the 8th and 9th, the enemy have made no movements of consequence. They remain nearly in the same state. Nor have we any further intelligence of their designs. They have not been yet joined by the remainder of the fleet with the Hessian troops.

Colonel Smallwood and his battalion got in on Friday; and Colonel Miles is also here, with two battalions more of Pennsylvania Riflemen.

The Convention of this State have been exerting themselves to call forth a portion of their Militia to an encampment forming above King's Bridge, to remain in service for the space of one month after their arrival there; and also half of those in King's and Queen's Counties, to reinforce the troops on Long-Island till the first of September, unless sooner discharged. General Morris too is to take post with his brigade on the Sound and Hudson's River for ten days, to annoy the enemy in case they attempt to land; and others of their Militia are directed to be in readiness in case their aid should be required. Upon the whole, from the information I have from the Convention, the Militia ordered are now in motion, or will be in a little time, and will amount to about three thousand or more. From Connecticut I am not certain what succours are coming. By one or two gentlemen who have come from hence, I am told some of the Militia were assembling, and from the intelligence they had, would march this week.

By a letter from Governour Trumbull, of the 5th, I am advised that the troops from that State, destined for the Northern Army, had marched for Skenesborough. General Ward too, by a letter of the 4th instant, informs me that the two regiments would march from Boston last week, having been cleansed and generally recovered from the small-pox. I have also countermanded my orders to Colonel Elmore, and directed him to join the Northern Army, having heard, after my orders to Connecticut for his marching hither, that he and most of his regiment were at Albany or within its vicinity. General Ward mentions that the Council of the Massachusetts State will have in from two to three thousand of their Militia to defend their lines and different posts, in lieu of the regiments ordered from thence agreeable to the resolution of Congress.

The enclosed copy of a resolution of this State, passed the 10th instant, will discover the apprehension they are under of the defection of the inhabitants of King's County from the common cause, and of the measures they have taken thereupon. I have directed General Greene to give the Committee such assistance as he can, and they may require, in the execution of their commissions; though, at the same time, I wish the information the Convention have received upon the subject may prove groundless.

I would beg leave to mention to Congress, that in a letter I received from General Lee, he mentioned the valuable consequences that would result from a number of Cavalry being employed in the Southern Department. Without them, to use his own expressions, he can answer for nothing; with one thousand, he would ensure the safety of those States. I should have done myself the honour of submitting this matter to Congress before, at his particular request, had it not escaped my mind. From his acquaintance with that country, and the nature of the grounds, I doubt not he has weighed the matter well, and presume he has fully represented the advantages that would arise from the establishment of such a corps. All I mean is, in compliance with his requisition, to mention the matter, that such consideration may be had upon it, if not already determined, that it may be deserving of.

I have transmitted a general return, whereby Congress will perceive the whole of our strength, except the two battalions under Colonel Miles, which coming in since it was made out, are not included.

I have enclosed a letter just come to hand from Martinique. Congress will please to consider of the purport, favouring me with their answer and a return of the letter.

This moiment (ten o'clock) report is made by General Greene that a man-of-war came in yesterday, and that sixty sail of ships are now standing in. No doubt they are a further part of the Hessian troops.

I have the honour to be, with all possible respect, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of }
New-York, at Harlem, August 10, 1776. }

Whereas this Convention has received information that the inhabitants of King's County have determined not to oppose the enemy:

Resolved unanimously, That a Committee be appointed to repair forthwith to the said County, and inquire concerning the authenticity of such report; and in case they find it well founded, that they be empowered to disarm and secure the disaffected inhabitants; to remove or destroy the stock of grain; and, if necessary, to lay the whole country waste; and for the execution of these purposes they be directed to apply to General Greene, or the Commander of the Continental troops in that County, for such assistance as they shall want; and ordered that Mr. Duer, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Hobart, and Colonel De Witt, be the said Committee.

Extract from the Minutes:

ROBERT BENSON, Secretary.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 6, 1776.

(Parole, Canterbury.)

(Countersign, Durham.)

One hundred and fifty men, with a Field-Officer, three Captains, six Subalterns, six Sergeants, six Corporals, and six Drums and Fifes, to proceed to Burdett's Ferry, opposite Mount Washington, to relieve the party now there. For this purpose to parade to-morrow with arms, on the grand parade, at seven o'clock, apply to General Putnam for boats, and attend to the tide.

Every Commanding Officer of a Regiment or Corps in future is to account, on the back or at the bottom of his Return, for all the officers and men returned to be on command, expressing the place and service in which they are engaged.

Notwithstanding the orders issued, and the interest the troops have in it, complaints are made of the bad behaviour of the troops to people at market, taking and destroying their things. The General declares, for the last time, that he will punish such offenders most severely; and in order that they may be detected, an officer from each of the guards nearest to those markets where the country-people are, to attend from sunrise till twelve o'clock; and he is strictly enjoined to prevent any abuses of this kind, to seize any offender and send him immediately to the Guard-House, reporting him also at Head-Quarters. The officers of guards in future will be answerable if there are any more complaints, unless they apprehend the offender. A copy of this order to be put up in every Guard-House in the city.

James McCormick, of Captain Harrington's Company, Colonel Sergeant's Regiment; Thomas Williams, of Captain Barnes's Company, and the same Regiment; Peter Burke, of Captain Ledyard's Company, John Green, of Captain Johnson's Company, both of Colonel McDougall's Regiment, all tried by a General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Webb was President, and convicted of "desertion," were sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes each. The General approves the sentences, and orders them to be put in execution at the usual times and places.

Hugh Lacey, of Captain Stewart's Company of Highlanders, tried by the same Court-Martial, and found guilty of "impudence and disobedience to the orders of his Captain," was sentenced to receive twenty lashes. The General is pleased to pardon him, on condition that he makes a suitable acknowledgment of his fault to his Captain.

Hendrick Lent, Jacob Lent, Elias Lent, Peter Brewer, Jeremiah Hewson, Oronimus Ackerman, all of Captain Hyatt's Company, and Colonel McDougall's Regiment, having been confined some time for "desertion," and no evidence appearing against them, they are ordered to be discharged for want of prosecution.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 7, 1776.

(Parole, Essex.)

(Countersign, Fairfield.)

The order of the 28th of July, respecting the removal of the sick from the Regimental to the General Hospital, having been misunderstood by some, the General directs that it be taken with the following explanation: The Regimental Surgeons are to send at any time, with the usual ticket, any patient to the General Hospital, whose case requires it, (putrid and infectious disorders always excepted.) Whenever the Director-General, or any Surgeon of the Hospital, by his direction, visits the Regimental Hospitals, they are to direct what patients are proper to be removed. But it is expected that when any Surgeon visits the Regimental Surgeon, and if they should differ in opinion, they will refer it to the Director-General, who has, by the resolutions of Congress, a superintendency over the whole. The General most earnestly recommends to the gentlemen in both departments to cultivate harmony and good agreement with each other, as conducive to their own honour and the good of the service.

A subaltern and twenty men to be placed at Hoebuck Ferry for examination of passengers: the officer to receive his orders from the Adjutant-General at Head-Quarters.

The Paymaster having received a supply of cash, the Colonels or commanding officers of Regiments are to apply for their June pay, and make up Pay-Rolls for July, and deliver them to their respective Brigadiers for examination.

As many soldiers discharge their pieces under pretence of ignorance of General Orders, and others having leave to do so from their officers because they cannot draw the charge, the General directs that the Colonel of the Regiment or commanding officer cause a daily inspection to be made of the state of the arms; and when any are found loaded which cannot be drawn, they are to cause such men to assemble on the Regimental parade, or some other convenient place, but at the same time, viz: retreat beating, and then discharge those pieces. No alarm will then be given, and the officers will see there is no unnecessary firing. It is the duty of the Colonel, and the reputation of his Regiment so much depends upon the good order of the arms, that the General hopes he, as well as every other officer and the men, will pay a special attention to it.

John Palsgrave Wylls, Esquire, is appointed Brigade-Major to General Wadsworth, and Mark Hopkins, Esq., to General Fellows. They are to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 8, 1776.

(Parole, Greenwich.)

(Countersign, Kensington.)

Passes signed by the President of the Convention of New-York are to be deemed authentick, and noticed as such by officers attending at the ferries.

As the movements of the enemy, and intelligence by deserters, give the utmost reason to believe that the great struggle in which we are contending for everything dear to us, and our posterity, is near at hand, the General most earnestly recommends the closest attention to the state of the men's arms, ammunition, and flints; that if we should be suddenly called to action, nothing of this kind may be to provide; and he does most anxiously exhort both officers and soldiers, not to be out of their quarters or encampments, especially early in the morning, or upon the tide of flood.

A flag in the daytime, or a light at night, in the fort on Bayard's Hill, with three guns from the same place, fired quick but distinct, is to be considered as a signal for the troops to repair to their alarm posts, and prepare for action. And that the alarm may be more effectually given, the drums are immediately to beat to arms upon the signal being given from Bayard's Hill. This order is not to be considered as countermanding the firing two guns at Fort George as formerly ordered. That is also to be done upon an alarm, but the flag will not be hoisted at the old Head-Quarters in the Broadway.

Colonel Parson's, Colonel Reed, Colonel Huntington, Colonel Webb, Colonel Wyllys, Colonel Bailey, Colonel Baldwin, Colonel McDougall, Colonel Ritzema, and Lieutenant-Colonel Sheppard, to attend at Head-Quarters, this evening, at six o'clock.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 9, 1776.

(Parole, Lexington.)

(Countersign, Maryland.)

Captain-Lieutenant Sergeant, of the Artillery, with two field-pieces, to attach himself to General Heath's Brigade, with the ammunition-carts, as ordered by Colonel Knox, while time will permit. He must manœuvre with the Regiments of the Brigade, and practise as much as possible. The horses not to be taken away from the carts, but kept with the driver, in some convenient place contiguous to the Brigade, so as to be ready at a moment's warning.

Captain-Lieutenant Carpenter to do the same with Lord Stirling's Brigade. Captain-Lieutenant Johnson to do the same with General Spencer's Brigade. Captain-Lieutenant Crane to do the same with General Fellows's Brigade.

An ammunition-cart is provided for each Regiment, with spare cartridges. These carts are immediately to join the several Regiments to which they belong, and keep with them in some safe place, near the Regiment.

The Quartermaster-General to have the water-casks replenished.

The Commissary-General to deliver to the Colonel of each Regiment, rum in the proportion of half a pint to a man. The Colonel to make a return of the number of his men, for this purpose, and see that it is properly dealt out, by putting it under the care of a very discreet officer.

As there are some Regiments yet deficient in arms, the General directs that the Colonels, or Commanders of Regiments, see what good arms there are belonging to the sick, and put them into the hands of those who are well. If there should still be a deficiency, they are then to apply to the Adjutant-General.

The General Officers to be at Head-Quarters this evening, at six o'clock precisely.

The General exhorts every man, both officer and soldier, to be prepared for action; to have his arms in the best order; not to wander from his encampment or quarters; to remember what their country expects of them; what a few brave men have lately done in South-Carolina, against a powerful fleet and army; to acquit themselves like men; and, with the blessing of Heaven on so just a cause, we cannot doubt of success.

Nicholas Fish, Esq., is appointed Brigade-Major to General Scott. He is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Colonel Glover's and Colonel Smallwood's Regiments are to be under the immediate direction of Brigadier-General Sullivan, till some further arrangement is made of the Brigades.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 10, 1776.

(Parole, Newcastle.)

(Countersign, Onslow.)

Great complaints are made of the soldiers taking away the flat-bottomed boats, which may now be wanted for the most important purposes: The General absolutely forbids any person meddling with them at the place where they are stationed, but by order of General Putnam, in writing, or by one of his Aids-de-Camp; and the officer of the main guard is to detach a subaltern and thirty men, who are to mount guard over them, taking further orders from General Putnam. The General will be much obliged to every officer or soldier, who, seeing them out of their places, will bring them to their station.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 11, 1776.

(Parole, Portsmouth.)

(Countersign, Roxbury.)

No furlough or discharges are after this day to be granted to officers or soldiers, without the knowledge and consent of the Commander-in-Chief. When an action is hourly expected, a case must be very extraordinary which can warrant an application of this kind; but if such should happen, the Colonels are to satisfy their Brigadiers in it first; the Brigadiers, if they concur in it, are then to apply to Head-Quarters, from whence only furloughs are to be issued till further orders.

The honourable the Continental Congress having been pleased to allow a Paymaster to each of the established Regiments, and directed the General to appoint them, he desires the Field-Officers of each Regiment to recommend to him suitable persons; they are to be persons of good integrity and fidelity, and good accountants and fair writers. The pay is twenty-six dollars and two-thirds per calendar month.

When a prisoner is put under guard, the officer sending him is not only to put down the crime he stands charged with, but the Regiment and Company to which he belongs; and he should also note the witnesses' names to prove the charge.

The Court-Martial to sit to-morrow as a Court of Inquiry, upon Lieutenant Mesier, of Colonel Lasher's Regiment, for misbehaviour to his superior officer.

Joseph Martin, of Captain Hurd's Company, Colonel Silliman's Regiment, tried by a General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Wyllys was President, for "abusing and robbing a woman in the market," acquitted for want of evidence.

Hugh Cahaggan (a transient person) and Richard Keif, belonging to Colonel Nicolson's Regiment, convicted by the same Court-Martial of "stealing a coat and several fire-locks from Captain Dickson's Company," were sentenced to receive thirty-nine stripes each. The General approves the above sentences; orders Martin to be discharged, and the sentences upon Cahaggan and Keif to be executed to-morrow morning at guard mounting. A drummer from each Regiment in General Wadsworth's Brigade to attend the executing the sentence upon Cahaggan, and then he is to be turned out of the camp, and taken up if ever found in it again.

The practice of sentries sitting down while on their post is so unsoldierly, that the General is ashamed to see it prevail so much in the Army; at night, especially, it is of the most dangerous consequences, as it occasions a sentinel sleeping on his post, when otherwise he would be watchful. The General requests the officers, especially those of guards and visiting rounds, to caution the soldiers against it, and have all conveniences for that purpose removed.

Officers and soldiers will be very careful in case of damp weather to have their arms kept dry, and fit for action.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 12, 1776.

(Parole, Stowe.)

(Countersign, Temple.)

The business of granting passes proving burdensome to Messrs. Berrien, Ray, and Wilmot, three others are added to them, viz: William Goforth, John Campbell, and Samuel Couperthwaite. Any passes signed by either of them are to be allowed.

The honourable the Continental Congress have been pleased to appoint the following gentlemen Major-Generals of the Army of the United States, viz: William Heath, Esq., Joseph Spencer, Esq., John Sullivan, Esq., Nathaniel Greene, Esq. And the following gentlemen Brigadier-Generals: James Read, Esq., Colonel John Nixon, Colonel Arthur St. Clair, Colonel Alexander McDougall, Colonel Samuel Holden Parsons, Colonel James Clinton. They are to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Jacob Jones, in Captain Stewart's Company, late Colonel McDougall's Regiment, tried by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys was President, and convicted of "sleeping on his post," sentenced to receive thirty stripes. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed at the usual time and place.

A quantity of spears being arrived, the General Officers commanding posts where they may be wanted, are to make report and draw for them through the Adjutant-General.

After Orders.—That as little shifting of Regiments, and change of alarm posts may take place as possible, at a time when an attack may be hourly expected, the General orders and directs that the following arrangement of the Army, in consequence of the late promotions, shall take place, till some new disposition can be made, viz: Glover's, Smallwood's, Miles's, and Atlee's Regiments, to compose one Brigade, and to be under the command of Brigadier Lord Stirling.

Late Nixon's, Prescott's, Varnum's, Little's, and Hand's Regiments, to form another Brigade, and be commanded by Brigadier-General Nixon.

Late McDougall's, Ritzema's, and Webb's Regiments, and the Artificers, to be another Brigade, under the command of General McDougall.

Late Parsons's, Huntington's, Ward's, Wyllis's, and Durkee's Regiments, to compose another Brigade, under the command of General Parsons.

Late Clinton's, Read's, Bailey's, Baldwin's, and Learned's Regiments, to be another Brigade, commanded by Brigadier-General James Clinton.

Sergeant's, Hutchinson's, and Hitchcock's Regiments, to be added to General Mifflin's Brigade.

General Heard's whole Brigade is to move over to Long-Island. Colonel Gay's Regiment is to join his Brigade in the City of New-York. Colonel Hitchcock's Regiment is to relieve the detachment at Burdett's Ferry, where it is to remain, and receive orders from Brigadier Mifflin. Lord Stirling, and the Colonels of the Regiments in his Brigade, are to fix upon a Brigade parade, convenient to the several encampments thereof. General McDougall is to do the same with his Colonels. All the other Brigades, parades, and alarm-posts, are to be as last settled.

The Brigadier-Generals James Clinton, Scott, and Fel-lows, are to be under the immediate command of Major-General Putnam. The Brigadiers Mifflin and George Clinton's Brigades, to be commanded by Major-General Heath. Brigadiers Parsons's and Wadsworth's Brigades to be under the command of Major-General Spencer. Brigadiers Nixon's and Heard's Brigades, to be commanded by Major-General Greene. Till General James Clinton can join his Brigade at this place, Colonel Reed is to command it. Under this disposition, formed as well as times will allow, the united efforts of the officers of every rank, and the soldiers, with the smiles of Providence, the General hopes to render a favourable account to his country and posterity of the enemy, whenever they choose to make the appeal to the great Arbiter of the Universe.

Lieutenant-Colonel Tyler is appointed Colonel of the Regiment late Parsons's, and Major Prentice Lieutenant-Colonel thereof.

Lieutenant-Colonel Durkee is appointed Colonel of the Regiment late Arnold's, and Major Knowlton Lieutenant-Colonel of said Regiment.

The Congress have likewise been pleased to appoint Rufus Putnam, Esq., an Engineer, and have given him the rank of Colonel in the Army.

Major Henly (for the present) is to do duty as Brigade-Major in General James Clinton's Brigade; Major Box in General Nixon's; Major Livingston in Lord Stirling's; and Major Peek in General Parsons's; and Richard Platt, Esq., is to do the duty of Brigade-Major in General McDougall's. All of which are to be considered and obeyed as such.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 12, 1776.

SIR: This will be handed you by Colonel Campbell, from the Northern Army, whom the enclosed letter and proceedings of a General Court-Martial will show to have been in arrest, and tried for sundry matters charged against him. As the Court-Martial was by order of the commander in that department, the acts committed there, the trial there, I am much at a loss to know why the proceedings were referred to me to approve or disapprove. As my interfering in the matter would carry much impropriety with it, and show a want of regard to the rules and practice in such instances, and as Colonel Campbell is going to Philadelphia, I have submitted the whole of the proceedings to the consideration of Congress for their decision upon his case, perfectly convinced that such determination will be had therein as will be right and just.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

Tyonderoga, July 21, 1776.

SIR: Upon my arrival at Crown-Point with General Schuyler, I found Colonel Campbell, the Quartermaster-General in this department, in arrest by order of Brigadier-General Sullivan. The day I left Crown-Point, a Court-Martial was ordered for the trial of Colonel Campbell, which General Arnold has transmitted me, and which I have now the honour to enclose to your Excellency. General Schuyler being at the German-Flats, upon the Mohawk River, at an Indian treaty, and Colonel Campbell being ordered down the country to settle his accounts with the Congress, I thought it best to send your Excellency the Court Martial, it not being in my power to approve or disapprove the proceedings. General Sullivan, who is probably at New-York, knows the circumstances, and the reasons that induced him to confine Colonel Campbell, to whom I beg leave to refer your Excellency. I shall write to your Excellency this day, or to-morrow, upon the state of affairs here. As it is uncertain when Colonel Campbell may get to New-York, I think it better to send my despatches by express.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

New-York, August 12, 1776.

MY DEAR LEE: Notwithstanding I shall probably feel the effect, I do most cordially and sincerely congratulate you on your victory over Clinton and the British squadron at Sullivan's Island. A victory undoubtedly it is, when an enemy are drubbed and driven from a country they were sent to conquer. Such is the case of Clinton and Sir Peter Parker, who are now with the fleet and army at Staten-Island, where General Howe and the troops from Halifax have been ever since the last day of June, and Lord Howe since the 12th of July. Some Hessians and pretty many of the Scottish laddies have got in, and the residue of the fleet parted with off the Banks of Newfoundland hourly expected. When the whole arrive, matters will soon come to a decision, everything being prepared on both sides for the appeal; and, on ours, I hope it will be obstinate, if not successful. The latter it is not in the power of mortals to command; but they may endeavour to deserve it; and this, I am persuaded, our troops will more than ever aim at, as I have impressed upon their minds the gallant behaviour of the brave few who defended Sullivan's Island.

At present, the enemy can bring more men to a point than we can, and, when reinforced by the Hessians (unless the Militia, faster than heretofore, come to our aid) their numbers, when the Hessians arrive, cannot, by the best intelligence we can get, fall short of twenty-five thousand men; ours are under twenty, very sickly, and posted on Governour's Island, Long Island, at Powles Hook, Horn's Hook, and at the pass near King's Bridge. More Militia are expected; but whether they will be in time, time only can tell, as also where the point of attack will be. An opinion prevails, countenanced by hints from some of the principal Tories, and corroborated by intelligence from Staten Island, that part of the enemy's fleet and army will go into the Sound, whilst another part of it runs up the North River, thereby cutting off all communication by water with this place, whilst their troops form a chain across the Neck, and stop an intercourse with Connecticut by land. Others think they will not leave an army in their rear, whilst they have the country in their front, getting, by that means, between two fires, unless it is intended as a feint to withdraw our troops from the city, that they may slip in and possess themselves of it. All this is but a field of conjecture.

Our affairs in the North have been growing from bad to worse, till I hope they will mend, as one great source of evil is in a way of being removed—I mean the small-pox. But the Army have retreated from place to place, till they are now got to Ticonderoga, opposite to which, on the east side of Lake Champlain, they are about to establish a post, which, they say, will be invulnerable. But whether it may not be somewhat like the man who built a mill on account of a beautiful fall, and then had to consider whether it was practicable to bring water to it, remains in some measure to be determined, as it is the opinion of some (I know nothing of the country myself) that the enemy may pass this post and get into Lake George without receiving the least annoyance.

from this work. Whether they would choose to leave a post in their rear, without establishing one themselves sufficient to keep it in awe, is the point in question.

It gives me a very singular pleasure to hear of the gallant behaviour of your young Aids, and Mr. Jenifer; as also of Colonels Moultrie and Thompson. To be the means at any time of rewarding merit will add greatly to my happiness; and whenever you can point out a mode that can be adopted consistently, you shall find me very ready. But you know the temper of the troops in this quarter as well as I do, and how impracticable it is to bring in a person, let his merit be ever so great, without throwing a whole corps into confusion. This will also apply to Captain Bullitt. What vacancies there may be in your department that he has his eye to, and could be appointed to with propriety, you must know better than I. That there is none here I can undertake to say. I have no doubt but that Congress would annex the rank of Colonel to his office of Adjutant. I believe they have done it in the instance of Griffin, who is appointed Deputy-Adjutant to the Flying-Camp. If this would add anything to his satisfaction, I should have no objection to the mention of it.

With every wish for your prosperity and success, I remain, with sincere regard, your most affectionate and obedient,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To General Lee.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As the time is certainly near at hand, and may be hourly expected, which is to decide the fate of this city and the issue of this campaign, I thought it highly improper that persons of suspected character should remain in places where their opportunities of doing mischief were much greater than in the enemy's camp. I therefore have caused a number of them to be apprehended, and removed to some distance, there to remain until this crisis is passed. Having formerly mentioned this subject to your honourable body, I would not again trouble them in a business which former connexions, obligations, and interests, must make very unpleasant, and which, I apprehend, must have been in danger of failing in the execution, unless done with all possible secrecy and despatch. I postponed this most disagreeable duty till the last moment; but the claims of the Army upon me, and an application from a number of well-affected inhabitants concurring with my own opinion, obliged me to enter upon it while time and circumstances would admit. I have ordered a very strict attention to be paid to the necessities of the gentlemen apprehended, and to their comfortable accommodations in every respect, both here and at the places of their destination. I have also written to the Committee of Queen's County, that this step is not to be construed as making their property liable to any injury or appropriation, unless they should receive directions from your honourable body, to whom I have referred them on this subject; being resolved in all cases, where the most absolute necessity does not require it, to confine myself wholly to that line which shall exclude every idea of interfering with the authority of the State. Some of these gentlemen have expressed doubts and raised difficulties, from engagements they lie under to your honourable body, or to some Committees. They do not appear to me to deserve much attention, as they cannot, with any propriety, be charged with a breach of any parole under their present circumstances; but I beg leave to submit to your consideration the propriety of removing the pretence.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect and regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. the Convention of the State of New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 4th instant is safe to hand. An answer to the several particulars it contains will be given soon. Time will but allow me to request your forwarding, with all possible despatch, two thirteen-inch sea mortars, of the best in Boston, to this place, with their beds and every thing complete.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Ward.

COLONEL McDUGALL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, August 12, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your Excellency's favour of the 9th, I take the liberty to enclose you a recommendation of Mr. John Lawrence as a Paymaster to the regiment, signed by the Field-Officers of it, and all the Captains then in camp. I pledge myself that he will discharge the office to the satisfaction of the General and the corps.

I have the honour to be, your very humble servant,

ALEX. McDUGALL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

New-York, August 9, 1776.

We the subscribers, Field-Officers and Captains in the First Regiment of the New-York troops, in the service of the United States of America, do hereby recommend Mr. John Lawrence as a fit person to be appointed as a Paymaster to the said Regiment.

RECOMMENDATION OF ROBERT PROVOOST.

New-York, August 12, 1776.

We the subscribers, Field-Officers of the Third Regiment of New-York troops, well knowing the integrity and fidelity of Mr. Robert Provoost, Quartermaster in said regiment, do, agreeably to General Orders of yesterday, recommend the said Provoost to his Excellency the General, as a proper person for a Regimental Paymaster, he also being a fair writer and a good accountant. We shall be happy, therefore, in his being appointed to that office.

DOCTOR MORGAN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 12, 1776.

SIR: Sensible of the value of your time, I should not now encroach upon it, were not some further regulations of Congress necessary, or at least some explication of those already formed, respecting the appointment and subordination of officers in the General Hospital.

*It was intended at first to send these articles all the way by land, but since concluded to ship them at Poughkeepsie, or the most convenient landing above the men-of-war, &c.

On my return from Cambridge to New-York, I found a number of sick had been sent here to the General Hospital from the Northern Department. Various applications were made to me from thence, as Director-General, by different officers in the service, and some of them in the Hospital there, in behalf of the sick. Large quantities of medicines were sent for by the Commissary and others, and by Dr. Stringer himself, Director in that district, which seemed to imply a full persuasion of a claim to and dependance on my care; but as I had not then received any regular information of the nature of Dr. Stringer's or Dr. Potts's appointments, I at first doubted whether those gentlemen had a right to depend on me for assistance, and accordingly wrote so to Dr. Stringer. I afterwards was informed, from what I conceived to be good authority, that the Congress had determined to assemble the various parts of the Hospital under the Director-General. This answering the idea I ever had of the nature of a General Hospital, readily obtained credit with me; yet not having received any instructions on that head, I thought it my duty to ask leave to visit Philadelphia, to learn the intentions of Congress, and to confer upon the necessary regulations for the better government of the Hospital, that I might not incur blame either for neglect of my supposed duty, or for intermeddling in matters not committed to my charge. After three days' conference with the Doctors' committee, and having made every necessary inquiry, I returned here with a full persuasion of there being but one General Hospital, (in the Northern Department,) though consisting of divisions, each under a separate Director, all united under one head, viz: the Director-General. As to Dr. Stringer and Dr. Potts, I learned that neither of those gentlemen had a power of appointing Surgeons to act under them, and Dr. Potts applied to me, as though he had been commanded to do it, for advice and assistance; yet, till I knew what would be the result of the Congress's determination, I forbore to give any order, but sent a quantity of medicine with him at his setting out for Lake George. As I was the person who proposed an augmentation of Surgeons in the General Hospital, on the same footing as the first appointment, and an allowance of other necessary officers, which was adopted by Congress, I had no doubt but the appointment of those additional Surgeons was intended by Congress to be intrusted with me; especially as it did not appear by any vote of Congress that the power of making that appointment was reserved to itself, and no other person but myself could be supposed to enjoy it. At the same time there being above three thousand sick reported to me in the Northern Department, I should have deemed myself culpable indeed if I had not sent the quantity of medicines sufficient for six more regimental chests, and more, named a Surgeon to assist in the care of the sick, and an Apothecary to dispense those medicines, since from the late regulations the Regimental Surgeons were authorized to draw upon the Hospital in their department for medicines. At the same time, the appearance of an approaching siege at New-York, requiring further chirurgical assistance, and there being no time to be lost in preparing for it, I was happy to have it in my power to nominate an additional Surgeon, one of my own choice, Dr. James Armstrong, who was luckily on the spot, (son of General Armstrong, a gentleman of liberal education, tried abilities, and established character in his profession,) for the Hospital at New-York. It was not till some time after I had settled those appointments, that I received a recommendation from Congress in favour of Dr. Senter. Wishing to employ him, I proposed his going as Surgeon of the Hospital to the northward, where the great number of sick and few Surgeons seemed to call more loudly for his assistance. In the meanwhile, Dr. McHenry, whom I had sent to Philadelphia for medicines for the northern Army, returned, and told me he had received information, as coming from you, that those gentlemen who were appointed for the northward by any other authority than of the Congress, (immediately,) might look for their pay where they could get it. I do not presume on any right to transgress the known orders of Congress, or pretend to know all the regulations it may have come into; but after I had been to Philadelphia on purpose to inquire, and from all I could then learn, as well as from anything I can yet discover in the resolutions of Congress of July 17th, I thought it was clearly and indispensably my duty to make the appointments I did, in which I was actuated by no other motive than what I conceived to be for the good of the service; and should have deemed myself answerable to and reprehensible by Congress, had I neglected or deferred it. I have, indeed, been since told, that at the appointment of Dr. Stringer, it was evidently the intention of Congress to give him the same power in his department as the Director-General enjoyed in his: thus that a power was given him of appointing Surgeons and Nurses, &c. But I know that to be a mistake; for by the resolves of Congress of September 14, at which time he was appointed, no more power was given to him than is allowed to every Surgeon chosen by the Director-General, of choosing his own Mates. Seeing, then, if we may judge from the past, the Congress only reserved to itself the nomination of the Director-General and Directors, granting to the Director-General, and, as far as I know, to him only, the choice of Surgeons, allowing the Surgeons to choose their Mates, it does not appear from anything made publick that the Congress have resumed the power already granted.

I still flatter myself, from the manner in which I have discharged the duties of my station ever since I joined the Army, that Congress does not intend, unless the good of the service makes it necessary, to abridge the Director-General, in my person, of that authority which was deemed so proper in the person of my predecessor; and yet I fear in later appointments, for want of keeping up that idea of subordination so necessary in an Army, or want of attention to explain properly the nature and extent of those appointments, so as not to interfere with those which are prior, some resolves of Congress have been incautiously entered into, (I speak with reverence,) or titles of rank and distinction given, which have a tendency to interfere with mine. If you would wish to be further informed hereof, I would beg leave to refer you to what I have written on this subject to my worthy friend the Honourable Thomas Hayward. Dr. Stringer's sentiments on this subject, who is now gone to Philadelphia to lay his claims before Congress, may throw further light on the insufficiency of the present regulations respecting the rank and subordination of the different officers in the General Hospital department.

After all I have said, I cheerfully submit the propriety of my conduct in making the before-mentioned appointments in the General Hospital, and am desirous of conforming strictly to my instructions. If I have exceeded my commission, it has been for want of knowing the designs and resolves of Congress, or their being misunderstood. Should the Congress, on that footing, annul my appointments and make others, I must at least stand acquitted of intentionally going beyond the line of duty; and it will behooove Congress to be more explicit in respect to its intentions; for if the Congress does not suppose the appointment of any new Surgeon rests with me, of what use is it to recommend one to me for my approbation? I must pay an implicit obedience to their simple recommendation. In that case, I do not imagine there will be the same security for harmony, or for having the business of the Hospital so well executed, as where the choice of the Surgeons is left to the Director-General, which is an additional incentive to industry and an obliging behaviour in the Surgeon thus freely elected, to approve himself worthy of the choice. Be that as it may, wherever the path of duty is plain, I shall endeavour to walk steadily in it, having no design or inclination to exceed those bounds which the good of the service or the wisdom of Congress may prescribe to me.

I entreat your excuse for this long letter, and beg permission to subscribe myself, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp at Brookland, August 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Colonel Hand reports this morning a twenty-gun ship that came in last evening, fired as she passed through the Narrows, and was answered by the Admiral. Four ships went through the Narrows yesterday; they are at anchor along New-Utrecht shore. Twenty-five sail of ships are seen at a great distance at sea, coming in.

If your Excellency thinks Colonel Varnum deserving promotion, and another Brigadier is to be appointed, I wish he may be appointed.

I am your Excellency's most obedient servant,

N. GREENE.

LAST ORDER ISSUED TO GENERAL HEATH'S BRIGADE.

August 13, 1776.

The honourable Continental Congress having thought fit to promote Brigadier-General Heath to the rank of Major-General in the Army of the United States of America, and the Commander-in-Chief having thought fit to appoint him to the command of the division of the Army at King's Bridge, the Major-General most heartily thanks the officers and soldiers of his late Brigade for their soldier-like and orderly behaviour during the time he had the command of them, and for the great cheerfulness with which they have so remarkably performed the great and necessary fatigue of the campaign thus far. He laments the present sickly state of the Brigade, and implores the Great Physician of body (as well as soul) soon to send to them help. The day seems nigh at hand when they will be called to face the enemy in defence of everything dear in life, and he is confident that they will nobly distinguish themselves in their country's cause. And may the Lord of Hosts crown them with success. Should it ever be in the power of the Major-General to serve the officers or soldiers of his late Brigade, he will do it with the greatest pleasure.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 9th was delivered me last evening. Since the date of your letter, one hundred and eleven axes and one hundred and eighty-seven spades have been forwarded to Fort George, and I shall continue forwarding them as fast as I can. Musket cartridge-paper, or any other, it is out of my power to furnish you with. I have written this day to New-York for thirty reams of that article and the bullet-moulds. Three barrels of tar and eighty-one bars of iron have been sent to Skenesborough on Saturday and this day.

I am happy in informing you that five hundred and thirteen thousand dollars are arrived this morning, and the harvest is almost over. We shall not again experience the want of carriages or difficulty of transportation, except from the badness of the roads.

I am weary of importuning tradesmen and others for the publick, who are almost too lazy to earn their bread, when money is offered to the wagoners, who are backward when most wanted. I wish a Quartermaster were appointed here, that I may no longer do that extra duty, when others have the merit and can receive no blame.

Yours to his Excellency General Washington goes by this day's post. I had detained L'Oiseau and Allaine, and sent your letter forward to the General. Agreeable to your directions by Mr. Clayton, I shall take care of them till the General's return, who is positively to leave the German-Flats to-morrow.

In consequence of Mr. Egbert's requisition, by your order, three dozen broadaxes shall be sent by the first conveyance. The grubbing-hoes are making, and the scales and beams will be sent, if to be had, at least part of them. The weights I have ordered him to send for to Livingston's Manor. Small cartridge paper will be sent as soon as it arrives. Thread is sent, and the bar lead is now casting into musket balls of various sizes and buckshot. The boxes are numbered, beginning with the smallest size. Part is sent up; the remainder will be sent as soon as finished; as also two hundred buckets, axes, nails, and packages, now in store.

I have received large iron, which I sent for to Livingston's Manor, and the grapplings are begun here this day.

I have this day procured a sufficient quantity of sheet lead, (for aprons of guns,) which came from the country, in exchange for bar lead. I could not get it on any other terms, and it will be easier to procure cast than sheet lead for balls. I will order it up immediately. Some handspikes are now making here. I believe it will be easier to have them made there. I have sent nails, and will send some dressed skin for sponges to-morrow or next day. No tin or tinman is yet to be had here, nor have I yet got the copper.

I do myself the honour to enclose you copy of an invoice of such articles as General Washington has ordered from New-York to this place. In this list copper is mentioned. I am at a loss what to do now; I do not think that enough will be sent up from New-York.

This day I have procured three new sails, which were ordered to be made for the schooner Liberty, on Lake Champlain, by Governour Skene, before the commencement of his misfortunes. I shall send them up as a cover over the powder, instead of oil cloths. The powder would have gone off this day, but the bad weather has prevented it. The blocks and slow-match are momentarily expected from Poughkeepsic.

I am, with compliments to Colonel Trumbull and the gentlemen of your family, dear sir, yours, with every sentiment of esteem and respect,

RICHARD VARICK.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

P. S. I enclose copy of a return of cannon and grape-shot which I have ordered from Livingston's Manor, in consequence of General Arnold's requisitions.

Were my services not done to the benefit of my country, I should be much mortified, for I have frequently good reason to conclude, with the Latin poet—though I shall cheerfully do all in my power to advance the publick interest.

“Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter honores;”

R. V.

I enclose you last Monday's paper. The attack is every day expected, and foreign troops coming in.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED ALBANY, AUGUST 12, 1776.

General Schuyler has returned from the Congress at the German-Flats, where he had to satisfy near two thousand Indians. They promise a strict neutrality. Some scalps have been taken near Oneida Lake. A scouting party of ours were attacked by a party of Indians, three killed and scalped, two wounded and escaped, who fell in with some of the Indians that had been at the treaty, who brought them safe to Fort Stanwix. A report of a large body of troops from Canada at Fort Ontario, and that Clause and Builer are there.

You will see Carleton's orders of the 14th of August, that were brought by Major Bigelow, who went with a flag of truce to carry the Declaration of Independency and the resolutions of Congress relative to the affairs of the Cedars. An officer of ours, who went to reconnoitre St. John's and Chambly, fell in with a regular officer on horseback, alone, on the road between La Prairie and St. John's, summoned him to surrender himself prisoner, but, clapping spurs to his horse, he rode off. Our officer fired at and shot him. It turns out to be a General Gordon.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM ALBANY, DATED AUGUST 12, 1776.

I find the more thinking sort of people do not credit the news of the French fleet being in St. Lawrence River. They rather think it is a story given out by Burgoyne to put our people off their guard. This day we have advice that there are two thousand Indians with General Schuyler; that he began the conference with them last Tuesday.

Mr. returned from the Lake, who was ordered there by Congress to inspect into the state of our Army. He says that our Army consists of five thousand effective men, hearty and in high spirits; that they have built complete fortifications; have sixty pieces of cannon, from nine to eighteen-pounders, mounted; that in a fortnight they will have upwards of one hundred pieces mounted; they have now in the Lake nine gondolas, two row-galleys, and three schooners, all complete and fit for service; that we shall have twenty-five or twenty-eight of those vessels in the Lakes, which will carry sixty pieces of cannon, one hundred and seventeen swivel-guns, and about five hundred men. That there were two officers sent out as spies some time since, one of whom returned while he was there, who reports that the enemy had about two thousand men at St. John's, one thousand at the Isle-aux-Noix, and one thousand or fifteen hundred at Chambly; that they had about thirty batteaus in the Lake, and no other vessels, nor any preparation for building more; that it appeared very clear to him that the enemy did not mean to attack us, but expected to be attacked, for that they are only preparing for defence by enlarging their forts and erecting new ones. General Gates says it would not give him the least concern if the enemy were to come with twenty thousand men.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skeneborough, August 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The weekly returns not being made out and forwarded by this boat was by reason of the great rain yesterday, which detained the boats bringing the returns from Cheshire's, but shall be forwarded with all possible despatch, with the true state of every corps.

His Honour the Governour's letter came this moment to hand, and I thought it of the utmost importance to be forwarded, and not wait for the return.

I am, dear General, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO DOCTOR POTTS.

Ticonderoga, August 12, 1776.

SIR: I am informed that the Baron De Woedtke, some time before his death, made a solemn declaration to you of matter that highly concerns the interest of the United States. You will please forthwith to communicate to me the substance of the Baron's declaration. The bearer, Mr. Lucas, has my orders to wait for your letter, and return with it immediately to me.

I would not wish to give unnecessary trouble; once a fortnight is full often enough to make a general return of the Hospital.

I desire Dr. Stringer may come here as soon as he arrives at Fort George, and bring with him a good Surgeon, properly provided, for the service of the fleet.

I am, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

To Dr. Potts, at Fort George.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, August 12, 1776.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 25th and 31st ultimo, and that of your Secretary, Mr. Varick, of the 3d instant; and have the pleasure to inform you that Captain Van Buren has succeeded so far as to purchase all the sail cloth, and part of the cordage it is expected he will be able to procure at Middletown. Whatever number of swivels can be had at Salisbury, will be spared for your use as requested. At present it is not in my power to inform you how many you may depend upon, or when it will be most convenient to deliver them, but shall take the earliest opportunity to advise you of both.

Such of the sea Captains you mention as are in this Colony I have written to, and expect their answer soon. Two of them, to wit: Francis Brown and , are abroad. I shall inquire after, and endeavour to engage some suitable persons, and advise you what you may expect, as soon as possible.

The residue of one thousand felling axes, with so much clothing as to make up two loads with the axes, I have sent forward to Skeneborough, and have written to General Gates, requesting him to give orders to some proper officer or other person to receive them.

I have received advices from Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, that one hundred and twelve sail of ships, seventeen of them men-of-war, the rest transports, were seen the 8th instant, fifteen leagues southeast by south from Nantucket Shoals, standing to the westward. Probably they are Hessians and Highlanders, bound to New-York, and arrived there before this time.

The bearer, Brown, our postrider, goes directly to Ticonderoga, and will send off an express to Albany from that part of his route nearest to it. I shall hope in future you will procure a post to meet him and change packets at such place as you think proper, and advise me of the time and place when and where such exchange will most conveniently be made. I am, &c., &c.,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

Lebanon, August 12, 1776.

SIR: I enclose you the copy of a letter to Brigadier-General Waterbury, of the 8th instant, and desire your attention to the matter of the infection of the small-pox therein mentioned. I flatter myself the measures taken for completing the regiments destined to join your Army will prove effectual, unless that distemper should again break out in it; but should that be the case, recruits would be procured in this State with the utmost difficulty.

The residue of the felling axes to make up one thousand are gone forward, with two loads of clothing for the use of the Army, (the axes included in them.) They are ordered to Skenesborough by the way of Bennington, where I hope they will meet your orders for their delivery to the proper officer, or such person as you shall appoint.

By a letter from his Excellency General Washington, of the 7th instant, I have intelligence that General Clinton and Lord Cornwallis, with the southern Army, have arrived from South-Carolina, and are landed at Staten-Island, in number between three and four thousand; that a fleet which came in a few days since are Hessians and Scotch Highlanders, part of twelve thousand who were left off Newfoundland, and that an attack upon some of our posts at or in the neighbourhood of New-York, may be very soon expected; that the enemy are moving all their heavy cannon and most of their field-pieces on board their ships, and had launched eight gondolas, and, in general, seemed preparing for an attack. In consequence of which, I have ordered the Militia of this State, of fourteen regiments, to march with all expedition and join General Washington, and hope they will arrive in season to take part in the defence of those important stations.

The controversy with Great Britain seems now approaching fast to a crisis. May the Great Ruler of all grant that the event may correspond with the justice of our cause.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. General Gates.

REV. WILLIAM GORDON TO GENERAL GATES.

FRIEND GATES: These American dog-days almost demolish me; they lay me under a universal lassitude of body and mind, so that I am neither fit for walking, nor talking, nor writing; but finding by your Adjutant's letter to Julia that a word from this civilized quarter revives the inhabitants of Ticonderoga, I must send you a few, as an expression of my desire to lessen the uncomfortableness of your dreary situation. From the account he has transmitted, I am convinced that you have had enough to exercise your patience; but you know it is one excellence of a good soldier to command his temper as well as his troops. By-the-by, as it comes in apropos, the Howes have been juggling together to learn his Excellency's temper, and, to their great mortification, have discovered that it is to be resolutely steady and immovable. This is my interpretation of their proceeding in continuing to urge his acceptance of the letter. I suspect that your antagonist will not be so much for hurrying the war to a close, as for securing the present opportunity for the purpose of recruiting his broken fortunes. I still expect that we shall be saved by Providence, and not by luck; and am more than ever convinced, that if we are saved, it will be by Providence. The dilatoriness with which the reinforcements have been procured and sent on to the different camps, would have been the ruin of our affairs, had not the interposition of Heaven prevented. We have scarce any but west and southwest winds, chiefly the latter, which have retarded the ships amazingly.

I consider the southern expedition of the enemy as demolished, and give you joy upon it. Whether there will be hot work or no work at New-York, and the summer be spent in watching and skirmishing, must be left to futurity to discover. But you certainly have the post of honour, for you have the care of the weakest quarter, and are the most ill provided; a fine field for glory; the more difficulties, the more a man's abilities in surmounting them; the fewer and worse his tools, the more his dexterity and genius in finishing the work after a masterly manner. These reflections have so often occurred to you, that they are quite stale; but they may suit well enough for your little man of an Adjutant: I would not say your little Adjutant, because that might have been thought a designed affront by a person whose heart is somewhat captivated by that bauble—alias bubble—honour.

Pray, have you any preaching among you? If so, does your Adjutant attend? If he attends, is he not taught not to seek honour from men, and to propose a better, lest he should have no other reward? Now the Parson shows himself. Well, and what if he does? What hurt of that? Every one ought to be consistent, and not ashamed of his commission. And if I have a commission from one that was crucified, but is now exalted above all, he would despise me, were I afraid to own or to act up to it. Well, then, that matter is settled; and I may go on to beseech that care may be taken of the soldiers' morals; that these may be good, as well as their quarters. Let not any future historian have to remark, as Lieutenant Biggs did, referring to the Old England troops: that the best in the world were most given to cursing and swearing. Put a stop to these unprofitable practices, that so, if I come to the camp, I may not be affronted and disgusted, and I promise you—health and strength permitting—I will endeavour to visit you before the campaign is over. Am plotting to set off the beginning of September for both camps. Doubt not but I shall meet with a hearty welcome from both his Honour and his Excellency; and I shall be greatly delighted to see them in the happy character of glorious conquerors, loved and admired by all about them for having been instrumental in saving the liberties as well as the necks of the Americans.

We get in a few West-India ships by way of a prize, to sweeten the sourness of the times and keep up our spirits. Great Britain will be all in a flame either at the Ministry or at us. I had rather at the former, as that may be best for our native country; but I am not afraid of the latter. The Powers of Europe will not always sleep. 'Tis likely that France and Spain have been only sleeping cat's sleep, and that they will suddenly jump upon their prey, when they see it is within their reach, and there is no danger of missing it.

I have not received your answer to my long letter, designed for you before you left New-York, but that friend Hazard sent after you. By whom or which way do you send it? Or have you not yet finished writing it?

The above was written the beginning of last week. Since this have been to Providence. Am now got to Monday, the 12th of August. Having heard no bad news from your quarter, am in hopes that Mr. Burgoyne's complaisance has given you an opportunity of preparing to receive him warmly whenever he shall advance on you.

The old forty-gun ship, with a thousand hogsheads of sugar, rum, and madeira, besides cotton, with some iron nine-pounders, and brass six-pounders, from Tortola, carried into Portsmouth last week. Arrived at Boston last Saturday, sent in by a couple of Yorkers, a ship from the Granadas, with four hundred bags of cotton, an article much wanted, and three hundred hogsheads of sugar. The merchants will certainly clamour.

Julia sends respects, as does Mrs. Gordon; take your own share of mine, and then proportion the remainder among friends. Wishing you protection and success, not only in stopping, but driving the enemy, I am your very sincere and affectionate friend,

WILLIAM GORDON.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, August 12, 1776.

SIR: This day I have forwarded one hundred barrels of powder for Norwich, there to be deposited agreeable to your directions. I have also forwarded a chest of arms to the care of Messieurs Huntington, to be by them sent to New-York; an invoice of them is here enclosed.

Whetcomb's regiment marched the 8th instant, and Phinney's the 9th, for Ticonderoga.

Last week Mr. Glover, the Agent, was in town, and informed me that he could not find the trowsers mentioned in the invoice of the cargo, and which your Excellency wrote for, and says they were not on board, unless they are in some of the packages that are forwarded to New-York, which he did not open.

I am your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,
ARTEMAS WARD.

To General Washington.

Received from John Bradford, Esq., 27 Firearms, without Bayonets; 10 Cartridge Boxes; 2 Shot Bags; 2 Hair Knapsacks; 71 Canvass Knapsacks; 7 Slings.

NATHL. BARBER, Jun.

Boston, August 9, 1776.

JOHN BRADFORD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, August 12, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your Excellency's signature, under the 5th instant, directing me to take the necessary care of all the warlike stores and necessities for an Army, till I receive orders from proper authority. Your Excellency may rely on the strictest punctuality in complying with any future orders I may receive.

I have not omitted, since I have been in this department, giving a particular caution to each commander to prevent any embezzlements, and have furnished them with the resolve of Congress on that head; but it signifies little, for great complaints are made by those who came in the last prize, that they acted more like pirates than men who were so honourably employed. I am taking every measure to efface that notion of their being privateers; for while they continue in it they will act like such. Great need there is of a reform in our little Navy, which I hope in time may be effected.

I have the honour to be, with great truth, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

JNO. BRADFORD.

To His Excellency General Washington.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO MAJOR HAWLEY.

Watertown, August 12, 1776.

SIR: The Committee of Council have received your letter of the 5th instant, by Major Pyncheon. We are glad to hear that five companies of the men you were to raise for the Northern Department have already marched. We hope the other three marched by the time you mention. We trust that the Committee will forward those who have enlisted, and are now under inoculation, to their place of destination as soon as they have recovered their health. We have, agreeably to your desire, forwarded the blanks for the Staff-Officers by Major Pyncheon, and have furnished him with the necessary commissions for the officers that may be appointed to command your part of the fifteen hundred men destined to Ticonderoga, as also with the money for the bounty, advance pay, and for the blankets and guns.

We must entreat you would use your utmost exertions to raise and march these men to Ticonderoga as soon as possible, as they are much wanted there. The lower Counties' proportion of the fifteen hundred men were raised fifteen days ago, and are waiting to know what number we raised in the County of Hampshire, in order to determine into what regiment they shall be embodied. It is desired you would make a return to the Council as soon as these men are raised.

In the name and by the order of the Committee of Council.

I am, with great respect, your most humble servant.

To Major Hawley.

COLONEL HURD TO MESHECH WEARE.

Haverhill, August 12, 1776.

SIR: The intention of the Committee was to have got Colonel Porter off this morning; but he says he has tried every step in his power to prevent being sent to Exeter. He has petitioned the Committee of this town, and been soliciting several persons of the other Committee, for a new hearing, under pretence that he has not had opportunity to vindicate himself, nor to procure such evidence in his favour as he can do, if more time was allowed; but the truth is, I am persuaded, that he thinks and has brought over Mr. James Bayley, Chairman of the Haverhill Committee, and two or three other persons, to be of the same opinion, that he ought not to be sent out of the County for trial; that as this district is not represented, and has remonstrated against our form of Government, the Colony Committee of Safety have no authority to order him to Exeter. I have therefore been obliged to exert myself in this matter, as Captain Woodward can inform you, and have had a hard struggle to obtain the point—some objecting, too, that we ought not to send Porter away, unless we send the whole number; but it is the general opinion, besides ours of the Committee, that he is a dangerous person to tarry among us. For my own part, I shall not be easy to have him remain here longer, as I can more particularly hereafter inform you, and my reasons. In the mean time, I trust your Committee will order Colonel Porter to be properly taken care of. I would not recommend a close imprisonment, but that he is well secured.

If you think proper to allow him a hearing before the General Court should meet, you will please to inform us by Captain Woodward's return, that the evidences may be sent down to confront him, which we shall look upon as absolutely necessary, especially Mr. Daniel Hall, and whether it be advisable to send the others who belong to New-York Government.

We have had much trouble in this business, as you may well think, and I am sorry to give you so large a share by my long letters, which I beg you will excuse; and am, respectfully, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

J. HURD.

To the Honourable Meshech Weare, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

ETHAN ALLEN TO CONNECTICUT ASSEMBLY.

Halifax Jail, August 12, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: In addition to my letter of the 8th instant, I have to inform, that intelligence was yesterday received in this place that General Clinton had failed in an attempt to take Charlestown by water; that a fifty-gun ship and two frigates were almost destroyed; that a third was burnt by the Americans, and that two or three more were so surrounded by batteries and shivered to pieces, that they were unable to get out to sea; and that Clinton was returned to Head-Quarters, Staten-Island, New-York, where the King's Army were encamped, and that no action of moment had happened at New-York.

I greatly rejoice to hear that the States of America have declared for independency. I am the more confirmed in its importance, in consequence of many political arguments from a French gentleman. He assures, that on a supposition of that declaration, the French and Spaniards will assist, and come into alliance with America; and I assure you that the English rascally treatment to me has wholly erased my former feelings of parent State, mother country, and, in fine, all kindred and friendly connexion with them. I have never asked better treatment than what the laws of arms give to prisoners between foreign nations; but instead of that, have been crowded into the most filthy apartments of ships, among privates, where I have, almost the whole of my time since taken, been covered with lice; and though I have genteel clothes, could not, for this reason, wear them till since I have been confined in the common jail of Halifax, which is about a week. The prisoners have the liberty of the yard; but there is no distinction between gentlemen and others. If I must suffer the vengeance and ignominy of tyrants, it would be more graceful for Turks, Moors, and barbarians. The names of the prisoners that were taken with me are as follows, namely: Roger Moor, Peter Noble, (who made his escape from a man-of-war at Cape-Fear), Levi Barnem, Barnabas Cane, Preston Denton, John Gray, Zachariah Brimsmaid, William Drinkwater, Jonathan Maho, Levi Mearson, Samuel Lewis, William Gray, David Goss, Amos Green, John James Burque, Ithuriel Flower, Charles Stuard, Ebenezer Mack, and Adonijah Maxam. Thirteen Canadians were taken with me: one is dead since, the other twelve are at work in the King's yard. Sundry are sick with the scurvy, but are getting better.

I remain your humble servant,

ETHAN ALLEN.

To the Honourable the General Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut, or to the Council of War of the same Colony.

N. B. We know not the cause why we are not yet exchanged, as it seems the King's troops might be compelled to it, inasmuch as you have so many prisoners in your hands, more especially as you have many of the King's officers. I will lay my life on it, were you to treat them as they have me, they would willingly have exchanged us before. Now, we are destitute of cash, friends, &c., everything desirable.

E. A.

ARTHUR LEE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

London, August 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I answered your last letter immediately. I now enclose you several pamphlets, which contain such an authentick state of facts, and such arguments on the American question, as will enable its advocates with you to maintain their ground against the pensioner of this Court. I beg particularly that you will send some of them to the gentleman who has answered Pinto, the pensioner of this Court.

The pamphlet entitled the Rights of Great Britain, &c., is full of the grossest falsehoods. A very material one is exposed by the enclosed extracts from the acts of Parliament granting bounties upon American produce, which proves by their own words, that those bounties were given for their own interests only. Yet that pamphlet has given a long list of the amount of those bounties, and charged it to the Colonies. The fact is as Dr. Smith, a Scotchman, and an enemy to American rights, has stated it, in his late laboured and long-expected book on the Wealth of Nations. "Whatever expense," says he, "Great Britain has hitherto laid out in maintaining this dependancy, has really been laid out in order to support their monopoly." Speaking of the debt incurred last war, he says: "This whole expense is in reality a bounty, which has been given in order to support a monopoly. The pretended purpose of it was to encourage the manufactures, and to increase the commerce of Great Britain." The operation of this monopoly against the Colony he states thus: "The monopoly of the Colony trade, therefore, like all the other mean and malignant expedients of the mercantile system, depresses the industry of all other countries, but chiefly that of the Colonies."

When you write to the Congress it would be well, I think, to mention that as all the evils have been produced by Scotch counsel, and those people prosecute the business with more rancour and enmity, a distinction ought to be made between the treatment of them and other people, when made prisoners.

We expect every day some decisive news from New-York. The last Gazette gives us no reason to fear anything but the chance of war, against which no prudence can provide. We have certain intelligence from Canada, that it will be the last of August before the boats will be ready upon Lake Champlain for the Ministerial Army; so that there is no possibility of their joining Howe. They are putting eleven ships of the line in commission here, which is kept very secret, or it would shake the stocks exceedingly.

Adieu,

ARTHUR LEE.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL HYDE.

[No. 132.]

Annapolis, August 13, 1776.

SIR: As we are very desirous of having the troops stationed at Baltimore under your command armed as speedily as possible, and as we are informed the Committee of Observation of Harford County have about sixty stand belonging to this Province, we request you will immediately send up for them, and deliver them, on receipt, to your companies. Enclosed you have an order on the Committee for them.

We are, &c.

To Colonel William Hyde.

JOSEPH RICHARDSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Dorchester County, August 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We herewith send you, under guard, John Price, who was taken in the service of Dunmore, with Wheeland, Evans, and Howith, whom we sent you some time since. Price was in the small-pox when the others were sent, which occasioned the delay of sending him with them. The charge against him will appear in the depositions of Yell and Mareman, already transmitted to you.

We are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

Signed by order of the Committee.

JOS. RICHARDSON, Chairman.

To the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland, at Annapolis.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. I.

FRANCIS BAKER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Talbot County, August 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I herewith have the honour to return you my commission, it not laying in my power to discharge the trust under the present resolves of Convention.

I am, gentlemen, your Honours' most obedient humble servant,

FRS. BAKER.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

ROBERT CHRISTIE, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, August 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you some time ago acquainting that I had two schooners which were sunk at the mouth of this harbour, by order of the Committee, for upwards of three months. An allowance has been made me to put the vessels into as good order as when they were taken away; but I am told an application must be made to the Council of Safety for payment of the damages. I should be glad to know when it would be proper to apply, and what vouchers the Council will require, to ascertain the time the vessels were out of my possession. If necessary, I can make it appear that I have paid considerable sums for freight of other vessels during the time my own were sunk. I hope you will excuse my being troublesome to you. I do not want to come down to Annapolis until I am prepared with the necessary vouchers to complete the business. You will oblige me very much by giving me an answer at your convenience.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBT. CHRISTIE, JUN.

To the Honourable Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer.

THOMAS STONE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, August 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am very glad to be informed that Lord Dunmore and his fleet have quitted the Bay, and am hopeful this circumstance will induce your Militia to lend assistance to their neighbours with more alacrity than could have been expected while an enemy was hovering on their coast. You may be assured they are much wanted in the Jerseys and at New-York, where an attack is daily expected, and at both which places our strength is by no means sufficient to oppose the enemy with that certainty of success which every man who considers the importance of the event must wish.

Captain Thomas is arrived with his company. I shall rejoice to see Colonel Griffith with his troops, and shall with pleasure afford him and all other officers and troops from Maryland any assistance in my power. I shall show particular attention to Colonel Griffith, your recommendation entitling him to particular notice.

The difficulties you have experienced in raising your quota of the Flying-Camp I am convinced have been distressing; but I hope they are now pretty well over. You may have any money you want from Congress, upon application. The enemy's strength at Staten-Island is fifteen thousand men. The Hessians are daily expected: by the last accounts, they were shipping their men, and making all necessary preparations for an attack. General Washington is not so strong as he could wish. Upon these movements of the enemy, he ordered a reinforcement of two thousand from Jersey to York. The Maryland battalion was immediately sent to him; but I believe the camps in Jersey were too weak to spare any more. I observe many of the Militia of this State in motion; but many are leaving the camp, and are not to be kept there by threats or persuasions. I intend to leave this city on this day week, till which I shall be ready to execute your orders; being, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

T. STONE.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Congress Chamber, August 13, 1776.

SIR: I have nothing in charge from Congress to communicate to you. Had not the honour of a letter by the post. I judge the return express is on the road, by whom wish to have an agreeable account of the state of the Army.

I am, with perfect esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

MEASE AND CALDWELL TO RICHARD PETERS.

Philadelphia, August 13, 1776.

SIR: The honourable Congress having been pleased to direct us to provide a large quantity of necessary clothing for the use of the Continental Army, of which felt hats and coarse yarn stockings are very material articles, and in order to secure the quantity requisite in proper time, they must be engaged now from the manufacturers, as we find that private speculations are beginning to engross them; we have therefore to request you will lay this before the Board of War, in order that application be made to General Mercer for the discharge of Joseph Kerr, hatter, of Captain Wills's company, in the first battalion; and Philip Mause, stocking-weaver, of Captain Kling's company, in the fourth battalion of Philadelphia Militia; as these two men will be exceedingly useful to us in providing those essential articles, having found them so last fall, when they assisted us with great address and fidelity. If we did not know how usefully we could employ them in procuring the above articles, and how necessary it is they should be immediately engaged, we should by no means wish for their discharge from the Army at this juncture.

We are, sir, your very humble servants,

MEASE & CALDWELL.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary at War.

At a Board of War, August 13, 1776, P. M., agreed to report to Congress:

That Monsieur Weibert, now serving in the Continental Army at New-York as an Engineer, be appointed Assistant Engineer, with the rank and pay of Lieutenant-Colonel; and that his pay commence from the time of his engaging in the service.

That General Mercer be directed to discharge or grant furloughs to Joseph Kerr, Hatter, a private of Capt. Wills's company, in the First Battalion, and to Philip Mause, a Stocking Weaver, a private in Captain Kling's company of the Fourth Battalion of Philadelphia Militia, these two persons being applied for by Messrs. Mease & Caldwell, Commissaries, to whom their services are indispensably necessary in making and providing clothing for the Army.

That the Council of the Massachusetts-Bay be requested to appoint one of the General Officers of their Militia to command the Troops which that State has ordered for its defence in the room of the Continental Regiments lately ordered from Boston to New-York and Ticonderoga, which General Officer shall be invested with the same powers and subject to the same duties within that State, and be upon the same establishment with the Continental General Officers, during the continuance of the said troops in the Continental service.

JOHN HUBLEY TO WILLIAM ATLEE.

Philadelphia, August 13, 1776, three o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I have received your favour, with the money and letter enclosed for Mr. Cox, which I delivered to him immediately, and now enclose you a receipt. Mr. William Cox tells me that your privateer is almost finished and already manned; that his brother has been offered five-and-twenty per cent. profit on his shares. When I received yours I had just come from Convention, and by the way heard that our Militia were marching from Amboy to New-York; that one hundred and four vessels were just arrived, which it was supposed contained the foreign troops; but I went immediately to do your business, and have not time at present to inquire into the truth of the report, as the Convention meets again at four o'clock. By my brother I have sent for your Committee some resolves. I had not time to pack up and direct them properly; you will be kind enough to excuse the manner in which they come. Mr. Ross, with two other Commissioners, set out this day from Convention to form the Flying-Camp.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN HUBLEY.

To William Atlee, Esq., Lancaster.

P. S. 14th.—I refer you for particulars to Mr. Lanman.

CHESTER COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation } for Chester County, August 13, 1776. }

Pursuant to several resolves of the honourable Committee of Safety, recommending the respective Committees of Inspection, &c., of this Province to appoint suitable persons to provide for the distressed families of Associators when they are in actual service: Therefore,

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM EVANS, Chairman.

GENERAL HOWE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Staten-Island, August 13, 1776.

General Howe desires to know if General Washington has any objection to Mr. Robert Temple's being landed at New-York, and going from thence to his family in the Government of Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

SIR: As there is reason to believe that but little time will elapse before the enemy make their attack, I have thought it advisable to remove all the papers in my hands respecting the affairs of the States from this place. I hope the event will show the precaution was unnecessary, but yet prudence required that it should be done, lest by any accident they might fall into their hands. They are all contained in a large box, nailed up, and committed to the care of Lieutenant-Colonel Reed, brother to the Adjutant-General, to be delivered to Congress, in whose custody I would beg leave to deposite them until our affairs shall be so circumstanced as to admit of their return.

The enemy, since my letter of yesterday, have received a further augmentation of thirty-six ships to their fleet, making the whole that have arrived since yesterday morning ninety-six.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I would observe, that I have sent off the box privately, that it might raise no disagreeable ideas, and have enjoined Colonel Reed to secrecy.

G. W.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 6th instant I received this morning by Bennet. The reports made by the emissaries, who have been among the Indian nations, appear not so promising as I could wish. However, I trust as so many have come to the treaty, their views are friendly, and though they may not consent to take an active part, that they will not arm against us.

The difficulties attending the vessels sitting for the Lakes I am well apprized of. My late letters will inform you that I have taken every measure in my power to facilitate the work. Before this comes to hand the Paymaster, I expect, will have received a supply of money. The extract of Mr. Varick's letter shows it was much wanted. I have not failed in any instance to communicate your wants of this article to Congress when they have been mentioned to me; urging, at the same time, not only the expediency, but necessity of keeping the military chests constantly furnished. It will be well for you always to give them early notice of what you may have occasion for, that their remittances may be adequate. In future I presume they will have the fullest information upon that subject, having, by some late resolves, enjoined their commanders in every department to transmit them monthly a list of the warrants they grant, the Paymasters to return a weekly state of their military chests, and the Commissaries and Quartermasters of what they receive. I have not these regulations by me, but if my memory serves, they were passed the 2d instant, and have been forwarded to you. I have always laid before Congress copies of your letters and their enclosures, when they were of a publick nature, or contained intelligence in any way material, except when advised that you had done it yourself. I shall here take occasion to request, that whenever you write to them and me of the same things, you certify me thereof, to prevent me transmitting useless information.

In respect to Colonel Nicolson's regiment and the places where it should be stationed, you certainly can determine better than I, having more in your power intelligence of the enemy's movements and designs.

I would observe, in answer to that part of your letter which mentions that a Council of Officers or a Court-Martial had been convened and held here to decide upon the Council of those who had sat at Crown-Point, that your information is wrong. No Council, no Court of Inquiry, nor Court-Martial, upon that subject, sir, was ever convened by my order or their own accord. When intelligence was first received here that Crown-Point was abandoned, it was the cause of a general alarm, and filled the minds of most who heard it with no small degree of anxiety; some judging from the commonly accepted opinion, and others from their knowledge and acquaintance with it and the country round about it, that it was of the last importance to us to possess it, to give us, in conjunction with the vessels we were about to build, the superiority of the Lake, and to prevent the enemy from penetrating into this and the Eastern States. Among others, some of the General Officers, from their own knowledge, and the rest from the ideas they had formed as the matter was occasionally mentioned, delivered their sentiments to this effect, as did every person I heard speak of it at the time the account first came. From the universal chagrin that took place, the regret that every person expressed upon the occasion, the Remonstrance of the Officers which you transmitted, and which appeared to contain many weighty reasons, I felt myself much concerned, as everybody else did, and wished, according to my information and opinion at that time, the post had been maintained. I do not wish to dwell longer upon the subject, and therefore shall only add that your letter of the 24th ultimo (or at least a copy of it) was transmitted to Congress as soon as it was received; nor shall I have any objection to sending a copy of the one before me now, when I have an opportunity to make it out, if it shall be your inclination and request.

I have no news of any importance to communicate, unless that the enemy are daily becoming stronger. On Monday they received an augmentation of ninety-eight ships to their fleet, with a further part of the foreign troops it is probable. They seem to be making great preparations, and we have reason to expect they are upon the point of making an attack. The letters which accompany this you will be pleased to deliver to Generals Gates, Reed, and St. Clair; they came to hand on Sunday. And wishing you, and the Army under your command, health, and the smiles of a kind Providence on all your efforts, I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

GENERAL HEARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

SIR: Please to grant an order on the Paymaster General for the payment of my brigade to the 1st of this instant, as the greatest part of them are under the necessity of receiving their wages before they move; which granted will oblige your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

NATHANIEL HEARD.

JOSEPH REED TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 13, 1776.

SIR: The critical situation of the Army at this time required the removal of all persons of suspected characters. Among others, the two gentlemen who will have the honour of waiting upon you with this have been apprehended and brought to this place. As there were no specific charges against them, but the measure was merely cautionary, his Excellency indulged them on their parole with personal liberty; and though he removed the others to Connecticut, for some special reasons, and a confidence which he reposed in Captain Hamilton and Mr. Young, he permitted them to go to Philadelphia, there to be subject to the orders of the honourable Congress; for which purpose they now wait on you.

I have the honour to be, most respectfully, sir, your obedient and very humble servant,
JOS. REED.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency the General sent me yesterday copy of a resolve of Congress, passed the 2d instant. In compliance therewith, I have the honour to enclose you an account of all moneys I have received from the Paymaster-General since my appointment to the Quartermaster-General's office, until this day. I shall henceforward send weekly returns thereof; and as soon as possible transmit returns of the stores under mine and the assistants' directions, with the distribution of them.

I have the honour to be, with very great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant, STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

BARON DE CALBIAC TO RICHARD PETERS.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

SIR: I received from you, through the hands of General Washington, part of some papers I left with Colonel McKean. There are other very material ones, which I left at the same time, which have not been transmitted to me. I should suppose Colonel McKean sent to your office the whole of the papers together. I have written to him on the subject; but in case you may not hear from him soon, should esteem it a great favour that you would examine in the office if there are no other papers of mine, which have been overlooked. The papers which are wanting are my passport from France, and two letters of service from the French Court.

You will excuse the trouble I give you, from your most obedient, very humble servant,

LE BARON DE CALBIAC.

GENERAL SCOTT TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Willet Taylor is a prisoner. He is an infirm man, his father-in-law, Mr. Bogart, a staunch Whig. No difficulty can arise from the interposition of the Congress in his affair. I am sure the General will not be displeased with it. I am told Mr. Taylor is willing to give assurances on oath; and very probably his father-in-law will undertake for him. For the sake of his family, and particularly his wife, who is far gone in her pregnancy, I could wish the Convention of the State of New-York would do something in the case. If he is left to me, I must of course order him to Connecticut.

If Congress will interfere in the affair, I will answer for it to the General. I should be glad to know their determination on the subject.

I am, sir, with all imaginable respect, their and your most obedient servant, JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

To the Honourable the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of }
New-York, Harlem, August 13, 1776. }

Resolved, That General Scott be empowered, with the permission of his Excellency General Washington, to dispose of Willet Taylor, Esq., within this State.

A true copy from the Minutes:

JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

SAMUEL LOUDON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have been informed that there is another sum of money to be soon printed by order of Congress. If I am honoured with their command to print it, there will be absolute necessity to remove my press to some place of safety and convenience for the purpose.

I have thoughts of taking down my press to-morrow, but where to remove it I know not. The situation here at present is dangerous. I mean to continue my newspaper, and remove to such place as the posts may meet, which, I suppose, will not be far from the city. If I can be serviceable to the honourable Congress of this State, I am ready to obey their order, by removing to such place as they may think fit.

I shall be glad of your answer and advice on this subject; and am, dear sir, your most humble servant,

S. LOUDON.

To John McKesson, Esq.

GENERAL WADSWORTH TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, August 13, 1776.

HONoured SIR: Received yours of the 6th instant to Colonel Dyer; and having been previously informed that circular letters had been issued by your Honour to the civil authorities, &c., to promote enlistments into the several regiments in my brigade to complete the same, had sent recruiting officers into Connecticut to facilitate the enlistment; which I did as soon as I judged the pressing necessity for labour was so far over as to afford the least prospect of success. Am informed Major St. John is coming down with the Militia. If so, I think it would be best he should muster the troops here, unless some more eligible mode may be suggested. I herewith transmit a copy of the last brigade return, by which it appears Colonel Gay's regiment is at Long-Island, but has now orders to return into the city. In the present hurry of business, must beg leave to refer your Honour to Colonel Dyer and Mr. Law for intelligence.

I am, with great esteem and regard, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES WADSWORTH, Jun.

To the Hon. Governour Trumbull.

ROBERT YATES TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Poughkeepsie, August 13, 1776.

SIR: Your Excellency's letter of the 21st ultimo arrived here at a time when this Committee was dispersed, and the members gone different ways on different business. It was, however, sent by express to Mr. Jay, who was then in Connecticut, endeavouring to procure cannon for the defence of Hudson's River; and we have the pleasure of informing your Excellency that we have obtained ten twelve, and ten six-pounders, with fifty rounds of shot for each cannon; four of the twelve are now at Fort Montgomery.

We have paid a second visit to the forts, and were pleased to find the fortifications at the West-Point, opposite to Fort Montgomery, going on with spirit. We think it a most important post, and are confident that if it be well fortified and defended, it will, together with Fort Montgomery, effectually secure that important pass. The attention General Clinton has paid to that work, as well as other objects of publick concern, merits approbation. Several of the garrison have been put to exercising the artillery, and we hope a number of good matrosses will in that way be made.

The chain intended for the Sorel is arrived, and will form a quarter part of the one designed for Hudson's River. The iron for the remainder is come to hand, and the smiths begin this day to forge it. We have agreed to fix one end of it at Fort Montgomery, and the other at the foot of a mountain called Anthony's Nose. It will cross the river obliquely, and for that reason be less exposed to the force of the tide, and less liable to injury from the ships of the enemy. The length of the chain will, at least, be twenty-one hundred feet.

We have purchased and are now fitting out two sloops, each of sufficient force to manage a tender, and have appointed Captain Benson (who will be the bearer of this letter) commander of the one, and Captain Castel of the other. The late levies have so far drained the country of men, that we fear it will be impracticable to man these vessels unless the officers be permitted to enlist them from among the levies. Between fifty and sixty men for each vessel will be sufficient. Should this expedient meet your Excellency's approbation, we flatter ourselves the vessels would in a very short time be fit for service.

We are much obliged to your Excellency for communicating to us the agreeable intelligence of the success attending the bravery of our Carolina friends, as well as for your constant and unwearied attention to the safety and defence of this State.

We have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servants. By order of the Committee:

ROBERT YATES, Chairman.

To His Excellency General Washington.

CAPTAIN SMITH (PRISONER) TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Esopus, August 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When Captain Biddle, of the Congress armed vessel the Andrew Doria, on the 29th May last, took the Oxford transport, on board of which was a company of his Britannick Majesty's Forty-Second Regiment of Foot, Captain Biddle, upon taking the officers out of the Oxford, only allowed them to take their bedding and a few shirts with them, and told them that by orders of the Continental Congress all that was the private property of the prisoners that were taken, should be allowed them, and that he would return the officers their swords upon coming on shore.

My reason for troubling you with this, gentlemen, is, that you mentioned that when any prisoners had business of any kind, they were to apply to you. Now I, and the rest of the officers of my company, who were taken on board the Oxford, will be glad to be informed whether or not we will be allowed our baggage, and what was our private property, that was on board at the time we were taken. All my clothes and other baggage, and about sixty guineas in cash, were on board; as likewise Lieutenant Franklin's, who is prisoner with me here, and Lieutenant Monroe's and Ensign Campbell's, whom Captain Biddle carried to Rhode-Island with him. Captain Biddle gave the command of the Oxford to one of his Lieutenants, a Mr. McDougall, and a Mr. Tribbet.

I should be very much obliged to you, gentlemen, if you will be so kind as to let me have an answer to this as soon as it is convenient.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN SMITH, Captain in His Britannick Majesty's 42d Reg't.

To Jno. Brown, Esq., and the other gentlemen appointed by Congress for the disposition of Continental prisoners.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, August 13, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 7th instant, by Mr. Root, and the intelligence it contains, have given me great concern and anxiety. The soon expected strength of the enemy, and the weakness of your Army, were equally unforeseen and surprising. Though I never gave credit to the publick accounts of your numbers, yet I could not suspect they fell so much short of the numbers proposed as I find they do.

Immediately upon receipt of your letter I summoned my Council of Safety, and ordered nine regiments of our Militia, in addition to the five Western regiments, (fourteen in the whole,) to march without loss of time and join you, under the command of Oliver Wolcott, Esq., Colonel of the regiment, as their Brigadier-General, who is appointed and commissioned to that office. These orders are accompanied with the most pressing recommendation of speedily carrying them into execution, enforced by communicating as much of the intelligence you was pleased to favour me with, of your situation and danger, as I thought prudent and necessary.

I have likewise proposed that companies of volunteers, consisting of able-bodied men not in the Militia, should associate and march to your assistance, under officers they should choose, and have promised them like wages and allowance of provisions, &c., as the Continental Army receive. Some such companies are formed, and I expect more will be.

Whatever their numbers may be, they will be ordered to join some one of our Militia regiments, and submit themselves to the command of their field officers while they continue in service. Colonel Ward's regiment is on their march to join.

I am far from trusting merely in the justice of our cause. I consider that as a just ground to hope for the smiles of Heaven on our exertions, which ought to be the greatest in our power.

These fourteen regiments, sent on the present emergency, consist of substantial farmers, whose business requires their return when the necessity of their further stay in the Army is over; and doubt not your attention thereto, and that you will dismiss them in whole or in part as soon as you think safe and convenient.

Captain Bacon has not been with me, though I have heard of him, and that he is returned without going to Rhode-Island. Captain Van Buren has been here upon the same errand, and has procured all the sail-cloth that was wanted, and part of the cordage, and has a prospect of obtaining the rest of the cordage in this Colony. I have, notwithstanding, forwarded your letter to Governour Cooke, and likewise given him the intelligence I received from you, agreeable to your request.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, August 13, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you yesterday, since which Captain Seth Warren, one of the sea Captains you mention, came to me, and hath consented to undertake and raise a company of seamen for the Lake service. He informs me that he can soon procure twenty seamen here, and as many more out of the companies in Colonel Mott's regiment, which went from his neighbourhood, and are at or on their march to Skenesborough. I have conferred with him, and, on consideration, offered the following encouragement to such able-bodied seamen as shall enlist into the service, to wit: Bounty, ($20,) £6; premium for blanket, 12s.; premium for gun, 6s.; cartouch-box, belt, and knapsack, 2s.; wages per month, £2 8s.: they to be held in service from the day of their enlistment until the 25th day of December next, unless sooner discharged, and to have the same allowance and marching money as the other troops in Continental service. The premia and first month's wages to be paid before they begin their march.

I shall, per next opportunity, send you an account of the cost of the felling-axes and advance pay to the carpenters, and an estimate of the sums necessary to be advanced for premia and first month's wages for the seamen now to be raised, which I shall hope to receive. The other Captains I expect here soon, and trust they will undertake the service.

I am, sir, with great truth and regard, your obedient and humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

Lebanon, August 13, 1776.

SIR: This day Mr. Daniel Strong, a wagoner from this place, set out with a load of axes and clothing for your Army. Enclosed is account of packages, with an invoice of sundry articles of clothing. At Farmington he is to fall into company with an ox-team which brings on more clothing. On their arrival, they will need your directions for the delivery. Another team will set out from Windham on Thursday or Friday next with more clothing, and will meet your directions.

A post-rider will pass in course from this place to Ticonderoga or Skenesborough, as may be thought necessary, as frequently as that stage can be performed. I have desired General Schuyler to order another to meet him and exchange mails at the nearest place to Albany.

Every intelligence you may think proper to give me will be acceptable to, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

HENRY BROMFIELD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, August 13, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your Excellency's favour of 24th June, which came to hand at a time when I was absent on a journey in the country. This, with a great uncertainty whether to undertake the task assigned me therein, has been the reason that I have not returned an earlier answer; at length, however, upon the consideration of the delay a refusal must occasion, and that the excuse I might allege in my favour might be pleaded by others who most probably must have been in the same situation, viz: an unacquaintedness with the value of the various articles to be appraised, has determined me to undertake the trouble, in conjunction with Mr. William Davis, merchant of this town, on behalf of Captain Manley and his crew. We have spared no pains to ascertain the value of the different articles, in order to which we have applied to all the traders and mechanicks most conversant therein, and have, from the information received from them, and others most capable of giving it, endeavoured to make an estimation as near to truth as might be, which, however it may deviate, I am conscious on my own part cannot be attributed to inattention or neglect, and hope will be such as to meet the approbation of your Excellency and the honourable Congress.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY BROMFIELD.

To His Excellency General Washington, Esq.

COLONEL FITCH TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-Haven, August 13, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I think it my duty to acquaint your Honour of the condition and circumstances of the soldiers in my regiment, as they are now all ordered off to New-York. Their complaints are without number. I will mention a few. In some parishes but one or two are left; some have got ten or twelve loads of hay cut, and not a man left to take it up; some five or six, under the same circumstances; some have got a great quantity of grass to cut; some have not finished hoeing corn; some, if not all, have got all their ploughing to do, for sowing their winter grain; some have all their families sick, and not a person left to take care of them. I could mention as many more excuses as would fill up a sheet of paper which they have made to me, &c.

I would, with submission, beg of your Honour to inform his Excellency General Washington of the condition of this regiment, so that they may be released as soon as they possibly can be, consistent with the safety of the Army. It is enough to make a man's heart ache to hear the complaints of some of them.

I would ask your Honour whether it is safe to have all the Militia taken from the sea-shore at this time, when we expect two or three men-of-war in our Sound. Colonel Jabez Thompson has undertaken to command the regiment at last, and is now gone to New-York. He desired me to mention to your Honour that he thinks, as he has been in the service so long, he ought to rank with a Colonel, and, if it can be done, desires you to give him such appointment, &c.

I beg leave to subscribe myself your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JONA. FITCH.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

N. B. I beg your Honour to sign the enclosed letter, and send it to me.

JACOB BAYLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Newbury, August 13, 1776.

SIR: I was employed by his Excellency General Washington to cut a road from this to St. John's. I had proceeded thirty miles, when I had news of General Sullivan's retreat. I then brought in my party, and held them in readiness. I informed his Excellency, and wait for further orders. The whole way is well marked, and cattle may be easily driven to St. John's, if wanted there by our Army. On the shortest notice, I will proceed on the road to complete it. I know it is of the greatest importance. I was lately at Watertown and Exeter. Gentlemen of the first character say they will immediately turn out volunteers to assist in Canada, if wanted. I believe four or five thousand may be had at St. John's fifteen days after notice.

The bearer, Thomas McKeach, soldier in Colonel Bedel's regiment, doubtless was enticed from his duty, as the next day after he came to me, and was ready to return. I advised him to stay a little for some of the Cedar men, who now are returning with him. Must beg, sir, you will pardon him. His character is good with us, and the people of his country with us are friendly to our cause.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JACOB BAYLEY.

P. S. I have sent for the Hessian deserter at Mr. Metcalf's, and shall leave one of our men in his room, to watch the motions of Regulars, &c.

Halifax, Nova-Scotia, August 13, 1776.

We have undoubted authority that two thousand Highlanders, under the convoy of three frigates and three armed schooners, on a new construction for drawing the least quantity of water, have been despatched by Lord Howe up the Bay of Fundy, to penetrate by that side into the New-Hampshire Government; and that Colonel McLane, with three thousand of the lower country Militia of Canada, and six hundred Indians, are on their full march to join that body of Highlanders at the head of the river St. John's, and to coöperate with them.

Saturday night last arrived below, and Sunday morning came up to town, his Majesty's frigate Liverpool, from Head-Quarters, and brought in with her a Jamaica ship and Antigua brig, retaken; also, a Philadelphia sloop, bound to some port of New-England.

We hear that a Spanish vessel, with a large quantity of cash on board, was taken going up the Delaware river to Philadelphia, by one of his Majesty's ships-of-war cruising off there; and that a ship from Hamburgh, laden with woollen cloth and all sorts of linen, &c., was likewise taken, bound for the above port.

On the 2d instant arrived his Majesty's frigate Milford, Captain Burr, from a cruise, and brought in a prize schooner, loaded with fish and lumber for the West-India market; also, the Princess Royal, a homeward Jamaica ship, loaded with rum, sugar, and other valuable articles, which, having parted her convoy, fell in, off the Bermuda Islands, with a letter-of-marque schooner, in the American service, of six guns and some swivels, bound to Santa Croix, who took her and put an officer and twelve men on board. But after they had her in possession sixteen days, he fell in with the Milford, in Boston Bay, who retook her, but the prize-master and his men took to their boat, and got on shore before the Milford came up.

An authentick List of the Naval and Military Force in the Province of NOVA-SCOTIA, August 13, 1776, collected from the best authorities in the Province.

In the Harbour of Halifax: The Milford and Liverpool frigates, of 28 guns; the brig Hope, of 12 guns; the new sloop of war, fitting out, called the Albany, (late the Rittenhouse, belonging to Philadelphia.) to carry 16 guns, Mowatt Commander.

August 16.—Since writing this List, the Milford and Liverpool frigates sailed; and the 17th, (to-morrow,) the brig Hope will sail for Louisburgh.

In the Town of Halifax: Two battalions of Marines, the whole nine hundred rank and file; near two hundred invalids; twelve Artillery men; one company of the Fourteenth Regiment of Infantry, forty-seven rank and file; one company of the Royal Highland Emigrants, thirty-nine rank and file, six brass field-pieces, six and three-pounders.

Fortifications in the Town and Suburbs: A five-sided redoubt, about one hundred paces west of the dock-yard; a redoubt on a hill called Padley's Hill, about one and a half mile northwest of the dock-yards; a redoubt, four sides, about five hundred paces southwest of the dock-yard; a small breastwork on a hill called Still-House Hill, about forty paces north of the dock-yard, small block-houses to be built in each of the above redoubts; a block-house, twenty feet by thirty, at the northwest corner of the dock-yard, and another of the same dimensions at the southwest corner; a small block-house, fifteen feet by eight, each side of the dock-yard gate.

The foregoing works had no cannon mounted when I left Halifax, August 16th.

A large square breastwork for cannon, almost finished, on the top of Citadel Hill, mounting twelve twenty-four pounders, three each way, viz: north, east, south, west. The eastern side fronts the harbour. A block-house, forty feet by sixty, erecting in said works.

In the County of King's County: Part of the Royal Highland Emigrants, consisting of two hundred and thirty-seven rank and file.

In the County of Cumberland: The regiment of Royal Fencible Americans, commanded by Colonel Gorham, consisting of two hundred and seventy-two rank and file when the last accounts came away; but frequent desertions lessen their numbers.

The dock-yard is situate upon low land, about one mile north by west of the middle of the town of Halifax, surrounded with a stone wall, ten feet high, but is not strong enough to resist the enchantment of a three-pound ball.

JOHN HANSON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 7, 1776.]

St. Croix, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: To say anything in recommendation of myself will be presumption; to promise much will be idle; for events depend on the Almighty. I foresee an Independency must of necessity be declared. I am a friend, and ever have been, to the righteous cause of America; and as such I offer you my heart and hand. If I can be of service at this critical moment, and if my service is accepted, please to inform me time enough to settle my affairs here, and send a fast-sailing frigate to conduct myself and family to America. If she is of force, I may probably bring one of King George's frigates with me.

I am, with hearty wishes for your success, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANSON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

COLONEL THOMPSON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Charlestown, South-Carolina, August 14, 1776.

SIR: As no greater honour can be conferred on a faithful servant of the publick, so next to a consciousness of having done his duty, nothing can afford so much pleasure to such servant as the thanks of the people. I must confess, sir, I had not entertained the smallest expectation of such distinguished notice as the Congress have been pleased to take of my endeavours to assist in repelling the attempts of the fleet and army upon this State on the 28th of June last. I was conscious of having acted honestly in the cause, according to the best of my poor abilities, and there my ideas rested. However, sir, I am not insensible of the very great honour which, for barely having done my duty, I have now received from the Congress; and I beg leave to return you my particular thanks for the very polite manner in which you have transmitted their resolution of the 20th July in your favour of the 22d, which I have communicated to the officers and soldiers of my regiment.

Permit me to request, sir, you will be pleased to present my humble respects and assurances to the Congress that my life and fortune are devoted to the cause of the thirteen United States of America, and to the general propagation of liberty, and that while my health and strength will permit me, I shall hold myself at the command of my country.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WM. THOMPSON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Honourable the Representatives of the Thirteen United States of America, in Congress, at Philadelphia.

Charlestown, South-Carolina, August 14, 1776.

His Excellency General Lee and Brigadier-General Howe have set out for Georgia. Ten very fine double-fortified nine-pounders, lately belonging to the Acteon frigate, and several anchors, spars, &c., which the men-of war thought prudent to leave behind them on the night of the 28th June, have been taken up and brought to town. The search is still continued, and it is expected most of the guns will be got up.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A FIELD-OFFICER OF SOUTH-CAROLINA, DATED CAMP AT KEOWEE, AUGUST 14, 1776.

On the 6th instant I marched from my camp, about two miles below this place, with about seven hundred chosen men, to surprise Cameron and the Indians, who were said to be encamped at Oconousel. When I arrived there, I found the camp deserted. I destroyed the houses and corn that were there. I then proceeded towards Toogola, where, when I arrived, I found the houses all burnt down on the other side of the river, but the corn and all the houses on this side standing, which I entirely cut down and destroyed, and detached one hundred men on horseback, who destroyed another place, and the corn, &c., about six miles distance, and took about three hundred raw deerskins. The 9th I marched for and destroyed the corn at Estatoc, having before sent off Captains Anderson and Pickens to reconnoitre the mountains near the river, who returned and informed me that they had seen several Indians on the hills on each side the river. I marched at five o'clock next morning, and in fording the river about a mile above where I encamped, the front, being advanced about half way over, was fired upon by a considerable body of white men and Indians, who had taken the advantage of the ground along the river side, and on a high hill, which commanded the ford and landing place; being but a few men, they retreated to the bank, where they returned the fire with spirit. A general fire now ensued on both sides the river, which is here about forty yards wide; being betwixt the two parties, I ordered out a party to proceed up the river about half a mile, in order to endeavour to cross there and take them behind, but found it impracticable, the enemy having secured every part. I then ordered a strong party on a hill which commanded an open field and part of the hill on the other side, and had the Indian canoes brought over the river, in which about two hundred and twenty men crossed it, about two in the afternoon; which the enemy perceiving, quitted the ground, and left me in possession thereof, where I found nothing but some marks of blood. I do not know the number of killed and wounded of the enemy; on my side one Lieutenant and four privates are wounded, but none of them dangerously. I had the houses and corn here also burnt and destroyed, and encamped on a convenient spot till the next morning, the 11th, when I marched, burnt and destroyed the houses and corn on Brass-Town Creek. Here I encamped. The 12th I proceeded about twelve miles to Tomisie, where I found a large quantity of corn, and detached Captain Pickens with sixty men to reconnoitre the hills, where, about three in the afternoon, they discovered a spy from the enemy, on whom they fired and followed; and after running some small distance, about thirty-five of them engaged a large number of the enemy. On hearing of the firing at Tomisie, I immediately hurried to their assistance, with about one hundred and fifty men, and came upon their back about a mile from Tomisie, when a sharp firing ensued, which lasted about an hour and a quarter, when the enemy gave way with considerable loss, fifteen dead bodies being found in about the space of one hundred and fifty yards, whom our people scalped. They were so nearly engaged, that three of the Indians were killed by our people with their own knives and tomahawks. From apparent circumstances, I cannot think there could be less than sixty Indians killed and wounded in this affair. We had one man killed and fifteen wounded, three of which have since died, and the rest are in a fair way to do well. Here I encamped for the night, and the next day, 13th, reached this camp late in the evening.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO NORTHUMBERLAND COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

[No. 133.]

Annapolis, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You will be pleased to deliver to Captain James Nicholson, or order, the powder, arms, and osnaburghs, imported in the Molly, Captain Conway, and which you were so obliging as to land in a place of security. We shall be happy in having it in our power to render you the like good offices, and will most cheerfully repay you every expense that you have been put to on account of this importation. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Northumberland County, in Virginia.

JOHN DALTON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Alexandria, August 14, 1776.

SIR: By an account received from Messrs. Daniel and Samuel Hughes, this Commonwealth became indebted to your Province for the expense of powder, &c., expended in proving the two eighteen-pounders for the galleys. Enclosed is an order for the amount from the honourable Privy Council, £28 2s.; on the receipt of which, you will be pleased to have a receipt directed to me.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOHN DALTON.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer,
President of the Council of Safety of Maryland.

SAMUEL NICHOLLS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Wye River, August 14, 1776.

SIR: I received yours bearing date the 9th instant, in regard to the flint-stones at Emmerson's Landing. I believe there are two tons at least that are very readily got at.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

SAMUEL NICHOLLS.

To the Honourable Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer.

DOCTOR WEISENTHALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I was before the Council the time before I set out for New-York, I was desired to furnish the Council a memorandum concerning the direction of physical matters of the military in the Province, and that it was unavoidable, the nature of the circumstances requiring it; which memorandum you intended to lay before the Convention; but as, immediately after, Doctor Tootell was appointed for the present battalion, and acting at the same time as director, it gives me room to suppose myself superseded, and consequently discharged from any Provincial employment. My commission being Surgeon to the battalion of Colonel Smallwood, I never looked upon to be what I intended, but accepted it merely since the other was not as yet established. Should my suggestions of my discharge be your intention, be then pleased to give Dr. Tootell, or anybody else, an order for the delivery of the remaining medicines of the Province now under my care; and as there will be a balance coming to me, both for the battalion, as well as the attendance at Baltimore Town and Fort, you will please to issue your order for that purpose.

I have the honour to be, with due respect, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,

C. WEISENTHALL.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CAPTAIN LOWE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As I had unfortunately engaged the hunting-shirts for my company before I waited on you, not doubting but that your Honours would have furnished me with cash to have paid for them; and as you did not, I was under the necessity of paying for them with the money you furnished me with to carry the said company to Philadelphia; that, together with sheaths for a parcel of bayonets, shoes, hats, and body shirts, (which articles the said company could not march without,) has taken the most of the money you gave me for the purpose of carrying the company to Philadelphia. I am, therefore, under the necessity of begging your Honours to grant me a further supply by the return of Colonel Ewing, or an order on him to supply me with what will be necessary for that purpose, as it is impracticable for me to pretend to march my company without. I have no way without to furnish them with necessaries of life.

I am, gentlemen, your Honours' most obedient humble servant,

JNO. HAWKINS LOWE.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

COLONEL HOLLINGSWORTH TO THE MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head of Elk, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your several letters relative to forwarding the troops I have received. I have given every assistance in my power; but having found much difficulty in some cases to give that despatch I could have wished for, (on account of our wagons being taken on to Philadelphia, so that the next troops were obliged to wait till their return,) it hath from necessity induced me to form the plan which I flatter myself will be approved of by your Honours:

The troops as they arrive are to be provided with wagons at Elk, to carry the baggage, &c., to Christeen, where shallops are provided; or if not there, at Newport or Wilmington, where, at furthest, our wagons are to be relieved, where there are barracks provided for a battalion, and where I have, by the advice and recommendation of Brigadier-General McKinley, appointed Mr. Jonathan Rumford to provide provisions, shallops, and wagons, as occasion may require, to forward them to Chester; where there are good well-furnished barracks for a thousand men, and where, by the General's recommendation, I applied to David Copeland to provide provisions, open the barracks, &c. &c. So that by this method of proceeding the troops will make the march from Elk to Philadelphia in three days, (one day of eighteen and two of fifteen miles,) and may have good barracks and fresh provisions at each stage; by which means the tents and three-fourths the baggage may go by the shallops, as also the sick or ailing; and in some cases, where there is room, a company or two may go. In this, gentlemen, I have far surpassed my orders. Captain Allen Thomas was with me, who highly approved the mode of proceeding. By him I acquainted the honourable members of Congress for this Province. As this matter appears to me most comfortable to the troops, the cheapest, and liable to the least delay, I flatter myself of your Honours' and their approbation. As these things are attended with considerable expense, for which (with some arms I am completing here for Captain Alexander's company) I have advanced freely, I submit it whether some person, being appointed in this County to pay the several expenses, may not be conducive to the service; and am your Honours' most obedient humble servant,

H. HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

ROBERT MORRIS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, August 14, 1776.

SIR: You have annexed, an extract of a letter we have just received from Messrs. Clarke & Nightingale, merchants in Providence, Rhode-Island. This letter was laid before Congress, who ordered this Committee to inform your Excellency of the powder therein mentioned, and to desire you would take possession of it, granting a receipt for the same to those who have it in keeping, in order that we may account hereafter for the value of such part as may be adjudged to the privateer that retook it.

By order and on behalf of the Secret Committee, I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient servant,

ROBT. MORRIS, Chairman.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Extract of the Letter from Messrs. CLARKE & NIGHTINGALE.

A few days ago we received intelligence that the sloop Nancy was retaken by the Schuyler privateer, Captain Pond, and carried into Fury Inlet Bay on Long-Island. We therefore despatched Captain Potter immediately to make inquiry whether the report was true; he has returned, and confirms it, and further says she was in possession of the enemy but five or six days, and that she is pillaged of almost everything. Out of all the arms she had, there are but three muskets and fifteen pair of pistols left. They have got two cutlasses and the four swivels on board the privateer. Seventy-one kegs of powder and one bag saltpetre, they have stored in Huntington; also one large case of linens, cotton stockings, and two or three pieces cambric. The case of flints, containing ten thousand, are sent forward to New-York, to his Excellency General Washington. One half cask of powder, containing fifty weight, they have put into store at the south side of Long-Island. This is all that remains of the cargo.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, August 14, 1776.

This is the anniversary of a memorable day in the history of America: a day when the principle of American resistance and independence was first asserted and carried into action—the stamp-office fell before the rising spirit of our countrymen. It is not impossible that the two grateful brothers may make their grand attack this very day. If they should, it is possible it may be more glorious for this country than ever: it is certain it will become more memorable.

Your favours of August 1st and 5th came by yesterday's post. I congratulate you all upon your agreeable prospects. Even my pathetick little hero Charles, I hope, will have the distemper finely. It is very odd that the Doctor cannot put infection enough into his veins; nay, it is unaccountable to me, that he has not taken it the natural way before now. I am under little apprehension, prepared as he is, if he should. I am concerned about you much more. So many persons about you sick, the children troublesome, your mind perplexed, yourself weak and relaxed. The situation must be disagreeable. The country air and exercise, however, will refresh you.

I am put upon a Committee to prepare a device for a golden medal, to commemorate the surrender of Boston to the American arms, and upon another, to prepare devices for a great seal for the confederated States. There is a gentleman here of French extraction, whose name is du Simitiere, a painter by profession, whose designs are very ingenious, and his drawings well executed. He has been applied to for his advice. I waited on him yesterday, and saw his sketches. For the medal he proposes, Liberty, with her spear and pileus, leaning on General Washington; the British fleet in Boston harbour with all their sterns towards the town, the American troops marching in. For the seal, he proposes, The arms of the several nations from whence America has been peopled, as English, Scotch, Irish, Dutch, German, &c., each in a shield. On one side of them, Liberty with her pileus; on the other, a Rifle in his uniform, with his rifle-gun in one hand, and his tomahawk in the other: this dress, and these troops, with this kind of armour, being peculiar to America, unless the dress was known to the Romans. Dr. Franklin showed me yesterday a book, containing an account of the dresses of all the Roman soldiers, one of which appeared exactly like it. This M. du Simitiere is a very curious man. He has begun a collection of materials for a history of this Revolution. He begins with the first advices of the tea ships. He cuts out of the newspapers every scrap of intelligence, and every piece of speculation, and pastes it upon clean paper, arranging them under the head of that State to which they belong, and intends to bind them up in volumes. He has a list of every speculation and pamphlet concerning independence, and another of those concerning forms of Government.

Doctor Franklin proposes a device for a seal: Moses lifting up his wand, and dividing the Red Sea, and Pharaoh in his chariot overwhelmed with the waters. This motto, "Rebellion to Tyrants is obedience to God."

Mr. Jefferson proposed, The children of Israel in the wilderness, led by a cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night; and on the other side, Hengist and Horsa, the Saxon Chiefs, from whom we claim the honour of being descended, and whose political principles and form of Government we have assumed.

I proposed, The choice of Hercules, as engraved by Gribelin, in some editions of Lord Shaftesbury's works. The hero resting on his club; Virtue pointing to her rugged mountain on one hand, and persuading him to ascend; Sloth, glancing at her flowery paths of pleasure, wantonly reclining on the ground, displaying the charms both of her eloquence and person, to seduce him into vice. But this is too complicated a group for a seal or medal, and it is not original.

I shall conclude by repeating my request for horses and a servant. Let the horses be good ones. I can't ride a bad horse so many hundred miles. If our affairs had not been in so critical a state at New-York, I should have run away before now. But I am determined, now, to stay until some gentleman is sent here in my room, and until my horses come. But the time will be very tedious.

The whole force is arrived at Staten-Island.

CÆSAR RODNEY TO THOMAS RODNEY.

Philadelphia, August 14, 1776.

SIR: I sent by Mr. Robinson (without having time to write) the thread you committed to my charge, converted into stockings; but whether the weaver has discovered as much care and ingenuity as the spinner, on that occasion, I cannot say, as I had but little time to inspect them. I wrote to you by young Mr. Loockerman, who promised you should have the letter as soon as he got home, but I do not recollect when he left home, but imagined you ought to have received it before you wrote to me, and yet do not find it mentioned.

Agreeable to promise, I sent some time ago to Mr. Killon, by Matthew Henry's vessel, in the care of Richard Lockwood, Esq., a quire of post paper. I have not heard yet whether it got safe to hand, and had not when I sent it time to write to him about it.

By your letter, I stand informed as to the names of your antagonists in the ensuing election; and am pleased to find you hope to succeed. But are you not too sanguine in your expectation? I wish your ticket may be supported by the freemen of the County, because I believe those men wish to have the great work in which we are now engaged finished in such a manner as to afford to the community at large that personal safety, security of property, free enjoyment of religious persuasion, and that equal and easy distribution of justice, which they have a right to expect, and without which they cannot be happy.

I did not expect to be carried in the other ticket, because I see some names there who I believe are too far gone in personal prejudice and private emolument to do justice to merit, or to consider the rights and privileges of the people at large their interest. But if the people cannot or will not see these things, though glaring, they must and will suffer.

The time is now big with importance, as to Continental as well as Governmental matters. The armies at New-York are like to come to blows in a few days. One hundred and some odd transports, with Hessians, arrived at the Hook the day before yesterday. The English Army is supposed to be upwards of twenty thousand strong; ours better than thirty thousand, in high spirits, and eager for action, &c. I shall be able perhaps to write you more on that head in a few days.

I am, with much love to all friends, yours,

CÆSAR RODNEY.

To Thomas Rodney, Esq., Dover.

FRANCIS LEWIS TO MRS. GATES.

Philadelphia, August 13, 1776.

DEAR MADAM: I was favoured with your letter of the 6th instant, which gave me the greater pleasure as it was delivered me by your son. He set off this morning for Princeton in order to settle some matters with Mr. Witherspoon. In my conversation with Bob upon the present state of the college, I found his inclination was to return home. I advised him to the contrary, but that he should consult Dr. Witherspoon, and be governed by his advice, and as I expect the Doctor in town this day, shall advise with him. I am under no apprehension of any personal danger at Princeton; at present I think it safer than in this city.

I perceive by your letter that you are alarmed at my son Morgan's coming down express to Congress. He brought nothing material, more than the then state of the Army at Ticonderoga, much reduced by the small-pox and other disorders, but since their removal from Isle-aux-Noix they were recovering daily, and reinforcements arriving, so that when he left Ticonderoga they were thought sufficient to oppose General Burgoyne on that quarter, who is, on his part, fortifying St. John's, and building boats, &c., in order to cross the Lake. The principal reason for Morgan's coming down was briefly this: General Gates, when appointed to the command of the Army in Canada, was empowered to appoint such officers as he thought proper. In consequence thereof he nominated Morgan Deputy Quartermaster-General. When General Gates got to Albany the troops under Sullivan had evacuated Canada, therefore General Schuyler claimed the command of that Army whilst in the Colony of New-York, as senior officer, and of course General Gates's appointments for Canada were null. This brought Morgan down to solicit redress from the Congress, as he had been put to a considerable expense in equipping himself for the appointment. General Sullivan also was so disgusted at General Gates being appointed to that command, that he requested to resign; however, that he has withdrawn.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. I.

At present our greatest anxiety is for the fate of New-York, which I greatly fear is devoted to destruction. The Ministerial Army on Staten-Island are said to be thirteen thousand strong, with a considerable naval force, and we hourly expect to hear the city is attacked. If so, there is, in my opinion, little probability of its being saved.

I can assure you that General Gates and the Army under his command were by their last letters in high spirits, and under no apprehension of danger from that quarter this campaign. Whatever material may happen I shall advise you.

I am, dear madam, sincerely, your very humble servant,
FRANS. LEWIS.

REGULATIONS FOR THE SALE OF SALT.

In Convention for the State of Pennsylvania, }
Saturday, August 14, 1776. }

Whereas it appears to this Convention, upon due inquiry and information of the circumstances, that the Salt now in this city has been imported at low prices, and under moderate insurance; and whereas divers persons, in contempt of the just and wholesome regulations of the Committee, &c., of Philadelphia, under directions of Congress, have continued to dispose of their Salt at most exorbitant prices, to the great grievance and distress of their fellow-subjects of this State:

It is therefore Resolved, That the said regulations be hereby confirmed, and all persons whatever are hereby strictly enjoined to pay due obedience thereto. And the said Committees are authorized and directed to seize and take into their possession the Salt belonging to such persons as have refused, or shall refuse, conformity to the regulations so established, or shall altogether withhold or refuse to sell their Salt during the continuance of such regulations, allowing to the said persons, upon the sale thereof, the fixed and settled prices, first deducting the expenses incurred upon the sale.

And whereas it is but reasonable that every part of this extensive State should be accommodated as nearly as may be with their proportion of this article, so justly esteemed a necessary of life:

Be it Resolved, That the Committee of Philadelphia are hereby further directed to distribute the Salt that may as aforesaid come into their possession in equal quantities in the several Counties, having regard to the reputed number of inhabitants contained in the said Counties.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN MORRIS, Jun., Secretary.

Philadelphia, August 14, 1776.

Last Wednesday was launched the third Continental frigate built here, called the Washington.

Monday last arrived here the brig Polly, Captain Mermaheue, in twenty-four days from Martinico, who has brought a quantity of powder, sulphur, some arms, coffee, &c. In latitude 19° longitude 64° he spoke the brig Mermaid, Captain Sawyer, from New-York, out twenty-two days. None of the enemy's ships were at the Capes when the above vessel came in.

LANCASTER COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 14th August, 1776:

Present: William Alee, Matthias Slough, Ludwick Lowman, Henry Dehuff, Christ. Crawford, John Miller, Casper Shaffner, Jacob Krug.

William Alee in the chair.

It being represented that a number of troublesome and dangerous persons are strolling about the country near the town of Lebanon, and that they threaten the inhabitants; and it appearing that Colonel Curtis Grubb hath left John Sweitzer, Michael Winter, and some others of his battalion, with orders to guard and assist the inhabitants in the absence of the Associators who have marched to the camp, and the said Michael Winter requesting some Ammunition from the Magazine,

It is Agreed and Ordered, That Mr. Bowsman deliver to said Michael Winter three pounds of Powder and twelve pounds of Lead, for the use of the Guard for the purpose aforesaid.

Lieutenant Christopher Crawford, of a detachment of Associators who have acted as guard in the town, exhibited a Pay-Bill for the Troops under his command, amounting to £223 8s. 2d., which, being examined, is allowed and passed in Committee, and ordered to be paid by William Atlee, Esq., the Committee Treasurer and Paymaster.

And as it appears there are a number of persons included in the said Pay-Bill who have joined his detachment and have really done duty, but have not signed the Association in any Company or Battalion, and are therefore subject to being marched from here, Mr. Crawford is directed to tender to them the Association, to be signed by them as members of some particular Company here, and those who refuse are to be discharged. And Mr. Crawford is directed to discharge from his detachment the following persons, who appear to the Committee unfit for duty, and therefore think they ought not to receive pay, viz: Frederick Bauder, above fifty years of age, and very infirm; Henry Lindeman, above fifty years of age, lame and infirm; Adam Froult, above fifty years, and a Non-Associator; Jacob Steigleman, above fifty, and a Non-Associator; John Gouter, a lad of about fourteen years of age, and a Gunsmith's apprentice.

Lieutenant Casper Shaffner, of Captain Klatz's Company of Militia, doing duty in Lancaster, exhibited a Pay-Bill for the Company now under his command, (Captain Klatz being absent,) amounting to £230 16s. 5d., which, being examined, is allowed and approved in Committee, and ordered to be paid by William Atlee, the Committee Treasurer and Paymaster.

Lieutenant Christian Petre, of Captain Yeates's Company of Militia, of Colonel Slough's Battalion, now doing duty in Lancaster, exhibited a Pay-Bill for that Company, now under his command, (Captain Yeates being absent,) amounting to £237 6s. 2d., which, being examined, is allowed and approved in Committee, and ordered to be paid by William Atlee, the Committee's Treasurer and Paymaster.

Captain John Henry, of Colonel Ross's Battalion of Militia, now doing duty in Lancaster, exhibited a Pay-Bill for that Company, now under his command, amounting to £272 18s. 8d., which, being examined, is allowed and approved in Committee, and ordered to be paid by William Atlee, the Committee Treasurer and Paymaster, deducting £100 heretofore advanced to Captain Henry by Mr. Lowman, and repaid to Mr. Lowman by the Paymaster in Philadelphia, so that the sum of £172 18s. 8d. is to be paid to Captain Henry.

Captain Peter Hoofnagle, of Colonel George Ross's Battalion of Militia, now doing duty in Lancaster, exhibited a Pay-Bill for that Company, now under his command, amounting to £282 16s. 10d., which, being examined, is allowed and approved of in Committee, and ordered to be paid by William Atlee, the Committee's Treasurer and Paymaster, he deducting £120 heretofore advanced to Captain Hoofnagle by Mr. Christopher Wirtz, and repaid to Mr. Wirtz by the Paymaster in Philadelphia, so that the sum of £162 16s. 10d. is to be paid to Captain Hoofnagle.

August 16, 1776.

The same Members present as on the 13th.

William Atlee in the chair.

Resolved, That the following persons, to wit: Marcus Nagle, Nicholas Scove, Thomas Nabury, Peter McMullen, John Jones, (Stocktaker,) in the service of Colonel Peter Grubb, at his forge in the manufacture of Gun-scalps, &c., be left in that employ, and be not marched with the Militia.

George Sand, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, servant to Ensign Gordon, and John Willson, are permitted to go to York, and continue there under the directions of the Committee there, that Committee having agreed to it, and these people have before been permitted to be at York as servants with the officers, and were lately sent by that Committee from thence.

Daniel Campbell, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to work with John Lightner at the Weaving business.

John Farnell, of the Seventh Regiment, is permitted to work with Cornelius Taylor, Shoemaker, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the resolves of the Committee.

Daniel Campbell, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to work with John Lightner at the Weaving business, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the resolves of Committee.

Committee Chamber, in Paxtown, 14th of August, at Mr. George Fries's, in Middletown, 1776:

On motion, Resolved unanimously, That this Committee make application to the County Committee for one hundred and thirty-five pounds of Gunpowder, for the use of this Township, as we do not know the day or hour we may be attacked by a frontier enemy; thirty-five pounds of which Powder and one hundred and fifty-pounds of Lead and Shot lies in Mr. John Harris's; and five hundred pounds of Lead which lies at the house of Mr. Carrous; and as we look up to you in all cases of emergency, we hope you will consider our distressed situation, and that you will direct under whose hands said Ammunition shall be lodged.

Also, on motion, Resolved unanimously, That all the Gunsmiths of our Township be set to repair all Arms in said Township that are not fit for service, at the expense of the publick, and that your honourable Board will empower this Committee to oblige all the Gunsmiths in that Township to fall to work at said Guns immediately.

By order of Committee:

ANDREW BERRYHILL, Chairman.

To the Chairman of Upper-Paxtown Township Committee, when sitting, at the request of Captain Devlar and a number of others then present, and also I send you a copy of our resolve in regard of putting in our fall crops:

Resolved, That it is the advice and opinion of this Committee that there shall be four men chosen in each company or district, and are hereby appointed, to give their assistance and advice to the utmost of their power and abilities to take care and have the fall crops of each man in each district that is gone abroad in defence of his country, put in in proper time and season, as far as in them lies, and according to the choice of the members of the Committee in each district. The following men were chosen for the said purpose, by order of Committee:

August 13, 1776.

ANDREW BERRYHILL, Chairman.

Mr. JOHN GARBER: You are desired to send this paper to the Committee of Upper-Paxton, or to Captain Devlar.

Paxton, August 27, 1776.

Mr. Berryhill has been wrongly informed respecting the quantity of powder in John Harris's possession, (of his own,) which said Harris informed Mr. Bowman, of Lancaster, by letter, was one-quarter cask, to wit: twenty-five pounds of gunpowder, which should be procured, if wanted, for the common defence of American liberty, though not included in the military stores of Lancaster County, nor any lead. Witness the return made when the military stores were inspected into by the said Harris and others, appointed by the Committee of said County.

And whereas it is reported that several evil-disposed persons in the frontiers of Upper-Paxton township and Hanover township, above the Kittatinney Mountains, are robbing houses, frightening women and children, &c., the said Harris thinks it very proper that the bearer, Ludwick Gratz, appointed by the township of Upper Paxton, to apply for one-quarter cask of gunpowder at the magazine of Lancaster, and an order for about sixty or seventy pounds of lead, be delivered said Gratz by Mr. Carson, to save the trouble of carriage from Lancaster of said lead within mentioned, on condition that the said Gratz give security that said ammunition shall be detained in said Upper Paxton township to oppose all enemies, Tories, robbers, &c., when needful. And the said John Harris chooses to keep his own ammunition in store until wanted for said purposes within mentioned.

JOHN HARRIS.

To the Committee of Correspondence and Observation, &c., of Lancaster County.

CLEMENT BIDDLE TO RICHARD PETERS.

Perth-Amboy, August 14, 1776.

SIR: Since my arrival here, I have from time to time written to Mr. Gustavus Risberg, at Philadelphia, to procure such articles as were necessary for furnishing the Flying-Camp and Militia as were in service here, and to apply, if need, at your office. Indeed I found they wanted everything; and I have proceeded with as much caution and economy as was in my power, in providing and supplying them, consistently with the good of the service. However, I find it will be necessary to have some method established by which the different regiments of Militia and Flying-Camp are to account for necessaries and accoutrements furnished them, and beg you will lay before the honourable Board of War the state of this affair for their determination.

I was empowered by the honourable Continental Congress to name one Assistant Quartermaster General, and accordingly named John Shaw, Esq., who remains at Trenton. I wrote to Colonel Moylan on this subject, and he informs me I must employ as many trusty persons as are necessary to forward the service. It is essentially necessary that some person be appointed Assistant Quartermaster General at Philadelphia; and as Mr. Risberg is fully acquainted with the business, and has the whole of my affairs under his care there, with proper assistance in providing necessaries for the Army, I wish him to be confirmed therein, the office to give weight to his acting therein; and that any application to your Board may come through him. I can't possibly do without one (or more occasionally) here, with storekeeper, clerk, &c.; and I shall proceed in the expensive department under my care with caution and attention to saving as much as the service will allow. I beg you will lay this also before the Board, and favour me with any directions herein or relative to my office that may be thought necessary.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

CLEMENT BIDDLE, D. Q. M. Gen.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary of War, Philadelphia.

GOVERNOUR TRYON TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

August 14, 1776. }

MY LORD: I have been honoured with your Lordship's several despatches by the Sandwich, Lord Hyde, and Halifax, packet boats, to No. 4 inclusive. I am happy to learn my endeavours to promote the interest of the present great national cause has been so well accepted by his Majesty. I wish the strength of my constitution could keep pace with my inclinations to serve my Prince; broken and impaired as the former is, I am nevertheless not without the hope of having a share in the restoration of the publick tranquillity.

The confederated Colonies have declared themselves independent States. Enclosed is a printed copy of their Declaration of Independency, which was published through the streets of New-York the middle of last month, where the King's statue has been demolished, as well as the King's arms in the City Hall, the established churches shut up, and every vestige of Royalty, as far as has been in the power of the Rebels, done away; the persons of the Mayors of the cities of New-York and Albany, Judges, Counsellors, Magistrates, and principal gentlemen of the country, that are not in rebellion, seized and secured, and even down to the meanest planter, persecuted and tyrannized over.

The whole armament destined for this part of America, except the last division of the Hessians, being now assembled here, I expect, by the courage and strength of this noble Army, tyranny will be crushed and legal Government restored.

As the military and naval operations do not lie within my department, I shall leave the relations of them to those gentlemen who have the honour to guide them.

I am, with all possible respect, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient servant,

WM. TRYON.

To Lord George Germaine.

P. S. August 15, 1776. Yesterday evening Sir Peter Parker brought into the Hook a fleet of twenty-five sail from the southward. Lord Dunmore and Lord Wm. Campbell are on board that fleet.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 15, 1776.]

New-York, August 14, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour of addressing you on Monday, nothing of importance has occurred here, except that the enemy have received an augmentation to their fleet of ninety-six ships; some reports make them more. In a letter I wrote you yesterday by Lieutenant-Colonel Reed, I advised you of this; but presuming it may not reach you so soon as this will, I have thought proper to mention the intelligence again.

Enclosed I have the honour to transmit a copy of the examination of a deserter, sent me this morning by General Mercer, to which I beg leave to refer Congress for the latest accounts I have from the enemy. Whether the intelligence he has given is literally true I cannot determine, but as to the attack we daily expect it.

Your favour of the 10th, with its enclosures, was duly received, and I have instructed the several officers who were promoted to act in their stations, as you requested, though their commissions were not sent.

As we are in extreme want of tents and covering for this Army, (a great part of them are outposts, having nothing to shelter, nor houses to go in,) I submit it to Congress whether it may not be prudent to remand those that were sent to Boston lately, where there are no troops at present; and if there were, the necessity for them would not be great, as the town and barracks at several of the posts would be sufficient to receive them.

The enclosed letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Henshaw will discover to Congress his views and wishes, which they will consider and determine on, in whatever they may think right and conducive to the publick good, meaning only to lay his letter before them.

I take the liberty of mentioning that Colonel Varnum, of Rhode-Island, has been with me this morning, to resign his commission, conceiving himself to be greatly injured in not having been noticed in the late arrangements and promotions of General Officers. I remonstrated against the impropriety of the measure at this time, and he has consented to stay till affairs wear a different aspect than what they do at present.

Eleven o'clock.—By a report just come to hand from General Greene, seventy ships more are coming in.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the highest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Camp Long-Island, July 6, 1776.

SIR: Upon a recommendation from General Ward to your Excellency in my favour, you were pleased to say I deserved a regiment; but as so many regiments were ordered to be reduced at the end of last campaign, I could not have one then without doing injustice to some others who were deserving; which I did not then, nor do now, desire. Your Excellency will please to note I commanded a regiment in the country where I dwell when at home, before this unnatural war broke out, and marched with it to Cambridge at the battle of Lexington, and continued in the service five or six weeks; my business at home being in such a situation at that time as required my presence, I requested a discharge from the Army, which was granted; soon after was desired to engage in the service again as Adjutant-General, which I did, and continued therein until superseded by General Gates. In the present campaign I was appointed a Lieutenant-Colonel under Colonel Little, which reduced the rank I formerly held in the service, and exposes me to be commanded by many who have been on command under me; which your Excellency is sensible must be disagreeable to every person who has any feelings, and which nothing but the noble cause we are engaged in could have induced me to submit to. I have no doubts in my mind, sir, but that you will take my case into consideration, and grant me the rank I have heretofore held, when you can without injuring the service or doing injustice to others. Happy shall I esteem myself when I can retire from the service without injuring the cause or dishonouring myself.

I am, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

WILLIAM HENSHAW.

To His Excellency General Washington.

The Examination of THOMAS GIVENS, a Private of the Sixty-Fourth Regiment, who deserted from STATEN-ISLAND by swimming over to AMBOY, August 13, 1776, at nine o'clock.

He informs, that six companies are quartered near Billop's farm, and two at the house above. That General Agnew is quartered at Billop's house.* That all the troops expected are arrived. That about five hundred Hessians and six marching regiments arrived yesterday, which, having been refreshed at Halifax, are not to be landed at Staten-Island, but to continue on board till the attack is made. That five thousand Hessians had arrived before. That it is supposed the whole force consists of about twenty-six thousand men. That he heard of no intention of attacking Amboy, but that they expected soon to attack Long-Island and New-York. That three brigades are to stay on the Island when the attack at New-York and Long-Island is made, viz: one opposite Amboy, another at the Narrows, and the third at Elizabethtown Point. The soldiers are healthy, but have no fresh provisions. That there were about nine thousand effective men when they left Boston, and that three thousand unfit for duty were left behind at Halifax. That about five nights ago, two men from Amboy came over to the Island, being inhabitants of this place, (Amboy), but cannot remember their names; that the sentries had orders to let them pass and repass at pleasure. That there are four brass pieces (two twelve and two three-pounders) opposite Amboy, which are all that belong to the brigade. That there are eight companies to a regiment, besides Grenadiers and Infantry, and each company consists of thirty-six privates, and each brigade of three regiments. A subaltern and sixteen men mount guard in the day, and at night they are reinforced with a Captain and twenty-eight men, who mount at the tent near the Point. That General Clinton and the troops from Carolina had arrived, and that the Fiftieth Regiment were almost cut off at Sullivan's Island. That it is in the orders of this day (13th) that the men be immediately furnished with three days' provision, ready cooked, and be ready at a moment's warning. That they have gondolas and floating batteries. The gondolas carry two guns and thirty oars each, and one designed to cover the men when they land. That at reveille beating the men are under arms an hour.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 14, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered you by Captain Mocballe, a Dutch gentleman from Surinam, who has come to the Continent with a view of entering into the service of the States, as you will perceive by the enclosed letters from Mr. Brown, of Providence, and General Greene. What other letters and credentials he has, I know not, but at his request have given him this line to Congress, to whom he wishes to be introduced, and where he will make his pretensions known.

I have ordered the Quartermaster immediately to write to Mr. Brown for the Russia duck he mentions, with directions to have it instantly made into tents there, being in great distress for want of a sufficient number to cover our troops.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
Go. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL JAMES CLINTON.

Head-Quarters, August 14, 1776.

SIR: I have the pleasure of forwarding you by this opportunity a letter from Congress enclosing your commission for a Brigadier in the Continental Army; on which appointment please to accept my hearty congratulations. As the post you are now at is an object of great importance, and I am acquainted with the officers under you, must request you will remain there till you hear further from me.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Brig. Gen. James Clinton, Fort Montgomery.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL GATES.

New-York, August 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I yesterday morning received your letter of the 29th ultimo, by Bennet, the express, and am extremely sorry to find that the Army is still in a sickly and melancholy state. The precaution taken to halt the reinforcements at Skenesborough, which are destined for your succour, is certainly prudent. They should not be exposed or made liable to the calamities already too prevalent, unless in cases of extreme necessity. Dr. Stringer has been here with Dr.

* Billop's house is opposite Amboy.

Morgan, and is now at Philadelphia. I trust he will obtain some necessary supplies of medicines, which will enable him, under the smiles of Providence, to relieve your distresses in some degree. By a letter from General Ward, two regiments (Whitcomb's and Phinney's) were to march to your aid last week. They have happily had the small-pox, and will not be subject to the fatal consequences attending that disorder.

I am glad to hear the vessels for the Lakes are going on with such industry. Maintaining the superiority over the water is certainly of infinite importance. I trust neither courage nor activity will be wanting in those to whom the business is committed. If assigned to General Arnold, none will doubt of his exertions.

In answer to those parts of your letter which so highly resent the conduct of the General Officers here, I would observe, sir, that you are under a mistake when you suppose a Council of Officers had sat upon those who composed the board at Crown-Point. When intelligence was first brought that that post was evacuated, it spread a general alarm, and occasioned much anxiety to all who heard it; it being almost universally believed that it was a post of the last importance, and the only one to give us, in conjunction with our naval force, a superiority over the Lake, and for preventing the enemy's penetrating into this and the Eastern Governments. As this matter was occasionally mentioned, the General Officers (some from their own knowledge, and others from the opinion they had formed) expressed themselves to that effect, as did all I heard speak upon the subject. Added to this, the remonstrance of the officers, transmitted by General Schuyler, at the same time the account was brought, did not contribute a little to authorize the opinion which was generally entertained. They surely seemed to have some reasons in their support, though it was not meant to give the least encouragement or sanction to proceedings of such a nature. Upon the whole, no event that I have been informed of for a long time produced a more general chagrin and consternation. But yet there was no Council called upon the occasion, nor Court of Inquiry, nor Court-Martial, as has been suggested by some. I will not take up more time upon the subject, or make it a matter of further discussion, not doubting but those who determined that the post ought to be abandoned, conceived it would promote the interest of the great cause we are engaged in, though others have differed from them. By-the-by, I wish your description perfectly corresponded with the real circumstances of this Army.

You will have heard, before this comes to hand most probably, of the arrival of Clinton and his Army from the southward. They are now at Staten-Island, as are the whole or the greatest part of the Hessian and foreign troops. Since Monday, ninety-six ships came in, which we are informed is the last division of Lord Howe's fleet which touched at Halifax, and (by a deserter) are not to land their troops. We are in daily expectation that they will make their attack; all their movements, and the advices we have, indicating that they are on the point of it.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Gates, Ticonderoga.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 14, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 30th ultimo, in behalf of the honourable Council of the Massachusetts State, is duly received. Through you, I beg their acceptance of my most hearty thanks for their readiness in undertaking the late treaty. I likewise congratulate them on the success with which it was attended, and wish an early arrival of such of their tribes as intend joining us in the present controversy. The four under care of Mr. Shaw have arrived, and promise to take an active part with us.

By intelligence received this morning from Staten-Island, we have the greatest reason to suppose a very few days will determine the fate of this city. A deserter mentions the arrival of their whole force, and that it was the orders of yesterday to have three days' provisions ready cooked, and be ready at a moment's warning; he mentions their numbers to be twenty-six thousand, and in general very healthy. The Army under my command (which amounts to little more than half the number of effective men) are in good spirits, and will, I hope, act becoming men fighting for everything worth fighting for, everything worth living for. In this case, with the smiles of Providence, I have not a doubt but that we may render a good account to our country and posterity of these mercenaries.

With particular compliments to the several members of your honourable body, I am, sir, with sentiments of esteem, your most obedient and very humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

GENERAL SCOTT TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, August 13, Evening, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: While I confess I am much honoured by the respectable Convention of the State of New-York, in trusting Willet Taylor to my discretion, I am reduced to much difficulty to determine how to dispose of him. I advised his father-in-law, Mr. Bogart, whom I know to be a staunch friend to liberty, to send for him home, and require him to submit to the orders of the Convention. It is, I suppose, in consequence of that advice that he has returned to Harlem. Mr. Bogart told me Taylor would bind himself by oath neither to speak, write, or act against the American cause. His oath the Convention can take, but I cannot do it. If further security should be necessary, by Mr. Bogart's entering into recognizance with him, the Convention can take it, but I cannot. If, nevertheless, it should still be their opinion that I am to deal with him, I shall obey their commands, for I shall ever think it an honour to me, both as a member of their body and as a military officer of their appointment, implicitly to execute their orders. Be pleased to commend me to them, and assure them that nothing but the expectation of an attack prevents my having the honour of being with them. I am, sir, your humble servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

To John McKesson, Esq.

P. S. The messenger had just left me when Major Fish informed me that the officers of my brigade will not receive their commissions, because, being dated yesterday, the date will render them juniors to many. They entered into the service the 14th June. Be pleased, sir, to get a new set of that date. Major Fish thinks it hard to be left without a commission. The entry in the records respecting him will show when his commission is to be dated.

JOHN BROOME TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Harlem, August 14, 1776.

Owners of the privateer sloop Harlequin, Daniel Shaw commander, viz: Samuel Broome & Co., John Broome, John Woodward, John Livingston, Daniel Shaw, Thomas Crab, Abraham P. Lott, Stockholm & Dickson, and Abraham & E. Lott.

The above privateer sloop is about seventy tons burden, mounts fourteen double fortified four-pounders, navigated and manned with ninety men; provisions, forty barrels of beef and pork; arms and ammunition, one thousand pounds of powder, fifty small-arms.

The subscriber being one of the forementioned owners, requests from the Convention of the State of New-York a commission for the above vessel.

JNO. BROOME.

Know all men by these presents, That we, Daniel Shaw, John Broome, and Thomas Crab, of the City of New-York, in the sum of six thousand dollars are held and firmly bound to the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Congress of the United Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Counties of New-Castle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, to be paid to the said John Hancock, or his certain attorney, executors, administrators, or assigns, in trust for the use of the said United Colonies: To which payment well and truly to be done, we do bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents. Sealed with our seals, dated the sixteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord 1776.

The condition of this obligation is such, That if the above bounden Daniel Shaw, who is commander of the sloop called the Harlequin, belonging to John Broome, Samuel Broome & Co., of New-York, in the Colony of New-York, mounting fourteen carriage guns, and navigated by ninety men, and who hath applied for a commission or letters of marque and reprisal, to arm, equip, and set forth to sea, the said sloop as a private ship of war, and to make captures of British vessels and cargoes, shall not exceed, or transgress the powers and authorities which shall be contained in the said commission, but shall in all things observe and conduct himself and govern his crew by and according to the same, and certain instructions therewith to be delivered, and such other instructions as may hereafter be given to him, and shall make reparation for all damages sustained by any misconduct or unwarrantable proceedings of himself or the officers or crew of the said sloop, then this obligation shall be void, or else remain in force.

DANIEL SHAW,
JNO. BROOME,
THOMAS CRAB.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of,

DANIEL PHENIX,
Witness to Captain Shaw and John Broome.

ROBERT YATES TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Poughkeepsie, August 14, 1776.

SIR: As we are informed that the little powder belonging to the State is dispersed through the Counties for the use of the Militia, we find ourselves under the necessity of requesting an order from your Excellency to Captain Benson, on Mr. John R. Livingston, for as much powder as may be necessary for our two armed vessels.

We have directed him to procure a proper number of hand-grenades. There is reason to expect he may be able to purchase them. Should he fail in this, and the publick stores admit of such a supply, we also beg of your Excellency to give him the necessary orders for that purpose.

We have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT YATES, Chairman.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 14, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I would inform your Honour that the three galleys are planked, but we have had such a flood of water for two days, that the mill at this place has not been able to go, which has been some set-back to our getting plank; but we expect her to go this day. The road proving very bad between Cheshire's and Fort George road, I would send more help to that post, if it be agreeable to your Honour. We are not provided with deck nails: if there be any at Ticonderoga, I should take it as a favour to have them forwarded, as they will soon be wanted. And am, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WATERBURY.

Tyonderoga, August 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I desire you will immediately send to Tyonderoga all the troops belonging to Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, now at Skenesborough, and as fast as more arrive from those Provinces, you will, without delay, send them also forward to this post. Such of the tents belonging to the Bay forces as are come to Skenesborough, you will forward with the troops. When the three galleys and gondolas now building are launched, and fitted with all that is requisite to be done to them at Skenesborough, you will yourself, with one regiment of the Connecticut troops, embark on board of them, and proceed to Tyonderoga, leaving Colonel Wynkoop in command at Skenesborough.

Governour Trumbull writes me word that he sent one thousand felling-axes to Skenesborough: five hundred of them may be sent forward under proper care to me, the rest to be left at Skenesborough, under the care of Colonel Wynkoop. All the spades not wanted at your post should be sent here directly. Let me have an immediate answer to this letter, with as good an account as you can give so suddenly, of the number of the Militia now at your post. Are any of the Continental regiments from Boston come, or, as you hear, coming?

I am, sir, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

To Brigadier-General Waterbury.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL GANSEVOORT.

Tyonderoga, August 14, 1776.

SIR: Many things which I have lately written for to Captain Varick, and which he acquaints me with having sent forward, are not arrived here, particularly cartridge-paper. I desire you will immediately oblige the Conductor at Fort George to give you a signed return of everything at present under his care, and let me know what cartridge-paper, musket-balls, buckshot, and flints, are in his hands now; all which I desire you will see immediately forwarded by a careful officer to me. I beg you will keep a watchful eye over this Conductor, and see that no stores of any kind are delayed at Fort George in their passage hither.

Be sure you acquaint the Director of the Hospital that all persons recovered of the small-pox must be perfectly cleansed from all infection before they are sent hither: their clothes, blankets, &c., well washed. Too much care cannot be taken in this business. I am, sir, &c.

HORATIO GATES.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Gansevoort.

P. S. Spades are much wanted here.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 14, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I congratulate you on the safe arrival of the three men whom I sent to St. John's. They bring most perfect intelligence from that quarter. You may depend upon the truth of what they allege.

You will have an exact account of the boats and vessels at that place, as well as a pretty near estimate of the troops there, and a state of the works, &c. From the whole, I understand that they have only one vessel of force, and that not finished: no more on the stocks. They seem to be drawing their strength towards the Isle-aux-Noix, and I presume mean to pay us a visit. These men have behaved with great address, not only in saving themselves, but in procuring the intelligence. They are brave men, yet cautious.

Had the taking away a life or two been of any use, they would have effected it easily. Their canoe was too small to carry a prisoner, could they have taken one.

I am happy in this regiment having rendered any service to the publick: we would wish to be more useful. Mr. Thomas McCoy, one of the men, formerly held an Ensigncy in the Pennsylvania service. I promised him an Ensigncy in this regiment, in case he behaved well. I mentioned this to your Honour; you were pleased to say you approved of my engagement. There is a vacancy now in this regiment; you will therefore be pleased to grant him an Ensigncy in it. General Arnold engaged that they should have a pecuniary reward in case they made any discoveries. You also mentioned that you would reward merit in that way on proper occasions. I hope you will consider this as one, and give Gilbert McCoy and Power such a reward as their services deserve.

I am forming an intrenchment round my camp, which will effectually serve us against any attempt of the savages, Canadians, or the light troops of the enemy. We have made a considerable progress in it.

It will always give me satisfaction to find that in the above, or any other part of my conduct, I meet with your approbation.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble and obedient servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

P. S. Thomas McCoy, Gilbert McCoy, and James Power, I send up with this letter.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

Lebanon, August 14, 1776.

SIR: Dr. Russell, Surgeon of Colonel Swift's regiment, now at Skenesborough, came to me this morning for a supply of medicine for the use of his regiment. I concluded what was necessary would be furnished from the Continental Hospital stores; but as Dr. Russell informs me he had applied to you for an order on Dr. Stringer, and received for an answer that he could not be supplied there, I have ordered him a small supply from hence for the present, until the Continental stores are replenished.

The distressed, broken and dejected state of the Army which retreated out of Canada, has given pain and anxiety to every friend to this country, especially to the inhabitants of these Northern Colonies. I am happy to hear that they begin to emerge from their state of distress and dejection, and that there is reason to hope we may yet, in the course of this campaign, see them upon a respectable footing and in condition to act with vigour and spirit in defence of their country.

The friends of those soldiers from this State who are and have been sick in Hospital at Fort George, are particularly anxious on their account. I apprehend they will naturally divide into three classes: such as recover and become fit for duty; such as will at length recover their full health and strength; and such as will probably never regain their health so as to be fit for duty, or at least not till their term of service is expired. May I not be permitted to suggest to your consideration, as the two last classes are at present worse than useless to the Army, whether it would not be expedient that those of the last class should be discharged, and some of the convalescent officers employed to supply their places with fresh recruits, and that those of the second class might be permitted to return home on furlough for a short time, that their health may be fully reestablished? In this way I flatter myself that some lives may be saved, and at the same time the real strength of the Army not diminished. Should any be permitted to return, I trust care will be taken that they may not bring the infection of the small-pox, and scatter it in the country.

A report prevails here, and gains some credit, that General Burgoyne has retreated to Montreal and Quebeck. Should this report prove true, and the new levied troops go on to join you, as is expected, we shall hope not only to see you strong enough to resume and fortify the strong post at Crown-Point, but also St. John's and Montreal.

I am, sir, with sentiments of the highest respect, your obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

NORWALK (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE.

Whereas the Committee of Inspection of the Town of Norwalk, on the 28th day of February last past, for good causes them thereunto moving, resolved that no article of any kind be exported by land or water out of this Town, without first obtaining a permit from a Sub-Committee then appointed by them for that purpose:

Notwithstanding the above resolution, one Captain Thomas Grenel, and his son Thomas Grenel, both now resident in said Norwalk, without desiring such permit, and in open defiance and contempt of this Committee, conveyed two boxes of Tea, under arms, on board a boat to be transported abroad. And also the said Grenel, before the conveyance aforesaid, had declared his spite and contempt against said Committee, by saying "Damn the Committee," and swore by the Almighty, that if any man or men opposed him in the delivery of said Tea, he would send him or them to the other world, or words to that effect. Whereupon, on the 8th day of August, 1776, this Committee resolved that the said Thomas Grenel, and his son Thomas Grenel, are dangerous persons, and ought to be disarmed.

And moreover, the said Thomas Grenel, by citation, appeared before this Committee, with regard to his price in selling Bohea Tea; to whom he replied, owned, and declared, that he had sold quantities of Tea for a greater price than was set by the Continental Congress, (although this Committee were informed that the said Mr. Grenel was one who made application to the honourable Continental Congress for the sale of such Teas.) Which complicated iniquities have a dangerous tendency to draw the incautious into many snares and troubles; which to prevent, and also that our constituents should not be imposed on in any such wicked practices,

Resolved, That the said Thomas Grenel is a staunch opposer of the proceedings and resolutions of the honourable Continental Congress, and also of this Committee and their constituents, and appears to this Committee to be a haughty, disaffected, unfriendly person to the United States. And all persons are requested to have no further dealings, intercourse, connexions, or correspondence with said Thomas Grenel; and that the same be published.

By order of the Committee:

Attest: JESSE RAYMOND, Clerk.

Norwalk, August 14, 1776.

COLONEL HINMAN TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Woodbury, August 14, 1776.

SIR: I received your Honour's orders of the 6th July last, requiring me (on notice given by General Washington, or the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United Colonies, of the necessity of assistance) to call forth and march with expedition so many of the able-bodied and effective men of my regiment as would be necessary, &c., to be under the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and give immediate notice thereof to your Honour.

In obedience to said orders, I would hereby inform your Honour, that, on the 10th instant, I received (per express) a letter from General Washington, dated New-York, the 7th instant, informing of the necessity of assistance, requesting me to call forth my regiment without delay, and have them equipped with blankets, arms, and ammunition, and march them immediately to New-York; upon the receipt of which, I without delay gave orders to all my Captains to call forth their respective companies, have them equipped according to the above request, and march them immediately to New-York. A number of said companies have marched, others are now going off, and to-morrow the whole will be on the way. Major Canfield, I am informed, went off yesterday. I am now going off myself, with Lieutenant-Colonel Mosely, and expect in two or three days to be in New-York with my regiment. We must be deficient in numbers, notwithstanding we take almost every man. I shall transmit to your Honour a return of those of my regiment which are in said service as soon as it comes in my power.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,
BENJAMIN HINMAN.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour and Captain-General of the Colony of Connecticut, at Lebanon.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CAPTAIN HENRY BARNES, OF THE EAGLE, BELONGING TO WHITEHAVEN, ENGLAND, TO HIS OWNERS, DATED RHODE-ISLAND, AUGUST 14, 1776.

I sailed from Barbadoes the 21st of June. On the 12th of July, made a sail astern: she soon came up with us, though we little imagined her to be an American privateer, being then in latitude 32° 25', longitude 52°. At half-past eight in the night, she fired a gun to leeward, from which we concluded she was an English cruiser; but were too soon convinced to the contrary. When we first made the sloop, she appeared large from the crowd of sail she carried; but, on a nearer survey, we found her to be very small, painted black, with ten guns, fifty men, and every necessary for a cruise. She is called the Montgomery, Captain Bucklin. They took out all the Eagle's people but myself, the boatswain, and a boy, and conveyed us to this place.

My people are all well. We are supported at present at the expense of the owner of the privateer, and indulged with the liberty of going about where we please, and are, in every respect, treated with the greatest kindness and civility. We are the seventh West-Indiaman taken by this privateer. Numbers of vessels have been taken coming from the West-India Islands.

MAJOR HAWLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Northampton, August 14, 1776.

GENERAL GATES: I this minute received your favour of the 10th instant, and carefully mark the contents, and shall, dear sir, do everything in my power as soon as possible to effect what you have been pleased to ask. Your Honour will please to be informed that Number Four is upwards of seventy miles from this place. It is directly counter to the orders of the Council of this Government that a man should tarry to inoculate. I have been so happy as to effect the march of about seven hundred good men from this County, without any delay for inoculation.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH HAWLEY.

MAJOR HAWLEY TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Northampton, August 14, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: I conceive it to be my duty to acquaint you that this day I saw a young man sent by Mr. Farnsworth to inform the three Continental regiments and Colonel Willard's regiment, (if he could find them,) that it was impossible to provide rations for them or any of them at Number Four.

Your Honours will determine what orders are proper to give on this occasion. He also declared that they would make good provision for them all at Bennington.

I am, with great respect, the Council's servant,

JOSEPH HAWLEY.

BENJAMIN GREENLEAF TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Newburyport, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have this moment received the enclosed letter by a gentleman from New-York, and take the first opportunity to forward it to you. As soon as I have despatched a piece of business now in hand, and which it is necessary I should attend to, I shall do myself the honour of waiting on you at Watertown; as, in the interim, I am, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant,

B. GREENLEAF.

To the Honourable Council of Massachusetts State.

P. S. Captain Wingate Newman is just arrived at the entrance of this river with a prize-ship, nearly four hundred hogsheads of sugar, and nearly one hundred hogsheads of rum.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO COMMITTEE AT SALEM.

In Committee of Council, August 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee of Council have duly considered your memorial respecting Messrs. Daitt and Lawless having taken their passage for France on board a vessel fitted out by the United States, under the command of Captain Cleveland. The character you suppose these genlemen sustain makes it very important for them to embark for any part of Europe at this time. You are therefore directed to use your utmost endeavours to prevent these gentlemen from sailing in the vessel aforesaid, or in any other, until the further order of the Council.

To the Committee of Safety, &c., Salcm.

JACOB EMERSON TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Reading, August 14, 1776.

Colonel Campbell, stationed at Reading, has dismissed four of his servants, Charles McArthur, Archibald Baxter, John Nicholson, and Robert Hill. Hill has contracted for the present with one of his trade, a cordwainer in this town, for his support. The other three are on charge exceeding the rations of American soldiers. A person by the name of Munroe, boarding with Quartermaster Ogilvie and Surgeon's Mate Burns, according to appearance, passes and repasses as far as a sea-port.

By order of Committee:

JACOB EMERSON, Chairman.

To the Honourable Council of the Massachusetts State.

Worcester, August 14, 1776.

Last week Richard Green, late of Boston, merchant, a noted Tory, went through this town into exile, agreeable to his sentence.

WARWICK (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

Warwick, Massachusetts-Bay, August 14, 1776.

The Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, of the town of Warwick, having had many complaints of the inimical temper and disposition of Mr. Lemuel Hedge, of said Warwick, towards the grand struggle for the liberties of the American States, and the said Mr. Lemuel Hedge showed contempt in refusing to appear, it is therefore,

Resolved, That Mr. Lemuel Hedge, in speaking contemptuously of the honourable Continental Congress, and also setting forth how the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay had trampled on the King's laws and his officers, and also many other unfriendly speeches; it is therefore the opinion of this Committee, that the said Mr. Lemuel Hedge is inimical to these American States, and that he ought to be dealt with accordingly. It is therefore,

Resolved, That the said Mr. Lemuel Hedge be disarmed, and confined to the limits of his farm, unless by a permit from the Committee of said Town.

Voted, That the foregoing proceedings with regard to Mr. Lemuel Hedge, be inserted in the Hartford paper.

By order of said Committee:

JOSIAH POMEROY, Chairman.

Secretary's Office, Halifax.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas discovery has been made that some disaffected persons have endeavoured, by promises and other arts, to seduce Seamen from his Majesty's service, and engage them in the cause of rebellion, with assurance, in further prosecution of the said design, to convey them out of this harbour by means to be provided for that purpose: This is therefore to give notice, that the master of any ship, boat, or vessel, who shall take on board any person or persons to carry or convey them from hence, without having first obtained from this office a pass for the departure of such person or persons, will be liable for the penalty of fifty pounds for every such person so conveyed away, and such master shall be prosecuted for the same as the law directs.

By command of the Lieutenant-Governour:

RICHARD BULKELEY, Secretary.

Williamsburgh, Virginia, September 13, 1776.

General Lee writes from Purysburgh, of August 15, that he is going to break up East Florida. President Rutledge, in a letter to the Council, writes that the South-Carolinians had destroyed five Indian towns in the lower settlements, and laid waste their fields of corn. They have had two skirmishes, in both of which the Carolinians have been successful. They supposed they killed between sixty and seventy men.

By letters from Cape Nichola Mole, of the 28th ultimo, we learn that two frigates had lately arrived at St. Domingo from France, completely manned, in order to cruise off that Island and protect all American vessels within their limits. Two more frigates were daily expected for the same purpose. These four frigates are to act in conjunction with two Spanish frigates, which are stationed at Porto Rico for the protection of all North American vessels. The Spanish Captains are to pay equal attention to the General of St. Domingo's orders as to those of the Commander at Porto Rico. There is every appearance of a speedy rupture between France, Spain, and Great Britain, as Spain and Portugal are absolutely now at war.

Williamsburgh, August 15, 1776.

All persons who have bought goods at the sale of Lord Dunmore's Estate, and have not already given bond in those instances where credit was allowed, or paid the money where prompt payment was requirable, are desired to comply with the terms of the sale, without further delay. The Commissioners will attend for that purpose at the house of the Attorney-General on Saturday, the 24th of this month. Such of the purchasers as live too remote to comply with this request are earnestly desired to save the Commissioners all further trouble, by sending their bonds as soon as possible.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COL. HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 134.]

Annapolis, August 15, 1776.

SIR: We request you will provide provision and baggage wagons at the head of Elk for our troops as they arrive there on their march to Philadelphia, and from time to time transmit us your accounts. We are, &c.

To Colonel Henry Hollingsworth.

MAJOR BROOKE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Lower District, Frederick County, August 15, 1776.

SIR: Finding my enemies have been so far successful in poisoning the minds of the Twenty-Ninth Battalion of Militia that a majority are against my acting as Major, I therefore take the liberty of enclosing you my commission. I would not have it understood by this resignation that I have deserted the common cause; no, sir, I will most cheerfully, when necessary, hazard my life and fortune in defence of the rights and liberties of America. Impressed with the deepest concern, and warmed with resentment of the measures pursued by a venal and corrupt Parliament, I stepped forth with the foremost of my countrymen in opposition to the tyrannical encroachments of Great Britain. Appealing to that Divine Being who searches the heart, I can safely declare I have been actuated by no other motive than the publick good; and I flatter myself that every impartial person who takes a retrospective view of my conduct will find it uniform. If I have erred, it has been the fault of my head, and not of my heart.

With the most ardent wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the United States of America, I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD BROOKE.

To the Honourable Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of the Convention of Maryland.

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, August 15, 1776.

SIRS: I am going on about the timber and other things for the gondolas, which I shall purchase and bring into the yard as fast as possible, but have made no bargain with you about it. I shall charge the same for my time as when I superintended the frigate business, which was 22s. 6d. per day, and I had the liberty of furnishing her with all the bar iron delivered at the place, at £26 per ton—I mean Mr. Wells's shop; and the pitch, tar, and turpentine, at the market price in Baltimore, and paid all my bills for money advanced for all kinds of necessaries, such as she wants. Sirs, you may at first look on this as too much; but I have a good deal of my own business to do, and a great amount of other people's. I have myself and two as good clerks as any in Baltimore, and we are early and late at our business. I am on horseback from morning till night, driving amongst the people; have another riding after teams, getting necessities, and two horses are not enough sometimes, nor two clerks, with myself at the head of them. I shall be from home in Patapsco the next two weeks, getting timber, with twenty hands from home day and night, and two or three teams, up to my middle or neck in water, rafting, and fretting myself, and a thousand disappointments that you know nothing of. I shall be as reasonable as possible in my charges, and do your business as well as I possibly can, and make the best bargains I can for you; but I declare if any person will do it on better terms, I should be pleased. The timber is purchased ready, and most of it down, and I will hire them my carriages (as there is no other) at a moderate rate, if any person will now bring it into the yard on better terms than the proposals I make. We shall lay one of the keels this day, and the other next week, I hope, but expect a line from you on the before mentioned matters. I have furnished the yard with rum at market prices, and my charges of every kind have been thought reasonable; and they beg of me to be ready for them again with all my teams, carriages, and hands.

Be pleased, gentlemen, to write me, and if the rum is to be furnished for the yard, two drinks of grog a day, and no more; the carters and people rafting and getting timber must have rum; in that I want neither more nor less than I had with the frigate, but thought it my duty to explain my bargain to you, that you might know the matter.

I have bought a scow that will carry six hundred bushels, for £28, a very good one: please send for her. I have sent some coffee, tea, and nails, to Annapolis, and some pots to Captain Veazey, at Newtown. I never heard if they were received. Please let me know about the bales I wrote by Mr. Hawkins. Excuse this long letter. Please answer it.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

JOHN VEAZEY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee, Cecil County, August 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We wrote you on the 6th instant, informing you of our proceedings respecting the two companies raised in this County for the Flying-Camp; and lest it should have miscarried on its way, we now send you a duplicate of that letter, as we have not as yet received any answer to it. We now inform you that the different officers are collecting arms as expeditiously as possible. Captain Alexander has got fourteen guns in the neighbourhood, which he paid for, and Colonel Hollingsworth is to supply him with twenty more, which is to be charged to your Board. We fear, from Captain Alexander's report, that he will not be able to procure more than twenty others. He will get a sufficient number of blankets. Captain George has got fifty guns, which are paid for, and will be able to procure a sufficient number for his company. He has also got fifty-four blankets, which are paid for, and will get the remainder that his company may want. We have followed your instructions in the purchase of guns. We have been obliged to give such prices for blankets as they could be purchased for. The cash in our hands is expended; and if you wish us to proceed any further, a supply will be necessary, as these necessary accoutrements cannot be had without it. We further desire to know whether these troops are to be continued in quarters. If cartouch boxes are difficult to be procured with you, they may be had here at the same price as in Philadelphia. We have purchased six canteens, at 4s. 6d. each, fearing you might want them.

I am, in behalf of the Committee, gentlemen, your most obedient,

JOHN VEAZEY, Jun., Chairman.

To the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland.

WILLIAM COX TO RICHARD PETERS.

Philadelphia, August 15, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mr. William Strong, a person I have been acquainted with for several years past, is from New-York, with a letter of recommendation to Mr. Hancock and Mr. Ellery, Delegate from Rhode-Island, soliciting employ in some publick office as a clerk; but those gentlemen's thoughts having been taken up about matters of far greater consequence, nothing as yet hath been done for him; and he greatly disliking an idle life, hath prevailed upon me to recommend him to you as a person well qualified in business, he having been chiefly employed in publick offices; therefore, should you be in want of such a one, or know of any gentleman that is, I doubt not but he will make it his study to please. I dare say he can produce reasonable proof of his being a friend to the American States, and says he is willing, upon a prospect of staying here, to become an Associator, and in that respect would be glad to serve under you.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

WM. COX.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary of War, in Philadelphia.

THE PETITION OF RETURN JONATHAN MEIGS, IN BEHALF OF HIMSELF AND OTHERS.

[Read August 15, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Congress of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

The Petition of RETURN JONATHAN MEIGS, in behalf of the Officers and Soldiers taken prisoners on the 31st day of DECEMBER last, at the storming of QUEBECK, humbly sheweth:

That your Petitioner, with many officers and soldiers in the Continental service, were unhappily made prisoners of war in the attempt upon Quebeck. That the officers and soldiers now confined in the said garrison have it not in their power to negotiate bills or obtain sufficient credit in their present situation, so as to enable them to live with decency; and as they have expended what they could obtain upon credit, they must, without assistance, live in great want of many of the comforts of life, not being looked upon by their captors as prisoners of war. That your Petitioner, the other officers and soldiers, prisoners as aforesaid, humbly hope and anxiously wish that this honourable House will, in as short time as possible, settle a cartel for exchange of prisoners.

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly hopes that your Honours will take the premises into consideration, and grant such relief to the sufferers as in your wisdom shall seem meet; and they will pray.

RETURN JONA. MEIGS.

Philadelphia, August 15, 1776.

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Council of Safety, August 15, 1776.

Resolved, That the Commanding Officer of each Battalion or Company of Associators belonging to this State be required forthwith to return to the Council of Safety a list of the names of the Associators who have deserted from their respective corps, that they may be dealt with according to their deserts.

Ordered, That the above Resolve be published in all the publick papers of this city.

Extract from the Minutes:

JACOB S. HOWELL, Secretary.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
Powles Hook, August 15, 1776.

SIR: I was at Elizabeth-Town when your letters of the 13th and 14th reached me. The men who had been prepared to join the Army at New-York lay at Newark. The posts along the Jersey shore opposite to Staten-Island are sufficiently guarded, and more troops are daily arriving. If you approve of it, a body of four hundred men, well accounted, from the Delaware Counties, may be stationed at Powles Hook, and four hundred of the Jersey men for the Flying-Camp at Bergen-Town, besides what we may spare to be ready in case of emergency at Newark. Eight hundred men will cross to-day to join you. If more are necessary, please to inform me. I shall be to-night at Newark.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant,
H. MERCER.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, New-York.

GENERAL HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.
Head-Quarters, Staten-Island, August 15, 1776.

MY LORD: I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatches of the 11th and 12th of June, by the Halifax packet, arriving here the 11th instant.

On the 12th the two fleets, under convoy of Commodore Hotham and the Repulse, met off this harbour, and came in together. The Guards and Hessians on board are reported to be very healthy. The camp equipage is also come, and no time will be lost in proceeding upon the operations of the campaign.

Lord Dunmore and Lord William Campbell arrived yesterday from the southward, with Sir Peter Parker. Being anxious to send off this packet, I defer being more particular until the next departure.

I have the honour to be, &c.,
WILL. HOWE.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
New-York, August 15, 1776.

SIR: As the situation of the two Armies must engage the attention of Congress, and lead them to expect that each returning day will produce some important events, this is meant to inform them that nothing of moment has yet cast up.

In the evening of yesterday, there were great movements among their boats, and from the number that appeared to be passing and repassing about the Narrows, we were induced to believe that they intended to land a part of their force upon

Long-Island; but having no report from General Greene, I presume they have not done it.

I have the honour to be, with my duties to Congress, your and their most obedient servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. Your favour of the 13th was received by yesterday's post. I wrote on Monday by the return express, as you supposed.
GO. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL ORDERS.
Head-Quarters, New-York, August 13, 1776.
(Parole, Weymouth.) (Countersign, York.)

Thomas Hendly and Israel Keith, Esquires, are appointed Aids-de-Camp to Major-General Heath. They are to be respected and obeyed accordingly.

The Court-Martial to sit to-morrow, for the trial of Lieutenant Holcomb, of Captain Anderson's Company, Colonel Johnson's Regiment, under arrest for "assuming the rank of a Captain, and mounting guard as such."

The Colonels of the several Regiments, or Commanding Officers, are to send their Quartermasters to the Laboratory for the ammunition cart to be attached to each regiment, with spare ammunition; to have it posted in some safe and proper place near the regiment, so as to be ready at a moment's warning: the horse and driver to be also kept near the regiment. It is the Quartermaster's duty to attend to this, and in case of action to see the cartridges delivered as they are wanted.

The enemy's whole reinforcement is now arrived, so that an attack must and will soon be made. The General therefore again repeats his earnest request that every officer and soldier will have his arms and ammunition in good order; keep within their quarters and encampment, as much as possible; be ready for action at a moment's call; and when called to it, remember that liberty, property, life, and honour, are all at stake; that upon their courage and conduct rest the hopes of their bleeding and insulted country; that their wives, children, and parents, expect safety from them only; and that we have every reason to expect Heaven will crown with success so just a cause. The enemy will endeavour to intimidate by show and appearance, but remember how they have been repulsed on various occasions by a few brave Americans. Their cause is bad; their men are conscious of it; and if opposed with firmness and coolness at their first onset, with our advantage of works and knowledge of the ground, victory is most assuredly ours. Every good soldier will be silent and attentive, wait for orders, and reserve his fire till he is sure of doing execution. The officers to be particularly careful of this. The Colonels, or Commanding Officers of Regiments, are to see their supernumerary officers so posted as to keep the men to their duty; and it may not be amiss for the troops to know that if any infamous rascal, in time of action, shall attempt to skulk, hide himself, or retreat from the enemy without orders of his Commanding Officer, he will instantly be shot down as an example of cowardice. On the other hand the General promises that he will reward those who shall distinguish themselves by brave and noble actions: and he desires every officer to be attentive to this particular, that such men may afterwards be suitably noticed.

General Greene to send for ten of the flat-bottomed boats, which are to be kept under guard at Long-Island. No person to meddle with them but by his special order.

Thirty-seven men (sailors) are wanted for the galleys.

Eighty men, properly officered and used to the sea, are wanted to go up to King's Bridge with the ships and rafts. They are to be furnished immediately, and parade with blankets and provisions, but without arms, at General Putnam's, at two o'clock, and take orders from him.

John Gardiner, of Captain Trowbridge's Company, Colonel Huntington's Regiment, tried by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys was President, and convicted of "desertion," ordered to receive thirty-nine lashes.

John Morgan, of Captain Johnson's Company, Colonel McDougall's Regiment, tried by the same Court-Martial and convicted of "sleeping on his post," sentenced to receive thirty lashes.

Francis Claujge, of Captain Speakman's Company, Col. Glover's Regiment, tried by the same Court-Martial, and convicted of "desertion and reenlistment," sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes, thirteen each day successively.

The General approves each of the above sentences, and orders them to be executed at the usual times and places.

The Court of Inquiry having reported that Lieutenant Mesier had behaved unbecoming an officer, to one of superior rank, the Court directed a Court-Martial, unless he ask pardon of the officer he affronted; but that officer having represented to the General that he is willing to pass it over, the General, at his request, orders Lieutenant Mesier to be discharged.

After Orders.—Colonel Miles's and Colonel Brodhead's regiments of Riflemen to discharge and clean their rifles to-morrow, at troop-beating, under the inspection of their officers. Colonel Smallwood's and Colonel Ailee's Battalions of Musketry to fire at the same time with loose powder and ball.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 14, 1776.

(Parole, America.)

(Countersign, Liberty.)

Alexander Scammell and Lewis Morris, Esqs., are appointed Aids-de-Camp to Major-General Sullivan. They are to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

The divisions of the Army under Major-Generals Putnam and Sullivan having undertaken some special works, are to be omitted out of the general detail of guards and fatigue for the present.

The General orders three days' provision to be cooked immediately, that the soldiers have their canteens filled, and be ready to meet the enemy on a short notice.

Such Colonels of Regiments as have not sent for their ammunition carts, or drawn for rum for the refreshment of their men in time of action, as per order of the 9th instant, are to do it immediately, and the Quartermaster must take care that it be used properly; the allowance is half a pint per man.

The Brigadier-Generals will please to recollect that there are a number of spears at the Laboratory, which will be of great use at the posts, and are waiting to be distributed.

In case of alarm, the men are immediately to repair to their usual parade, where the roll is to be called, and then march, join in battalion, and march to their respective alarm posts; absentees will be considered as cowards, and treated as such.

The General flatters himself that every man's mind and arms are now prepared for the glorious contest upon which so much depends. The time is too precious, nor does the General think it necessary to spend it in exhorting his brave countrymen and fellow-soldiers to behave like men, fighting for everything that can be dear to freemen. We must resolve to conquer or die; with this resolution and the blessing of Heaven, victory and success certainly will attend us. There will, then, be a glorious issue to this campaign; and the General will reward his brave fellow-soldiers with every indulgence in his power.

The whole line to turn out to-morrow morning and march to their several alarm posts, in all points ready for action, and continue until nine o'clock, or further orders.

William Peek and Charles Whiting, Esqs., appointed Aids-de-Camp to Major-General Spencer. They are to be respected and obeyed accordingly.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 15, 1776.

(Parole, Charlestown.)

(Countersign, Boston.)

William S. Smith, Esq., appointed to act as Aid-de-Camp to General Sullivan during the absence of Major Scammell, and to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Henry Williams, of Captain Parke's Company, Colonel Shepard's Regiment, convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys was President, of "desertion," sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed at the usual time and place.

Lieutenant Holcomb, of Captain Anderson's Company, and Colonel Johnson's Regiment, tried by the same Court-Martial for "assuming the rank of a Captain, wearing a yellow cockade, and mounting guard in that capacity," it appearing to be done through misinformation and want of experience, the Court are of opinion he should be cautioned by his Colonel to make himself acquainted with his duty, and that he be released from his arrest. The General approves thereof, and orders that he be discharged.

Mr. William Caldwell is appointed Paymaster to Colonel Baldwin's Regiment; Mr. John Lawrence to the Regiment late McDougall's.

The General directs and requests that every officer will see the men's arms and ammunition put in order as soon as it clears up; and for that purpose have them paraded and carefully inspected; an enemy often presumes upon neglect at such time to make an attack.

Mr. Robert Prevost, Jun., is appointed Paymaster to Colonel Ritzema's Regiment.

Colonel Glover's Regiment to move to-morrow to Greenwich, and join General Fellows's Brigade.

General Putnam's Division to be put into the general detail of duty as before.

Captain James Chapman to do the duty of Major to Colonel Tyler's Regiment (late General Parson's) till further orders. Captain James Mellen to do the same in Colonel Ward's Regiment.

Captain Thomas Dyer to do the duty of Brigade-Major to General Parson's Brigade till further orders.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 15, 1776.

SIR: This serves only to advise you that I have this day drawn on you in favour of Colonel Thomas Lowrey, of New-Jersey, on account of a quantity of pork supplied to the Army by him some time since, for six thousand twenty-nine and one-third dollars, which you will please to pay, and charge to my account accordingly.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress of Delegates from the States of America, at Philadelphia.

P. S. Since writing the above, I have drawn another list of bills on you, in favour of Colonel Lowrey, for twenty thousand dollars, for supplying the Continental troops in New-Jersey, which you will please to pay, and charge accordingly. If the communication should be cut off by the enemy between us here and the troops in New-Jersey, I hope the Congress will from time to time supply him with money, as occasion may require in that department, and charge the same to me, taking his receipts to account to me or themselves for the expenditure thereof.

Yours, ut supra.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 15, 1776.

SIR: It having appeared in orders that Colonel Hitchcock's regiment is to take possession of the post opposite to Fort Washington, I beg leave to acquaint you that their peculiar attachment to the old regiments that are here, their thorough knowledge of the ground, their discipline, and the good order in which they are respecting arms, make me desirous of their remaining here, if it can possibly be dispensed with, and absolute necessity does not require their removal. The most of the troops that come over here are strangers to the ground, undisciplined, and badly furnished with arms. They will not be so apt to support each other in time of action as those who have long been acquainted, and who are not only attached to each other but to the place. I have made this application in consequence of my own observations; and to evince the propriety of it, send you enclosed the arrangement for your inspection.

Colonel Hand, about eight o'clock yesterday evening, reported that the Hessians were landing on Staten-Island to a considerable number; that after their landing they paraded upon the beach, and marched up the hill towards the flag-staff. I have received no report from him this morning, owing, as I suppose, to the inclemency of the weather. Should he not send one speedily, I shall despatch an express to inquire the cause.

I have made choice of Mr. William Blodget and Major William Livingston for my Aids-de-Camp. Should it meet with your approbation, you will please to signify it in orders.

I have the pleasure to inform you that the troops appear to be in exceeding good spirits; and make no doubt that if the enemy should make their attack here, we shall be able to render a very good account of them.

I am carrying into execution the late resolve of Congress respecting the removal of the cattle, dismantling of the mills, removing the grain already thrashed, and having that which is still in sheaf so stacked and disposed of, that in case of an attack it may easily be destroyed.

The Militia of the County that were ordered here have not as yet made their appearance, notwithstanding the promise I received from the Lieutenant-Colonel that they should be here last night. Should they delay coming in any longer than this day, I am determined not to be trifled with, and shall let them feel my resentment by vigorous and spirited exertions of military discipline and those powers with which I am invested. A part of the Militia, from the east end of the Island, under the command of Colonel Smith, are arrived.

I am very sorry that I am under the necessity of acquainting you that I am confined to my bed with a raging fever. The critical situation of affairs makes me the more anxious, but I hope, through the assistance of Providence, to be able to ride before the presence of the enemy may make it absolutely necessary.

I am, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, New-York.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL GATES.

DEAR GENERAL: I do myself the honour to enclose you a return of stores forwarded since the 8th instant. As the General is momentarily expected, I have hitherto detained your despatches, and shall deliver them as soon as he comes. I had prepared copies to enclose to his Excellency, but being informed that he will certainly be here in a few hours, I must beg your pardon for the detention. I am confident the General will have some observations to make on the orders of Carleton, as they militate with resolves of Congress I sent him on the 10th, in the evening.

Some of the stores are arrived at Poughkeepsie; some blocks, three coils $4\frac{1}{2}$ and $4\frac{1}{4}$ -inch cordage, and some small cordage, with several old sails, and a few anchors and cables. More $4\frac{1}{2}$ -inch cordage is to be had at Poughkeepsie. I think we had better send for it to supply the three-inch cordage ordered by the requisition. Above four hundred pounds of slow-match is arrived; this, together with fifty dressed skins, some powder-horns, one hundred pounds of twine, two fishing nets, grubbing hoes, and intrenching tools, will be sent by the first wagons.

I shall soon send you some grapplings. From their size, I supposed them to be in lieu of small anchors, and have ordered them to be made so. Spikes are making, and I have sent for iron, in consequence of General Arnold's requisitions from Skenesborough.

When my General arrives, I shall consider myself in some measure discharged from the extra offices his absence has imposed on me; but shall at leisure see to it that the requisitions are complied with as soon as possible.

I am, my dear sir, with every sentiment of respect, and the most profound esteem, your obedient and very humble servant,

RICHD. VARICK.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

L'Oiseau and Allain are confined in the Tory Jail; the others not yet arrived. They had no papers, and from their examination, appear almost incapable of deception.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received your favour of the 14th instant, and am now sending off the troops according to order. Your Honour's letter of the 11th directed me to send the troops down to Ticonderoga when the tents should arrive. As the tents did not arrive, I thought it to be my orders not to send the troops, till your Honour's letter of the 14th came to hand. I hear the tents are likely to come to this place to-morrow, and if they should, I shall send them immediately down to Ticonderoga, without loss of time.

As to the Continental regiments that your Honour desired me to acquaint you with, there is not one arrived at this place, neither can I get any intelligence where they are. As to the Militia, they come in very slowly, and what is the reason I cannot tell.

Your Honour may depend I shall do all in my power to get the galleys ready as soon as possible, and embark on board of them, according to orders. We are kept back by the mill being put out of order by the great flood of water; but I hope we shall soon get her agoing. I fear we shall want for oakum and deck nails. I hope we shall not be kept back for want of anything, for I think our shipping must be a great terror to our enemy.

As to the axes that Governour Trumbull wrote about, they have not arrived, but as soon as they arrive I shall attend to the orders, in sending one-half down to Ticonderoga.

We are behindhand on account of plank for sealing, by the mill being out of order. The carpenters could not all work at the three on the stocks, and so went to work at others, and have two almost ready to raise; but I will keep as many as possible at work to get those three off the stocks.

I can spare fifty spades, and the rest I have on hand. I think I can employ to good advantage. Those fifty I send to Ticonderoga are new, and are not helved. Those that I received from Ticonderoga are but little worth; they are old, and bend when used.

I am, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

P. S. I hear that the Militia from Connecticut that have not yet arrived are near at hand.

COLONEL GANSEVOORT TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, August 15, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: The enclosed letter, directed to your Honour, with the return, signed by Mr. Rensselaer, was delivered to me just now by Mr. McElhenny, who informed me that the enclosed letter, with the return, was left in his markee by Mr. Shepherd, Conductor at this place. I immediately sent for Mr. Shepherd, and inquired from him where he had got the enclosed letter with the return. He informed me that he had seen the aforesaid letter with the return, in this condition, in the possession of Mr. Beames, who left here this morning for Ticonderoga. I examined Mr. Shepherd's receipts, and find them to agree with Mr. Rensselaer's return, except fifty papers of blacking: he can only account for twenty-eight, and does not account for any pencils.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

P. GANSEVOORT, Lieut. Colonel.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL HARTLEY.

Tyonderoga, August 15, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of yesterday by Mr. McCoy, and have at your request appointed him Ensign in the Sixth Battalion of Pennsylvanians. I at the same time offered a pecuniary reward to his two companions, but they absolutely refused taking any, saying their sole motive was to serve their country. I meet with very few such truly publick-spirited men. General Arnold, who gives you this letter, will immediately make a cruise down the Lake. It will be, therefore, proper for you to remain at your present post. I highly approve of your intrenching your people and keeping a good lookout. You will send forward, with all possible despatch, the letters or reports from General Arnold.

HORATIO GATES.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley, Crown-Point.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM TICONDEROGA, DATED AUGUST 15, 1776.

I came over here to conduct a Canadian from St. Francois to Head-Quarters. He assures me that the Indians in general have resolved not to join in the war. Things here begin to wear a different face. The greatest harmony reigns among the General Officers. Order is taking place in the Army, and the men are in high spirits. Great numbers are coming in from New-England to Skenesborough. General Carleton has barbarously used the Canadians who favoured us. General Burgoyne has endeavoured to persuade some tribes of Conadian Indians to join the British Army, but they absolutely refused to take any part, adding, that if Great Britain and America should become reconciled, they should be the greatest sufferers, and therefore were determined to be neuter. We have received a large supply of fresh beef, which has been of great service in the recovery of the sick. Our maritime force consists of eight gondolas and four schooners. We are going from here down the Lake, in order to retake St. John's, which General Burgoyne has possession of at present. As we have numbers, and our Army are determined, I do not entertain the least doubt of success.

Ticonderoga, August 15, 1776.

Our fleet on Lake Champlain consists of the Royal Savage, Captain Wynkoop, twelve carriage nine, six, and four-pounders, ten swivels, and fifty men; Enterprise, Dixon, twelve carriage guns, nine, six, and four-pounders, ten swivels, and fifty men; Revenge, Laman, ten carriage guns, four and two-pounders, ten swivels, and thirty-five men; Liberty, Primer, ten carriage guns, four and two-pounders, eight swivels, and forty-five men; four gondolas, Captains Mansfield, Simmons, Sumner, and Ustins. Each gondola carries three guns, one twelve and two nine-pounders, eight swivels, and forty-five men. Three row-galleys, just ready to launch, and ten more gondolas, will soon be ready.

GEORGE PITKIN TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, August 15, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: The importance of Chaplains in an army I need only suggest to your Honour; therefore wait on your Honour by this to know your Honour's pleasure in allowing and appointing one to the Nineteenth Regiment of Militia, ordered to New-York. In conversation with the Rev. Mr. Perry, of East-Windsor, he manifested his willingness to undertake in that character, who I can recommend, and am very desirous of having appointed. A doctor likewise is very necessary to a regiment. Your Honour's directions for filling up vacancies of officers, if there should be any, is strongly desired.

If it were possible, after seeing the regiment arrived at New-York, for me to retire, leaving the command to Major Terry, (my constitution and state of health at present being such that I cannot undergo the duty of a camp,) I submit to your Honour. May Almighty God deliver this land from its present dire calamities.

With submission, I subscribe myself, with the highest esteem, your Honour's most obedient servant,

GEORGE PITKIN.

To the Hon. Governour Trumbull.

N. B. The bearer will wait an answer.

OLIVER WOLCOTT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Litchfield, August 15, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I have just now received your Honour's favour of the 12th instant, and am thereby acquainted with the honour done me in appointing me to the command of the Militia lately ordered to New-York. I shall most cheerfully render my country every service in my power, and am sorry my health is not better to go through the duties of a military life, and more so that my inexperience and want of knowledge in this service are so very considerable. But as this is well known, candour will not require what it has no reason to expect. All I can engage is, an upright endeavour to discharge the duties of my appointment, in humble trust of the Divine guidance and protection.

I am, with great esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

OLIVER WOLCOTT.

COLONEL LEWIS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Strafords, August 15, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: These inform that I received your orders dated the 6th July, directing me, "on notice given by his Excellency General Washington, to call forth and march with all expedition so many able-bodied and effective men of the regiment under my command as are necessary and convenient for the defence of the Colonies, to be under the Commander-in-Chief of the Army;" whereupon I gave orders to the commanding officers of the several companies in my regiment to draught every able-bodied man in their companies, and see that they were well equipped, and to hold themselves in readiness to march on the shortest notice, and make returns, &c.

On the 9th instant I received a letter from his Excellency General Washington, bearing date August 7, requesting me to call forth my regiment without delay, and to march them immediately to New-York, with which request I have endeavoured to comply without loss of time. I gave orders immediately to the several Captains and officers commanding the several companies in the regiment to call forth their companies, see them well equipped, and march them, and meet me at Fairfield on Tuesday, the 13th instant, where they might expect orders to march to New-York; at which time and place the Captains with their companies generally attended.

I would inform your Honour that Captain Daniel Hill, of Redding, and his company, did not appear nor comply with my orders, and gave no attendance; that Captain Cooley, of Northfield, did not attend. Lieutenant Squier, of Captain Cooley's company, attended, and informed me that Captain Cooley had never read any orders to his company that I had sent him, and utterly refused to take up arms against the King's forces. Whereupon I gave orders to Lieutenant Squier to call out the company, and march them, and join the regiment without delay. Captain Henry Summers, of North-Fair- field, attended at Fairfield with seven men. His Lieutenant is bound over to the Superior Court to answer for a misdemeanour. His Ensign is in the Army. He informs that his company are chiefly Tories, and refuse to obey him. I admitted Captain Summers to return home, and desired those privates (which were only three) to join some other company. Some of the companies in the regiment had one or more of their commissioned officers in the service, and a considerable part of the companies have joined two together, by their consent, where it was convenient and agreeable to them, so that these companies are now full; and others, where it was not so convenient and agreeable, remained as they were, and the regiment marched for New-York from Fairfield yesterday, in number about four hundred and twenty. Lieutenant Squier, of Northfield, had not then joined the regiment with his men. Captains that marched: Dimon, Coe, Tomlinson, Wheeler, Andrus, Bennett. Subalterns that commanded companies, their Captains absent or otherwise: Lieutenants Davis, Lyon, and Penfield, and Ensign Silliman.

This, honoured sir, is the number and state of my regiment, as nearly as I can give it at present. Myself and the Major set out for New-York to-morrow morning.

From your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
ICHABOD LEWIS.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Captain-General.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO COLONEL HERRICK.

Council Chamber, August 15, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby directed and commanded to cause the second company in your regiment, together with the alarm-list within the limits of the same, to be duly notified to assemble together at some convenient place within such limits, and at such time as you shall appoint, and require them to make choice by ballot of one Captain and two Lieutenants, in the room of Captain Samuel Flint, Messrs. Daniel Putnam and Joseph Putnam, Jun., who have declined accepting commissions to command said company; and you are requested to be present at said meeting, and to preside as Moderator; which choice you are immediately to certify to the Secretary of this State.

In the name and by order of the Council:

JEREMIAH POWELL, President.

To Colonel Henry Herrick.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO THE COMMITTEE OF READING.

Watertown, August 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Board have received your letter of the 14th instant, informing that Colonel Campbell has dismissed four of his servants, one of whom has let himself out to work for his living; the rest have declined. The Board therefore order, that the three soldiers before mentioned be immediately sent to the Sheriff of the County of Middlesex, who is hereby directed to confine them in the jail of said County, provided the Committee should find they still refuse to go to work for their support. As to Munro, the Council think you have full power to take proper care of him if he prove an enemy to the State.

JEREMIAH POWELL, President.

To Jacob Emerson, Chairman to the Committee of Reading.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Boston, August 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Adams, of Taunton, carries on a considerable deal of business as a nailer and cutler, and he wants a couple of men (prisoners) who are now at Worcester, named Francis Hall and Thomas Taft, acquainted with manufacturing in that way. The men are willing to engage with Mr. Adams, and his son (the bearer) waits upon you to desire the favour that those men may be allowed to go with him to Taunton, to be employed at his manufactory, which I think would be of publick utility, and therefore suppose your Honours will be inclined to grant his request.

I am, respectfully, your Honour's most obedient servant,
JAMES BOWDOIN.

To the Honourable Council.

In Council, August 16, 1776.

Ordered, That the Sheriff of the County of Worcester deliver the above two persons, Francis Hall and Thomas Taft, to the above Mr. John Adams, if they are not already engaged, or under contract with any other person or persons, provided the said two men are willing to go with him.

In the name and by the order of Council:

JER. POWELL, President.

Boston, August 15, 1776.

Last Lord's day the Declaration of Independence was published in the several Churches in this town, agreeable to an order of the honourable Council of this State.

Last Sunday was sent in here by the brig Enterprise and sloop Beaver, two letters of marque vessels belonging to New-York and bound for St. Eustatia, a ship from Grenada bound for London, laden with sugar, rum, cotton, &c.

Yesterday being the Anniversary of the 14th of August, 1765, the Sons of Liberty, with a number of their friends, met at Liberty Hall, and erected a pole on the stump of Liberty Tree, (the body of which was cut down by our worse than savage myrmidons the last winter,) where they hoisted the red flag, or flag of defiance. At twelve o'clock a number of patriotick toasts were drank, which came too late for this day's paper.

A select number likewise met at the Bunch of Grapes, in King street, where flags were also displayed; and at one o'clock a company of the Train was paraded in King street, with two field-pieces, which were discharged thirteen times; after which a number of patriotick toasts were drank, and three cheers given.

We hear that on Wednesday last was sent into Portsmouth, by the privateer Hancock, of Philadelphia, the Re-ward, of six hundred tons, a large ship (formerly a twenty-gun ship) now mounting fourteen guns, bound from Tortola for London, having on board seven hundred and fifty hogsheads of sugar, two hundred hogsheads of rum, five thousand weight of cotton, and a number of pieces of cannon. We hear she was taken by the following stratagem, viz: Just before dusk the evening the Hancock came across her, the Captain of the prize taking the Hancock to be one of the tyrant's pilferers, very much rejoiced to fall in with her, and doubtless vice versa, when the Hancock at night threw out a light for a pilot. At daylight the next morning, the vessels being near together, the Captain of the ship invited the Captain of the Hancock to come on board and take a breakfast; who replied, his hands were so few and sick, that he had not enough to man his boat and work the vessel; and in his turn, invited the Captain of the ship to come on board him, which he readily complied with by ordering his boat out, when he and about a dozen of his hands went on board the Hancock, and were taken as good care of as men in such circumstances could be. The Hancock then sent an equal number of her own hands on board the ship, when alas! she fell into the hands of the United States of America. The letters by her inform us that every sort of provision was very high; flour, scarce a barrel to be had at any price; butter at £6 12s. currency per firkin;—all wishing the dispute settled with America, and in great expectation that matters would be accommodated by the discretionary powers of Lord Howe. This ship was taken in latitude 28° north, longitude 62°. The prize-master, Mr. Barton, informs us that the Hancock had taken a brigantine from the West-Indies just before this ship, and sent her to Egg-Harbour, and was in chase of a ship, supposed to be a Jamaican, and almost within gunshot, when he left her.

By a person from Charlestown, Number Four, we hear that the report there was, that a great number of boats full of troops had been sent in the Lakes; so it is very likely we shall soon hear of some business from that quarter.

The Tyrannicide privateer, Captain Fisk, belonging to, and in the service of this State, has sent into Salem the brigantine St. John, with a cargo of one hundred and twenty hogsheads of molasses, eighty-one casks of rum, fifty-two casks of coffee, fourteen hogsheads of sugar, and eight casks of cocoa; and into Dartmouth, the schooner Three Brothers, Captain Smith, from Dominico for Nova-Scotia, with a cargo of fifty hogsheads of rum, eighty-six casks of molasses, forty barrels of flour, ten barrels of pork, and £420 lawful money in cash.

Thursday last a fine prize ship from St. Augustine for London, laden with dried skins and indigo, was sent into Salem by a privateer commanded by Captain Skimmer.

The same day arrived at Newburyport a prize schooner, laden with rum, &c. We have not heard by whom she was taken.

Last week the Warren privateer, of Dartmouth, carried in there a ship from the West Indies for Newfoundland, laden with sugar and molasses; she was commanded by Captain Cochran, of this town, and owned by Thomas Boylstone, of Boston.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM HALIFAX, DATED AUGUST 15, 1776.

An expedition has been formed here for landing some men at St. John's Fort, on St. John's River, in the Bay of Fundy. The Farmer sloop-of-war has been to convoy the transports thither, and is returned from that business, and brought back the vessels. What the design may be I am not able to fathom. Our dock-yard here has constant employ; scarce any of the King's ports in England has more, which may easily be conceived from the number of ships employed on the Continent.

This expedition was thus spoken of in the Halifax newspapers: Two thousand Highlanders, under convoy of three frigates and three armed schooners, have been sent to the Bay of Fundy to penetrate that way into New-Hampshire.

COLONEL HUGER TO JOHN LEWIS GERVAIS.

Purysburgh, August 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have this day settled with Mr. Pugh for fourteen days' rations, amounting to £261 16s. 4d., including four bushels of rice. You will please pay Mr. Pugh £164 16s. 4d., as I have advanced him £105 in part, for beef. The certificates for rice and beef on my march to this place shall send you in a few days.

Am your humble servant, ISAAC HUGER.

Williamsburgh, August 16, 1776.

On Tuesday, the 13th instant, the First Virginia Regiment in the Continental service marched from this city for New-York. From undoubted authority we can assure the publick that fifteen thousand weight of pure lead have been got from our mines in the back country, which, after being cast into bullets, we hope will be unerringly directed against our enemies.

The last advices from the back country are, that the Cherokee and Creek Indians, to the number of between six and seven hundred, are encamped in Carter's valley, from whence they send out parties against the settlements, some of which had penetrated near one hundred miles on this side of the Big Island, carrying destruction wherever they come, by burning houses, fences, fields of wheat and other grain, and turning droves of horses into the corn-fields. Upwards of one thousand head of horses have been driven off, and a great number of cattle; the sheep and hogs they shoot down. They have killed and scalped eighteen men, one or two women, and several children; some of the people were most barbarously murdered, too shocking to relate. The ruined settlers had collected themselves together at different places, and fortified themselves, four hundred and upwards at Major Shelby's, about the same number at Captain Campbell's, and a considerable number at Amos Eaton's. The fort at Watauga, which was besieged by four hundred savages, are now relieved, the Indians having abandoned their enterprise upon the approach of Colonel Russell, with about three hundred men. In all the skirmishes with the Indians our people have continually worsted them, and, in the whole, have killed and scalped twenty-seven, and badly wounded many others, as was discovered by the tracks of blood. A man from the frontiers of Georgia had arrived in Fincastle, who declared upon oath, that he saw upwards of one hundred people buried in one day, who were killed by the Creek Indians.

By an express from Colonel Russell, of Fincastle, we learn, that on his approaching the Watauga Fort with the men under his command, the Indians retired precipitately; however, not without losing one man, and having two wounded, by a party that pursued them. The fort was thus fortunately relieved after a fortnight's close siege, during the greater part of which time our people lived on parched corn: There were supposed to be five hundred women and children in this little fort, who fled there for shelter on hearing that the Indians were marching into that part of the country. We lost not a man in this long affair, except four or five who ventured out to drive in some cows; these were found scalped.

The number of Indians concerned in the different ravages lately committed in Fincastle amount to six or seven hundred, some say eight hundred; and yet, sudden as their attack was, they murdered in all their butchering parties but eighteen persons, and wounded six, whilst our men killed in the skirmishes with them twenty-six on the spot, (as many were carried off dead,) took one prisoner, and wounded at least as many as they killed. As the Cherokees have been so completely checked in their career, and we understand from Fort Pitt that the Northern Indians are not disposed to attack us in that quarter, and have only engaged not to suffer us to march through their country against Detroit, we may hope that there is not much to be dreaded from the terrible combination of Indians we have been threatened with by our enemies.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN WATKINS.

[No. 135.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: There are about thirty stand of arms belonging to the Province at Snow-Hill, under the care of the Committee. We desire you will bring them up with you. Enclosed is an order on the Committee for them.

We are, &c.

To Captain Watkins.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE TENT-MAKERS.

[No. 136.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: As all the troops belonging to this Province are directed to march directly, you will get all the tents ready you are to make, with the greatest despatch.

We are, &c.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN DEAN.

[No. 137.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: By order of the Convention, you are immediately to march to Philadelphia, where you will receive further orders. The service requires the utmost expedition. You will go to the head of Elk by water, where provision and baggage-wagons will be provided for you. If those who have lent guns upon condition your troops continued in Queen Ann's County, insist upon having them returned, you will then supply the deficiency occasioned thereby out of Captain Darnes's company, which has a number of guns purchased by the Committee. We are, &c.

To Captain Dean, Queen Ann's County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN BOURKE.

[No. 138.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: You are requested to apply to Major Fallin for the guns he has the care of, which were taken in a tender; and you are likewise to apply to the Committee of your County for all the guns they have by them, to arm your company agreeable to a resolve of Convention which you have herewith enclosed. Those two parcels of guns, together with what you have otherwise procured, will completely arm your company; and by the order of Convention you are immediately to march your company to Philadelphia, and there you will receive further orders. We are, &c.

To Captain Bourke.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DORCHESTER COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 139.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIRS: Enclosed is a copy of an order of Convention. We request you will deliver to Captain Bourke (to whom we have written on the subject) all the arms we understand are in your County, and afford him all the assistance in your power in equipping him for his march to the northward, agreeable to orders already sent him. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Dorchester County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO EDWARD PARKER.

[No. 140.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: We have received your favour of the 14th instant, also the thread, and request you will immediately on receipt of this forward all the coarse cloth and linen to Mr. Gerrard Hopkins, the Deputy Commissary at Baltimore-Town.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Edward Parker.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO LINEN MANUFACTURERS.

[No. 141.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: As all the troops belonging to this Province are directed to march immediately to the northward, and as they will be greatly distressed for tents, unless we can be supplied with tenting linen from you, we earnestly beg you will send us what you can possibly, with the utmost despatch.

We are, &c.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 142.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: We are pleased to hear that you are going on with getting timber for the gondolas, and other necessities. You may depend on being handsomely paid according to the trouble you have; so you may proceed and make your charge: if reasonable, it shall be paid. The charge for your teams, we take it for granted, will be moderate, therefore expect you will set them to work hauling timber. Whiskey and Continental rum may be furnished to the workmen at market price, in the manner you mention.

We wish you could hire some persons to bring the scow down to us, we want her much. We know not what to say about the boats, not having received your letter by Hutchings; when we do, we shall take due notice of it.

We are, &c.

To Jesse Hollingsworth.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATE IN CONGRESS.

[No. 143.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 13th, and have seen what you wrote to Major Jenifer on the state of publick affairs.

In consequence of a resolve of the Convention, we have given orders to all the Independent Companies (four in number) to march. Colonel Carvell Hall's, and Colonel Ewing's, and six or seven companies on the Eastern-Shore, have like orders to march; so that, with Griffith's battalion, we shall have near four thousand men with you in a short time. This exceeds our proportion for the Flying-Camp, but we are sending all that we have that can be armed and equipped; and the people of New-York, for whom we have great affection, can have no more than our all. Enclosed you have a list of the several battalions and companies.

We depend, in case of invasion, on being supported powerfully by our neighbours in Pennsylvania, New-York, and the Jerseys, besides having part of our own troops sent back.

Our gentlemen met for the first time after the late elections on Wednesday, the 14th, Matthew Tilghman in the chair. Most of their time since meeting has been taken up in controverted elections. Queen Ann's, Prince George's, Worcester, and Lower District in Frederick, set aside. The members have been all discharged, upon the principle of their having broken the resolves of the late Convention with regard to the qualification of the voters. Charles was controverted, or rather, it appeared on the face of a return that they had adjourned the polls to a different place than that appointed by the late Convention. It was not set aside for that reason, the adjournment being made by consent of all the candidates and voters. Some other elections are talked of, but we know not whether there will be petitions—Anne Arundel for one. In Kent County they began right, and proceeded so some time, till interrupted by a mob. The Judges broke up, and are ordered to finish the election according to the old plan of qualification.

We shall lose a valuable correspondent, we fear, when you leave Philadelphia. Our wishes are that you should stay, but we submit to your determination and that of the honourable Convention.

We are, your most obedient servants.

P. S. These companies are not all fully armed and equipped, but we hope soon to collect enough.

List of the Troops for MARYLAND.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAINS SMYTH AND PERKINS.

[No. 144.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By desire of the Convention you are to march your companies, as soon as they are ready, to Philadelphia, where you will receive further orders. The service requires the utmost despatch, and we earnestly request you to exert yourselves on this occasion. We have written the Committee to supply you with camp kettles, gun slings, wooden bottles, and cartouch boxes. Messrs. Smyth and Ringgold, who are requested to have tents made, will supply you with them. We are, &c.

P. S. The knapsacks, haversacks, and priming-wires, shall be sent you from Baltimore.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JOHN GORDON.

[No. 145.]

Annapolis, August 16, 1776.

SIR: As all the troops belonging to the Province are directed to march immediately to the northward, we beg you will work day and night in furnishing the knapsacks and haversacks you have engaged to make, as they cannot march without them. We are, &c.

Mr. John Gordon, Baltimore-Town.

CAPTAIN SMYTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Chestertown, August 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Williamson, First Lieutenant of my company, waits on you for my marching orders, and any other you may please to issue to me. My company now want nothing but knapsacks to equip them completely; which (as I suppose you have them not) I shall be glad you will please to order me to procure, furnishing me with money for that purpose. I shall be glad to receive your orders concerning baggage wagons; they can be either hired or purchased here very readily, and I believe at a very reasonable rate.

The money you were pleased to let me have, to advance to the men for the purchase of necessities, is entirely expended, and we have and must run in debt for many things we cannot do without. Most of the men require a full month's pay, and some more, to procure necessities to enable them to march. I hope your Honours will supply me with money for this and the above mentioned purposes, not forgetting that our travelling expenses will be considerable.

The twenty pieces of linen you ordered over for our tents are not sufficient for the purpose. They will generally hold out forty yards to a piece, and each tent requires thirty yards. Agreeable to this calculation, which is just, there will be one hundred and twenty yards, or three pieces, wanting.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS SMYTH, Jun.

To the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Congress, Philadelphia, August 16, 1776.

SIR: I have only time to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th, and to transmit the resolves passed since my last, which you will find enclosed.

That the all-wise Disposer of events may crown your arms with success, is the hearty wish of, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

PHILIP LIVINGSTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, August 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour, dated the 22d July, enclosing copy of Mr. Alsop's letter to the Convention, and a resolve of your body accepting his resignation of his seat in Congress, was received, and agreeable to your directions communicated the same to the Congress, and delivered a copy to Mr. Alsop, who had not attended for some days before, though we did not then know the reason of his absents himself.

Your favours of the 7th instant, with enclosures, we received and communicated to Congress. The spirited behaviour of your body, so very conspicuous in your resolves, was very pleasing indeed.

We cannot conceive the reason that the Connecticut Militia do not come forward at this alarming crisis. Those from the Massachusetts are, we suppose, now with you; they passed through Providence last Monday; their numbers we are not informed of.

There is not the least doubt but your Rangers will be taken into Continental pay. The Southern Colonies are raising troops for the like purpose, and we intend, in conjunction with them, to apply to Congress on that head. The gentlemen representing these Colonies wish to have the application deferred for some time, but we are of opinion you ought not to defer raising the men. The people on the frontiers most certainly will not be easy, nor, we fear, safe without such security.

We are confident Congress means to be at the expense incurred and to be incurred in obstructing the navigation of Hudson River, and will in our next acquaint you with their explicit answer on that head.

Colonel James Livingston has orders to raise a regiment out of the people who are friendly to the United States in Canada. Will it not be best that Captain James Stewart's company should make part of that regiment? We have requested Colonel Livingston to confer with you on that subject.

Under the greatest anxiety for what is speedily to occur in New-York, we remain, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

PHIL. LIVINGSTON.

The Hon. Convention of New-York.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAINS JONES AND HALLOCK.

Philadelphia, August 16, 1776.

SIR: You will find enclosed herein a paper sent us by the Captain of a French sloop, that is now daily expected from Martinico, with arms and ammunition, which we are very anxious should be got safe in; therefore we desire you to keep a good look-out for her, and if you fall in with her make such signals as will make you known for a friend. She mounts twelve guns, with sixty men. You will please to deliver this letter and its enclosure to Captain Hallock, who must hire a pilot-boat, and man her with an officer and four or five men, to cruise about the Capes for this sloop, observing to make the signal desired, and give them the needful information to get safe in here.

When the Wasp goes down, she will convey further orders respecting this matter, unless the sloop arrives safe in the mean time.

We are, sir, your obedient servants,

JOHN HANCOCK,
ROBERT MORRIS,
FRANCIS HOPKINSON,
FRANCIS LEWIS,
JOSEPH HEWES.

To John Paul Jones, Esq., of Sloop Providence, and William Hallock, Esq., of the Sloop Hornet.

P. S. Flag of the Queen of Hungary: Six black bars and six yellow bars. The Captain of the pilot-boat will put his flag in the foremast head of the pilot-boat.

Carefully recommended to the care of Mr. Paul Siemen.

PENNSYLVANIA ASSOCIATORS.

Friday, August 16, 1776. }

Whereas this Convention hath received information that several Associators of this State have deserted the camp in the face of the enemy, and returned home before the formation of the Flying-Camp, and without the leave of their commanding officers, to the great danger of the publick, and evil example to others: It is therefore,

Resolved, First, That all such Associators as shall rejoin their respective corps at the camp from whence they came, in eight days from this date, with such arms and accoutrements as they may have brought away with them, shall be exempted from any punishment; and those who neglect so to do, shall be apprehended, and sent under a guard to the camp, there to be tried; and in case of absconding, or concealing their arms, that they be advertised in the publick newspapers, and the reward of £3 offered for apprehending every such person. And every Associator who shall hereafter desert his colours, shall be treated as those already deserted, and neglect to rejoin their respective corps, agreeable to this Resolve.

Resolved, Secondly, That the Commanding Officers of the Companies or Battalions of the Militia of this State, who are now on their march to New-Jersey, do apprehend all deserters they may meet on the road, and convey them under a guard to the camp.

Resolved, Thirdly, That notwithstanding the foregoing Resolutions, it is not the intention of this Convention to detain the Militia unnecessarily from home; the Associators are therefore assured, that as soon as the Flying-Camp is formed, and the publick safety will admit, they shall be permitted to return home.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN MORRIS, Jun., Secretary.

CONVENTION OF NEW-JERSEY TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

In Convention, New-Jersey, Brunswick, }
August 16, 1776. }

SIR: Enclosed is the best list we can furnish of the officers in the three battalions of Continental troops raised in this State.

Though at present we know of no prisoners of war in New-Jersey, excepting Lieutenant Arthur Wadman, who is stationed at Bordentown, pursuant to the late order of your Board, we have yet directed the several Committees to furnish lists of the prisoners within their districts, either now or of late.

The Field-Officers of the battalions will appear from the minutes of Congress, together with the dates of their commissions. We cannot possibly give you any information respecting them.

LORD HOWE TO DR. FRANKLIN.

Eagle, off Staten-Island, August 16, 1776.

I am sorry, my worthy friend, that it is only on the assurances you give me of my having still preserved a place in your esteem that I can now found a pretension to trouble you with a reply to your favour of the 21st past.

I can have no difficulty to acknowledge that the powers I am invested with were never calculated to negotiate a reunion with America under any other description than as subject to the Crown of Great Britain. But I do esteem those powers competent, not only to confer and negotiate with any gentleman of influence in the Colonies upon the terms, but also to effect a lasting peace and reunion between the two countries, were the temper of the Colonies such as professed in the last petition of the Congress to the King. America would have judged in the discussion how far the means were adequate to the end, both for engaging her confidence and proving our integrity. Nor did I think it necessary to say more in my publick declaration, not conceiving it could be understood to refer to peace on any other conditions but those of mutual interest to both countries, which could alone render it permanent. But as I perceive from the tenour of your letter how little I am to reckon upon the advantage of your assistance for restoring that permanent union which has long been the object of my endeavours, and which, I flattered myself when I left England would be in the compass of my power, I will only add, that as the dishonour to which you deem me exposed by my military situation in this country has effected no change in your sentiments of personal regard to me, so shall no difference in political points alter my desire of proving how much I am your sincere and obedient humble servant,

HOWE.

GENERAL HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Head-Quarters, Staten-Island, August 16, 1776.

MY LORD: The Provincial corps already raised, and the new levies which may probably be made in the progress of this American war, must necessarily occasion a great additional expense, and their various establishments will of course require a very exact arrangement for settling accounts of subsistence and contingencies in such manner as to leave the least room for imposition or confusion. I should, therefore, humbly propose to separate them from all other extraordinaries, by appointing a Paymaster-General to keep them distinct; and in this idea, I have given to Captain Robert Mackenzie, my present Secretary, a commission to act as Paymaster-General, with the same appointment as the Deputy Paymaster-Generals have who act under Mr. Rigby in America. I have also appointed a Mustermaster, to certify the pay-bills from one muster to another.

Captain Mackenzie has served his Majesty twenty-one years, is fully qualified to discharge the duties required, and I beg your Lordship will do me the honour to communicate his Majesty's pleasure upon the appointment.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

WM. HOWE.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 16, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to inform you that since I had the pleasure of addressing you yesterday nothing interesting between the two armies has happened. Things remain nearly in the same situation as they then were.

It is with peculiar regret and concern that I have an opportunity of mentioning to Congress the sickly condition of our troops. In some regiments there are not any of the Field-Officers capable of doing duty; in others, the duty is extremely difficult for want of a sufficient number. I have been obliged to nominate some till Congress makes the appointments of those they wish to succeed to the several vacancies occasioned by the late promotions. This being a matter of some consequence, I presume will have their early attention, and that they will fill up the several vacancies also mentioned in the list I had the honour of transmitting some few days ago to the Board of War.

I am, sir, with the utmost respect, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-JERSEY CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, August 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am informed that, in consequence of my letter acquainting you that a number of persons deemed unfriendly to the interests of America were suspected of holding a correspondence with the enemy from Shrewsbury and its neighbourhood, Mr. Isaac Low, late of this city, has been apprehended, and is now detained under some kind of confinement. Since that time I have received satisfaction with respect to this gentleman, who I find has also entered into a contract with the Congress for the supply of a great quantity of European goods. I should therefore be glad that any restraint laid upon him, merely upon my representation, might be removed, and he restored to his former liberty, on such terms and conditions as you may think proper, if any are necessary.

I am, with much respect and regard, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Samuel Tucker, Esq., President, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 16, 1776.

SIR: I have been obliged to trouble you with some more disaffected persons, whose residence here was dangerous to the American interest. I trust that I have now done with them, at least for the present, and hope you will excuse the disagreeable necessity I have been under of soliciting your care and attention to provide for them and dispose of them. As the case of these differs in no respect from that of those before sent, I presume they will be put under the same regulations.

I am, with much respect and regard, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO FREDERICK JAY.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 16, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of my orders, the undermentioned persons* have been apprehended, and are now under a guard at New-Rochelle or its neighbourhood. As the sending a guard through to Governour Trumbull with them would be attended with much inconvenience to the publick, and cannot be agreeable to the gentlemen, upon their giving you their word and honour to proceed to Lebanon to Governour Trumbull, I am satisfied to permit them to go without any other escort than that of the officer who will deliver you this. I must beg the favour of you to take the management of this business, and, as soon as it is put upon a proper footing, dismiss the guard now there.

I am, with due respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Frederick Jay, Esq., New-Rochelle.

* Colonel Phillips, James Jauncey and his two sons, Joseph Bull, Isaac Corsa, John Rodgers, Ware Branson.

GENERAL SCOTT TO ROBERT BENSON.

New-York, August 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Byvanck delivered me your letter enclosing Major Fish's commission, but not the resolve of Convention to which you refer; I suppose you omitted covering it through mistake. From the reference you make to it, I flatter myself it will stimulate to noble daring. In this view, it must be of importance; therefore send it to me without delay, and I will issue it in brigade orders.

The Major retains his commission because he may be called to action, the event of which must be uncertain, and may terminate in the necessity of having a commission to produce. It wants amendments to give him his rank from the day of his appointment, which I propose should be done thus: Introduce the body of the commission with a recital, that "Whereas the Congress of the Colony of New-York, now the Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, on the recommendation of Brigadier-General Scott, appointed by the said Congress to command certain detachments of the Militia of the Colony, and now of the State of New-York, did, by an entry in their records on the day of last," (here recite the substance of the entry.) Then go on with We reposing, &c.; and then, after the words Major Brigade, say, "of the said detachments of Militia under the command of said Brigadier-General Scott." Then after the words the rules and discipline of war, in his commission, add, "to be in full force and effect as from the said" (inserting the day on which he appears in the records to have been appointed.) Then, "and to continue in force," &c., as in the present commission. This mode will give him all the benefit he could have derived from a commission dated on the day of his appointment, and will therefore remove the difficulty arising from Mr. President Woodhull's absence.

The commissions sent down for the other officers are received for the present, because the event of war being uncertain, they would not choose to fall into the hands of the enemy without commissions in their pockets. They earnestly entreat that they may, as soon as possible, be provided with others. The same mode of reference back to the time of their entrance into the service, as I have pointed out with respect to Major Fish, will, I presume, suit their cases.

Be pleased to commend me with all imaginable respect to the honourable Convention. Assure them that nothing but the hourly expectation of an attack prevents my taking my seat, and that as I am fully impressed with a sense that I am entirely at their pleasure by the nature of my appointment, I shall have recourse to them with pleasure, whenever any military service disagreeable to them, and which they will always have it in their power to disqualify me for, by a repeal of my commission, makes it necessary.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

To Robert Benson, Esq., one of the Secretaries of the honourable Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York.

NICHOLAS FISH TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 16, 1776.

SIR: I this moment, upon my return from Head-Quarters, was presented by General Scott with my commission, which, though I think it exceptionable in not bearing the date of my appointment, I have, however, (not knowing the event of war,) concluded to take for the present, as it will secure to me such treatment as my rank entitles me to, in case I should unfortunately fall into the hands of the enemy, though I think the difficulty arising from the President's absence from the Convention may be removed by adopting the mode pointed out in General Scott's letter to you.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

NICH. FISH.

To Robert Benson, Esq., one of the Secretaries of the Convention of the State of New-York.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 16, 1776.

The complement of men expected is pretty nearly filled up by the last reinforcements from New-England and Pennsylvania. Everything, I can with truth assure you, has the most agreeable appearance. All have their proper stations. Posts of importance are strongly manned; while reserves are kept for possible contingencies. The spirit of the soldiery promises everything. No levity or boasting in their countenances; but all the mark of a composed, patient, and determined resolution, that makes me anticipate either a most glorious resistance, or complete victory.

WILLIAM S. LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 16, 1776.

SIR: I am desired by General Greene to inform your Excellency that Colonel Hand waited upon him this morning, and informed him that the Hessians were landing again yesterday, on the east end of Staten-Island, to a considerable number; that there was nothing extraordinary happened; that, by the movements of the enemy, there did not appear any immediate preparation for an attack; and that three men of his regiment last night deserted, and took with them six rifles.

I am, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

WM. S. LIVINGSTON.

WILLIAM BLODGET TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, five o'clock, August 16, 1776.

SIR: I am desired to acquaint your Excellency, by the General's order, that Colonel Hand reports that thirteen or fourteen vessels entered the Narrows from the fleet before in New-Utrecht Bay; that the officer of the Ferry guard says they were all transports; that there were some red-coats on board. The Colonel says he could not discover many on board those now below, neither have they landed any there to-day. That the camps at the Flag-Staff and Ferry are pretty extensive. He likewise reports that two small vessels of force went down the Narrows this afternoon.

I am, with due respect, your Excellency's obedient servant,

WILLIAM BLODGET, Aid-de-Camp.

New-York, Monday, August 19, 1776.

Friday arrived here two Companies of the Third Battalion of the Philadelphia Associators, commanded by Captains Semple and Henry, and it is said that the whole battalion is expected every hour to arrive. Same day two fire-ships, commanded by Captains Fosdyke and Thomas, (gentlemen volunteers of rank in the Army of the United States,) proceeded up the North River, with intent to give a suitable warning to those piratical gentry that have infested it since the 12th of July last. The night was dark and favourable to the design, and the enemy did not perceive our vessels till they were near aboard them. Captain Fosdyke grappled the Phenix, but the fire not communicating so soon as was expected, she disentangled herself in about twenty minutes, after suffering considerable damage in her rigging. Captain Thomas fell on board one of the tenders, which was soon consumed; and we are truly sorry to inform the publick that this intrepid commander is yet missing. This gallant enterprise struck so great a panick upon the enemy that they thought it prudent to quit their station; and yesterday, taking advantage of a fresh wind at southeast, attended with considerable rain, they run the gauntlet through a great number of well-directed shot from our batteries in and near this city, which undoubtedly must have damaged them much. Our galleys played smartly, and followed the ships a considerable distance into the Bay. The enemy's fire seemed to be mostly directed upon the city, as the tops of the houses were crowded with spectators; but little damage was done to the buildings, nor any lives lost upon the occasion.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 22, 1776. Referred to the Committee on the causes of the miscarriages in Canada.]

Albany, August 16, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 31st ultimo, covering the resolutions of Congress of the preceding day, I had the honour to receive at the German-Flats, on Sunday, the 11th instant. I detained the express until Tuesday, and then seeing no prospect that I should be allowed even so much time as barely to acknowledge the receipt of it, I directed him to return to this place, where Mr. Edwards and I arrived about eight last night, Mr. Douw having left us on Sunday. On my arrival here I found some despatches from General Gates, which require to be forwarded to Congress, through his Excellency General Washington, without that delay which would be occasioned by transcribing the proceedings of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs at the late treaty. I shall, however, do myself the honour to transmit them in a few days, and shall only observe that we have reason to believe that the savages will commit no hostilities on our frontiers. It is nevertheless probable that some few of the Six Nations will join General Carleton.

As my character has been so barbarously traduced, and the miscarriages in Canada so generally attributed to misconduct in me, it somewhat alleviates the chagrin I feel, that Congress has appointed a Committee "to inquire into the causes of the miscarriages in Canada." But as I am confident the misfortunes in Canada are to be imputed to more causes than those mentioned in the resolutions of the 30th ultimo, and as I wish my conduct should undergo the strictest scrutiny, Congress will therefore permit me to entreat them to charge the Committee above mentioned, or to appoint another, minutely to inquire how far, if at all, any of the miscarriages in Canada are to be imputed to me. If I am the cause of them, let me meet with the detestation of my fellow-citizens; if not, and others are, let the publick resentment be transferred to the proper object. For my part, I am amply furnished with materials to exculpate myself. I shall court the most ordeal trial; nay, although conscious of the mediocrity of my talents, and that I am vastly inadequate to the important command I am honoured with, yet, on this occasion, I may be allowed to say that I do not believe that I shall be even convicted of an error in judgment. Permit me to add, with all due submission to Congress, that I conceive they too are wounded through my side; for, if I am not misinformed, many already wonder why an officer so generally charged with misconduct, is continued in so important a post. This also makes it necessary that an inquiry should be made into my conduct. It is also of the first importance to the publick service, whilst I continue to command an army, for the event of the inquiry will be a conviction or acquittal. If the former, I shall be dismissed, at least; if the latter, that confidence will be reëstablished, which is so indispensably necessary that an army should have in the General, and which I know is in a great measure now destroyed by insidious insinuations, industriously propagated by a set of miscreants.

I am informed that Colonel Bedel and Major Butterfield have both been tried by Courts-Martial, and that they are broke. Such officers as were with Major Butterfield and consented to the surrender will be tried. Inquiry shall be immediately made, and such punishment inflicted as a Court-Martial shall order, on any person concerned in plundering General Prescott's baggage. A Court of Inquiry shall be ordered, agreeable to the resolution of Congress, on the petition of Colonel Easton and Major Brown.

No mode of ascertaining the particulars and value of the stores taken on board the vessels on the Sorel, and by whom, that has yet offered to my mind, seems so eligible as that of appointing a Court of Inquiry for the purpose; I shall therefore order one expressly.

Major Brown has certainly, in the course of last year, done extraordinary services; but it will be very difficult to ascertain what reward he ought to have. I shall, as nearly as I can, point out what the extra service was, and advise Congress thereof the soonest possible. Inquiry shall also be made into Colonel Hazen's conduct on the complaint of de la Rose and la Fontaine. Every officer or soldier whose pay is stopped on account of any charge, shall have such charge determined as speedily as possible by trial. I do not recollect of a single instance in which there has been a delay of justice on that account, when it was in my power to have brought the party to a trial.

I find by letters from Mr. Trumbull, the Commissary-General, to Mr. Livingston, the Deputy Commissary-General, that I am blamed by many officers that they have not had any allowance for the rations of provisions due to them. I have given to all those who have applied to me orders on the Commissaries to pay for so many rations as they declared upon honour, or otherwise made appear, were due to them; but I have constantly refused ordering what allowance to make for a ration. My reasons are contained in the following extract of a letter to Mr. Livingston, of the 25th of July last, from the German Flats:

"Please to inform Mr. Trumbull that, as I must be supposed not to know the price for which provisions are bought, and even if I did, that it is not my business to determine what ought to be allowed in lieu of a ration, he or you, or both of you, are to furnish the Army with provisions. The officers are to receive it from the Commissaries; if they do not, they are to look to the Commissaries for an equivalent, who must take the blame if they pay them too little, or abide the consequence if they allow too much. I will not risk incurring either the blame of the officer or the disapprobation of Congress. I think I have long since written to Congress on the subject, and until I receive their orders or those of my General on the subject, I shall continue to do as I have hitherto done, which is, merely to give an order for the payment of so many rations as shall appear to be due, without specifying what sum is to be paid."

In saying that I long since wrote to Congress, I refer to my letter of the , in which I did myself the honour to enclose an estimate of the value of a ration in any one of the articles allowed by Congress. If that is ascertained, there can be no difficulty in determining what an officer ought to be allowed for a ration at whatever post he may be, for it is only adding the cost of transportation to the original cost of any article.

I forgot to ask who is to appoint the Paymaster to the regiments, and to point out their line of duty. They are much wanted in this quarter.

The commission for Colonel Wood will be forwarded. The letter Captain Varick has already sent to him.

I am just now informed, by good authority, that some of the Militia from the eastward have inoculated themselves on the march to Skenesborough; that a number of carpenters from Rhode-Island have done the like. I am also informed that all the Field-Officers of one regiment have done the same at Skenesborough. I shall instantly write to General Gates on the subject, and direct that none of them be suffered to join the Army, to prevent this terrible disorder from again distressing us. It is a matter of so much importance, that if I did not labour under the intermittent fever, I would immediately repair to all the roads leading to Skenesborough to remove these wretches. I shall early to-morrow morning despatch an express to General Waterbury, to send the most trusty officer he can find to prevent if possible the ill effects of this wicked conduct.

I am, sir, with the most respectful sentiments, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, President of Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, August 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: About eight last night I returned to this place, after a month's absence on a business the most disagreeable to a man accustomed to civil society that can possibly be conceived.

On the 11th instant I was honoured with your Excellency's favour of the 7th, but was unable to answer it from the German Flats, although I several times attempted it, being ever interrupted by a crowd of savages.

Last evening I received despatches from General Gates, copies of which I enclose, by which you will perceive that General Carleton has put it out of our power to have any intercourse with him on the subject-matter contained in the resolves of the 22d ultimo, or indeed on any other. With what degree of justice Carleton can bestow the infamous epithets he has so freely dealt out in his orders of the 7th instant, his barbarous conduct to Colonel Allen, the infamous manner in which he engaged the savages to act against us last year, the murder of the officers and men lately near Isle-aux-Noix, in which British troops were joined with savages, and other actions of a like nature, can witness.

The works at Fort Stanwix are going on with great expedition; and by the enclosed return, your Excellency will observe that near eighty days' pork and flour for the garrison is in store there; a considerable quantity of the latter is on its way up from Schenectady; and as they had on Monday last twenty-three head of fat cattle, and will receive a constant supply of fresh meat, I am under no apprehensions that the garrison will be under any difficulty in the article of provisions.

The anchors for the vessels on Lake Champlain will be procured in this quarter, but we greatly fear to fall short in many of the other articles, as Captain Bacon is returned without being able to procure anything, and not even a sailor.

Mr. Edwards' returns this morning, and will engage all the Stockbridge Indians he can; and as you do not direct what pay is to be given, we have thought it expedient, and as what will best promote the service and raise these people with the greatest despatch, that they should be officered and paid agreeable to the former resolve of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs; and that such as were raised in consequence of that resolution, should have their pay continued from the time they were discharged, which is about a month ago. They shall be disposed of agreeable to your orders.

Colonels Elmore and Nicolson's regiments are here. They have refused to march until they receive pay and necessaries. The former they will now have, but where to procure the latter I know not. I will furnish them as well as I can, and keep them here until I receive the report of two scouts that are sent one to Oswego, and the other towards Oswegatchie.

I shall immediately order copies of the transactions of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs at the late treaty to be made out, and transmit them to you. I believe the Six Nations will not fall on our frontiers, although I believe a few will always join the enemy in Canada.

I have some matters that concern officers in the Army to communicate, but I am at present too much indisposed to write any more.

I am, dear sir, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. I am just now informed that Lieutenant McMichael, of Colonel Dayton's regiment, is deserted to the enemy. I had information of his intentions the evening before I left the German Flats, and sent to have him brought before me, but he was supposed to have gone to the regiment, to which I had ordered him the day before. Yours, &c., &c., &c.

PH. SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, August 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Last night, at twelve o'clock, Major Bigelow returned with the flag of truce from Isle-aux-Noix. His journal, with a letter "To George Washington, Esq.," and a copy of the general orders issued at Chambly, the 7th instant, are enclosed. The resolve of Congress, "that no letter should be received from the enemy, unless the rank of the officer to whom it was addressed was placed upon the superscription," was not received here when Major Bigelow went from hence the 23d ultimo; and as that was dispensed with last year at Cambridge, he had no orders on the subject.

You will be so obliging as to forward without delay, by express to New-York, the enclosed papers to his Excellency General Washington, and to the most honourable the Congress of the United States of America.

All goes on well here in the naval department. General Arnold writes to you. He is just returned from Skenesborough, and makes a cruise in a few days down the Lake.

With every mark of esteem and affection, believe me, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

P. S. This letter, with the enclosed to General Putnam, you will also be so obliging to send by the express to General Washington.

Abstract of the Journal of Major JOHN BIGELOW, sent by the Hon. Major-General GATES to transmit despatches from the most honourable Continental Congress to General BURGOTNE.

Ticonderoga, July 23, 1776.

I departed from this place at sunset; arrived at Crown-Point at eleven o'clock at night, where, after a short stay, I proceeded on my voyage, till, on the 28th, I met with a Sergeant's guard of the British troops; and having taken the Sergeant into our batteau, we soon reached the Isle-aux-Noix. There we were hailed by a sentinel, who ordered us to come on shore. We saw nine or ten tents on the Island, all in a cluster. I had no sooner landed than I was blindfolded, and led up to the commanding officer's tent. About dusk, he ordered me to a small Island, situated to the southward of the Isle-aux-Noix. The commanding officer, who, I understood, was Captain Craig, questioned me concerning my business, which I told him was with General Burgoyne, to whom I was sent with a letter from Congress, delivered to me at Ticonderoga by Major-General Gates. He answered me, that he did not know whether he could receive a flag, but desired I would give him the letter, which he would forward to the General, then (as he said) at St. John's. He told me that the gentleman to whom the letter was directed, was indeed a General, but not the commanding officer in Canada. I answered, that I supposed the letter was directed to General Burgoyne on account of General Thompson's having mentioned him as being the commanding officer at Three-Rivers when he (General Thompson) sent up to Sorel for his baggage.

Captain Craig despatched, about nine at night, an officer with that and other letters to St. John's. I remained in his tent, where I was civilly treated. Two other officers supped with us, and whether from politeness or policy, or both, little was said upon political subjects. I asked Captain Craig whether there were British officers with those savages who, in cold blood, murdered some of our people opposite to that Isle? He answered in the affirmative. I could not help replying, that our Army could scarcely believe that such barbarities should have been suffered to be perpetrated where Britons had the command. He urged that they could not always govern the savages, who, said he, "will fight in their own way." Mr. Craig appeared desirous to decline any further conversation on that subject.

I believe Captain Craig had not been long on Isle-aux-Noix when I landed there. I lodged in his tent. But I must not omit that the drummer who landed with me said he observed an officer whispering to a Sergeant when the boat was near the shore, and overheard him ask "what he thought of the Congress."

I understood that there were no more than three batteaus on the Island when I went on shore, one of which formerly belonged to our Army; the two others were newly built, and the number 30 was marked in large figures upon one of them.

On the 29th of July, Captain Craig sent three batteaus and five canoes up the Lake: two of the latter were large, the three others small. At ten in the morning, I was blindfolded again, and ordered to the south part of the Island, where a large tent was pitched for me. It appeared to me that they had concerted to exhibit to me all the show of Indians they could. They now and then ran down to the point, with a guard, every time that an Indian canoe passed by, and pretended they were mightily afraid that the savages would come on shore and murder them. To mortify them, I took no notice of this juggling; but strongly recommended to my men that, should they look at the Indians, they would endeavour to do it with the greatest unconcern.

On the 8th of August, I was informed that the express who, I was told, had been sent to Quebeck, was come back; that Captain Craig presented his compliments to me, and desired that I would be ready to sail in the evening.

I observed during my stay there that they paraded at different times their officers in an ostentatious manner, and with the manifest intent to lead me into the belief of their being very numerous; but I do not believe that I saw above forty of them during the whole time, and not more than sixteen together. They displayed the very same pageantry respecting five or six batteaus, appearing exceedingly busy in carrying some timber to the Isle, merely to show themselves, and give their preparations a formidable appearance. They have been employed about building a very large bakelouse, and perhaps for the same reason. All the new batteaus I could see about the Island amounted to no more than twelve. They talk much of Hessians and Hanoverians, but I saw none. It would be too tedious minutely to relate all the particulars which discovered their intention to make me believe their strength was such as, doubtless, they would have been as anxious to conceal had it been real. I was told that their General had ordered an escort to conduct me to our own guards—a favour which I did not want, but could not refuse. At sunset Captain Craig came down, with fourteen officers, and dismissed me, under convoy of a birch canoe, commanded by Captain Alexander Frazer and Mr. Scott. The canoe had two officers, a Sergeant, and a Corporal of the British troops, with nine Frenchmen, on board.

On the 9th, just at dark, we came on shore at Gilliland's, and next morning, at seven o'clock, Captain Frazer and Mr. Scott left us and went down the Lake, after having showed us as much civility as could be expected from men whose situation sufficiently apologized for their reservedness.

As the crew I had with me consisted of remarkably decent men, all natives of the United States, and of the corps of Artillery, as well as myself, the British officers, during my stay, carefully prevented their free intercourse with soldiers who would be glad to become again our brethren.

Paper delivered to Major BIGELOW by Captain CRAIG, at ISLE-AUX-NOIX, August 8, 1776.

GENERAL ORDER.

(Parole, St. Jerome.)

Chambly, August 7, 1776.
(Countersign, Paris.)

His Excellency General Carleton orders the commanding officers of corps will take special care that every one under their command be informed that letters or messages from rebels, traitors in arms against their King, rioters, disturbers of the publick peace, plunderers, robbers, assassins or murderers; are on no occasion to be admitted. That should emissaries from such lawless men again presume to approach the Army, whether under the name of flag-of-truce men or ambassadors, except when they come to implore the King's mercy, their persons shall be immediately seized and committed to close confinement, in order to be proceeded against as the law directs; their papers and letters, for whomsoever, even for the Commander-in-Chief, are to be delivered to the Provost Marshal, that, unread and unopened, they may be burned by the hands of the common hangman. At the same time, the Commander-in-Chief expects that the assassination of Brigadier-General Gordon, nor the late notorious breach of faith in resolving not to return the troops and Canadians taken at St. John's, in exchange for those rebels who fell into the hands of the savages at the Cedars and Quinze Chiens, purchased from them at a great price, and restored to their country on those express conditions, be imputed to the Provincials at large, but to a few wicked and designing men, who first deceived, then, step by step, misled the credulous multitude to the brink of ruin, afterwards usurped authority over them, established a despotick tyranny not to be borne, and now wantonly and foolishly endeavour to provoke the spilling the blood of our unhappy countrymen of this Continent, in hopes of covering their own guilt, or confirming their tyranny by the general destruction of their country. Let their crimes pursue these faithless, bloody-minded men, who assert that black is white and white is black. It belongs to Britons to distinguish themselves not less by their humanity than their valour. It belongs to the King's troops to save the blood of his deluded subjects, whose greatest fault, perhaps, is having been deceived by such men to their own destruction. It belongs to the Crown, it is the duty of the faithful subjects of the Crown, to rescue from oppression and restore to liberty the once happy, free, and loyal people of this Continent.

All prisoners from the rebellious Provinces, who choose to return home, are to hold themselves in readiness to embark at a short notice. The Commissary, Mr. Murray, shall visit the transports destined for them, and see that wholesome provisions, necessary clothing, with all possible conveniences for their passage, be prepared for these unfortunate men. They are to look on their respective Provinces as their prisons, and there remain till further enlarged, or summoned to appear before the Commander-in-Chief of this Province, or any other Commander-in-Chief for his Majesty for the time being, which summons they shall obey.

General Howe will regulate the place of landing.

One of these papers was given to Major Bigelow, and one to each of his boat's crew.
RICHARD VARICK, Secretary.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM SKENESBOROUGH, DATED AUGUST 16, 1776.

I wish I could write you all you want to know. I can at present only say that our Army is every day receiving reinforcements, by single companies, from the different States of New-England. Five companies marched from here yesterday morning to join the main Army; another went to-day, and a new one has just come in. Our Army at present, I think, cannot be less than five thousand strong, exclusive of the sick, who are more than one thousand. In a few days we expect a very respectable addition. We are at present fearless of the enemy, and are determined to maintain our ground at all events. The new troops are in high spirits, and through the kindly interposing hand of Providence we shall do well.

Our strength by sea is as follows: Two schooners, one sloop, two row-galleys, and six gondolas, all fit for action. At this place we have one gondola launched, and another just finished. We have also three row-galleys in great forwardness, from sixty to seventy feet in keel and eighteen feet beam, which will mount each six cannon and twenty swivels, and are to go with thirty-six oars, besides sails. They will be fit for action in about three weeks. As soon as they are launched, General Waterbury, with the regiment to which I belong, are ordered on board them, and when rigged, &c., are to proceed up the Lake to join the fleet.

By the last accounts from St. John's, we learn that the enemy had not more than forty batteaus built, and two galleys or gondolas. If this is true, I hardly think they will venture down the Lake this fall. We are determined, however, to be prepared for them. Five other galleys are to be built here as soon as those which are on the stocks are launched.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I arrived here at ten o'clock last night much as I left Ticonderoga—a little feverish, but no ague fit. A dose of physick this afternoon, I hope, will set matters in order. I have applied to Doctor Sparham, who I believe cannot be persuaded to go with the fleet. I don't think it prudent to go without a Surgeon. Lieutenant Dunn acquaints me that the Surgeon's Mate of Colonel St. Clair's regiment has a good box of medicines, and will incline to go with the fleet. I wish he could be sent here, or some one who will answer, to kill a man secundum artem. I can procure a case of capital instruments for him here. Nothing but the Surgeon, and some few articles I have sent a boat for, prevents our proceeding. I hope the carpenters will not be retarded for want of smith's work. They made several complaints before I came away.

I am, with compliments to the gentlemen of your family, dear sir, your affectionate, obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. I could wish the proceedings of the Court-Martial, letters, &c., might pass through General Schuyler's hands, that his sentiments might be known.

B. A.

JACOB BAYLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Newbury, August 16, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Major Childs, waits on your Excellency, to receive your instructions relating to the road from this place to St. John's. He will give all the intelligence relating thereto required. He is a gentleman of good character, and may be depended upon in whatever he undertakes. I am sorry to take up your time with my letters, but beg to be excused, as I really mean the good of the service.

Am, sir, your most humble servant at command,

JACOB BAYLEY.

P. S. Major Childs understands the cattle trade well.

RICHARD LAW TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Milford, Friday, August 16, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Am just arrived thus far from New-York, and design to set out on Monday morning, and expect to wait on your Honour Tuesday noon. General Washington was anxious to have the Militia forwarded, and I find they have gone down pretty universally from these western towns. All was quiet when I left New-York on Tuesday evening. They had been expecting an attack, for some time, but when it will be, is very uncertain. A number of suspected persons are apprehended, and are now on their way from New-York to Norwich, to the care of your Honour. Our conference with General Washington shall repeat to your Honour, and am in hopes there is not that foundation for jealousy as was apprehended.

Am desired to forward the enclosed; and am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD LAW.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Governour of the State of Connecticut, Lebanon.

Parole of Suspected Persons.

We the subscribers, being sent from New-York to Connecticut, under guard of a party commanded by Captain Eells, as being persons supposed not to be friendly to the United States of America, with orders not to be confined in jail, if we give our parole not to escape, until further directions from Governour Trumbull, as per order, signed per J. Reed, Adjutant-General,

We do therefore, upon the honour, faith, and credit of gentlemen, each of us, severally promise for himself, to the Governour and Company of the State of Connecticut, faithfully to abide in Norwich, in Connecticut, and within the limits of the parishes called the First Society and the Society of Chelsea, in Norwich aforesaid, until further orders can be had respecting us and our location from Governour Trumbull and his Council of Safety; and that in the mean time, we, each of us, will refrain from all correspondence with any persons unfriendly to these States, and abide such orders and directions as shall be given respecting us, or any of us, by the Committee of Inspection in Norwich, until orders shall be given by the Governour and Council aforesaid. Dated at Norwich, the 11th day of August, 1776.

Instructions for the Captain appointed to go to Connecticut with Prisoners.

SIR: You are to proceed with all expedition, as wind and tide will permit, to New-London, or Norwich, in Connecticut, there to apply to the Committee to assist you to dispose of the prisoners not under confinement, if they will give their parole not to escape, until further direction is given respecting them by Governour Trumbull. You will leave them with the Committee, and return as soon as possible. You may permit Hewlett to go on shore with a careful officer, to bring some necessaries for himself.

On the other side is a list of the persons intrusted to your care. You must be careful of expense, and keep an account, which will be paid you here.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO MESHECH WEARE.

Watertown, August 16, 1776.

SIR: It gives us the most sensible concern that it is not in our power to supply our sister State of New-Hampshire with those cannon for which they applied. By a late return, it appears that we have now left for the defence of the town of Boston and the harbour thereof, but fifty-eight, from eighteen to forty-two-pound cannon. This State have erected eleven forts in the town and harbour aforesaid; many of them are a very long shot from the ship-channel. In these works small cannon will be of little or no service.

From this short view of the matter, the Council flatter themselves that it must be evident that it is not in our power, consistent with our own safety, to comply with the request of your State.

In the name of the Council, I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

To the Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq., President of the Council of New-Hampshire.

Newburyport, August 16, 1776.

Yesterday Captain Wingate Newman arrived in the privateer named the Hancock, from Philadelphia. She brought in a prize, (which is now safely anchored before this town,) the ship Nancy, from Antigua, Captain Keys, bound to London, having on board about four hundred hogsheads of sugar, ninety of rum, and a few casks of Madeira wine. A lady and several gentlemen were passengers in the above ship. He likewise brought in with him the sloop Industry, Captain William Hazen, bound to St. John's, in Nova-Scotia, in ballast.

A few days before taking the above ship, Captain Newman had a smart engagement with a sloop-of-war, of much superior force, for three glasses, but night coming on, they parted, both having received much damage; but on board of Captain Newman no lives were lost, nor any much hurt.

THOMAS FLETCHER TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Penobscot River, August 16, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: Agreeable to your instructions delivered me in Council, dated 27th July, 1776, to proceed to the residence of the Penobscot Indians, to endeavour to enlist as many of them as I could to serve in the war under his Excellency General Washington—agreeable to my instructions, immediately on my arrival at Penobscot, I proceeded up the river, accompanied with Colonel Lowden, to Mr Jeremiah Colburn's, near Penobscot village, where I met with some Indians, and sent to the tribe to acquaint them with my business; and in answer to it, they appointed Tuesday, 13th of August, to meet me at Colonel Lowden's, at the falls. Accordingly they met me, with eighteen canoes, amounting to about thirty, besides women and children. I read to them my instructions, and also his Excellency General Washington's request to inlist Indians, and the establishment for the pay of the Army. Their answer is as follows: That they don't think any of their young men can be spared, for that they don't know how soon they may be wanted to defend themselves against the English Army. They hear by the Eastern Indians that there are a great many English ships gone up Canada river with troops, and that there is a large fort built on Point Levi, opposite Quebeck, and by whom they don't know; and there is now a strong guard of English kept at Soucomick, a French settlement on Chaudiere river; which is the reason that their young men don't choose to engage at present, for fear that the English party may induce French and bad Indians to come amongst them and destroy them; as otherwise they would immediately join General Washington in his Army at the southward. They say they shall keep men to make discoveries, and from time to time will inform us of their proceedings, for their safety and ours, as we are all of one family. They were asked, if the Colony should raise a number of men as Rangers to reconnoitre the country to watch the motions of the enemy, whether any of their young men would join the party? They replied, they would willingly. They desired me to inform you that all the settlers on their lands were present at this interview, and that they agreed the English should remain as far up the river as the tide flows, and no farther; and those that were settled above should be removed, and the boundary line should be at the head of the tide, and gave the settlers leave to tarry on their lands until they got in their harvest.

There were a number of the young men that were desirous to go up to the Court. I told them, unless they inlisted for one or two years it would not answer the intention of the Colony, and therefore I would not consent to their going.

I beg leave to subscribe myself your Honours' most obedient, humble servant to command,

THOS. FLETCHER.

To the Hon. Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

INLISTING ORDERS.

State of New-Hampshire, in Committee of Safety, }
August 16, 1776. }

To

You are hereby authorized immediately to inlist a Company to consist of ninety able-bodied effective men, (officers included,) well accoutred with arms and provided with blankets, to serve in a regiment, on the Continental establishment, ordered by the Continental Congress to be raised in New-Hampshire, for one year from the time of their passing muster, unless sooner discharged. And you are hereby informed, that when you have inlisted said company, and they have passed muster, you and they will enter into the Continental pay and receive the same wages and rations as other troops in that service. And you also have liberty to nominate three subalterns to serve under you, giving the preference to the two now under you, if they incline to accept. And all the men when mustered are to go into service and be under the command of Colonel David Gillman and Major Hercules Mooney, in their several stations, until Field-Officers are appointed by the honourable Continental Congress, to whom application will be made by the General Assembly for that purpose.

P. S. Those lately recruited, if they inlist again, must not expect their blanket money twice.

WILLIAM FINNIE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburgh, August 17, 1776.

SIR: The approach of winter, and the tattered condition of the troops in this quarter, make it my duty to look out as early as possible for necessaries suitable for the advancing season, every article of which we are entirely without, and I fear, unless we should be fortunate enough to procure an early supply, the want of them may prove fatal to the soldiers. As the multiplicity of business in which my department necessarily involves me, will not admit of my absence to procure those articles personally, by permission of General Lewis, Mr. James Hunter, a gentleman of a fair and patriotick character, and well versed in commercial matters, is empowered to wait on your honourable body for further orders on this important head.

I hope I may, without running the imputation of presumption, be bold enough to make one observation to you, the truth and justness of which the duties of my office have frequently evinced to me: I mean the expediency of allowing the officers forage. Not only the nature of the service in this country requires such an indulgence for the officers, but really I think it would be a frugal scheme, as it would lessen the immense expense resulting from wagons to transport their baggage when on a march; and, indeed, our troops here are almost continually in motion.

Very shortly after my appointment I wrote to the Honourable Brigadier-General Mifflin, who was at that time Quartermaster-General, relative to the duties of my office; but as I have not yet been honoured with an answer, I have enclosed a copy for your perusal, and shall be happy to receive your sentiments thereon.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

WM. FINNIE, D. Q. M., S. D.

Williamsburgh, May 2, 1776.

SIR: My late appointment from Congress as Deputy-Quartermaster of the Southern District, makes it my duty to apply to you for such instructions as you may think proper to give, as I consider myself as acting in subordination to you. I shall at all times put those measures into execution, in discharge of my office, which you may recommend. At present I am much embarrassed: I have received no regulations whereby I may know what officers are entitled to forage, and in what quantities. I shall esteem it a favour if you will transmit at your leisure the necessary information on this point.

I am, sir, with respect, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM FINNIE,

D. Q. M., Southern District.

To Thomas Mifflin, Quartermaster-General of the Continental Forces.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN DEAKINS.

[No. 146.]

Annapolis, August 17, 1776.

SIR: We have yours of the 12th, and are sorry to hear you have not completed your company. However, we think it necessary you should send down directly to this city the men you have ready, and recruit the others that are wanting, with the greatest expedition. If you will send down a recommendation for any person you approve of for an Ensign, he shall have a commission. The arms that were made at Georgetown, were not disposed of in the manner you mention. We send you £250 to purchase the guns and blankets that are yet wanting, and hope you will lay it out to the greatest advantage. We are, &c.

To Captain Francis Deakins.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 147.]

Annapolis, August 17, 1776.

SIR: It is thought by some of the Delegates from your County, that a sufficient quantity of cloth proper for tenting can be had there to make tents for your two companies of Flying-Camp Militia. If it can, we shall be very much obliged to you to purchase it, and have as many tents made up with the utmost despatch, agreeable to the directions of those made at Baltimore, as will answer. You will also be pleased to have the necessary poles got ready, and the tents completely finished. We are, &c.

To Colonel Henry Hollingsworth.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL RICHARDSON.

[No. 148.]

Annapolis, August 17, 1776.

SIR: We have already given orders to many of your Captains in writing. We have now only to add, that you are to march all the companies in your battalion as soon as possible that can be armed and equipped. They are to go to Elizabeth-Town, in the Jerseys, and there receive further directions from the Commander-in-Chief. Should the honourable Continental Congress, or those who have proper authority, give any subsequent orders, you are to obey.

We are, &c.

To Colonel William Richardson.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAINS GEORGE AND ALEXANDER.

[No. 149.]

Annapolis, August 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You are to prepare, as expeditiously as possible, to march to the northward. We have written to Colonel Hollingsworth about tents for your company. You will apply to him, and afford him all the assistance in your power in procuring them. Colonel Richardson is appointed Colonel to your battalion, and will be with you in a few days, and give the further necessary orders. Knapsacks, haversacks, and priming-wires, shall be sent you from Baltimore, and cartouch-boxes from Kent. We are, &c.

To Captains George and Alexander.

DOCTOR TOOTELL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

August 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am informed that the battalion in this city, commanded by Colonel Hall, has received orders to march. I had not the least idea, when I petitioned your Honours for a Surgeon's commission to attend that battalion then quartered at Annapolis, and which I presumed was stationed, and there to remain for the protection of that city, that I should have been requested to remove. My age and bad health, particularly at this season of the year, would have been a bar against a contract of that kind, and interest another impediment. I could scarce think of leaving home, and between three and four hundred a year, arising from my practice of physick, and other advantages, to move into another Province, and leave my family, consisting of a wife, a daughter, and a small son, for whom I bare the most tender affection, and who in my absence must inevitably suffer, to embrace a Surgeon's place, which pay would scarce defray my expenses, as I should be obliged to travel with a servant and horses, and perhaps be ordered by the Surgeon-General to what department he pleased.

I have attended the sick soldiers with the greatest assiduity and care, and I believe I have given general satisfaction, both to the officers and soldiers. I have had great fatigue and trouble with regulating the military hospital shop, and compounding various medicines from the gross materials, which was acting beyond my line of office. It being my duty only to prescribe for the sick, the medicines ought to have been delivered to me ready for prescription. The Hospital is now filled with sick soldiers, whom I am ready to attend, and likewise the train of Artillery, or any other troops that may be stationed in this city. I should be sorry that the battalion should suffer from my not marching with them, and really, as I am circumstanced at present, that is impracticable. No man has the prosperity of our Army more at heart, nor is more deeply affected with our present distresses, or more ardently wishes an honourable reconciliation, than your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

RD. TOOTELL.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

MARYLAND CONVENTION.

In Convention, August 17, 1776.

Agreeably to the Order of the Day, the Convention took into consideration the Resolution of Congress declaring the United Colonies free and independent States; and thereupon Resolved unanimously, That this Convention will maintain the freedom and independency of the United States with their lives and fortunes.

By order of Convention: G. DUVAL, Clerk.

BALTIMORE COUNTY COMMITTEE.

At a special meeting of the Committee, August 17, 1776:

Present: S. Purviance, Chairman; W. Lux, Vice Chairman; R. Alexander, W. Wilkinson, B. Griffith, J. Calhoun, J. E. Howard, J. Craddock.

Information having been given to the Committee that Christopher Limes and John Amos were returned to town, after having endeavoured to get on board Lord Dunmore and been disappointed, and that they intended to go away immediately, and (it is supposed) endeavour to join Lord Howe at New-York, the Committee requested Major Craddock to despatch a guard to the said Limes's house, and take him into custody, in order to secure him for examination on Monday next.

Attest:

GEO. LUX, Secretary.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, August 17, 1776, five o'clock, P. M.

SIR: Your favour of the 16th instant, per post, this minute came to hand, and shall be laid before Congress on Monday.

I do myself the pleasure to enclose sundry resolves for your information, and likewise to forward the commissions ordered by a resolve of Congress on the 10th instant, a copy of which I transmitted in my letter of that date.

With the most ardent and sincere wishes for your health and prosperity, I have the honour to be, with perfect esteem, sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

P. S. This morning I received the box by Colonel Reed, and am directed by Congress to take care of it, which is done.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 16th, this day, together with the resolve of Congress.* Should be extremely obliged to you if you would communicate the enclosed letter to that honourable body, and shall wait till I know if they have any further commands for, sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

* In Congress, Thursday, August 15, 1776.—Resolved, That the said Commodore Hopkins, during his cruise to the southward, did not pay due regard to the tenour of his instructions, whereby he was expressly directed to annoy the enemy's ships upon the coasts of the Southern States; and that his reasons for not going from Providence immediately to the Carolinas are by no means satisfactory.

GEORGE STEVENSON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation of Cumberland County, at Carlisle, August 17, 1776. }

SIR: Enclosed you have an account of the disposal of the money which we have received, by Messrs. John Boyd and John Pollock, from Congress. The vouchers or receipts of officers we do not send until this scene or the season of sending Militia to New-Jersey shall be over.

The twelfth company of our Militia are marched to-day, which companies contain in the whole eight hundred and thirty-three privates—with officers, nearly nine hundred men. Six companies more are collecting arms, and are preparing to march. No Commissary having been appointed in this County to provide victuals for the men, they have been supplied mostly by the tavern-keepers, many of whom cannot well wait for their pay, especially as beef and mutton sell at 5d. per pound, coffee and brown sugar at 1s. 6d. per pound, butter at 8d. per pound; and it is difficult to procure those articles even at these high prices without cash. The people say they will be losers if they are not allowed 1s. per meal: we think they cannot afford it for much less. We are much pressed to pay off those victualling accounts, but have hitherto declined it, not from want of inclination to serve our country, but because we have not money nor directions, nor do we know how much is allowed for a meal of victuals.

A number of arms are taken up, appraised, and now in the service, many of them repaired by mechanicks who are in need of their pay. Cartouch-boxes, pouches, &c., are made, and delivered to the Captains on credit. The Field-Officers are absent on the publick service, and cannot attend to draw money and pay those necessary debts. Several of those creditors have applied to us. We have answered them with our promise to lay their case before Congress. The bearer, Robert Simple, Esq., waits on you express with our draft, and bearing even date herewith, for £2,000, part of it to be paid in advance to the several companies now preparing to march to New-Jersey, and part of it to pay for their victualling and to discharge debts contracted for victualling those who are already marched. If we shall send men unarmed, are arms to be had for them at Philadelphia? Our drafts have been honoured, but we have not received any other answer to our former letters. We earnestly request an answer. Should anything in our letters be improper to trouble Congress with, we hope directions will be given to those in whose department our business is, and that we may be excused.

We are, sir, your most obedient and most humble servants.

Signed by order of the Committee:

GEO. STEVENSON, Chairman.

IN CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF NEW-JERSEY.

Brunswick, August 17, 1776.

Resolved, unanimously, That the Bills of Credit emitted by the Honourable Continental Congress be a legal tender within the State of New-Jersey for all sums of money due and owing from one person to another.

Whereas the difference of the several Currencies within this State very greatly perplexes many of the good people thereof, and now especially such of the people of the neighbouring States as have come hither for our defence against the common enemy, and gives occasion for great impositions and deceits:

Resolved, unanimously, That all payments and receipts be made in every part of this State in Proclamation Money of New-Jersey, at seven shillings and six-pence the dollar, reckoning the difference between the usual prices heretofore taken in any other currency, and reducing the same to Proclamation.

Extracts from the Minutes:

WILLIAM PATERSON, Secretary.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 17, 1776.

SIR: The circumstances of the two Armies having undergone no material alteration since I had the honour of writing you last, I have nothing particular or important to communicate respecting them.

In my letter of yesterday I forgot to mention the arrival of Lord Dunmore here. By the examination of Captain Hunter, who escaped from the enemy and came to Amboy on the 14th, transmitted me by General Roberdeau, I am certainly informed his Lordship arrived on the 13th. The examination does not say anything about the ships he brought with him, and only extends to his force, which it mentions to be weak.

I expected before now the enemy would have made their attack; nor can I account for their deferring it, unless the intelligence given by Captain Hunter, and another person who escaped about the same time, is the cause, to wit: that they are waiting the arrival of another division of the Hessian troops, which, they say, is still out. Whether that is the reason of the delay, I cannot undertake to determine; but I should suppose things will not long remain in their present state. I have enclosed a copy of General Roberdeau's letter, and of the examination of these two persons, which will show Congress all the information they have given upon these subjects.

I am just now advised by Mr. Ayres, who came from Philadelphia to build the row-galleys, that two of our fire-vessels attempted to burn the enemy's ships and tenders up the North River. He says that they burnt one tender, and one of them boarded the Phoenix, and was grappled with her for near ten minutes, but she cleared herself. We lost both of the vessels. His account is not so particular as I could wish. However, I am certain the attempt has not succeeded to our wishes. In a little time, it is probable, the matter will be more minutely reported.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Amboy, August 15, 1776.

SIR: In the absence of General Mercer, he being on duty at Elizabeth-Town or its neighbourhood, I just now received from one of our posts at South-Amboy two prisoners escaped from the English fleet. They are inhabitants of Philadelphia, and well known to many of us from thence. Their examination, which I forward enclosed, may be depended on, according to their knowledge.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DANIEL ROBERDEAU.

To General Washington.

Examination of Captain ALEXANDER HUNTER, who escaped from on board the ROCKINGAM, a Transport with HESSIANS, August 14, 1776.

He informs that he was taken off the Capes of Virginia by a vessel of Lord Dunmore's, on the 8th of February, 1776; that he was sent to England, and put on board the Rockingham, which left St. Helen's 26th of May, in company with the Hessian fleet. He arrived at the Narrows on Monday last, and pretending to be a pilot, was allowed to go in a small boat towards the Hook, by which means he escaped. That about eight thousand Hessians are arrived, and five thousand more Hessians are expected in a few weeks; that the whole force is supposed to be about twenty-six or twenty-seven thousand; that Lord Dunmore arrived yesterday—brought but few men; that the Hessians which arrived on Monday, are to land on the Island to refresh, and the English were to embark on board to make room for them, and this he was informed of by a Captain of the Hessian fleet. That it is expected an attack will be made in eight or ten days, and not before; that it is believed in the fleet that General Washington is weak, and has not above fifteen thousand men in New-York and on Long-Island. That he believed they have no galleys or floating-batteries; that they have about seven two-decked ships, and about thirteen of lighter metal.

Examination of ISAAC FAVIER, a Pilot belonging to the Port of PHILADELPHIA, who was taken by the VIFER, December 10, 1775, and escaped from the ENGLISH Fleet, in company with Captain ALEXANDER HUNTER, August 14, 1776.

That on the 17th of April, he was put on board the Admiral's ship at Halifax, and continued on board till he made his escape. He confirms the account of Captain Hunter as to the number of the enemy. That it was believed in the fleet that General Washington intended making his stand at New-York, and was evacuating Long-Island; that there is a great deal of confidence of success in the fleet; that the Scots troops are extremely incensed against us, and frequently say they will give no quarter; that it is expected that Burgoyne will in a few days be in the rear of New-York, and ready to make a junction whenever the troops land. That he is certain five thousand more Hessians are expected, but believes the General will not wait their arrival before the attack; that the Brune frigate and the Centurion, of fifty guns, were to go up the North River, and that it is a principal object with them to cut off the communication between the city of New-York and the country.

Examination of a Deserter from STATEN-ISLAND.

Archibald Campbell, of Philadelphia, was pressed on board the Roebuck, in Accomack, two months ago; came with Lord Dunmore to Staten-Island a week ago; brought the yellow-fever with them, but the Army otherwise healthy. Heard them talk on board that five thousand men were to land on Long-Island; that they say they shall leave Staten-Island on Tuesday next; that he heard them say there were fifteen thousand foreign troops on the Island. All the troops were arrived which they expected.

Examination of JOHN HAMOND, a soldier in the Twenty-Seventh Regiment, August 14, 1776.

Left Staten-Island last night at eight o'clock; left the Army preparing to leave the Island; the Battalion men are all on board, only the Grenadiers and Light-Infantry left on the Island; the ships are to be sent up against the town; thinks all the troops will be landed on Long-Island; that they hope to cut us off from the woods; their number supposed twenty-five thousand; ours they think three to one; that they mean to land their men under cover of gondolas, which have six-pounders in them, and are built high to cover the landing; troops in pretty good health; no fresh meat; Hessians are ordinary troops—old and small. They had orders on Monday to cook provisions for three days on board the ships.

Examination of WILLIAM BROOKS, a soldier, August 15, 1776.

William Brooks, deserter from the Fanny transport, was one of a new battalion of Rangers to be raised out of a number of loose people, under Captain Stanton; swam over about nine o'clock last night to Bergen-Point. They are embarking their men, but there are a good many yet remaining on the Island, and are waiting for about fifty sail, which got separated from the fleet; knew nothing of the crossing of the boats last evening, he being at another part of the Island; two regiments of Light-Horse on the Island has had no fresh provisions since he was there; they had three days' provisions delivered them ready cooked, and kept in their knapsacks; thinks they will come up in a day or two, and will attack Long-Island and this place near the same time; thinks they have twenty thousand men on the Island.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HOWE.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour to transmit the enclosed letter from Major French, and at the same time to inform you that his exchange for Major Meigs, whose parole I am advised you have, will meet my approbation. I would take the liberty also to propose an exchange of any Captain you may choose for Captain Dearborn, whose parole I have heard was delivered you with Major Meigs's.

Give me leave to assure you, sir, that I feel myself greatly obliged by the polite conclusion of your letter of the 1st instant, and have a high sense of the honour and satisfaction I should have received from your personal acquaintance. The different state of the Colonies from what it was last war, and which has deprived me of that happiness, cannot be regretted by any one more than, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I consider that the city of New-York will, in all human probability, very soon be the scene of a bloody conflict, I cannot but view the great number of women, children, and infirm persons, remaining in it, with the most melancholy concern. When the men-of-war passed up the river, the shrieks and cries of these poor creatures, running every way with their children, were truly distressing, and I fear will have an unhappy effect on the ears and minds of our young and inexperienced soldiery. Can no method be devised for their removal? Many, doubtless, are of ability to move themselves; but there are others in a different situation. Some provision for them afterwards would also be a necessary consideration. It would relieve me from great anxiety if your honourable body would immediately deliberate upon it, and form and execute some plan for their removal and relief, in which I will coöperate and assist to the utmost of my power. In the mean time, I have thought it proper to recommend to persons under the above description, to convey themselves without delay to some place of safety, with their most valuable effects.

I have the honour, &c.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Abraham Yates, Jun., Esquire, President, &c.

By His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the UNITED STATES OF NORTH-AMERICA.

Whereas a bombardment and attack upon the city of New-York, by our cruel and inveterate enemy, may be hourly expected; and as there are great numbers of women, children, and infirm persons, yet remaining in the city, whose continuance will rather be prejudicial than advantageous to the Army, and their persons exposed to great danger and hazard: I do therefore recommend it to all such persons, as they value their own safety and preservation, to remove with all expedition out of the said town, at this critical period, trusting that, with the blessing of Heaven upon the American arms, they may soon return to it in perfect security. And I do enjoin and require all the Officers and Soldiers in the Army under my command to forward and assist such persons in their compliance with this recommendation.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, New-York, August 17, 1776. GO. WASHINGTON.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, August 17, 1776.

SIR: Monsieur Martin is in the pay of the United States of America, as an Engineer, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. As he may be of some service at your post, and is not so immediately wanted here, his Excellency has directed me to recommend him to your notice, and to be employed in such service as may be most conducive to the publick interest.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED, Adjutant-General.

To Major-General Heath, Mount Washington.

COLONEL CARY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to return you his thanks for your favour of this morning. He is much pleased to hear of the good behaviour of the officers and men of the Lady Washington and Independence galleys; and desires you will inquire into the cause of the inactivity of the other galleys, and inform him thereof.

I am, with due respect, sir, your very humble servant,

RICHD. CARY, Jun., A. D. C.

To Major-General Heath.

WILLIAM S. LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 17, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Hand has this morning reported to the General, that since yesterday evening four vessels of war (one of them the Solebay) have sailed from the fleet at the Narrows. Two brigs, a sloop, and schooner, came in from sea; and the man-of-war that lay off the Hook these two days past came in.

The morning being very thick, he could discern nothing distinctly at the Hook; but that late in the evening of yesterday some of the foreign troops landed at the ferry-way on Staten-Island.

I am sorry to inform your Excellency that General Greene had a very bad night of it, and cannot be said to be any better this morning than he was yesterday.

I have the honour to be your most obedient servant,

WM. S. LIVINGSTON.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, }
Harlem, August 17, 1776. }

SIR: Mr. Denning hath made the Convention acquainted with your Excellency's sentiments upon obstructing the navigation of the East River between the Grand Battery and Governour's Island. We now take the liberty of enclosing the copy of our resolution for that purpose, which, together with this letter, will be handed to your Excellency by the gentlemen of the Committee, to whom we make no doubt, sir, that you will afford every assistance in your power.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servant,

AB'M YATES, Jun., President.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, New-York.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

 Harlem, August 17, 1776. }

SIR: I am directed to inform your Excellency that immediately upon the receipt of your favour of this morning respecting the women, children, and infirm persons, remaining in the city of New-York, the Convention appointed a Committee for the purpose of removing and providing for such persons. I enclose a copy of the resolves for that purpose, and hope you will soon be relieved from the anxiety which their continuance in town has occasioned; and have the honour to be, with very great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

AB'M YATES, JUN., President.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, New-York.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, }
 at Harlem, August 17, 1776. }

Resolved, That the women, children, and infirm persons, in the city of New-York, be immediately removed from the said city, agreeable to General Washington's request of this House, in his letter of this date.

Resolved, That Colonel Lott, Mr. James Beekman, Mr. John Berrien, (Chairman of the Committee of New-York), and Mr. John Campbell, (a member of the said Committee,) be empowered to remove such persons to such place or places in this State as they shall think proper; and that this Convention will pay the expenses incident to the removal and maintenance of such persons as the said Committee shall think in such indigent circumstances as not to be able to remove and subsist themselves.

Resolved, That the General Committee of New-York be earnestly requested to give all possible assistance to the above gentlemen, in carrying into execution the above Resolutions in the most expeditious manner possible.

Extract from the Minutes:

ROBERT BENSON, Secretary.

We, the subscribers, being appointed by the Convention of this State, in the above Resolutions, give this publick notice to all such poor persons in this city who are proper objects, that we will attend that business at the Exchange Room, every morning, from eight till twelve o'clock, to give permits to them, and procure vessels to remove them to proper places in the country, where they will be accommodated agreeable to the above Resolutions.

ABRAHAM P. LOTT,
 JAMES BEEKMAN,
 JOHN BERRIEN,
 JOHN CAMPBELL.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: On the 15th, at night, I returned to this place, and found your favours of the 5th and 11th instant.

Carleton's conduct convinces me that he is not much read in the law of nations or the laws of war. Most, if not all the great writers have clearly laid down the line of conduct that is to be held by both parties in such a contest as we are now engaged in.

I intended to have wrote you yesterday, but could not finish my letters to Congress and General Washington until eight at night, having been interrupted by a fit of the ague.

I enclose you copies of sundry resolutions of Congress, which I received at the German-Flats, on Sunday, the 11th instant. You will please to carry into execution such of them as you can. Lest, through the constant interruption of the Indians at the German-Flats, I should have omitted sending you some of the resolutions of Congress which I received when there, I now also enclose you copies of the whole, which you will also please to attend to.

You will perceive by the resolutions of the 30th ultimo, that Congress has concurred with their Committee in assigning three causes for the miscarriages in Canada. My character has been so infamously traduced, and the misfortunes in that quarter so generally imputed to me, that I have informed Congress that the three causes assigned are not the only ones. And I have entreated them to have the strictest and most minute inquiry made into my conduct; that, if I am in fault, I may meet with the punishment and detestation due to me; if not, that the publick odium may be transferred to the proper objects. If I had continued any longer silent on the subject, it would have been construed as a tacit avowal of my guilt.

I have also written General Washington on the subject of the outrage the General Officers in this department have sustained by the decision of the Council of Officers at New-York, on the removal of the Army to Ticonderoga, copy of which I enclose you.

Mr. Trumbull, the Paymaster, informs me that some of the Militia from the Eastern Colonies have had themselves inoculated on their march to Skenesborough; and also a number of the carpenters sent from Rhode-Island. If this fatal distemper should again reach the Army, it will effectually ruin it. I, therefore, by this conveyance transmit an order to General Waterbury to send two or three trusty officers to stop all such as have inoculated themselves, and not to permit them to join the Army on any account.

Be pleased to order a return of the Army to be sent me, specifying at what time the Militia of the different Colonies, have arrived, that I may transmit it to Congress the soonest possible.

I shall this day order a party from hence, to repair the road as far as Fort Edward. I am informed that it is almost impassable.

Be so good as to order a return of the provisions with the Army to be sent to me as expeditiously as possible.

I am extremely happy to learn that all goes well with you. I find it does so in the Naval Department; and hope that it will soon be so formidable as effectually to prevent the enemy from even attempting to cross the Lakes.

I enclose you copies of two letters just now received from Governour Trumbull. You will perceive the sail-cloth and part of the cordage is purchased, and I suppose now on the way to Skenesborough. It is probable that the Hessians are arrived at Staten-Island; if so, we must soon expect to hear of a battle.

It is said that chevaux-de-frise are sunk about ten miles above New-York, and that they so effectually stop the channel as to prevent large vessels from passing. If so, the two on this side now will not be able to return.

Previous to our speech to the Six-Nations, two of their chiefs called upon us, to request that we should condole with them on the death of a chief warrior killed at the Cedars or by Major Sherburne's party. We resented the request with indignation, and informed them that we expected they should take the hatchet out of our heads and bury it. They have done this, and made concessions for their conduct. I do not believe they will molest our frontier inhabitants, though some few may possibly join Carleton.

As soon as I have arranged matters here, I propose to pay you a visit. I do not believe that the ague will stick to me any time. Adieu, my dear sir.

I am, affectionately and very sincerely, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates, &c., &c., &c.

P. S. I enclose a commission for Lieutenant-Colonel Wood, which please to deliver, and be so good as to congratulate him on the promotion.

Please to show General Arnold the extract of my letter of the 6th to General Washington.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Just after I had closed my letter of this day's date, yours of the 1st instant was delivered me by Mesnard. I have not had time to speak to Mr. Traverse.

We have people in every part of the country trying to procure the necessary articles for the Army and Navy, and they shall be forwarded without delay.

The General's letter to you was enclosed in that to Congress, and a copy of it sent to me; but as I judged it was by mistake, I took the liberty to substitute the copy for the original, and now enclose you the letter, together with yours to him.

I wish you had sent to Saratoga for anything you stood in need of. I shall immediately order my overseer to send a constant supply of what he has, and order Lieutenant Van Vechten, who commands the party there, to send a man with it to St. George, and Colonel Gansevoort another to deliver it to you, otherwise you will receive very little of what is sent.

Adieu, my dear sir, and believe me, affectionately, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

H. GLEN TO WALTER LIVINGSTON.

Schenectady, August 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Whereas I have now two companies of batteau-men come down from Fort Stanwix, and have General Schuyler's orders to load them with flour, and find that I will not be able to load the boats at present unless I have the flour you yesterday engaged from Mr. Tobias Ten Eyck, which he was to send to Fort George. I have been with him. He tells me he cannot let me have it unless I produce an order from you. Mr. Ten Eyck tells me he will expect to get the very same price for the flour as the merchants get at Albany. I shall expect your answer this evening.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

H. GLEN.

To W. Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General.

P. S. I would be glad to know what I must give for peas.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER AT FORT STANWIX,
DATED AUGUST 17, 1776.

Part of the Third Battalion of New-Jersey troops being stationed here about three weeks ago, it was thought proper to send a Sergeant and four men to reconnoitre towards Oswego; but Ensign Isaiah Younglove being desirous to go, went in the room of the Sergeant; and having travelled about sixty miles, the party was fired on early one morning by a party of ten Indians, but their guns being wet, (it having rained the preceding night,) they could not return the fire. The Ensign and another, after repeatedly priming, at length discharged their pieces. They were then directed by the Ensign to fix their bayonets, who at that instant received a ball in his lungs and fell. Notwithstanding, he ordered his men to advance, and, laying on his back, loaded and shot one of the Indians dead. But two of his men being killed, he desired the others to flee, telling them he could not live more than five minutes, and that it was a pity they should expose their own lives. The surviving two came off and gave us the above account.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 17, 1776.

GENERAL GATES: At the time that General Arnold was here he informed me that he thought there was some quarter-deck plank seasoned, which, if they are to be had, I wish you may send them to this as soon as possible, which I shall take as a great favour.

Am, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

P. S. I am informed there are no deck-nails at Ticonderoga, therefore I am going to send this moment an express to Albany to have them forwarded with all speed.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The very last batteaus and oars are now going off with Captain Gray's company and the tents, and if other companies should arrive it would be impossible to forward them to Ticonderoga. I should be extremely glad your Honour would order some forwarded here as soon as may be convenient.

I am, dear General, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

P. S. We are obliged to employ twelve boats constantly in Wood Creek.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WATERBURY.

Tyonderoga, August 17, 1776.

SIR: This is accompanied by twenty batteaus, with one hundred men, in order to bring forward such of the Massachusetts troops together with any tents that may be already arrived at Skenesborough, and must beg you will not allow either the above troops or tents to remain with you after their arrival longer than is absolutely necessary. I am sorry I have it not in my power to forward you any seasoned plank, as we have not a foot here at present, but expect some daily, when it shall be immediately forwarded.

I am, sir, your very obedient, humble servant.

By order of the General:

WALTER STEWART, Aid-de-Camp.

To the Hon. General Waterbury.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL GANSEVOORT.

Tyonderoga, August 17, 1776.

SIR: You will order the Commissary at your post immediately to receive into his store the rum and brandy brought there by the bearer, Mr. Isaac Arnott. The Commissary will give his receipt to Mr. Arnott for the quantity and quality, and General Schuyler will settle the account with the bearer. I have by this conveyance ordered the Deputy Commissary-General here to write to your Commissary to acquaint him when it will be necessary to send more rum here.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Gansevoort.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 17, 1776—Saturday night, } eight o'clock. }

DEAR GENERAL: About two o'clock this afternoon, Colonel Hartley acquainted me that a party of his men, who were posted seven miles down the Lake as a covering party to the oar makers, had made a large fire as a signal that the enemy were approaching. I sent Colonel Hartley, with one hundred men, to secure the retreat of the party, if attacked, and ordered the two light schooners down the Lake to cover them. They were no sooner under weigh, than Commodore Wynkoop fired a shot, and brought them to, and soon after sent me a note, (copy of which I enclose, with my order to the Captains of the schooners, and answer to the Commodore's note.) I waited some time, expecting the vessels to sail; but finding they did not, went on board the Commodore, when he ordered them under sail. He refuses to be commanded by any one, and imagines his appointment (which is by General Schuyler) cannot be superseded. I have shown him such parts of your instructions as I thought necessary, which has brought him so far to reason. He says, if you think proper to turn him out, he will quit the vessel. I have given him to understand that I shall at all events pursue your orders, and that if he did not incline to remain in the service, he would not be compelled to it. Colonel Hartley is not yet returned.

I am, with sentiments of respect and esteem, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

Crown-Point, August 17, 1776.

SIR: You will immediately get your vessels under sail, and proceed down the Lake seven or eight miles. If you make any discovery of the enemy, you will immediately give me notice; if none, return as soon as possible.

B. ARNOLD, Brigadier-General.

To Captain Seaman.

On board the Royal Savage, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I find, by an order you have given out, that the schooners are to go down the Lake. I know no orders but what shall be given out by me, except sailing orders from the Commander-in-Chief. If an enemy is approaching, I am to be acquainted with it, and know how to act in my station. I am, sir, yours,

JACOBUS WYNKOOP,
Commander of Lake Champlain.

SIR: I am surprised that you pretend to contradict my orders to the Captains of the schooners at this time, when we are alarmed by a signal of the approach of the enemy; and much more so, as I acquainted you some time since that the Commander-in-Chief had appointed me to take command of the Navy on the Lake. Had I not received this appointment, from my rank in the Army, and as Commander-in-Chief of this post, it is your duty to obey my orders, which you have received and executed for some time past. You surely must be out of your senses to say no orders shall be obeyed but yours. Do you imagine that Congress have given you a superior command over the Commander-in-Chief, or that you are not to be under his direction? If you do, give me leave to say you are much mistaken; and if you do not suffer my orders to be immediately complied with by sending to the Captains of the schooners to obey them, I shall be under the disagreeable necessity of convincing you of your error, by immediately arresting you.

B. ARNOLD,

Brigadier-General, and Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet on Lake Champlain.

To Commodore J. Wynkoop.

COMMODORE WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I have understood that General Arnold is to have the command of the Navy; and if that be so, he ought to have shown me his power to it; but instead of that, he sent an order for two of the schooners to get under weigh and go down the Lake, upon some information he says he had of the approach of the enemy. Was it not his duty to have communicated it to me, and my orders to have been given to the vessels? I have contradicted them, till he acquainted me with some accounts of the enemy, and then I immediately issued out my orders for them to go down. Sir, if that be the case, I would be glad of my dismissal from the service, for I accepted of this command upon these conditions. Major-General Schuyler has a letter which I brought up to him from Congress, that no man was to take the command from me; and when he had read the letter, he told me I need not to fear, that no one should have it but me; and the Congress of New-York promised me that if any one should arrive here authorized to take the command by the honourable Continental Congress, I was to be dismissed the service, and have the command of one of the frigates building up the North River, for I am resolved to go under command of no man. I will receive general orders to sail, and how far, and will obey the Commander-in-Chief's orders; but if I have the command, I expect to give orders to the Captains of the fleet when I receive them from the Commander-in-Chief. I refer your Honour to a copy of my warrant, a copy of Major-General Schuyler's letter, and his orders, here enclosed.

Sir, if you find my grievance well founded, I hope your Honour will be pleased to redress it.

I am, sir, with all due respect, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

JACOBUS WYNKOOP, Commander.

CAPTAIN EDDY TO GENERAL GATES.

Williamstown, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I am requested by Captain Eddy, Commander of a company of ship carpenters from Rhode-Island, to inform that said Captain and company having been exposed to take the small-pox on their march from Rhode-Island, (as the General will see by the enclosed,) have since been inoculated, and are now sick with said disorder in said Williamstown; and that he (Captain Eddy) being taken with a violent dysentery, despairs of life; but still anxious for the welfare of his soldiers, desires the General to do something for them. They having received but one month's advance pay, have not money sufficient for their march to Skenesborough, in case the General, upon information, should give orders for said march; neither a sufficiency to return to Rhode-Island when discounted with their doctoring and nursing. Said carpenters' utensils, being their own property, are now at Skenesborough, they will be out of business in case of return. Ten of said company having formerly had the small-pox, are gone forward; the remainder may safely march in eight days. I send enclosed the resolve of the Committee of Safety of Williamstown, as also a line Captain Eddy received from Brigadier-General Waterbury. General Gates's orders per the express, Mr. Joseph Skinner, will lay a particular obligation on Captain Eddy and company, and much oblige your humble servant,

WM. PAGE,

Per order Captain Eddy.

N. B. The General will please to inquire of the bearer for particulars.

Skenesborough, August 12, 1776.

I have received a line from General Gates concerning you who have been inoculated, which I will communicate to you: "The companies of ship carpenters from Rhode-Island, who have been inoculated at Williamstown, should be discharged, and not suffered to come forward." The foregoing are the words of the General. I think as much as to say you are not to come in the service; we don't intend to let any one come into this place that has lately had the small-pox, (for you know that has been the bane of our Northern Army,) and we have got it out of this place and Ticonderoga, and we are determined to use every precaution to keep it clear; and for men to go and inoculate, and presume to come here among fresh troops, we think it monstrous.

DAVID WATERBURY, JR.,

Brigadier-General.

To the Captain and Company of Carpenters at Williamstown.

Williamstown, August 4, 1776.

At a meeting of the Committee of Safety, &c., of this Town,

Resolved, That whereas we are informed that Captain Eddy, from Providence, in the Colony of Rhode-Island, with thirty-nine of his men, now in the Continental service, having been exposed to the small-pox, and having since then taken it by inoculation, without our knowledge, and said men appearing to us to be under necessity of immediate care taken, and provision made for their sickness, we do hereby give orders that the house belonging to Ephraim Seely, which stands near said Seely's saw-mill, shall be repaired and made convenient for their reception; and that David Noble be appointed to put said house in order, and to make provision and provide suitable diet for said company, from the time they go into said house till they each of them shall obtain certificates from their Doctors of their being sufficiently cleansed from said disorder. And said company to depart to said pest house next Wednesday morning, and not to return into the town till after cleansing.

And for the further preventing all inconveniences which may arise,

It is Resolved, That Mr. Samuel Kellogg, and William Horseford, and Daniel Stratten, be a Committee to give their attendance at the time of each man's cleansing, and be fully satisfied that they are fully and well cured and cleaned, and may safely depart. And this Committee strictly enjoin and order that no one of the aforesaid infected persons shall come or go within the distance of thirty rods of any dwelling-house, or town or country road.

Given under our hands, this 4th day of August, A. D. 1776.

Per order: ISAAC STRATTON, Committee's Clerk.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO NATHANIEL SHAW, JUN.

Lebanon, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I have before me your letter of this day. Have advised Captain Hinman to go on a cruise.

The Tories who are left prisoners in the care of the Committee of New-London, will be duly taken care off till further orders are given, which will be sent early next week, probably Wednesday or Thursday next. My Council will be with me next Tuesday noon, when that business will be attended to. They are not to be admitted to correspond with our enemies. The instructions sent with them to be observed.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., New-London.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 9, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Jed. Elderkin, Nath. Wales, Jun., Wm. Hillhouse, Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table, for two months' billeting for the Forces in the Colony service at Fairfield, under command of Lieutenant John Mills.

Order delivered Lieutenant Mills this day.

Voted, That the Selectmen of the Town of Fairfield have liberty, at the expense of the Town, to take two of the Colony's Cannon, now at the Furnace at Salisbury, for the use of the Fort at Fairfield, viz: one twelve-pounder and one eighteen-pounder, if such may be had; if not, then two twelve-pounders, and also one ton of Shot suitable for the Cannon in said Fort, to be improved in said Fort till further orders of the General Assembly, or the Governour and Committee of Safety. And that if the Assembly or Governour, &c., shall see fit to order said two pieces of Cannon to any other use during the present contest, the expense of transporting said Cannon, &c., to be paid by the Colony to said Town. And the Overseers of said Furnace are directed to deliver said Cannon and Shot accordingly.

Copy delivered Lieutenant John Mills, 9th August, 1776.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 10, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Jed. Elderkin, Wm. Hillhouse, Nath. Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

Ordered a number of Prisoners sent here by the Committee of Albany, as inimical to the United States of America, to be confined at the Jail in New-London, and none of them to go abroad, excepting under a trusty guard, and that by land, and to no more than one-half mile distance from the Jail; and gave a mittimus to the Sheriff of New-London County, with directions accordingly.

Also wrote to the Convention of New-York, and to the Committee of Albany, on the subject of supporting and confining their Prisoners in this Colony.

Drew an Order on the Pay-Table for £10, in favour of Ensign John Fisk, of Colonel Elmer's Battalion, to enable him to support his party of Prisoners, sent here by him from the Committee of Albany, and the same to be repaid by Mr. Fisk, or the Committee of Albany, into the hands of Mr. Jonathan Trumbull, Jun.

Order delivered to John Fisk, August 10, 1776.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 11, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Jed. Elderkin, Wm. Hillhouse, Nath. Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

Voted and Ordered, That Messrs. Doolittle & Co., owners of the Powder-Mill in New-Haven, deliver one thousand pounds weight of the Colony's Powder in their hands, to the Selectmen of New-Haven, as Town stock, and take their receipt to account for the same. (Copy delivered Mr. Samuel Thatcher, August 11, 1776.)

His Honour the Governour, by advice of Council, gave orders to the Commanding Officers of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-Second, and Twenty-Third Regiments of Militia, in this State, to march immediately to New-York, and there put themselves under command of General Washington, until the present exigency is over.

Voted, That the Militiamen, who are now ordered to New-York to be under the command of General Washington, shall receive 20s. per man, in advance, towards their wages, and the Committee of Pay-Table are directed immediately to send a Paymaster, to pay the same to each man accordingly.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 12, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington,

Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, Wm. Hillhouse, Nathl. Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table, in favour of Jesse Root, Esq., for £3,600, as Paymaster of the advance wages of the Officers and Men of the Second, Fourth, Ninth, Tenth, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Regiments of Militia, in this Colony, now ordered on duty to New-York, to be by him paid out at the rate of 20s. per man, into the hands of the Commanding Officers of each Regiment. Also, that an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table, in favour of the Commanding Officers of the First, Sixth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-Third Regiments of Militia, equal to 20s. per man, that shall march with them to New-York, upon the application at the Pay-Table for the same. Also, that an Order be given to the Pay-Table to draw out of the Treasury £300, and send it by some trusty person to the Commanding Officer of the Twenty-Second Regiment, with orders to pay to said Commanding Officer, 20s. for each man in his Regiment, that shall march with him to New-York. The above moneys to be accounted for by the persons who receive the same to pay out as aforesaid.

Orders drawn August 12th, 1776, and delivered to Jesse Root, Esquire.

Gave an Order on Captain Samuel Squire, of Fairfield, in favour of Captain Seth Harding, for the Brig Defence, for forty barrels of Pork, and forty barrels of Beef, forty bushels of Beans and Peas and forty bushels of Indian Corn, for the use of the Brig Defence.

Order delivered Captain Harding, August 12, 1776.

Gave an order on Captain Samuel Squire, in favour of Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., for sixty barrels of Pork, for the Colony's use.

Order delivered Captain Harding.

Orders were given to Captain Harding, of the Colony's Brig Defence, to cruise against the enemies of the United American States, as soon as fitted to sail, for the space of about eight weeks, and to use every precaution in his power and discretion, to cause any prize he may take to be brought into some port of the United States, and there secured and condemned; and after said cruise is ended, to return to his place of rendezvous.

Gave an Order on the Pay-Table, in favour of Captain John McCall, of the Veteran Guards, of the Twentieth Regiment of Militia, now ordered to New-York, on publick service, for 20s. advance wages, for each soldier that shall march under his command, to be computed agreeable to the number of soldiers he shall certify the Company which marches under his command to consist of.

Order given 12th August, 1776, and delivered to Captain McCall.

Gave orders to Captain McCall, of the Veteran Guards, in the Twentieth Regiment, to march immediately with his Company, and as many more as will enlist, to the number of ninety-three, including Officers, to join the Nineteenth Regiment, and put themselves under General Washington, until the present emergency is over, and until duly discharged.

Orders delivered Captain McCall, 12th August.

Voted, That Oliver Wolcott, Esq., be, and he is hereby appointed a Brigadier-General of the Militia of this State, now ordered to march to New-York to reinforce the Army under the command of General Washington; and his Honour the Governour is desired to commissionate him accordingly.

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table for £180, in favour of Captain Seth Warner, of Saybrook, to enable him to raise a crew of forty seamen for the Naval service of the United States of America, on the Lakes to the northward. They are to receive a bounty of £6 for Inlisting; for finding themselves Blankets, 12s.; Guns, 6s.; and Cartouch-Boxes, and Belts, and Knapsacks, 2s.; and one month's wages, being 48s., advanced, according to Proclamation; said Warner to lodge a bond with surety for his faithful use of the money.

Order drawn 13th August, 1776, and delivered Captain Warner.

A number of Letters were written and sent in answer to Letters from General Schuyler, General Gates, the Paymaster, &c. Sent by Brown, the post-rider.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 14, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, Nath. Wales, Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

His Honour the Governour appointed Mr. Young Ledyard a Lieutenant of Matrosses in the Company at Groton, under command of Captain William Ledyard, instead of who resigned.

Voted and Ordered, That the pay of the Officers and Privates in the Companies of Matrosses in Colonel Erastus Wolcott's Regiment shall be the same as the other Officers and Privates of the same Regiment, excepting Gunners, whose pay was on the 9th of July last determined to be 44s. per month.

Voted, To draw an Order on the Committee of Pay-Table for the sum of £150, in favour of Nathaniel Miner, Esq., Commissary of the Company at Stonington, and to be on account.

Order drawn and delivered Nathaniel Miner, Esquire, August 14.

Captain John McCall, of the Company of Veteran Guards in Norwich, exhibited to this Board a Return of his Officers and men, who furnished and equipped themselves in pursuance of a Proclamation from his Honour the Governour, by advice of his Council of Safety, on the 6th day of May last, to stand ready to march at a minute's warning to the defence of this and the neighbouring States; by which Return there appears to be due to said Company the sum of £16 15s., which is allowed; and voted to draw an Order on the Pay-Table for said sum of £16 15s. in favour of said Captain John McCall, as Paymaster to his Company, for the same.

Order drawn and delivered Captain McCall 14th August.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 15, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, Wm. Hillhouse, Nath. Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

The Governour gave an order to Doctor Thomas Russell, of Colonel Swift's Regiment, in the words following, viz:

“GENTLEMEN: As our people in the Northern Army are in want of proper medicines, which cannot at this time be had there for the use of our troops, I have judged it necessary to furnish Dr. Thomas Russell with a small quantity of such articles as are needful for the present, and desire you to furnish the Doctor with such as he shall apply for, and send me the invoice of the same; for which an order in your favour on the Treasurer will be sent to you.

“I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

“To Messrs. Smith & Coit, Hartford.”

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £400 in favour of Doctor Joshua Elderkin, to enable him to purchase Tents and Clothing for the Continental Army in the Northern Department, to be paid out of the moneys lodged in the Treasury by Mr. Sherman for that purpose, if any there be, otherwise to be paid out of the proper Treasury of this Colony, and to render his account.

Order drawn and delivered Nathaniel Wales, Jun., August 15, 1776.

Voted, To allow 26s. on the account of Captain Edmund Badger, for hire of horse and damage done him by John Van Aulin, an express from General Washington to Boston, July 3, 1776.

Order drawn and delivered Mr. Wales, August 15, 1776.

Voted and Resolved, That John Munro and Henry Van Schaick, two of the prisoners sent into this State by the Committee of Albany County in the State of New-York, under accusation, viz: said Munro of inlisting soldiers for the Ministerial Army and being an officer, said Van Schaick of being a disaffected person, corresponding with the Tories in Connecticut, with a desire that they may be safely kept in this State, be sent to East Haddam, there to reside under their parole of honour that they will continue in the place or places of their residence, and not depart more than two miles from the same, nor cross Connecticut River if within two miles of the same; and that they will not, directly or indirectly, correspond by message, writing, or otherwise, with the enemies of the United States of America, or any person or persons within said States inimical, or reputed inimical, to the liberties of the same; and that they will neither do nor say anything in prejudice of the interests of said United States, or in opposition to the Acts and Resolves of the Continental Congress, the General Assembly of this State, or any Provincial Assembly, Convention, or Congress, or of the measures pursued or pursuing by them or by their order; and that they will not associate or hold correspondence with any prisoner or prisoners of war of said United States, nor send or receive any letter or billet to or from any person or persons whatsoever without first submitting such letter or billet to the inspection and observation of the Committee of Inspection of said East Haddam, or some of them, and receiving their approbation of such letter or billet and consent that the same may be sent; and that said Committee of East Haddam be desired and directed to take the oversight of said Munro and Van Schaick, and observe how they keep their parole; and that in case they find that said parole is broken in any respect by said Munro and Van Schaick, or either of them, that they immediately arrest them, the said Munro and Van Schaick, and them hold in safe custody until they give notice thereof to his Honour the Governour and receive his further orders thereon.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 16, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jz. Huntington, Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathl. Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, That an Order be drawn in favour of Captain James Rice for £672 6s. 5d., on the Pay-Table, in balance of his Accounts rendered to this time.

Order drawn and delivered Captain Rice.

Voted, To draw an Order in favour of Captain David Hawley for £180, to enable him to raise a crew of Seamen for the Naval service of the United States of America on the Lakes to the northward; to which service he is appointed a Captain. Said money to be disposed of by him in the same ways and manner as was directed to Captain Warner on the 13th instant.

Order drawn the 16th of August, and delivered Captain Hawley.

Voted, To draw an Order in favour of Captain Frederick Chappell, of New-Haven, for the sum of £180, to enable him to raise a crew of Seamen for the Naval service of the United States of America on the Lakes to the northward; to which service he is appointed a Captain. Said money to be disposed of by him in the same ways and manner as was directed to Captain Warner on the 13th instant.

Order drawn the 16th of August, and delivered Captain Chappell.

Voted, To draw an Order on the Pay-Table for the sum of £50, in favour of Captain Walter Hyde, of the Independent Company under his command, for the advance wages of 20s. per man before they march.

Whereas the enemies of these States have frequent intercourse with the inhabitants of Block-Island, and there is great danger of their giving them intelligence that may be prejudicial to these States: It is therefore Voted and Resolved, That from and after the 20th day of August instant, no Boat from Block-Island be permitted to enter into any creek, inlet, or harbour, in this State; and that in case any such Boat shall put into any such creek, inlet, or harbour, the same shall be seized and detained in safe custody, with the persons on board the same. And the Commanding Officer of the troops at the different Forts on the sea-coast of this State, and all the Captains and chief officers of any armed vessels in the service of this State, are ordered and required to take effectual care that this resolve be carried into execution; and in case of seizure, the person or persons making the same, are directed to give immediate notice to his Honour the Governour, and receive his further orders touching the same; and that this resolve continue in force until the General Assembly or this Board order otherwise.

A copy was sent to the Commanding Officer of the Forts at New-London, August 17, 1776, by hand of N. Huntington.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £2,168 12s. 5d., lawful money, in favour of Captain Charles Walker, of New-Providence, it being for the purchase of a large Bermudian built Sloop, for the use of an armed vessel.

Order drawn and delivered Charles Walker, August 16, 1776.

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table in favour of Captain Adam Shapley for £63 8s., for the bounty and first month's wages of his men, now inlisted into his Company—he lodging, or causing to be lodged, a proper bond, in due form, for his faithful use and accounting for such money as he shall draw out of the Treasury.

Order delivered Nathaniel Richards 16th of August.

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table for £50, in favour of Major John Ely, to be accounted for upon settling his Accounts with the Pay-Table.

Order drawn and delivered Nathaniel Richards 16th of August.

Voted, That Mr. Hosmer is desired to employ some suitable person to apply to the Furnaces for a sufficient number of Pots and Receivers, of proper size and construction, for making Sulphur, and to take the directions of Mr. Thomas Bidwell therein, as far as will be needful, and to do what shall be prudent and proper in the procuring such Pots, &c., as soon as possible; and as the number and size ordered by the Assembly cannot be obtained, he is directed to procure such as can be had, and send so many as to answer the same purpose.

Voted, That the Sheriff of New-London County be, and he is hereby, directed to suffer the Prisoners from the State of New-York, now confined in Norwich Jail, to take the air abroad one or two days in each week for their health, under the Sheriff's own personal attendance and keeping, and that they may in the daytime have the liberty of walking in the Jail yard, at the discretion of the Sheriff.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 17, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jz. Huntington, Titus Hosmer, William Hillhouse, Nathl. Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, That his Honour the Governour be desired to order the Pay-Table to draw on the Treasurer, in favour of any one or two persons he shall approve to take charge of an armed vessel or vessels on the Lake, agreeable to the request of Major-General Schuyler, for £180, lawful money, each, to enable them to pay the Bounty, Premium for Guns and Bayonets, and first month's pay to the Seamen they may inlist.

Voted, To allow the Captains and Recruiting Officers now ordered to raise crews of Seamen for the service on the Lakes to the northward, the sum of 8s., lawful money, for each man they shall so inlist, for their expense in attending said business.

Voted, That Henry Billings, of Norwich, be, and he is, appointed a Third Lieutenant of the armed brig Defence, belonging to this State, and first Prize-Master for the cruise on which said brig is now ordered. His wages to cease on condemnation of the first Prize, or at the end of said cruise.

N. B. This was voted at a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 20, 1776.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO MESHECH WEARE.

Council Chamber, Watertown, August 17, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: The enclosed letter came this day, under cover from Major Hawley, of Northampton; and as the matter therein alleged, if pursued, will have a tendency entirely to defeat the important purposes for which the Northern Army is raised, and as Charlestown lies within your State, we have no doubt you will take such speedy and effectual measures for remedying the mischief complained of as your wisdom shall direct.

In the name of the Council, I am, with great respect, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

To the President of the State of New-Hampshire.

ELEAZER RUSSELL TO MESHECH WEARE.

Portsmouth, August 17, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: A subject important to me now leads me to address you, for which I beg your indulgence, and that you will please to lay the matter before the honourable Committee of Safety.

On the 4th of May last, Colonel Wentworth, of the Committee for the town of Portsmouth, brought me the Association to subscribe, at a time I was so ill as to be incapable of anything. Upon growing better, I thought largely of the matter, and finding my mind perplexed, wrote to him on the subject; which letter, at my request, he consented to lay before the Committee of Safety.

Till yesterday, I never knew but the Association paper, with my letter, had been in the Committee's hands for more than two months, and now find myself bound by every principle of honour, duty, and gratitude, to enlarge upon the affair.

It was and is merely to secure the morality of my mind that I was reluctant to put my name to it. Solemnly to bind myself to the performance of what nature and necessity rendered impossible, I started at the thought of. And though my health is mended, so wretched are my nerves that I could not do one hour's military duty to save my life. The article of shedding human blood, in me is not a humour, but a principle; not an evasion but a fact. It was received in early life, and has grown with my growth and strengthened with my strength. Not a partiality for British more than savage blood; for, all circumstances considered, I think the latter more innocent than the former.

From the first injuries done America by Great Britain, my thoughts took fire on the subject, and have been conceived and uttered in one unvaried strain, to the highest personage and down to the lowest enemy, without hesitation or reserve, so that I can challenge all mankind to impeach me to my country.

To enlarge on the matter in my own favour would be easy, but might appear indelicate, and to be wholly silent in the case would be criminal; therefore, leaving my conduct to be judged of by persons of liberal sentiments and sensibility of mind, I am, with the greatest respect, honourable sir, your obliged and dutiful humble servant,

E. RUSSELL.

To the Honourable Colonel Weare.

Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, August 17, 1776.

By Captain Ladd, who arrived here in eighteen days from Cape Nichola Mole, we are informed that the fleet of sugar ships was to sail the 2d of August from Jamaica, under convoy of one twenty-gun ship. That a French ship convoyed him through the windward passage, and informed him France and Spain had declared war against Portugal.

SILAS DEANE TO THE COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Paris, August 18, 1776.

I wrote you every material occurrence to the time of my leaving Bordeaux, and sent duplicates by Captains Palmer, Bunker, and Seaver, one of which you will undoubtedly have received before this comes to hand. I left that city on the last of June, and arrived here on the Saturday following, having carefully attended to everything in the manufacturing or commercial towns in my way, which, indeed, are neither numerous nor of great consequence. I spent at Angouleme a day in viewing what, as to manufactures alone, deserves attention on the journey, the foundry for cannon, where the greatest part of those used in the Kingdom are manufactured. The cannon are cast solid, after which they are put as in a turner's lathe, and bored out, and the outside smoothed and turned at pleasure. They can bore and complete a twelve-pounder in one day in each lathe, which takes four men only to work. The workmen freely showed me every part of their furnace and foundry.

On Monday after my arrival I waited on my bankers, and found that Mr. Bancroft had arrived the same day with me, Mr. Thomas Morris and M. Venzonals about ten days before. I waited on M. Dubourg, and delivered him Dr. Franklin's letter, which gave the good gentleman the most sincere and real pleasure.

M. Penet, on his arrival in Paris, waited on M. Dubourg, showed him a copy of his contract with the Committee of Congress, and told him he had letters from Dr. Franklin to him, but had left them on the road, or at Rotterdam, through fear of a search. He told M. Dubourg, to whom he was a perfect stranger, so many particular circumstances, that he could not doubt of his sincerity, and in consequence he embarked in his affairs to a large amount. Five or six weeks have now passed without the arrival of the letters said to be left on the road. Arms, powder, &c., to a large amount were in readiness, when my arrival gave him confidence that I would take the burden off him, as he doubted not that my credentials would be explicit. I saw immediately the arrangement of the whole, and that M. Penet had returned to France (copy of the contract excepted) almost as empty-handed as he came to Philadelphia, yet had found means to collect a very considerable quantity of stores, part of which he had actually shipped. This circumstance gave me hopes; yet I found that it would now be expected I should become responsible for the articles, which embarrassed me much, since to detain them would be quite disagreeable, and to step out of my own line and involve myself with Messrs. Plairne and Penet's contract would be equally so.

M. Penet had somehow got intelligence of my being in France, and that I was expected at Paris; he therefore waited for me, and I saw him the next day at my hotel, when he complained of want of remittances, and desired me to pledge my credit for the stores, which I waived in the best manner I could, for I saw the consequences might involve me in many difficulties, and frustrate my greater designs. I therefore told him I would certify to the merchants, if necessary, that the Congress would pay for whatever stores they would credit them with, and in the mean time advised him to proceed strictly agreeable to the letter of the contract, and I was positive that the Congress would fulfil their part of it. I finally satisfied both him and M. Dubourg, and he departed for Nantes, to ship the goods the next day. I must do him the justice that is his due: he has been indefatigable in the business, his heart seems to be entirely in it, and I believe him honest; but his connexions, either commercial or political, are not, of themselves, equal to such an undertaking, but the cause he was employed in had in a great measure, I found, supplied this deficiency, which was to me a favourable appearance.

M. Dubourg told me that the Ministers would not see me, as they meant to be quite secret in any countenance they gave the United Colonies, and that my arrival in France was already known in London, in consequence of which Lord Stormont arrived express but a few days before, and had applied to the Court on the subject. I showed him my commission, and told him I was determined to apply, for every circumstance, in my opinion, was favourable instead of otherwise. On this he wrote a letter to Count de Vergennes, asking liberty to introduce me the Thursday following; on which day I went to Versailles, and though the letter had not been delivered to his Excellency, yet he gave us immediate admission. Fortunately his chief Secretary spoke English well, by which means I had an opportunity of conversing freely with him on the subject of my commission for two hours, and was attentively and favourably heard by him, and was asked many questions, which shows that the American disputes had been, and still were, a principal object of attention. I pursued nearly the line marked out by my instructions, stating the importance of the American commerce, and the advantages Great Britain had received from a monopoly of it; that all intercourse ceasing between the two countries, the Colonies had considered where they might dispose of that produce which they necessarily had so large a surplus of, and receive for their raw or first materials the various manufactures they wanted; that they first turned their eyes on France, as the best country in Europe for them to be connected with in commerce; that I was purchasing a large quantity of manufactures for which I expected to pay the money, and that I should want a quantity of military stores, for which remittances would be made; that I doubted not the Colonies had before this declared Independency, and that I should soon receive instructions in consequence more full and explicit; that in the mean time they were very anxious to know how such a declaration would be received by the Powers in Europe, particularly by France, and whether in such case an Ambassador would be received from them, &c. To which he replied, that the importance of the American commerce was well known, and that no country could so well supply the Colonies, and in return receive their produce, as France; it was, therefore, the interest of both to have the most free and uninterrupted intercourse, for which reason the Court had ordered their ports to be kept open, and equally free to America as to Britain; that, considering the good understanding between the two Courts of Versailles and London, they could not openly encourage the shipping of warlike stores, but no obstruction of any kind would be given; if there should, as the custom-houses were not fully in their secrets in this matter, such obstructions should be removed on the first application; that I must consider myself perfectly free to carry on any kind of commerce in the kingdom which any subject of any other State in the world might, as the Court had resolved their ports should be equally free to both parties; that I was under his immediate protection, and should I meet with any difficulty, either from their police, with the rules of which he supposed me unacquainted, or from any other quarter, I had but to apply to him, and everything should be settled; that as to Independency, it was an event in the womb of time, and it would be highly improper for him to say anything on that subject until it had actually taken place; meantime he informed me that the British Ambassador knew of my arrival, and therefore advised me not to associate with Englishmen more than I was from necessity obliged, as he doubted not I should have many spies on my conduct.

I then told him the precautions I had taken and should persevere in, in coming from Bermuda, and that I did not mean in publick to pass for other than a merchant from that Island, on speculation, during the present cessation of commerce in America; but at the same time I told his Excellency that I was well assured it was known in London that I was coming long before I arrived at Paris, and I doubted not they conjectured my errand, but at the same time I should take every precaution in my power; and most sincerely thanked him for his protection and assistance so generously offered, which he might depend I would never abuse. He was pleased with my having come by Bermuda, and passing as an inhabitant of that Island, and said, if questioned, he should speak of me in that character. He then asked me many questions with respect to the Colonies; but what he seemed most to want to be assured of, was their ability to subsist without their fisheries, and under the interruption of their commerce. To this I replied in this manner: that the fisheries were never carried on but by a part of the Colonies, and by them, not so much as a means of subsistence as of commerce; that the fishery failing, those formerly employed in them turned part to agriculture and part to the army and navy; that our commerce must for some time be in a great measure suspended, but that the greater part of our importations were far from being necessities of life, consequently we should not suffer under the want of them, whilst it was not wealth or luxuries that we were contending for; that our commerce ceasing, it would be out of the power of our enemies to support themselves on our plunder, and on the other hand, our ships, as privateers, might harass their commerce without a possibility of their retaliating; that I hoped to see a considerable marine force in the Colonies, and that, joined to the impossibility of Britain's guarding so extensive a coast, would preserve some of our commerce, until it should be thought an object deserving the protection of other Powers.

After many questions on this subject, he put this, in which I thought he seemed interested,—whether, if the Colonies declare an Independency, they would not differ among themselves? To this I replied, that the greatest harmony had as yet subsisted, and I had no grounds to doubt it in future; that the common danger, which first drove them into measures which must end in such a declaration, would subsist, and that alone was sufficient to ensure their union.

He then desired me to give his Secretary my address, and said, though he should be glad to see me often, yet, as matters were circumstanced, his house was too public a place, but that I might put the same confidence in his Secretary as himself, to whom I might apply for advice and direction, but that whenever anything of importance occurred I need but inform him, and he would see me; but on common occasions, I must address the Secretary, which would be every way more convenient, as he understood the English language well, and was a person in whom the greatest confidence could be placed.

Having settled the mode of intercourse, I expressed the sense I had of his Excellency's politeness, and the generous protection he had given me; and on parting said, if my commission or the mode of introducing the subject were out of the usual course, I must rely on his goodness to make allowances for a new-formed people, in circumstances altogether unprecedented, and for their agent wholly unacquainted with Courts. To which he replied, that the people and their cause were very respectable in the eyes of all disinterested persons, and that the interview had been agreeable.

After this I returned to Paris with M. Dubourg, whose zeal for the American cause led him to draw the most favourable consequences from this beginning. The next day, while from home, I was informed that Count Laureguais had inquired out my lodgings, immediately after which he asked leave to go for England, which was refused him by the Court. The same day I was informed that Sir Hans Stanley and Sir Charles Jenkinson, who I knew were at Bordeaux when I left it, were in France for the sole purpose of inquiring what agents were here from the Colonies, and what commerce or other negotiation between them and the Colonies were carrying on. This alarmed my friends, and as I had agreed for other lodgings, to which I was next day to remove, M. Dubourg advised me to secrete both my lodgings and name. I told him that the Count Laureguais's conduct appeared mysterious, yet I could never think of keeping myself secret, for though I should not seek these gentlemen, nor throw myself purposely in their way, yet I must think it an ill compliment to Count Vergennes to suppose, after what had passed, that I was not on as good and safe footing in France as they or any other gentleman could be. However, his uneasiness made him write to the Count what he had advised, who returned for answer, that such a step was both unnecessary and impolitic, as it would only strengthen suspicions by giving everything an air of mystery, while there was not the least occasion for it.

The next day I had a fresh conference with M. Dubourg, who brought me a number of memorials from officers and engineers offering their services in America; some of whom, I believe, deserve the utmost encouragement; but more of this hereafter. While I was casting in my mind how best to improve the present favourable crisis for supplying the Colonies, M. Beaumarchais made proposals for procuring whatever should be wanted, but in such a manner as was understood by M. Dubourg to amount to a monopoly, which indeed was not his only objection, for M. Beaumarchais, though confessedly a man of abilities, had always been a man of pleasure and never of business; but as he was recommended by Count Vergennes, M. Dubourg could not avoid noticing him, but immediately expostulated with the Count in a letter, which brought on embarrassments no way favourable, and I saw that M. Dubourg was so far from seconding the views of his superior in this manœuvre, that he was, with the best intentions in the world, in danger of counteracting his own wishes, the extent of which were, to obtain the supplies of merchants and manufacturers on the credit of the Colonies, in which the strictest punctuality and most scrupulous exactness would be necessary, and which, under the present difficulties of remittance, I feared would not be lived up to.

As I had learned that in the late reform of the French Army, they had shifted their arms for those of a lighter kind, the heavy ones, most of which were the same as new, to the amount of seventy or eighty thousand, lay useless in magazines, with other military stores, in some such proportion, I apprehended it no way impossible to come at a supply from hence, through the agency of some merchant, without the Ministry being concerned in the matter. In such case the merchant would be accountable to the Ministry, and the Colonies to the merchant, by which means a greater time of payment might be given, and more allowance in case of our being disappointed. With this in view I went to Versailles on Wednesday, the 17th, and waited on M. Gerard, First Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and presented to him the enclosed memorial, which led to a very particular conversation on the affairs of America, and which I turned finally on this subject; to which he would not then give me any immediate answer, but promised me one in a day or two. Returning to town I found Messrs. Dubourg and Beaumarchais had a misunderstanding, the latter giving out that he could effect everything we wished for, and the former, from the known circumstances of M. Beaumarchais, and his known carelessness in money matters, suspecting he could procure nothing, and the more so as he promised so largely. They parted much displeased with each other, and M. Beaumarchais went directly to Versailles. On M. Dubourg's coming and informing me what had passed, I immediately wrote to M. Gerard the enclosed letter, and in return was desired to come with M. Dubourg the next morning to Versailles.

We went, as desired, and after explaining many things to M. Gerard, had a conference with his Excellency, from whom I had fresh assurances of the utmost freedom and protection in their ports and on their coasts; that, in one word, I might rely on whatever Monsieur Beaumarchais should engage in the commercial way of supplies, which, indeed, was all I wished for, as I was on the safe side of the question, viz: on the receiving part. I communicated to his Excellency that clause of my instructions for procuring arms, &c., of which he asked a copy. I then informed him, that I considered the present as a most critical juncture of American affairs, that the campaign would undoubtedly be carried far into the winter, that supplies now shipped might arrive very seasonably in the fall to enable the Colonies to hold out the present campaign. He replied, that no delay should be made by any obstruction of any officer, or others of the customs or police. He then told me that the Count Laureguais was, perhaps, a well meaning man, but not sufficiently discreet for such purposes as this; that Mr. Lee, (meaning Mr. Arthur Lee, of London,) had confided, he feared, too much in him, and wished me to caution him on the subject, and that if I would write to him, he would enclose it in a letter of his, by a courier that evening. I most readily embraced this safe way of corresponding, and sent a letter I had before written, with an addition on this subject, a copy of which is enclosed. I have thus given you the heads of my negotiation to this time, July 20th, and will not take up your time in making remarks on it, and the prospects before me, which are obvious; but inform you of the plan I mean to pursue, in the execution of my commission, and hint some methods, by which I think I may be enabled to complete every part of it to your satisfaction, and the relief of my country, which is all my wish, and the extent of my most ambitious hopes. I go on the supposition of an actual unconditional independency, without which little can be effected publicly; with it, almost everything we can wish for.

It is by no means probable that Europe will long remain in a state of peace; the disputes between Portugal and Spain are on the point of producing an open rupture; the former relies on England; the latter will look to this kingdom, and has already applied to this Court on the subject. Nothing but the division of Poland has taken the King of Prussia's attention off from the injustice done him by Great Britain at the close of the last war. He has now completed his part of that extraordinary work, and I am well informed, listens with pleasure to the dispute between the United Colonies and Great Britain. He is ambitious of becoming a maritime Power, and is already in possession of the capital ports on the Baltick; but without commerce it is impossible to effect the design, and no commerce can put him so directly in the road as the American. The consumption of coffee, sugar, and other West-India productions, increases fast in the north of Europe, and it must be his interest, at least, to supply his own dominions. In case of a war in Europe, France, Spain and Prussia might be brought into one interest, and the Emperor of Germany is too closely connected with his Majesty of France to take part against them, after which Great Britain, having her whole force employed in America, there could be nothing on the one hand to prevent Spain and France from reducing Portugal to a submission to the former, nor from Prussia and France subduing and incorporating into their own dominions Hanover, and the other little mercenary Electorates, which lie between them, and which for several centuries have been one principal cause of every war that has happened in Europe.

With respect to Russia, it is as closely allied to Prussia as to Great Britain, and may be expected to be master in the contest. Denmark and Sweden are a balance for each other, and opposites. Not to enlarge on this plan at present, I have only to suggest, that an application to the King of Prussia will do no harm, and may be attended with good and great consequences; the Prussian Ambassador at this Court and at that of London may be sounded on the subject. But my powers and instructions are so limited, that I can by no means take such a step; yet when I see Great Britain exerting her whole force, and that of her Allies, and courting every Power in Europe to aid her, I can but wish she may be counteracted in her own system, and by having employ found for her in Europe, bring her to leave America in peace; and I think myself bound in duty to hint at what to me seems the most probable means. Dr. Bancroft was full with me in this opinion. M. Chaumont, a very wealthy person, and Intendant for providing clothes, &c., &c., for the French Army, has offered me a credit on account of the Colonies, to the amount of one million of livres, which I have accepted. I have in treaty another credit, which, joined to this, will purchase the articles directed in my instructions. The credit will be until May next, before which I hope remittances will be made. I have purchased of said M. Chaumont a quantity of saltpetre, at ten sous, or five and one-fourth per cent., in order that Captain Morgan might not return empty. As soon as I have given the orders for despatching him, and settled some other matters here, I design for Dunkirk, to ship the Indian goods, which I hope may arrive in season for the winter supply; though I leave you to consider my situation, with only about six or seven thousand pounds to complete a contract of forty, and the bills for my private expenses being protested, obliged to support myself out of that capital, which I labour to do with all the economy in my power.

Dr. Bancroft is returned to London, and by him I wrote to Monsieur Garnier, and agreed on a mode of correspondence. I think your remittances in armed vessels will be much the best method; and I have ordered Captain Morgan's sloop to be armed, and should she arrive safe, recommend him, as one I am confident will serve the Colonies with great zeal and fidelity; and I have had some experience of the goodness of his temper and his abilities. Mr. Seymour, his mate, is also deserving of encouragement, as a good seaman and of undaunted resolution.

I am not without hopes of obtaining liberty for the armed vessels of the United Colonies to dispose of their prizes in the ports of this Kingdom, and also for arming and fitting out vessels of war directly from hence, but I will not venture on this until I see what effect my last memoir may have; the substance of which is, to show the danger to France and Spain, if they permit Great Britain to keep so enormous a force in America, and to recover the dominion of the Colonies; also how fully it is in their power to prevent it, and by that means deprive Great Britain of the principal source of her wealth and force, even without hazarding a war of any consequence in point of danger.

This memoir, which takes several sheets, I am unable to send you a copy of, as I have no one to assist me, and must make out several copies for the persons to whom they are to be delivered. I was directed to apply for arms and clothes for twenty-five thousand men, and for one hundred field-pieces, with ammunition and stores in proportion. This I wished to get of the Ministry direct, but they evaded it, and I am now in treaty for procuring them through the agency of M. Chaumont and M. Beaumarchais, on a credit of eight months, from the time of their delivery. If I effect this, as I undoubtedly shall, I must rely on the remittances being made this fall and winter without fail, or the credit of the Colonies must suffer. If I can get the arms out of the magazines, and the field-pieces here, I hope for a much longer credit; but if we send to Sweden for the brass cannon, the credit will not be lengthened beyond that. Some new improvements have lately been made in this branch, consequently the cannon now manufactured will be preferable to those of former construction. Some Engineers here assert, that iron is preferable to brass, that is, wrought iron, out of which the pieces may be made lighter, and to a better purpose. Considering the want of these pieces, and the plenty of iron in America, the experiment might, I think, be made without delay. I am still in hopes of procuring admission of the article of tobacco directly from America, but the Farmers-General will not offer equivalent to the risk.

Without intelligence from April to this time, leaves me quite uncertain and extremely anxious about the line of conduct now pursuing by Congress, and consequently I cannot, without further intelligence and instructions, proceed in my negotiation either with safety or honour. The resolution of Congress of the 15th of May, is not considered by the Ministry as a Declaration of Independence, but only a previous step, and until this decisive step is taken, I can do little more to any purpose. This taken, I dare pledge myself, the United Colonies may obtain all the countenance and assistance they wish for, in the most open and publick manner, and the most unlimited credit with the merchants of this Kingdom; I must therefore urge this measure, if not already taken, and that the Declaration be in the most full and explicit terms.

Merchants here would speculate deeply in the American trade, could they be insured at any premium within bounds. I wish to know if offices are already open, and I would suggest that if the Congress would take the insurance under their own direction, it would give it such a proportionably greater credit, that supplies would most certainly be obtained in plenty. I shall be able to procure a private interview with the Spanish Ambassador, and shall present him my memorial, and am in a train which I think will carry it quite to the fountain head.

Thus I have in a minute, possibly a tedious, detail, mentioned everything material on my mind, which has occurred since my arrival, and submit the whole to the wisdom and candour of the honourable Congress, observing that I had gone to the extent of my instructions; and though I have been successful beyond my expectations, yet I have but been labouring principally to set certain great wheels in motion, which still want something more decisive on my part, and I am confident of all that is wanting to set them so effectually moving as to roll the burden and calamities of war from our doors back with aggravated ruin on its authors, which, if I can be the means of effecting, the world may bestow the rest of its honours on whom it pleases; I shall be contented, the extent of my most ambitious hopes thus accomplished.

I have now to urge a survey with respect to the contents of this letter. More than is said in Congress transpires and crosses the Atlantick than you conceive of; more than I can account for, without having uncharitable thoughts of individuals, still without fixing them on any one. I have written a short letter to Mr. Jay on common affairs, and have enclosed one to M. Longueville, which I pray may be forwarded; the letter is from his friends here, who have heard of his being a prisoner somewhere in America. M. Dubourg has continued to render me every assistance in his power; to be particular would swell this letter beyond all bounds; his abilities and connexions are of the first style in this Kingdom, and his zeal for the cause of the United Colonies is to be described only by saying that at times it is in danger of urging him beyond both; in short, I am every way deeply indebted to him: personally, for bringing me acquainted with agreeable persons of rank and character; and on account of my honoured constituents, for assisting me to make such a favourable beginning and progress in my business. I know not how affluent he may be, but as he has really for some time devoted himself to assist in this negotiation, I am confident something honourable will be thought of for him. I have complimented him by asking of him his portrait to be sent to his and my friends in America, in my private capacity, mentioning our mutual friend Dr. Franklin. This I found so agreeable, that I am confident some such distinction would be more acceptable than more lucrative rewards. Dr. B. took pains to collect all the political publications of the last year for me and brought them with him; he was at considerable expense in his journey. I sent him from Bordeaux a bill of thirty pounds, and paid his expenses in my lodgings here; at parting, I desired him to keep an account, and when the money was expended to inform me. This gentleman is certainly capable of giving as good, if not the best, intelligence of any man in Great Britain, as he is closely connected with the most respectable of the minority in both Houses, not particularly obnoxious to the majority, and for his abilities, they are too well known to Dr. Franklin to need any attempt to do them justice in a letter.

I am, with the highest esteem and respect for the Honourable Congress and their Committee of Secret Correspondence, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

August 1st.—Since writing the foregoing, I have been at , and am of opinion that a war between Portugal and Spain is at the door; and I have had an interview proposed with the Ambassador of Portugal, who resides here, on commercial affairs, which I have most readily embraced, and expect to see him again on Wednesday next, after which I will write you further; his proposals are merely commercial, as is his station, but something else may be investigated.

August 2d.—I should have sent this off earlier, but delayed on account of hearing something more directly, if I might depend on certain articles for which I was in treaty; I am now assured I may, and the whole will be ready to ship in all the month of October. My next labour will be to obtain a convoy, which I do not despair of, though it is a delicate question, and I have only sounded at a distance, yet I have no doubt of obtaining one, at least, off the coast of Europe, and the articles will be shipped as for the West-India Islands. I propose arming and well manning the vessels in which these articles shall be embarked, and I advise again the sending all remittances to Europe in armed vessels; the probability of meeting with English merchants is well worth the risk. I hope that it will be considered that one hundred field-pieces, and arms, clothing, and accoutrements, with military stores, for twenty-five thousand men, is a large affair; and that although I am promised any credit, yet as they must be paid for, the sooner the better, if to be done without too great a risk.

A considerable part of these articles are now on hand, and orders are issued for the others by the contractors this day. I prefer Bordeaux to any other port for shipping them from; but the remittances must be made to several, on which I will give you my opinion in my next. A number of gentlemen of rank and fortune, who have seen service, and have good characters, are desirous of serving the United Colonies, and have applied. Pray let me have orders on this subject. If it be politick to interest this Kingdom in the present contest, what way so effectual as to get into their debt for supplies, and employ persons of good family and connexions in it, in our service? I have given encouragement, on which some are prepared to embark. One Mons. C., a celebrated Engineer, who was chief in that way in the Turkish Army, is returned, and is willing to go to America; but the Ministry cannot as yet spare him, as certain regulations are making elsewhere; possibly he may go out some time in the winter; he is a first character in his profession and otherwise. Indeed, this contention has set on foot such a spirit of inquiry in Europe into the state of America, that I am convinced that at the first close of this war, if, as I trust in God, it will close in our favour, there will be an inundation of inhabitants from this side of the globe. Many persons of capital fortunes have declared to me their resolution of moving to America as soon as the liberties of America shall be established, and that many of their friends will accompany them.

August 15th.—I received from a friend at Amsterdam, a letter informing me that he would be with me on the 20th, and as the vessel could not be sooner ready to sail, I determined not to risk this packet by a private hand, or by the publick post; he is now arrived, and takes charge of it in person. Were it possible, I would attempt to paint to you the heart-rending anxiety I have suffered in this time, through a total want of intelligence. My arrival here, my name, my lodgings, and many other particulars, have been reported to the British Administration, on which they sent orders to the British Ambassador to remonstrate in high terms, and, to enforce their remonstrances, despatched Wedderburn from London, and Lord Rochford from Holland, as a person of great interest and address, here to counteract me. They have been some time here, and the city swarms with Englishmen; and as money purchases everything in this country, I have had and still have a most difficult task to avoid their machinations. Not a coffee-house or theatre, or other place of publick diversion, but swarms with their emissaries; but knowing the Ministry are my friends, I attend these places as others, but cautiously avoid saying a word on American affairs anywhere, except in my own hotel, or those of my intimate friends.

I have seen many more of the persons in power in this time, and had long conversations with them. Their intentions are good, and they appear convinced; but there is wanting a great and daring genius at their head, which the Count Maurepas is very far from being; he has even imbibed a notion that no assistance is necessary, as the Colonies are too powerful for Great Britain. All eyes are turned on the Duc de Choiseul. I am convinced the moment he comes into office, an active, open, and will be taken. I think he will be Minister very soon; meantime I have nothing to complain of the . Indeed they will not be altered if he takes the lead. I find M. Beaumarchais, as I before hinted, possesses the entire confidence of the Ministry; he is a man of wit and genius, and a considerable writer on comick and political subjects. All my supplies are to come through his hands, which at first greatly discouraged my friends, knowing him to be a person of no interest with the merchants; but had I been as doubtful as they, I could not have stepped aside from the path so cordially marked out for me by those I depend on. M. Coudray, the Engineer I before hinted at, obtained liberty last week to go for America with as many Engineers as he should choose, and was not only assured of M. Beaumarchais being able to procure the stores he had stipulated for, but received orders for them, and liberty to take two hundred pieces of brass cannon, lest part might be intercepted. M. Coudray has the character of the first Engineer in the Kingdom, and his manners and disposition will, I am confident, be highly pleasing to you, as he is a plain, modest, active, sensible man, perfectly averse to frippery and parade. My friends here rejoice at the acquisition; and considering the character of the man, and at whose hands I in effect received him, I must congratulate you on it. Several young gentlemen of fortune, whose families are nearly connected with the Court, are preparing to embark for America, by each of whom I shall, without disguise, write you the characters they sustain here. I have told them that merit is the sole object with the Congress. The bearer can give you some idea of the situation I am in, should this packet fail; and should he arrive with it, he may explain some part of it. I am confident his attention to the affairs of America here will be considered by the Congress. I have found him in the mercantile way active and intelligent.

Mr. Carmichael is now with me from Maryland, and I find him a person of great merit. Respecting the Colonies, he is recommended as such by from whom he has received a letter, but of no immediate importance; he proposes seeing me here this month. M. Dumas has written me two letters from the Hague, but so timid that he has not ventured to sign either, though he speaks in the highest terms of the American cause. The pamphlet called Com- a certain and permanent service and his native country, to go he hardly knows where, and it must be supposed he will ask at least as good terms as he could have in his own country; but as the terms have not been particularly considered, I must defer anything further on this subject for the present, hourly in hopes of some explicit intelligence from the honourable Congress. You have the good wishes of every one here. Chevalier de Chastellier desires me this instant to write down his compliments to Dr. Franklin; and with pleasure I say, the being known to be his friend, is one of the best recommendations a man can wish to have in France, and will introduce him when titles fail. S. D.

SILAS DEANE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Paris, August 18, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 8th, and one earlier, but without a date, are before me, and I return you my thanks for the attention paid to mine, and more especially for the good opinion you entertain of my countrymen, and your tenders of service. The business before me is of such a nature, that I must be detained some time in this city. If I take a journey to Holland, it will be my choice to make it as a private gentleman; as such I am in Paris, and that character I shall keep, unless obliged to alter it. Parade and pomp have no charms in the eyes of a patriot, or even a man of common good sense; but at the same time, I can never submit to the changing of my name, unless I am convinced that so humiliating a step will promote the service of my country. I can pass unnoticed under that name, as well as any other, whilst I conduct in every other step as a private gentleman. I have now but little hopes of being in Holland till October, before which, such intelligence may arrive from America as may alter my present designs.

The declaration of Independency made by the United Colonies, is announced in the English papers, but I have received no despatches on the event, though I am in daily expectation of them. You ask me two questions in your first letter; to the former, I answer at once affirmatively, that I have a certain prospect of succeeding in my business; but as to the latter, or second query, I cannot so readily reply, for I know not how far the knowledge of me and my concerns may have extended. I am here as a private merchant, and appear as such, whatever suspicion may circulate. As such, I can travel, I trust, in your country, which I most ardently wish to see, and the more so on account of the kind, simple, and engaging invitation you have given me. It really affected me, and brought instantaneously to view those happy and peaceful scenes of domestick felicity, to which I am at present a stranger. You have all I can give you, a grateful acknowledgment of your kindness, and depend, that I will in person acknowledge it on my first arrival in Holland.

It is the policy of the United Provinces of Holland to be neuter to every attention. The United Colonies only wish them to keep steady to their only true system of policy in the present case; and give me leave to say, that a reflection on their former struggles must show them in what point of light the Americans are to be considered. The United Colonies ask no aid or alliances. Let Britain court every, even the most petty and mercenary Power in Europe, the United Colonies only ask for what nature surely entitles all men to, a free and uninterrupted commerce and exchange of the superfluities of one country for those of another; and the first Power in Europe, which takes advantage of the present favourable occasion, must exceed every other in commerce.

But I am rambling. I pray to know in your next letter, what sums are due to Holland from the Government of England. Whether the King of Prussia is wholly inattentive to the present proceedings, and on which side his wishes are. Omnia tentanda. I really hope to be at the Hague in October, and promise myself great pleasure in seeing you and your lady, to whom, though otherwise unknown, since you have introduced me, you cannot refuse presenting my best respects.

I am, with great esteem, &c.

SILAS DEANE.

FROM BARON DE BEAUMARCHAIS TO THE COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

[Translation.]

Paris, August 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The respectful esteem that I bear towards that brave people, who so well defend their liberty under your conduct, has induced me to form a plan concurring in this great work, by establishing an extensive commercial house, solely for the purpose of serving you in Europe, there to supply you with necessaries of every sort, to furnish you expeditiously and certainly with all articles, clothes, linens, powder, ammunition, muskets, cannon, or even gold for the payment of your troops, and in general everything that can be useful for the honourable war in which you are engaged. Your deputies, gentlemen, will find in me a sure friend, an asylum in my house, money in my coffers, and every means of facilitating their operations, whether of a publick or secret nature. I will, if possible, remove all obstacles that may oppose your wishes, from the politicks of Europe.

At this very time, and without waiting for any answer from you, I have procured for you about two hundred pieces of brass cannon, four pounders, which will be sent to you by the nearest way; two hundred thousand pounds of cannon powder, twenty thousand excellent fusils, some brass mortars, bombs, cannon balls, bayonets, platines, clothes, linens, &c., for the clothing of your troops, and lead for musket balls. An officer of the greatest merit for artillery and genius, accompanied by lieutenants, officers, artillerists, cannoniers, &c., whom we think necessary for the service, will go for Philadelphia, even before you have received my first despatches. This gentleman is one of the greatest presents that my attachment can offer you. Your deputy, Mr. Deane agrees with me in the treatment which he thinks suitable to his office, and I have found the power of this deputy sufficient, that I should prevail with this officer to depart, under the sole engagement of the deputy respecting him, the terms of which I have not the least doubt but Congress will comply with. The secrecy necessary in some part of the operation; which I have undertaken for your service, requires also, on your part, a formal resolution, that all the vessels and their demands should be constantly directed to our house alone, in order that there may be no idle chattering or time lost—two things that are the ruin of affairs. You will advise me what the vessels contain, which you shall send into our ports. I shall choose so much of their loading, in return for what I have sent, as shall be suitable to me, when I have not been able beforehand to inform you of the cargoes which I wish. I shall facilitate to you the loading, sale, and disposal of the rest. For instance, five American vessels have just arrived in the port of Bordeaux, laden with salt fish; though this merchandise coming from strangers is prohibited in our ports, yet as soon as your deputy had told me that these vessels were sent to him by you, to raise money from the sale for aiding him in his purchases in Europe, I took so much care that I secretly obtained from the Farmers-General an order for landing it without any notice being taken of it. I could even, if the case had so happened, have taken upon my own account these cargoes of salted fish, though it is not very useful to me, and charged myself with its sale and disposal, to simplify the operation and lessen the embarrassments of the merchants, and of your deputy.

I shall have a correspondent in each of our seaport towns, who, on the arrival of your vessels, shall wait on the Captains and offer every service in my power; he will receive their letters, bills of lading, and transmit the whole to me; even things which you may wish to arrive safely in any country in Europe, after having conferred about them with your deputy, I shall cause to be kept in some secure place; even the answers shall go with great punctuality through me, and this way will save much anxiety and many delays. I request of you, gentlemen, to send me next spring, if it is possible for you, ten or twelve thousand hogsheads, or more if you can, of tobacco from Virginia, of the best quality.

You very well understand that my commerce with you is carried on in Europe, that it is in the ports of Europe I make and take returns. However well bottomed my house may be, and however I may have appropriated many millions to your trade alone, yet it would be impossible for me to support it, if all the dangers of the sea, of exports and imports, were not entirely at your risk. Whenever you choose to receive my goods in any of our Windward or Leeward Islands, you have only to inform me of it, and my correspondents shall be there according to your orders, and then you shall have no augmentation of price, but of freight and insurance. But the risk of being taken by your enemies, still remains with you, according to the declaration rendered incontestable by the measures I shall take by your deputy himself. This deputy should receive, as soon as possible, full power and authority to accept what I shall deliver to him, to receive my accounts, examine them, make payments thereupon, or enter into engagements, which you shall be bound to ratify, as the head of that brave people to whom I am devoted; in short, always to treat about your interests immediately with me.

Notwithstanding the open opposition which the King of France, his Ministers, and the agents of Administration show, and ought to show to everything that carries the least appearance of violating foreign treaties and the internal ordinances of the Kingdom, I dare promise to you, gentlemen, that my indefatigable zeal shall never be wanting to clear up difficulties, soften prohibitions, and, in short, facilitate all operations of a commerce which my advantage, much less than yours, has made me undertake with you. What I have just informed you of is only a general sketch, subject to all the augmentations and restrictions which events may point out to us.

One thing can never vary or diminish: it is the avowed and ardent desire I have of serving you to the utmost of my power. You will recollect my signature, that one of your friends in London some time ago informed you of my favourable disposition towards you, and my attachment to your interest. Look upon my house, then, gentlemen, from henceforward as the chief of all useful operations to you in Europe, and my person as one of the most zealous partisans of your cause, the soul of your success, and a man most deeply impressed with respectful esteem, with which I have the honour to be,

RODERIQUE HORTALEZ & Co.*

P. S. I add here, to conclude, that every American vessel, though not immediately armed or loaded by you, will be entitled to my good offices in this country; but yours, particularly addressed to my house, will receive a particular preference from me. I ought also to intimate to you, gentlemen, that from the nature of my connexion, it is to be wished you would use discretion, even in the accounts that you give to the General Congress. Everything that passes in your great assemblies is known, I cannot tell how, at the Court of Great Britain. Some indiscreet or perfidious citizen sends an exact account of your proceedings to the Palace of St. James. In times of great exigency, Rome had a Dictator; and in a state of danger the more the executive power is brought to a point, the more certain will be its effect, and there will be less to fear from indiscretion. It is to your wisdom, gentlemen, that I make this remark; if it seems to you just and well planned, look upon it as a new mark of my ardor for your rising Republic. R. H. & Co.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE CAMP NEAR SENECA,
DATED AUGUST 18, 1776.

On the 12th instant Colonel Williamson came to Tomawsey, where he saw signs of Indians very fresh; detached Captains Perkins and Anderson, with sixty men, to track them and reconnoitre, and Major Downes went out with twenty men. Captain Anderson, with twenty-five men, parted from Captain Perkins, and crossed a creek; soon after Captain Perkins and his thirty-five men saw two Indians, and fired at them; the Indians set up the war whoop and ran; the party followed, and were quickly met by a party of the enemy, supposed to be between two and three hundred, who engaged them very furiously. Major Downes fortunately came up in the rear, and Captain Anderson falling on the back of the enemy to the right, the firing was heard at the town. Colonel Williamson turned out with one hundred and fifty men, who, coming close on the back of the enemy, made them quickly give way; the most forward of their party, being entirely surrounded, were mostly cut off. Sixteen were found dead in one valley when the battle ended; these our men scalped, but did not look any further, being now near sunset they were called off by beat of drum. We had two killed and sixteen wounded; three of the latter died next day, among whom was Captain Lacey, a very brave officer and a good man.

COLONEL EWING TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, August 18, 1776.

HONOURED SIRS: I yesterday forwarded three companies—Captains Posey's, Young's, and Lowe's—to Head of Elk, on their way to Philadelphia, under the command of Major Edin, at which place he is to receive further orders.

I have issued orders to Captains Magruder, Hanson, and Brooks, to march with the officers and men under their command here immediately, so as to embark for their station. You will please give me an order for what things I may want out of the Commissary's store for sending them off. I mean to march with these three companies myself. I intended ordering Captains Tillard and Bowie to march, but from a letter just now received from Captain Tillard, his and Captain Bowie's company are stopped. I should be glad to know what companies your Honours intend to give me in place of Captains Forrest, Tillard, and Bowie. I should at the same time esteem it a favour to be permitted to have their companies with me.

I have the honour to be, honoured sirs, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. EWING.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CAPTAIN BOURK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Cambridge, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have this morning received your orders, and will obey them with pleasure.

I hope to set off for Annapolis on Wednesday or Thursday at farthest, on my way to Philadelphia. This I take to be the least expensive mode of travelling.

I believe I shall receive fifty guns from the Committee. There are some which want repair. I shall omit having them repaired till I get to Annapolis or Philadelphia.

From some disappointments I met with, the number of blankets is not completed. I wish I may be able to furnish myself in Annapolis; it will give new spirits to the men.

I am, sir, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS BOURK.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, President, &c.

MARYLAND CONVENTION TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 22, 1776.]

Annapolis, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command from the Convention to apply to Congress through you for the sum of ten thousand dollars, on account of disbursements by this Colony for their quota of the Flying-Camp, and other expenses incurred on account of the Continent, which already amount to near fifteen thousand. It is hoped that Congress will not hesitate to comply with this request, when it is considered that this Colony have exerted in the present most critical situation their utmost force in the common defence, having not only ordered the whole of their regular troops to march, but have also directed their Council of Safety to order our full quota of Militia for the Flying-Camp, now nearly ready, and waiting only for arms to repair immediately to the Jerseys.

You would not have been troubled on this occasion, but from our apprehensions that none of our members are now attending in Congress.

Accounts of these disbursements are making out, and will be speedily transmitted.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

MATH. TILGHMAN, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress, at Philadelphia.

P. S. The Council of Safety, I presume, will send a special messenger for the money.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO COLONEL WHIPPLE.

Philadelphia, August 18, 1776.

SIR: Since you left this city, the ship Morris is arrived from France. She has brought for the Congress above one hundred bolts of sail-cloth, which cost above £3,000 sterling. She has also brought for this Colony fifty-three tons of lead and fifteen thousand pounds of powder, &c. A ship has also arrived from Lisbon, which place she left the latter end of June. She has brought some necessaries for the Congress. The Master contradicts the report of the Portuguese seizing American vessels, and informs us of several of our vessels being at Lisbon when he left it, and had free liberty of trading. A French vessel from the West-Indies, and a Dutch vessel from St. Eustatia, have arrived, and have brought about ten thousand pounds of powder.

I fear the Confederation will not be finished in time to be laid before our Assembly at their next sitting. Last week passed without looking at it. Other affairs have taken up the whole time. Near two days were taken up about Commodore Hopkins; and we had the pleasure to be for the greatest part of that time entertained by the eloquence of some of our Southern brethren, particularly that polite speaker, Middleton. The Congress at last found Hopkins guilty of not paying proper attention to his orders, and have ordered him to be censured. Thus stands that affair at present.

The report concerning General Wooster is at length agreed to. By General Gates's letters of the 7th instant, it appears that our affairs in that department wear a much more favourable aspect than for some time past. Six or seven hundred of our Militia had arrived. Colonel Bedel was cashiered; Butterfield cashiered, and rendered incapable to hold a commission under the Congress.

I am, sir, your friend and humble servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM JOHN ADAMS, DATED PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST 18, 1776.

I have seen in this world but a little of that pure flame of patriotism which certainly burns in some breasts. There is much of the ostentation and affectation of it. I have known a few who could not bear to entertain a selfish design, nor to be suspected by others of such a meanness; but these are not the most respected by the world. A man must be selfish, even to acquire great popularity. He must grasp for himself, under specious pretences for the publick good, and he must attach himself to his relations, connexions, and friends, by becoming a champion for their interests, in order to form a phalanx about him for his own defence, to make them trumpeters of his praise, and sticklers for his fame, fortune, and honour.

My friend Warren, the late Governour Ward, and Mr. Gadsden, are three characters in which I have seen the most generous disdain of every spice and species of such meanness. The two last had not great abilities, but they had pure hearts. Yet they had less influence than many others, who had neither so considerable parts, nor any share at all of their purity of intention. Warren has both talents and virtues beyond most men in this world; yet his character has never been in proportion. Thus it always is, and has been, and will be. Nothing has ever given me more mortification than a suspicion that has been propagated of me, that I am actuated by private views, and have been aiming at high places. The office of Chief Justice has occasioned this jealousy, and it never will be allayed until I resign it. Let me have my farm, family, and goosquill, and all the honours and offices this world has to bestow, may go to those who deserve them better and desire them more. I court them not.

There are very few people in this world with whom I can bear to converse. I can treat all with decency and civility, and converse with them, when it is necessary, on points of business. But I am never happy in their company. This has made me a recluse, and will, one day, make me a hermit. I had rather build stone wall upon Penn's hill, than to be the first Prince in Europe, or the first General or first Senator in America. Our expectations are very high of some great affair at New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have been honoured with your favour of the 16th, with its enclosure, and am sorry it is not in my power to transmit Congress a copy of the treaty as they require, having sent it away with the other papers that were in my hands.

The resolution they have entered into respecting the foreign troops I am persuaded would produce salutary effects, if it can be properly circulated among them. I fear it will be a matter of difficulty; however, I will take every measure that shall appear probable to facilitate the end.

I have the honour to enclose, for the perusal and consideration of Congress, sundry papers, marked from No. 1 to No. 7 inclusive, the whole of which, except No. 2 and 7, (my answers to Lord Drummond and General Howe,) I received yesterday evening by a flag, and to which I beg leave to refer Congress.

I am exceedingly at a loss to know the motives and causes inducing a proceeding of such a nature at this time, and why Lord Howe has not attempted some plan of negotiation before, as he seems so desirous of it. If I may be allowed to conjecture and guess at the cause, it may be that part of the Hessians have not arrived as mentioned in the examination transmitted yesterday; or, that General Burgoyne has not made such progress as was expected to form a junction of their two armies; or, (what I think equally probable,) they mean to procrastinate their operations for some time, trusting that the Militia who have come to our succour will soon become tired and return home, as it is but too usual with them. Congress will make their observations upon these several matters, and favour me with the result as soon as they have done.

They will observe my answer to Lord Drummond, who I am pretty confident has not attended to the terms of his parole, but has violated it in several instances. It is with the rest of the papers; but if my memory serves me, he was not to hold any correspondence, directly or indirectly, with those in arms against us, or to go into any port or harbour in America where the enemy themselves were or had a fleet, or to go on board their ships.

The treaty with the Indians is in the box which Lieutenant-Colonel Reed I presume has delivered before this. If Congress are desirous of seeing it, they will be pleased to have the box opened. It contains a variety of papers, and all the affairs of the Army from my first going to Cambridge till it was sent away.

This morning the Phenix and Rose, men-of-war, with two tenders, availing themselves of a favourable and brisk wind, came down the river, and have joined the fleet. Our several batteries fired at them in their passage, but without any good effect that I could perceive.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

[No. 1.]

Head-Quarters, Staten-Island, August 13, 1776.

General HOWE desires to know if General Washington has any objection to Mr. Robert Temple's being landed at New-York, and going from thence to his family in the Government of Massachusetts-Bay.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 17, 1776.

General WASHINGTON begs leave to acquaint Gen. Howe that he has not the least objection to Mr. Temple's landing and proceeding to his family in the State of Massachusetts-Bay; on the other hand, he will meet every assistance and convenience for that purpose.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

[No. 3.]

August 17, 1776.

SIR: Being deeply interested in the welfare of America, I think it my duty to communicate a matter of intelligence which I flatter myself may be rendered conducive to the restoration of a desirable peace; and in this view I request your Excellency's permission to land at New-York, to go directly to Philadelphia, in order to lay the same before the General Congress.

In the course of a conversation I have had with Lord Howe, I perceive that the powers he is invested with, as well as his disposition for establishing an equitable and permanent peace, are altogether misunderstood by the Colonies; for, in consequence of a sketch of some propositions being offered for his consideration, he very frankly assured me he was willing to confer upon those grounds with any gentlemen of the greatest influence in this country. As I am at liberty to declare his sentiments, I have the honour to enclose for your Excellency's information a copy of my correspondence with his Lordship and of the propositions referred to in his letter, which are the motives of my present request.

Attending in the boat to be indulged with your answer, I have, &c.,
DRUMMOND.

To General Washington, &c., &c.

[No. 4.]

Sloop Polly, August 12, 1776.

MY LORD: I take the liberty of sending enclosed the sketch of propositions referred to in my late conversation with your Lordship, which propositions, I have understood, the Colonies were disposed, not many months ago, to make the basis of a reconciliation with Great Britain.

I have, &c.,

DRUMMOND.

To Lord Howe.

[No. 5.]

Sketch of Propositions communicated to Lord Howe the 12th August, 1776.

1st. That it shall be ascertained, as far as can be determined by calculation, what supply towards the general exigency of the State each separate Colony can furnish, consistent with its ability.

2d. When such supply is thus ascertained, that each Colony shall, by acts of its own Assembly, impose such taxes as they shall find expedient for the raising of the said supply.

3d. In consideration of the fluctuating state of all young countries, that such States may not, in their operations, become partially or accidentally burdensome on the one hand, nor on the other hand gradually become deficient in producing the aid intended by the Colonies towards the general exigency of the State, such articles shall be chosen as the objects of imposition, as they shall deem the most likely to keep pace with the growth or decline of the said Colonies.

4th. That these taxes, so imposed, shall, as in the customs, be levied by officers of the appointment of the King, and that a perpetual grant of the produce of these taxes shall be made by the respective Assemblies to the Crown of Great Britain.

5th. As the direct means of removing the fatal grounds of this contention, by establishing a security against the apprehended invasion of property by Parliament, a formal relinquishment shall be made, on the part of Great Britain, of all future claim to taxation over these her Colonies.

6th. To remove all future suspicions from the minds of the Colonists, that under the appearance of regulating commerce duties may be imposed for the further purposes of revenue, an application of the produce of all duties imposed on articles of trade by the British Legislature shall be made towards defraying the expenses of collection, and the surpluses in each Colony to be paid into their separate Treasuries, and to be subject to the disposal of the respective Houses of Assembly.

DRUMMOND.

Eagle, off Staten-Island, August 15, 1776.

MY LORD: I have received the honour of your Lordship's letter of the 12th, enclosing a sketch of the propositions mentioned in your late conversation, which I return herewith. As I think they contain matter that, upon a conference and cool discussion, might be wrought into a plan of permanent union, I shall, with great satisfaction, embrace the first opportunity that may offer upon those grounds to promote so desirable an event.

I have, &c.,

HOWE.

To Right Hon. the Lord Drummond.

[No. 7.]

New-York, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I have your Lordship's favour of this day, accompanied by papers on subjects of the greatest moment, and deserving the most deliberate consideration.

I can allow much for your Lordship's well-meant zeal on such an occasion, but I fear it has transported you beyond that attention to your parole which comprehends the character of a man of strict honour. How your Lordship can reconcile your past or present conduct with your engagement, so as to satisfy your own mind, I must submit to your own feelings; but I find myself under the disagreeable necessity of objecting to the mode of negotiation proposed while your Lordship's conduct appears so exceptionable.

I shall, by express, forward to Congress your Lordship's letter and the papers which accompanied it; the result will be communicated as soon as possible.

I am sorry to have detained your Lordship so long, but the unavoidable necessity must be my apology.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient and very humble servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Lord Drummond.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have been honoured with your letter of the 17th, with the resolution of your honourable body for obstructing the channel between the Grand Battery and Nutten Island. Having gone into a considerable expense for stopping that of the North River, and such as I am not certain I shall be justified in, and the obstructions there being far from complete, it will not be in my power to engage in the business you propose, or undertake to advance any part of the money which will be necessarily expended in the execution. At the same time, give me leave to assure you, gentlemen, that I shall most readily afford you such assistance as may be derived from the labour of the troops here, and that can be spared from other service, to facilitate the design, which will be of great importance if it can be executed.

I have been also honoured with your favour and resolution of the same date, and am exceedingly obliged by the ready attention you have paid to my recommendation for the removal of the women and children and infirm persons from the city.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abm. Yates, Jun., Esq., President, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have been duly honoured with your favour of the 13th instant; and at the same time that I think you and your honourable Council of Safety highly deserving of the thanks of the States for the measures you have adopted in order to give the most early and speedy succour to this Army, give me leave to return you mine in a particular manner. When the whole of the reinforcements do arrive, I flatter myself we shall be competent to every exigency; and with the smiles of Providence upon our arms and vigorous exertions, we shall baffle the designs of our inveterate foes, formidable as they are. Our situation was truly alarming a little while since; but, by the kind interposition and aid of our friends, is much better. You may rest assured, sir, that due consideration shall be had to the several Militia regiments that have come, and are marching to our assistance, and that they shall be dismissed as soon as circumstances will admit of it. I trust, as long as there is occasion for their services, that the same spirit and commendable zeal which induced them to come, will influence their continuance. I sincerely wish it was in my power to ascertain the particular period when they would be needed, that they might not be detained one unnecessary moment from their homes and common pursuits; but as this cannot be done, as the approaching contest and trial between the two armies will most unquestionably produce events of the utmost importance to the States, as the issue, if favourable, will put us on such a footing as to bid defiance to the utmost malice of the British nation and those in alliance with her, I have not a doubt but they will most readily consent to stay, and cheerfully undergo every present and temporary inconvenience, so long as they are necessary.

I am happy Captain Van Buren has succeeded so well in the business he was upon, it being of great consequence for us to fit out and maintain our vessels on the Lakes.

On the night of the 16th, two of our fire-vessels attempted to burn the ships of war up the river. One of these boarded the Phoenix, of forty-four guns, and was grappled with her for some minutes, but unluckily she cleared herself. The only damage the enemy sustained was the destruction of one tender. It is agreed on all hands that our people engaged in this affair behaved with great resolution and intrepidity. One of the Captains, (Thomas,) it is to be feared, perished in the attempt, or in making his escape by swimming, as he has not been heard of. His bravery entitled him to a better fate. Though this enterprise did not succeed to our wishes, I incline to think it alarmed the enemy greatly; for this morning the Phenix and Rose, with their two remaining tenders, taking advantage of a brisk and prosperous gale, with a favourable tide, quitted their stations, and have returned and joined the rest of the fleet. As they passed our several batteries they were fired upon, but without any damage that I could perceive.

The whole of the British forces in America, except those employed in Canada, are now here, Clinton's arrival being followed the last week by that of Lord Dunmore, who now forms a part of the Army we are to oppose. His coming has added but little to their strength.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

WILLIAM BLODGET TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 18, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Hand's report mentions no uncommon movements of the enemy.

The General desires me to acquaint your Excellency that he finds himself considerably better this morning than he was yesterday, and is in hopes in a few days to be able to go abroad, though still very weak.

I am, with respect, your humble servant,

WM. BLODGET, Aid-de-Camp.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, New-York.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have thought proper to communicate to you certain intelligence which I have received from my brother respecting Captain Grimes, whose conduct (if I have been rightly informed) does not entitle him to that place in your esteem which he now holds, nor to that confidence which you have thought proper to put in him. His leaving the galley at Rhode-Island in the time of the attack, to take convey of the prizes; the insult which he afterwards gave said Captain, who has ever been held in the highest esteem, whose character stands fair and unimpeached, and who has given convincing proofs of his courage and conduct, together with the information that was given me of his refusing to make the attack at the time the fire-ships went up the river, and the reluctance that was shown this morning to comply with the orders given him by General Putnam, induce me to think that he is much more fond of parade and show than he is desirous of signalizing himself in any action that may be of service to the country. If the report of his refusal is founded in fact, and General Putnam's orders were not complied with, I think he ought immediately to be put under an arrest, and instantly removed from his command.

I am, your very humble servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

King's Bridge, August 18, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Early this morning the Phenix man-of-war, Rose frigate, and the two tenders, came to sail and stood down the river, keeping close under the east shore, in order to avoid the fire of our cannon; but notwithstanding this precaution, the Phenix was thrice hulled by our shot from Mount Washington, and one of the tenders once. The Rose was hulled once by a shot from Burdett's Ferry. They kept their men close, otherwise some of them would have been picked down by a party of riflemen who were posted on the bank. They fired grape-shot as they passed, but did no damage save to one tent. We hope to hear that your batteries have done the work for some of them.

We shall recover some swivel-guns, gun-barrels, shot, &c., out of the wreck of the tender, which was burnt the other night, the particulars of which shall be transmitted to your Excellency as soon as I can obtain them.

General Clinton has about fourteen hundred men already come in, but their quarters are so scattered that it will be almost impossible to collect them suddenly, if occasion should require it. If there are any spare tents, I earnestly beg for them, if it were but for one regiment. General Clinton has orders from the Convention of the State of New-York to purchase ten thousand feet of boards, for erecting sheds, &c., but it is uncertain when we shall have them. I shall to-morrow send for six or seven hundred of tools, being able to employ that number more than we have at present.

The more I view this post, the more I am convinced of its importance. The ships have now tried the practicability of passing our works; they have explored every part of the shore, as far as they have gone up the river, and sounded the river in almost every place. Should the ships rejoin the fleet without receiving much damage, I think Hove will be emboldened to attempt an attack somewhere above this place, thinking that there may be a greater probability of succeeding here than in the face of so many and strong works as have been erected in and around the city. However, should his inclination lead him this way, nature has done much for us, and we shall, as fast as possible, add the strength of art. Our men are in good health and spirits, and I dare say will give them a warm reception.

I should be glad to have the carriages for the four-pounders sent forward the moment they are done, as we have not as yet a single cannon mounted beyond Mount Washington.

I have just now received your Excellency's commands to inquire into the cause of the inactivity of some of the row-galleys in the late attack on the enemy's ships; but as the galleys have all left this post and fallen down to the city, I must beg your Excellency to excuse me from that service.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To His Excellency General Washington, at New-York.

DAVID MATTHEWS TO JOHN McKESSON.

White-Plains, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I was in hopes of being called before your Committee when they were last in New-York, in order that I might have an opportunity of acquitting myself of harbouring any dangerous designs against the liberties of America.

I would now, sir, beg the favour of being heard before the Congress, before they come to any final determination about me. I hope they won't deny me this favour, as I should be extremely sorry to be sent away without having an opportunity of endeavouring to acquit myself of those heavy charges that have been exhibited against me.

I am, sir, with esteem, your very humble servant,

D. MATTHEWS.

COLONEL GILBERT DRAKE TO CAPTAIN BROWN.

Head-Quarters, Tarrytown, August 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You are immediately to take fifty men and proceed to Cortlandt's Manor, and apprehend all such persons as you think are disaffected to the good of the States of America, and bring them immediately to Head-Quarters, in compliance with a resolve of the Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, which is in the words following, viz:

"Resolved, That General Morris be ordered immediately to apprehend and secure the persons ordered to be apprehended by this Convention on yesterday, and that he be furnished with a list of those persons' names."

You are to act discretionary as to your orders, and the above resolves, and return with all convenient speed.

GILB'T DRAKE, Lieutenant-Colonel.

To Captain Brown and Captain Osborn.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 26, 1776.]

Albany, August 18, 1776.

SIR: As I cannot possibly find time to make two copies of the transactions of the late treaty, I have enclosed one to General Washington for his perusal, to be transmitted to Congress.

The Commissioners thought it needless to make entries of all the meetings we had with the Indians, on affairs of very little or no moment. Congress will perceive that we have said nothing about engaging them to take up arms for us, or to offer the reward for prisoners; we were unanimously of opinion, founded on all the information we could procure, that the attempt would have essentially injured us, and perhaps brought them to act against us, as they might, and probably would, have concluded that we were too weak for the enemy.

Some of our best, and I believe real friends, the Oneidas and Ochquoques, complained that some Indians had been sent to Maryland, to invite some Nanticokes that live in that Province to remove into the interior part of the country, and that neither those that were sent were suffered to return, or the others who they say incline to leave their present habitations, permitted to do it. We promised to lay the matter before Congress, not doubting but that every cause of complaint would be removed. Please to give us some information on the subject.

Part of Livingston's, Hazen's, and Duggan's corps of Canadians are in this town, sent down by General Gates. They are naked, and I have ordered them a month's pay, and shall employ them in repairing the road to Fort George, which is exceedingly worn, until I receive directions from Congress what to do with them, and whether they are to be paid up and discharged, or what. They have several women and children with them, who draw provisions, having not the means of subsistence without that aid.

Several Canadians, not belonging to the above corps, and who have been obliged to quit Canada since our Army left it, are now in this town, naked and destitute of every necessary. As their misfortunes are occasioned by their attachment to our cause, I cannot avoid giving them provisions; and shall order each of them a small matter of money, to purchase such necessaries as may suffice for the present. I wish for the orders of Congress on this subject.

The Committee of this place are much at a loss for the papers relative to the taking of Ticonderoga, &c. By the resolution empowering them to liquidate those accounts, they were led to believe that they were in my possession; but I did myself the honour to transmit them to Congress some time last winter.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, August 18, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your Excellency's favour of the 13th instant was delivered me about nine last evening.

I am very confident that you have pursued every measure in your power to relieve our wants in this quarter, and to facilitate the works going on to the northward. We have people in every quarter attempting to procure the variety of articles that are wanted; but after all, we shall fall considerably short. Nor did I ever doubt but that your Excellency had communicated to Congress the difficulties we laboured under for the want of money. I assure you that I always have and shall continue to advise them in time of the necessity of supplies of cash.

The resolves you mention have not been sent me, nor any about raising troops for three years, except that the officers are to have the same allowance for recruiting.

I cannot, upon recurring to my letter of the 6th instant, perceive that I intimated the least doubt of your Excellency's not having communicated to Congress such parts of my letters as were necessary for them to know. I shall strictly comply with your order, and advise you of any information which I at the same time send you and them.

If your Excellency will please re-peruse my letter of the 6th instant, I believe you will find that it is in no part suggested that a Court of Inquiry or Court-Martial was convened at New-York, upon the subject alluded to. I was informed that a Council of Officers had convened at New-York; I was advised of what was their decision; I was chagrined; and had the information been true, as I thought it, I believe your Excellency will do me the justice to think that I should have had too much reason to be so.

As the movement of the Army from Crown-Point to Ticonderoga was so generally condemned at New-York, it is more than probable that Congress must have heard it, and I therefore wish that everything I have said on the subject should be communicated to them. I frankly confess that I first moved the matter, and that were the question to be again agitated, I should still continue of the same sentiments, unless better reasons could be given against it than those I have adduced in support of my opinion, and then I should have most readily acquiesced; or if your Excellency, without having given any reasons for it, had ordered me to move the Army back to Crown-Point, I should have obeyed without hesitation or a murmur, well knowing that the orders of my superior officer are on no account to be contested.

I assure you, my dear sir, that I very reluctantly entered on a command in which I foresaw as many difficulties as I have experienced. I easily conceived, that a people whom it had been necessary to inspire with jealousy of the men in power in Great Britain, and those employed by them in this injured country, would also be easily induced, by artful and designing men, to transfer part of that jealousy to the servants of the publick here. My conjectures were well founded, for suspicion and envy have followed me from the moment I came to the command. I have experienced the most illiberal abuse in many of the Colonies, and even in the Army I commanded; and if any accident should happen to the northward, the same spirit that has imputed the misfortunes in Canada to me, will impute that also to me. I have entreated Congress to cause a minute inquiry to be made into my conduct, and I trust if it is done, that I shall not only be honourably acquitted, but that judicious men will discover in me the honest man and the faithful American. But as envy, even in that case, will not cease, nor malevolence withhold its slander, I am determined to quit the Army as soon as my conduct has been inquired into, and evince myself in private life, what I have strove to do in publick, the friend of my injured country.

Soon after Colonel Dayton's regiment marched to Johnson-Hall, some of the officers broke open the doors and carried away a very considerable quantity of effects, contrary to mine and Colonel Dayton's orders. Soon after my arrival at the German-Flats, I was informed of this by some of the officers, who wished an inquiry, that the innocent might not share the scandal with the guilty. I ordered a Court-Martial on Lieutenant McDonald, witnesses with respect to his conduct being on the spot. He was tried and broke. In the course of his trial it appeared that a number of others were concerned; and I ordered Lieutenant-Colonel White and Captains Ross and Patterson down from Fort Stanwix. The two Captains delivered me the paper No. 1, in answer to which I advised them candidly to narrate the whole transaction. No. 2 is their narrative; and No. 3 contains an account of what they took; No. 4, with the paper enclosed in it, is what Colonel White delivered me. As I was apprehensive that a publick conviction of so many officers would reflect too much disgrace on our troops, I chose to defer any further proceedings until I should advise with your Excellency. Permit me, therefore, to entreat your opinion, whether it will be prudent for me to accept of the concessions they offer to make at the head of the regiment, and thus to bury the affair, or whether I ought to have them tried. Please to return the papers above alluded to, as I have not time to make copies of them.

Enclose your Excellency copy of a letter from Colonel Dayton, with copy of a paper enclosed in it. He has changed the name of Fort Stanwix. The Messesaga Indians mentioned in the paper, live on the west side of Lake Ontario, and of those the savages who made our people prisoners at the Cedars, were chiefly composed.

Only five quires of cartridge-paper could be procured, which I have sent Colonel Dayton. We are greatly in want of that article. Captain Varick informs me that he has written to your Excellency for it. It is not to be had anywhere nearer than New-York. General Gates also presses me, in a letter of the 16th instant, for that article. Please to order it to be sent with all expedition. I also enclose a copy of a letter from General Arnold.

As I cannot possibly find time to make two copies of the transactions at the late treaty, I have mentioned to Congress that I had sent one to you, to be transmitted, after perusal, to them. Also enclose copy of a letter from General Arnold, which gives me a state of our naval force on Lake Champlain.

Your Excellency's letter of the 10th instant to Captain

Varick, has just come to hand, but not any of the articles mentioned in the return are as yet arrived.

I am, dear sir, with unfeigned esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c.

Skenesborough, August 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 31st ultimo was delivered to me on the 4th instant. I feel very sensibly for you in your disagreeable situation. I wish the fatigue and anxiety you undergo may not impair your health; and that you may succeed in your expectation with the savages, and soon give us the pleasure of seeing you here.

Captain Varick has been very active and industrious in procuring the articles for the Navy. Many are arrived at Ticonderoga, and proper steps taken to procure the others. The carpenters go on with great spirit. Eight gondolas will be completed in a few days. One row-galley is gone to Ticonderoga, and will soon be fitted and armed. Three others will be launched in ten days or a fortnight. Four others will be set up in a few days, great part of the timber being cut. Iron, sails, cordage, and anchors, will be wanted in a few days. About two tons of the former is here, and six tons will be wanted to complete the galleys in hand; twelve or fifteen tons will be necessary for the galleys to be set up. It will expedite the building if six or eight tons can be sent up in spikes, from five to seven inches long, chiefly about six inches.

General Gates transmitted you last week the testimony of two French Captains, lately from Canada, which is contradicted by a Lieutenant B. Whitcomb, who was lately sent from Crown-Point to St. John's, which place he left the 31st ultimo. He went down on the east side, as far as Chambly, and returned on the west. Says he observed about forty batteaus at St. John's, and some others building, but no large vessels; believes there were about two thousand men there, and one thousand between St. John's and Chambly.

This afternoon I return to Ticonderoga, and in a few days propose to go down the Lake with the vessels completed, about ten sail.

The Militia come in very slowly: not more than fifteen hundred have arrived. Our work at Ticonderoga goes on briskly; the line will be completed in ten days or a fortnight.

I am, with every sentiment of friendship and esteem, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

Fort Schuyler, August 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: At six o'clock last evening, I received an express from Major Barber, giving me information respecting a hellish plan laid by Lieutenant McMichael and others, to go over to the enemy. Upon inquiry, I soon found Lieutenant Edward McMichael, one Smith, (who called himself a volunteer in my regiment,) and one Ridley, clerk to Major Fonda, had been gone from our camp about six hours. In a very short time I had two parties marching in quest of them: one took the road to the Oneida Castle, the other to the Oneida Lake. I gave them express orders to take the villains if possible, dead or alive. The party that went to the Lake, are this moment returned. At one o'clock this afternoon, they saw McMichael and his party just got into the Oneida Lake in an Indian canoe. They fired a number of shot after him, some of which went beyond the canoe, but he kept on and never returned their fire. I sent an express this afternoon to the Oneida Castle, ordering Captain Reading, who commanded the party I sent that road, to march his party to the Lake, and, if possible, to get some of the Oneidas to go to the west end of the Lake, in order to intercept them there, should they be in time, so that I have yet some hopes they may be taken.

Enclosed I send the examination of two of the party that I sent on a scout to Oswego this day se'nnight. By their account, it is probable Sergeant Younglove, Sergeant Ahen, and James McGennis, all of my regiment, are either killed or taken by the Messagauga Indians. The guide says, he is sure, by their language, the Indians were of that nation. Two of the Onandagas are now with me, that brought the two men that escaped from the other side of the Lake. I shall pay them to their satisfaction for this friendly act of theirs.

McMichael, who is gone to the enemy, knows our situation respecting ammunition, which he will most certainly discover to them. We have now only two thousand one hundred and sixty musket cartridges, and no paper and thread to make any more.

I hope cash will very soon be sent to us, as I wish neither officers or soldiers should have any cause to complain, as they both do at present, having near four months' pay due. If a small matter of hard cash could be spared, so that each officer might have a little, I know it would be very acceptable; and to please them at this time, in my opinion, would not be amiss.

I am not sure we have got yet to the bottom of this cursed rebellion against the States. Could wish Captain Bloomfield and Dickerson's companies were ordered here; they have officers I can depend upon.

I have not heard anything of Oneida Indians for scouts. Without them, I fear difficulty in getting intelligence from Oswego in future. I am, dear General, your most humble servant,

ELIAS DAYTON.

To General Schuyler.

Information given by RICHARD BELL and SAMUEL FREEMAN, concerning the Scout which went from FORT SCHUYLER to OSWEGO, consisting of two Sergeants, two men, and a guide.

The scout left Fort Schuyler August the 7th, and the 15th instant one man and the guide returned. Nothing material happened on their march, until they arrived at Oswego, when they saw a bark canoe and a small hut, about three hundred yards from the fort; from which hut they saw an Indian run towards the fort, and meet another Indian near the gate. They stood, as the scout imagined, about a minute, when they both ran into the fort, occasioned, as they thought, by the Indian who ran from the hut having seen them. The scout discovered no troops nor vessels at Oswego—not even a white person; but seeing the Indians run, imagined they intended hiding themselves; upon which, Sergeant Younglove, who commanded the party, determined to march back as far as the place where they had tarried the night before, (in order to rest themselves and clean their guns, which were much out of order by reason of the rain,) which was about six miles from Oswego. They went on without any kind of molestation, until they came within about half a mile of the place where they intended to halt, when they were fired upon all on a sudden by about ten Indians, as they imagined; upon which Sergeant Younglove ordered each man to take a tree. They quickly obeyed, and made ready to engage; but unluckily their guns were so wet that they could by no means fire them. Sergeant Younglove's gun burnt priming about ten times; the other guns flashed several times; one of the men's guns went off, but supposed did no execution, as the powder was much damaged, though the Indian he fired at bawled out. The Indians fired about two rounds, when Sergeant Ahen dropped his gun and cried out that he was a dead man; and at the same time he was heard to say, Do not run boys, but fix your bayonets if they come near you. When he had uttered those words, Mr. Bell, the guide, as he thought, saw him roll down the bank. Upon that, Mr. Bell called to Sergeant Younglove, and Maginnes, a soldier next him, to come down the bank, then they could stand them. Sergeant Younglove made him no answer, but still continued clearing the touchhole, in order to fire his gun. Upon that Mr. Bell went down the bank himself, upon which Freeman, a soldier, immediately followed. When they had got out of sight, they heard two guns fire; after which they heard nothing more. Then Mr. Bell, and Freeman, the soldier who followed him down the bank, and had received wounds, one in his head and another in his shoulder, immediately made off in the woods about six miles, then returned to the river, where they found the enemy's track still in pursuit of them. They repeated it three times, and every time still found the footsteps of the enemy in the mud and grass. They then left the river and marched about eighteen miles, when they fell in with two friendly Onondaga Indians, who conducted them about twenty miles, where they met with two other Indians of the same nation, who conducted them on until they fell in with another scouting party sent out to meet them; after which they were all safely conducted to Fort Schuyler. What became of Sergeant Young- love, and Maginnes, the soldier who Mr. Bell called to come down the bank with him, he can give no account of, but supposed killed when the two last guns went off.

The reader will please to take notice, that the Indians who fired upon this scout were of the nation called the Musasaugans.

GENERAL SCHUYLER'S CONFERENCE WITH THE INDIANS OF THE SIX NATIONS, 1776.

German-Flats, Thursday, August 8, 1776.

Speech of the Commissioners to the Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations.

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations: With this string we open your ears, that you may plainly hear what the Independent States of America have to say to their brethren of the Six Nations. With it we wipe away all mists that may interrupt your sight, and let it clear your hearts from every obstruction, and incline them to receive our words with brotherly love.

Brothers: We thank God that he has been pleased to suffer us to meet you in health. May sickness never enter into your country, but may health and happiness dwell in your habitations, and may the Six Nations be a great and happy people.—(A string.)

The Council-fire which is now burning at this place, has been kindled by a spark taken from the great Council-fire at Albany. We have brought it here in our bosoms. We have lighted it up here, because we were afraid that the small-pox might infect our brethren of the Six Nations if they went farther down the river, and that some of them might go home with heavy hearts for the loss of their relations; and we hope this conduct of the Commissioners meets with your approbation.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations: The United Colonies have always been in hopes that a reconciliation would take place between us and the King. To that end they have frequently petitioned the King for redress of the grievances they laboured under; but he would not listen to their petitions. He was deaf, and would not give ear to their complaints; and instigated by his evil counselors, he forgot that we were his children; he wanted to make us his slaves. To accomplish this unjust and cruel purpose, he has sent his armies and fleets to try to destroy and distress us; and therefore the United Colonies—when they found that he had become a cruel and oppressive father that hated them, and that he had not only given the hatchet to the English on the other side of the water, but had also sent it to the few friends he had amongst us, ordering them to put it into the hands of our negroes, and whoever would accept it, to strike us—have unanimously left his house, and now no longer consider him as their father and King, and have accordingly proclaimed to all the world that they will never hereafter acknowledge him, or any of his family, to be their King, but that they will always be and remain a free and independent people; and therefore have called themselves the Independent States of America, and solemnly agreed always to remain firmly united. We must, for the future, be called the Commissioners of the United and Independent States of America; and that you may remember this great event, we now deliver you this belt.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations: Now open your ears, and listen attentively to what the Independent States of America have further to say to you, for in their names we speak. Our speech will be plain, as it always has been; for as we have never been, we scorn to be double-minded. It will be the speech of freemen who will candidly tell you your faults. You shall know all that is in our hearts. We will hide nothing from you, that you may know our intentions clearly and fully.

Brothers: You will remember, that soon after the King's warriors had begun to spill the blood of the inhabitants of this great Island, the United Colonies called you together at Albany. They there rekindled the ancient Council-fire, and brightened up the covenant chain that had bound your ancestors and ours together in bands of the purest love and sincerest friendship. It was last summer that we, the Commissioners, met you there on that pleasing business. We then gave you a full, a fair, and a candid account of the cause of the quarrel between us and the King; we did not do it in a dark corner, as those that mean evil, but in the presence of all that would come to see and hear, that they might witness the truth of what we said. When we had related this, we informed you, that as we were unhappily engaged in a family quarrel, in which the Six Nations were not in the least concerned, either one way or the other, we desired and expected that you should not assist the one or the other, but remain quietly and peaceably at home, and mind your own business. We confirmed our words with a large belt.

Brothers: The answer you made was delivered by Abraham, the Mohawk Sachem, whom you had chosen as your speaker. These were his words: We shall repeat them exactly: "Now, therefore, attend, and apply your ears closely. We have fully considered this matter. The resolutions of the Six Nations are not to be broken or altered. When they resolve, the matter is fixed. This, then, is the determination of the Six Nations: Not to take any part, but, as it is a family quarrel, to sit still and see you fight it out. It is a long time since we came to this resolution. It is the result of mature deliberation. It was our declaration to Colonel Johnson. We told him we would take no part in the quarrel, and hoped neither side would desire it. Whoever applies first, we shall think is in the wrong. The resolutions of the Six Nations are not to be shaken."

Brothers: These words and these resolutions pleased us well, because what you declared was what we requested—that you should take no part in the quarrel, but sit still and see us fight it out; and because we believed that you were sincere, and that you said nothing with your tongue but what you had in your hearts. Your speech was delivered in full Council and in the presence of a number of people. We had therefore the highest reason to expect that you would strictly have abode by your resolutions. But, brothers, we now ask you, whether you have abode by these wise words, and adhered to these prudent resolutions? It grieves us to say that you have not; that you have acted directly contrary to your solemn engagements, and broken that faith which you plighted and which we depended upon, as we shall now plainly make appear, by repeating a number of facts which are known to you all, and which you cannot contradict or deny.

First. When our Army went to St. John's last year, your people interfered in the quarrel, by joining with our enemies in attacking our warriors; and thus the resolutions of the Six Nations were broken and altered, although you had said they were not to be broken or altered.

Secondly. When our Great Council at Philadelphia was informed that Sir John Johnson was inlisting men, and that he and the Highlanders who lived about Johnstown were preparing to murder our friends, they sent some warriors to disarm them, and then you again interfered in the quarrel. You were very troublesome, and threatened us, although we had sent you word that no harm was intended you, for that we had no quarrel with the Indians; and thus the resolutions of the Six Nations were again broken and altered.

Thirdly. When our Great Council, in the month of May last, had received certain intelligence that Sir John Johnson was inlisting men, and preparing to join the enemy, they ordered up a body of warriors; but lest you should be alarmed, Mr. Douw went up to the east end of the house to inform you that no evil was intended you; yet you nevertheless interfered in the quarrel; Mr. Douw was insulted with abusive language, and Mr. Bleeker, the Interpreter, was threatened and seized by the breast, contrary to the custom of all nations, (for the person of an ambassador and a messenger of peace is always held sacred;) and thus the resolutions of the Six Nations were a third time broken and altered.

Fourthly. Although you knew that Sir John Johnson was inlisting men, and preparing to go to the enemy, contrary to the most solemn agreement with us, yet you not only assisted him in going to the enemy, but even threatened to kill our warriors, and actually appeared in arms for that hostile purpose; and thus you again interfered in the quarrel, and a fourth time broke and altered your resolutions.

Fifthly. Contrary to your resolutions, you have opened your ears, and given ear to the voice of our enemies, and complied with their desires. Butler has prevailed upon you to go into Canada, and fight against us (at Taghtagh Quineagie.) As we had no quarrel with any Indians, as we had even released those that we had taken prisoners in battle, we were surprised to find any Indians fighting against us; but when we were told that some of the Six Nations were there, and had joined our enemies; that they had struck the axe in our heads, and covered the ground with the bones of our warriors, and defiled the earth with their blood, after having but a little time before promised to remain neutral, we could hardly believe it at first; but upon inquiry, we found it was true: your axe still sticks in our heads; and thus you again interfered in the quarrel, and a fifth time broke and altered your resolutions.

Sixthly. You have also lately, upon this river, in the midst of the inhabitants, wickedly and wilfully fired on, attacked, and destroyed a batteau loaded with flour, which was coming up here for the use of our warriors, and to feed you at this treaty; and thereby you have again insulted us, and interfered in the quarrel, and a sixth time broken and altered the resolutions of the Six Nations.

Thus, brothers, we have mentioned six instances in which the resolutions of the Six Nations have been contravened, although you told us, in full council at Albany, that they were not to be broken or altered, and that when you have resolved, the matter was fixed; and thus, also, instead of sitting still, and seeing us fight it out, as you also told us you would do, you have actually assisted our enemies, and taken an active part in the quarrel against us; thereby opening your ears to, and listening to the advice of our enemies, by complying with their request, although you expressly said that whoever applied first, you should think was in the wrong.

Now, brothers, tell us, if you can, when we have asked you to interfere in the quarrel? When and where have we desired your assistance? Have we given you a blood belt? Have we offered you the axe? Have we roasted an Englishman, and desired you to drink his blood? You cannot say that we have ever done any of these things, and yet our enemies have done all this. You have told us so yourselves, and you cannot deny it. We have always said that we were not afraid of our enemies; we say so still. We have never asked you to fight for us, and some of you have fought for them. Was this well done? God, who knows all things, knows that it was not. You yourselves know that it was not. We know it was not. And although you have thus unjustly taken up arms against us, and although we felt the blows, and although the axe still sticks in our heads, yet we have forborne to take revenge, because your ancestors and ours always had a great affection and friendship for each other, and faithfully kept the covenant they made with each other in such a manner that both were happy, both were pleased, and peace dwelt in their habitations, and because we had resolved to make our complaint in full council, and lay our grievances before the whole Six Nations, as we now do, expecting that you will speak as plain as we do, and remove all cause of complaint for the future.

Brothers: Again attend to the voice of all the white people on this great Island. They say that they have not injured you. They say that they wish to live in friendship with all Indians, and in particular with the Six Nations, who are their near neighbours, and with whom their ancestors have always lived in peace and friendship. They say that you have unjustly injured and insulted them. They say that, as they are freemen, as free as you are, and now fighting to preserve that freedom, they will not suffer themselves to be affronted, injured, and insulted with impunity by you or any men on earth. They will do as you have formerly done, as you still do, and as you have a right to do, that is, to guard themselves against any enemy whatsoever by any just means in their power.

Brothers: We know that many of you are honest men, faithful to your engagements, holding sacred the faith you have plighted, and bearing a brotherly affection to the inhabitants of this great Island. These we love, respect, and honour; and we call God to witness that we will do them every kindness in our power, and never give them the least cause of complaint. We also know who are our enemies, although we do not know why; we have given them no cause to be such.

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations: We have spoken plainly; we will, if possible, speak more plainly; open, therefore, your ears, that you may clearly hear and understand the declaration of the Independent States of America. It is this: that they mean to live in friendship, and cultivate a good understanding, and maintain a friendly intercourse with all Indians; and that, in answer to this, they do require that all Indians should declare their intentions; and therefore ask the Six Nations now convened around this Council-fire of peace, what their intentions are? If they mean to live in friendship, to cultivate a good understanding, and maintain a friendly intercourse with us, we require that they take the hatchet out of our heads, and that none of them will again assist our enemies; in which case, we do most solemnly promise that we will love and cherish them, and treat them with the greatest kindness and affection, and that we will forever hereafter rather die than wrong them, or suffer others to do it. But if any amongst you should so far forget their own interest as now to become or continue our enemies, after all the kindness and forbearance we have shown, let them say so, that all the white people of this great Island may know what they have to depend upon. No person shall molest them here or on their way, for it shall never be said we injured or insulted people with whom we were in treaty, although they intended to be our enemies.

Brothers: We have done our duty; we have spoken plainly; we request you will do the same; we shall become open enemies, or warm and inviolable friends. We wish for your friendship, not out of fear, but out of love, and that a good understanding may prevail between the white inhabitants of this great Island and the Six Nations, until the sun should grow dim with age; and it will be your fault if we do not part as good friends with the Six Nations, and remain so hereafter, as your ancestors and ours were in the time of Queder, when they fought side by side against the common enemy.

Brothers: We have now spoken our minds fully; you cannot charge us with deceit. Our conduct has been invariably the same from the time we first met in Albany to this day. We have not said one thing and done another, as our enemies have done; and, as you now know all that is in our hearts, we desire you to think seriously of it, and to speak your thoughts fairly and fully, and not be double-hearted. Do not say one thing and think another, for that is shameful in a private man, and in private affairs; but scandalous in public bodies, and in public business.

This belt, on which our wishes are described, and which denotes what we hope will take place, that is, a firm union between the Six Nations and the Thirteen United States of America,—this belt, we say, confirms our words.—(The large belt.)

— Friday, August 9, 1776.

Present: The Hon. Major-General Schuyler, Timothy Edwards, and Volkert P. Douw, Esquires, Commissioners, &c.; Colonel Van Dyck, Major Barber, and several other officers and gentlemen from the Counties of Albany and Tryon, and the Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations, the Mohegans, and Delawares.

ABRAHAM, the Mohawk Sachem, delivered the following Answer to the Commissioner's Speech:

Brothers: We are this day convened at the place appointed for the meeting. You informed us, when you parted, that you had delivered your whole mind to us. We have had your words under consideration. We hope you will excuse us our not answering before, as you desired us to speak our minds fully and freely without dissimulation. We are determined to do it, and you may depend that what the Six Nations now say does not come only from their lips.

Brothers: We hope you will excuse us if, in our reply, we do not mention everything that was delivered to us. We will endeavour only to mention the principal things. You informed us that the Council-fire which you had kindled at this place, was kindled from a spark brought from the Great Council-fire anciently kindled by our ancestors at Albany. You informed us, likewise, that the reason of your kindling it here was, that we might not in our way down be infected with the small-pox; and that you hoped that, by your kindling it here, you and your brethren of the Six Nations might part with your minds at ease, and not grieved for the loss of any of their friends.

Brothers: We thank you for your prudence in kindling the Council-fire at this place, and the whole Six Nations return you their thanks.—(A belt of seven rows, four diagonal bars, and a square.)

Brothers: You informed us that since the difficulties had arisen between you and the great King, you had made frequent applications for redress of your grievances; that the King, instead of complying with your requests, had (as it were) shut his ears to your complaints; that you had therefore given up all hopes of redress. You then informed us, that in consequence of that, you had declared yourselves to be free and independent of the great King; that there were thirteen Provinces united in this resolution, and that you had determined to be forever free and independent; and by this belt (holding up the belt we had given them in his hand) you made us acquainted with this determination.

Brothers: The whole Six Nations take this opportunity to thank you that you have acquainted us with your determination in so publick a manner; and we shall for the future consider you as thirteen independent States.—(A white belt, eight rows.)

Brothers, the Commissioners of the Independent States, attend: We are this day called together to speak of peace. You see, brothers, that the day is ended. Our ancestors have forbid us from treating of matters of peace in the evening. We would therefore propose it to your consideration whether it would not be best to defer it till to-morrow morning?

Deferred till to-morrow.

Saturday, August 10, 1776.

Present as before.

The Oneida Sachem spoke as follows:

Brothers, the Commissioners, attend: We have again brought our pipes together at this place of publick meeting. When you spoke to us, you informed us that you spoke to us in the name of the Thirteen United Provinces. We hope you will excuse us if we do not repeat all you have said, as you have it all committed to writing; it is not, indeed, very necessary. You informed us, brethren, in your speech, that when the warriors of the great King had begun to spill the blood of the people on this great Island, that the Thirteen United Colonies then rekindled the ancient Council-fire which was formerly kept burning at Albany. You also informed us that the quarrel between you and the great King was a family quarrel, in which we were not concerned; you therefore desired that the Six Nations would remain quiet at home, and mind nothing but peace. You likewise told us that we had returned this for answer: that we had firmly agreed not to take any part in the quarrel; but that as it was a family quarrel, we would remain at home and mind nothing but peace. These you said were the resolutions we had then taken, and which we delivered in the most publick manner; and that you had all the reason in the world to think us sincere.

Brothers: Attend. We take this opportunity to thank you for speaking plainly, and telling us our faults; the whole Six Nations thank you for it. We will, agreeably to your desire, also speak clearly and plainly.—(A belt of nine rows, five squares connected with a path.)

ABRAHAM, the Mohawk Sachem, then spoke as follows:

Brothers, the Commissioners appointed by the Thirteen United Colonies, attend: You have desired us to speak our minds with the greatest plainness, which we will now accordingly do.

Brothers: It is your desire that we should speak in particular to every article charged against us. I shall relate how we who live at the east end of the house have been guilty of a fault in this affair.

Brothers: At the Council-fire which was rekindled from the ancient Council-fire which had been kindled by our ancestors at Albany, and at which we renewed the former covenant which had been made between our forefathers and the Twelve United Colonies, you opened the path of peace to all the Six Nations to Albany. You had before told us that you would pursue your enemies wherever you could find them, and that you would, if they could not be reclaimed, kill all disaffected persons wherever you could come across them. The Six Nations then thanked you for what you had done; that you had opened the path of peace and renewed the Council-fire at Albany. At the same time, they desired that, as there were many persons along this road who were attached to the King, you would not defile the newly-opened path of peace with their blood, but suffer them to remain in peace.

Brothers: You will attend particularly to what I am going to relate, as we will speak plain, as you desired us to do. The Six Nations, at the treaty held at Albany last summer, had agreed to be perfectly neutral, and to mind nothing but peace on both sides. Last winter, brothers, you sent up a message to inform us that you were coming up with two thousand men, to inquire of and take care of the people called Tories. You desired us to possess our minds in peace, as no evil was intended us, and desired that your message might be sent forward to this house. We then considered the matter; and as it was represented to us that these men came up only to inquire into the truth of matters, we thought two or three men might have done that business without molestation, as it would be beneath men to injure so small a number sent on such a design. We then sent down to meet the party that was coming up; I myself was one of those who went down on the occasion to desire that the main body might stop, and that a small part might be sent to make the inquiry. The General informed us that the main body could not be stopped; that he had his orders for what he did, and that he was under a necessity of proceeding. He likewise told us that no blood would be spilt on the occasion, if the people whom he was sent to would comply with certain terms which he had directions to propose. It is not necessary, brothers, to repeat over the whole of this affair very circumstantially; but for the satisfaction of the Council, I will mention the principal transactions. After this interview at Schenectady, you stopped short of Major Fonda's, where we came over in the evening to see you, but you were not there. Some time late at night, you sent for us to come down to you; accordingly, I and one more went; and in passing by Colonel Claus's, a gun was discharged at us, and there I had almost been killed in pursuing peace. After we arrived at your lodging, Sir John, it seems, had just left you, and you informed us of the conversation that had passed between you, and the proposals you had made to him. You then let us know that we might go to Sir John, and inform ourselves whether such proposals had been made to him; and upon our going out to him, we were convinced of the truth of your information, and we desired Sir John to comply with the proposals that had been made to him, as he could not possibly resist the body of men that were coming out against him. We desired Sir John to go in person to see you. He said he would consider of it; but finally he sent one in his name. At last things were so settled as to prevent the shedding of blood. We were induced to be thus active in the affair from a desire of preventing the shedding of blood on both sides; and this, brothers, is the conduct which you accuse us for, and which we think excusable on account of our intention. Our cousins of the Upper Castle were with those of the Lower at the time.

Brothers: Before the arrival of Colonel Dayton, the whole Six Nations had a Council at Onondaga, wherein they had agreed that they would mind nothing but peace. Immediately after this Council at Onondaga, a party of the Six Nations went down to Albany, and another to Niagara, as they had agreed to cultivate peace. The Oequagues and Caughnawagas were at Albany at the time, when they repeated the agreement which they had made at the Council at Onondaga. They then requested, and you promised, that there should be no fighting near our house, as both parties were strong, and they might injure the Indians in the struggle, and that you would confine yourselves to the sea-coasts. When our party that went to Albany returned home, and very soon after they had repeated their transactions at Albany, Mr. Douw came up to inform them that there was a party coming up to Sir John's. Mr. Douw, when he came up, desired us to possess our minds in peace, as the party coming up was not designed against us. You say that Mr. Douw was used in an abusive manner, and Blecker threatened, which we confess; for while they were there, one of our young warriors came in drunk, and used him in the manner you mention. We desired the warriors to remain quiet; but some of them took their arms, and, contrary to the inclinations of the Sachems, went down, while those that were obedient remained with the great men who take care of the news. Upon our arrival at Johnstown, we found a number of our warriors who had had a meeting with Colonel Dayton to inquire his business there. Colonel Dayton told them that he had no designs against the Indians; that though he was not afraid of them, he was unwilling to shed their blood; and requested that they would be quiet. He spoke much more in a friendly manner, which it is unnecessary to repeat. Our warriors then returned home, and the Sachems reproved them for their conduct. They acknowledged their fault, and promised not to be guilty of the like misconduct for the future, informing them that the person who had been the cause of it was now gone, though he had gone off without their assistance. As I have authority to speak for the warriors, I now declare that they are sorry for their misconduct, and that they will for the future obey their uncles the Sachems, who take care of the news.—(A belt of eleven rows, with four diagonal bars.)

SOSCOHOLAANA, a Sachem of the Mohawks, then delivered the following Speech:

One of the articles of accusation is pointed at me. I was conscious of guilt at the time it was mentioned, but sat still, as it was an improper time for me to speak. I waited to confess it in the most publick manner in a meeting of the whole Six Nations. The accusation against me is just. I have destroyed a bateau load of provisions while it was coming up; and I may, perhaps, be the means of the Six Nations being in want of provisions while at this Council-fire. The warriors are frequently passing and repassing to and from their hunting-ground; and when they return from hunting, it is usual for them to get liquor. I, with a party, was just then returning, and we had procured some liquor, and destroyed the flour as you mention. Some of our people went down the next day and found the flour destroyed, but the persons who had done it were gone again into the woods hunting. The generality of our warriors are now together; and a day or two ago we every one declared our sentiments separately, and all agreed not to be guilty of like excesses for the future, but that they would behave themselves regularly and orderly. What I have now said does not come only from my lips, but from my heart.—(A belt of seven rows, with three variegated squares, two in the middle, the other at one of the ends.)

TAYCHANU. Brothers, the Commissioners, attend: I likewise desire the attention of the elder part of the Confederacy. I who now speak am a Sachem. I speak in the name of the Sachems of the Oneida, Tuscarora, and Cayuga Tribes. Our nephews the warriors are not included. You have desired us, in your speech, to speak plainly, whether we are for peace, or for having our minds separated from our brethren of the United Provinces. We, therefore, the Sachems of the Oneida and Tuscarora Tribes, declare that we are for peace; that we have not the least inclination to be divided from our ancient brethren the Dutch. We determine to maintain it forever; and hope that our women, our children, and warriors, may always remain in peace. God, who knows and hears what we say, and who disapproves of those who break their covenants, we hope will enable us to persevere in the resolution which we now make. We now strengthen and renew our former covenant. If, brothers, you are the least apprehensive that there is any deceit in us, we desire that you will declare it; and if it has appeared either in the actions of us the Sachems, or in those of our warriors, we desire that you will tell us. I speak for the Sachems of the whole Tribes of the Oneidas and Tuscaroras, with our nephews the Delawares. This is all I have to say.—(Two belts, one of ten rows and three squares on it, the other with six rows, with seven diagonal bars.)

Monday, August 12, 1776.

Present: The Hon. Major-General Schuyler, Timothy Edwards, Esq., and several officers and gentlemen from the Counties of Albany and Tryon.

The COMMISSIONERS proceeded to deliver their Reply in answer to the Six Nations, as follows:

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations: Our ears have been open, and we have attentively listened to the answers which you have jointly and severally made to our speech. We have fully considered what you have said. Give ear, and attend to our reply. You began your answer with the belt now in our hands. You declared that you would speak your minds fully and freely, and that the Independent States of America might depend upon what the Six Nations should say. You then approved the reasons we gave for lighting the Council-fire at this place.

Brothers: The assurance you give us, that you would be sincere in what you said, pleases us well; because both you and we should never dissemble or deceive each other, as such conduct would be unworthy our characters as free nations.

Brothers: With this belt you answered the Declaration of the Thirteen United Colonies, that they had become States independent of the King of Great Britain. You thanked us for having acquainted you with this event, and that you would henceforth consider them as such. Brothers, it is well.

Brothers: With this belt you recapitulated the first part of our speech, with the large belt, and you thanked us for reminding you of the promise and resolutions of the Six Nations at Albany, and for the justness of our observations upon them; and you concluded with declaring that, agreeable to our request, you would speak clearly and plainly. Brothers, we commend that declaration, and we hope both of us will ever hereafter speak plainly, that the sentiments of our hearts may be known to each other, for that will make our friendship lasting.

Brothers: The Mohawks then proceeded to answer some of the six particulars in which we had charged you of interfering in the quarrel between the King of Great Britain and the white inhabitants of this Island. As the Mohawks spoke first, we shall answer them first, and after them, all the other Nations in the order in which they spoke.

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Mohawk, attend: With the belt now in our hands, you spoke to some of the six charges we have made in our speech to the Six Nations. Your answer to the second charge we are not pleased with. It is not satisfactory, because you did not state the facts truly as they happened. As you related the matter, we should have had no reason to complain. Your memories fail you, as we shall make appear by informing you before the whole Six Nations of what passed on that occasion. It is this: We sent you a message last winter from Albany, advising you that we had intelligence that several persons in and about Johnstown were inlisting men to cut our throats, and were making other hostile preparations against us; that we intended to march our warriors up, to inquire into the truth of the report, and act thereupon as we should judge needful; that no harm was intended you or any Indians. In your answer to this, you desired that the troops might not come up; "that if they did, it would create uneasiness in your minds, as you and Sir John were of one blood." You also refused to send our message immediately to the end of the house. We therefore thought it necessary to send another message to the Six Nations, to convince them that we had no intention to break the covenant or defile the path of peace with blood; but that we were resolved to follow our enemies wherever they went. Brothers, although Sir John was of your blood, although he had been a Mohawk, we should have been justified in preventing him from cutting our throats. His conduct since has sufficiently convinced all the world of his evil intentions, for he has now joined our enemy.

Brothers, at Schenectady you told us that Sir John Johnson was not making any hostile preparations; that he had no cannon; that you would have known it if he had; and yet we found cannon there, well charged and mounted upon carriages newly made on purpose for them. This you cannot deny, for you saw us bring them away. Brothers, you also told us if we carried matters to extremity that your warriors would not be restrained, and you would not be answerable for their conduct; and as a proof that you knew that your warriors meant to fight, you asked what treatment those that remained at home might expect. In our answer, we told you that we were not going to shut the path of peace, but to open it. We assured you that none of our warriors should set their feet on your lands unless our enemy took shelter there; for that we were resolved to follow them wherever they went, and we desired you to inform your warriors that if they joined our enemies that we would do as we had done at St. John's, and repel force with force; and this we surely have a right to do, and will always do.

Brothers, as to our people's firing last winter, you ought to be ashamed to mention it. You very well know that a sled full of white people were passing just at the time you did, and that the sentry challenged, and they would not stop, upon which he fired. He did his duty; and you know very well that no harm was intended to you.

Brothers, we might say a great deal more to convince the Six Nations that we had the greatest reason to complain of your conduct; and we could clearly demonstrate that the people who are the cause of your misconduct, have never been your real friends; and neither they nor their ancestors ever consulted your true interest, and this your children will be convinced of. But, brothers, as the hatchet which stuck in our heads is taken out and buried, we will also bury all animosities. But that our friendship may be lasting, it is necessary that your people should strictly abide by the covenant you have now made with us, which you say you are empowered to do by all the warriors, as well as the Sachems, and that they should know that we have a right to follow our enemies wherever they go; that we will do it; and that we will consider all such as join them to be our enemies, and will treat them as such, and revenge every injury after your own manner. This belt confirms our words.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Upper Mohawk Castle: The candid confession you made with this belt of the charge that was particularly pointed at you, we will for this time take as a sufficient satisfaction; but you must not hereafter plead drunkenness as an excuse for such crimes, nor will we be satisfied, if you again so highly injure us, with a few wampum and fair promises. Having told you our minds, we are made perfectly easy by your honest confession. This belt confirms our words.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Onondaga and Seneca Nations: Our ears have opened to your speech; we have paid due attention to its contents, we have considered it well. We shall make remarks on such parts as more immediately concern the great business which we have convened you for. You say your warriors went into Canada by the persuasion of a chief warrior, who is entirely averse to peace. Brothers, we have now made peace together, and we hope everything is amicably settled; but if again broken, you must remember that we will not be put off with barely saying that you are sorry for it, and giving a belt to confirm your words. We shall expect some better satisfaction—a satisfaction equal to the injury done; for what would you say if some of our warriors were to go, under a pretence of fetching news and talking of peace, into your country, and when they were there assisted your enemies in destroying you and knocking you on the head? If you complained to us, would you be contented if we said there was a wicked man who was their Captain and who prevailed on them to do it? We know that you would not; you would not even complain; but you would take revenge on the first of us which you met, and even upon our women and children. However, as you are sorry for what is done, we shall bury and forget it. But remember, that as we treat with you as nations, we expect that the treaty shall be fully complied with; for it is your duty to consult the interest of your nation, and to punish those that are the cause of a quarrel that may involve you in ruin, by setting you at variance with your best friends; and as this is our resolution, and as we mean to live in peace and friendship with you, we were glad to hear that the sachems and chief warriors of eleven of the Seneca Castles met and resolved for the future to restrain their warriors, and that the Onondagans had done the same, and that they would be at peace with us. These are wise reasons, tending as much to your happiness as to ours. This belt confirms our words.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems of the Oneida and Tuscarora Nations: The belt now in our hands is that with which you addressed us; with which you declared your friendly intentions; with which you renewed the covenant of peace that has so long existed between our ancestors and yours. The tree of peace which you planted so long ago has greatly flourished of late. It has spread a pleasing shade far and near. Its boughs have grown strong and its leaves broad. It has not been shaken by any of the storms that have lately blown with so much violence. Not a leaf has dropped from it. It is perfect, and be assured that it will yield fruits which will nourish you and your posterity and make you grow. We are happy, brothers, that your nephews, the Delawares, have taken shelter under its shade. They will also receive the benefit and the comforts of it.

Brothers: We never thought that you made use of any deceit. We have never thought that you intended to break the covenant you have made with us. We heartily join with you in hoping that God will enable you to persevere in your good resolutions. We promise on our parts, by the blessing of that Being, that you shall never have cause to complain of us; that you will find us warm and true friends. This belt confirms our words.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Cayuga Nation: In our speech we did not particularly point at the Cayugas. Our speech was general, and calculated for the whole. The method you have taken to answer separately has put it in your power to justify yourselves as far as you can. We are glad to hear that by your advice the misconduct of the Six Nations is usually rectified. If the people residing in Virginia have at any time injured you, we are sorry for it. If they have done it since the quarrel begun between the King of Great Britain and us, you shall have the fullest satisfaction given you whenever you shall make it appear. If before that time, and you have not had satisfaction, it was the fault of the King of England's Governours, and his Governours are not ours. They generally attended to his interests only. It is not our fault, brothers, that traders have not gone amongst you. We had given leave to traders to go to Niagara, and others were making ready to go amongst the Six Nations; but as soon as we were informed that Butler had prevailed upon some of the Six Nations to go to Canada, they (the traders) were stopped, and would not go on lest they should be knocked on the head.

Brothers: You say that when the covenants made in the time of Queder recurred to your minds, in which it was agreed that if any difference should arise between us and you it should be immediately settled, that this composed your minds. Brothers, that good old custom we wish to abide by, and we now give an instance of it by settling all the differences between us and you; and we hear with great satisfaction that both the sachems and the warriors of the Cayugas, and their younger brothers, the Tototoes, are strongly disposed to peace, and that it has never entered your minds to separate from us, or break the connexion which has so long bound us together in friendship.

Brothers: We are not behindhand with you in these friendly sentiments. Brothers, we are glad that you have given charge to the Tajaghwendy to bring away your warriors from Canada. We hope they are by this time returned to their Castles; and we hope, that when you inform them of what has been passed here, they will possess their minds in peace, and remain quietly at home.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Warriors of the Oneidas, Oghquagas, Tuscaroras, and those of Canassadaga: You have heard the declaration we have made to your Sachems. As you have acted upon the same just and peaceable principles, what we said to them is applicable to you too, and we entreat you to consider it as such. We are greatly pleased that you avow that what was said in our first speech is true, and that you need not be ashamed of it. We know, brothers, that you are not to blame; but as we were to speak to the Six Nations, it was necessary that the charges should be general, leaving it to those who had been in the fault to take it to themselves, and to those who were innocent to say so. This you have done. It rejoices us that you declare, that as we only desire peace and have given no offence, you equally desire peace, and that, as we are born and bred together in this place, we ought to love each other. These are good sentiments. They are sentiments which show wisdom and a friendly disposition. You desire us to tell you if anything grieves us; that you will immediately give satisfaction. We say you have done nothing to grieve us, and we have the fullest confidence in your perseverance. The youngest of your warriors we hope will not go astray, as we imagine they will not act contrary to the advice of the Sachems and the elder warriors. You say, brothers, that if anything fatal should happen, and any one should strike a hatchet into your heads, that you expect it shall immediately be removed. Be assured, brothers, that we shall take care that no injury shall be committed by any of our people. If any should, we will not only immediately punish the offenders, but give you the fullest satisfaction. If any one else should injure you, we shall, immediately upon your request, assist you to take revenge, for we are always ready to assist the injured.—(A belt.)

Brothers, Sachems and Warriors of the Six Nations: With these belts in our hands you have taken hold of the covenant of peace. You have repented of your misconduct towards us in the articles we have mentioned. You have told us, that although the hatchet was stuck in our heads, it was not in consequence of any resolutions entered into by the Confederacy, but that it was done by those of unsteady minds, and that the Six Nations have taken out the hatchet which they have stuck in our heads. Brothers, with this belt, you say you have so deeply buried the axe that none of your posterity will be able to find it again. Brothers, it gives us pleasure that you have received the covenant of peace with us. It is your duty, as well as ours, that it should be most strictly kept. This cannot be done unless the warriors of all the nations keep fast hold of the tree of peace with our brothers the warriors of Oneida, Oghquaga, Tuscarora, and Canassadaga. If any of the Six Nations join the enemy and fight against us, the peace will again be broken. It will be foolish again and again to enter into treaty with all of you, for we shall only have the same promises made, and they will be broken in like manner. In short, as we began by speaking plain, we will end so. Should the hatchet of any of the nations who have heretofore broke the covenant, after this solemn treaty, be stuck in our heads, words and wampum only will not be able to remove it.

Brothers: As we have, like honest men, disburdened our minds and spoke freely; as you have given us satisfaction for the injuries we have sustained; as you have taken the hatchet out of our heads; as you have buried it deep in the earth; as you have renewed the covenant of peace; and as we now possess our minds in peace, fully relying on everything you have said, we shall bury all animosities, we shall forget all injuries, and we shall proclaim that peace and good understanding prevails between the Independent States of America, the Six Nations, their nephews the Delawares, and other their dependants. This belt confirms my words.—(A belt.)

Tuesday, August 13, 1776.

PETER, the Chief Warrior of the Oneida Nation, made the following Speech in behalf of the Warriors of the Oneida and Tuscarora Nations:

Brothers: You will excuse me from making remarks on some passages of your speech in reply to that of the Six Nations. You told us, brothers, after assuring us of your peaceable intentions, that if any difference should arise between you and us, and we should again strike the hatchet in your heads, you would not again be satisfied with fair promises and a few wampum. This declaration, brothers, is not connected with the covenants of peace anciently made between our ancestors at Albany. When our ancestors first met, they agreed that they should take each other by the hand, and that no storms, nor even thunder, should be able to break their union. By this covenant, our ancestors agreed that no private quarrels should be deemed an infraction of it, but that such disputes should be amicably settled between them. The eyes of all the neighbouring tribes are turned to this Council-fire, and as matters may be represented wrong, it would grieve us if any difference should now arise.

He then addressed himself to the elder part of the Confederacy, recommending moderation, and that they should not suffer little matters to ruffle their minds.

The COMMISSIONERS then answered:

Brothers, Warriors of the Oneida and Tuscarora Nations: We have deliberated coolly; we have spoken plainly to you yesterday. We have no quarrel with the Indians. We would be glad to cultivate peace with the Six Nations, and our conduct shows that we have no evil intentions against them. And we would also be glad to preserve our lives and liberties. You say, when our ancestors first met, they agreed to take each other by the hand so firmly that no storms or even thunder should be able to break their union. Brothers, we mean to abide by the covenant of our ancestors.

ABRAHAM, the Mohawk Sachem, made the following Speech:

Brothers, the Commissioners appointed by the Thirteen United Provinces, attend: The whole Confederacy, consisting of the Six Nations, have this day taken hold of the covenant of peace. They have repented of their misconduct in the articles with which you have charged them. Our ancestors, when they settled the Confederacy, ordained that if any of their people should, without the consent of the Sachems, stick the hatchet in the heads of any of their neighbours; that those who take care of the news should make up the matter.

Brothers: Respecting the injury that the Six Nations have offered you: they have stuck the hatchet into your heads, but, brothers, it was not in consequence of any public resolution entered into, but it was done by those of unsteady minds. Now, therefore, brothers, we, the Six Nations, take out the hatchet which we have stuck in your heads.—(Two belts, eight rows each, one with thirteen rhombusses, the other five crosses.)

Brothers: Our ancestors likewise further directed, in order to bury the hatchet effectually, that a pine tree should be pulled up by the roots and that the hatchet should be flung into the hole. We, therefore, the Six Nations, according to the directions of our ancestors, pull up a pine tree, and drop the hatchet in the hole, under which runs a strong stream of water, which will carry the hatchet forever from the sight of our posterity. Now, therefore, brothers, the whole Six Nations, in order to cover the hole, bring a very large rock, which they lay on the mouth of it, to cover it so effectually that posterity will never be able to find the hole in which the hatchet was cast.—(A belt, seven rows, six squares, and one diagonal bar on it.)

The Speech of the Onondaga Sachem ONWASGWINGHTE, on behalf of his and the Seneca Tribe:

Brothers, the Commissioners appointed by the Thirteen United Colonies, attend: Our brothers, the Mohawks, have finished what they had to say respecting the articles of accusation which you had against them. I shall begin with what was transacted at the Council at Oswego. After the business was over, Colonel Johnson desired the Six Nations to send a deputation of two or three of each tribe with him to Caughnawaga, where he was to kindle up a Council-fire, that they might hear what he had to deliver, because they might otherwise think that he had delivered a speech different from the one he had delivered at Oswego. When they had done it he thanked them, but at the same time told them he would rather wish to have twenty of each tribe to attend him. Thus it happened that some of our warriors and some of our uncles, the Sachems, went with him, without informing our people that were left at home of it. After this, brothers, a party of us went down to Albany to inform you, our brethren, of what had been transacted at Oswego. At this place we met Colonel Francis and Mr. Douw, and informed them of it, but told them we were unacquainted with the conduct of our people then in Canada, though we supposed that they only attended the Council-fire of peace. When the Sachems and Warriors who went down to attend at Johnson's Council-fire returned, the Sachem brought with him the hatchet—a thing entirely unexpected, as we had given him no directions to do so, if Johnson should change his mind and make the offer. We therefore immediately considered the matter, and sent the axe down to Albany.

Brothers: When those Sachems and Warriors returned, as we have before related, they left some of their party still in Canada, and those that remained there, brothers, are the persons who have involved us in the difficulty under which we now labour.

Brothers: After the affair at Niagara, Colonel Johnson, when he went away, sent Colonel Butler to Niagara, at which place Colonel Butler called us together, and desired some of our people to go in a vessel to Oswegatchie, that they might whenever any intelligence arrived convey it to him; particularly if they should hear of Colonel Johnson's arrival at Quebeck, which he desired they would acquaint him with as soon as possible. He then treated them very plentifully; and a large number of them went aboard; in which party went a certain Onondaga chief warrior, whose disposition was such that he was entirely averse to anything of a peaceable nature. Upon his arrival at Oswegatchie, he, together with the principal warriors of the Mohawks and Senecas, prevailed on the younger warriors to change their minds, though Colonel Butler had strictly enjoined them on their departure that they should not make him ashamed of their behaviour by any misconduct of theirs, and that they should mind nothing but peace. A certain Indian, called Aboyderroy, was the principal cause of our warriors going in such numbers. A part of those who went to Oswegatchie, being disgusted at the proceedings of their chief warriors, returned to the Six Nations. As soon as the Senecas were acquainted with the transactions of their warriors in Canada, they kindled a Council-fire, at which the sachems and principal warriors of eleven of their Castles attended; in which Council it was unanimously agreed that they would for the future restrain the warriors of their nation from committing hostilities against the Bostonians.

Brothers: We likewise, the Onondagas, have had a Council on the same occasion, wherein it was determined to restrain our warriors, the principal of whom solemnly declared that they would not for the future interfere in your dispute, and promised that they would be directed by those who take care of the news. And as we have taken the same resolution with our brothers, the Senecas, we now speak as well in their as in our own names.

Brothers, the Commissioners appointed by the Thirteen United Provinces, attend: The principal tribes of the Confederacy, the Mohawks and Oneidas, assigned a very difficult task to us, which is, to take care of the Council-fire kindled by our ancestors at Onondaga, where the minds of the whole Confederacy and their allies are concentrated. The minds, also, of the Great King and those of the white people of this great Island are there. We have, therefore, a difficult task. We have your words at Onondaga. You told us that if any difficulties should arise between us and our brothers of the Colonies, measures would be mutually adopted to remove these difficulties.

Brothers: We, to whose care the Council-fire is committed, will always pursue and cultivate peace between you and us; and we are determined, as long as we shall remain a nation, to maintain peace. This the Thirteen United Colonies may depend upon.

Brothers: You desired us to declare our sentiments and intentions freely, which we have now done. We are sorry we cannot give you information what success Tunauquage has had, who is gone to take the hatchet from our disobedient warriors. We shall be extremely glad to see them return home with him, which, if they do, we shall endeavour to incline their minds to peace.

Brothers: The Nantuckets, Cayugas, and Delawares, and the people who live in the fields, have deposited their minds with us, and declared that they will abide by our determinations and pursue our directions. This, brothers, is all we have to say.—(Two belts, one of ten rows, with the representation of a man at each end, a hexagon in the middle; the other eight rows, the two middlemost white.)

OJAGHAT, a Cayuga Sachem, spoke as follows:

Brothers, the Commissioners appointed by the Thirteen States, attend: I speak in the names of the Warriors as well as Sachems, as their minds are the same, as likewise in the name of our younger brothers the Totodoes.

Brothers: I rose from my seat with the same sentiments as the Onondagas and Senecas. They had agreed to restrain their warriors; we had done the same. Our chief warriors severally declared that they would for the future conform to the directions of those who take care of the peace.

Brothers: Carefully attend to what I am about to say. You have laid our faults before us; you have desired us to declare our sentiments fully and freely.

Brothers: We acknowledge we have been culpable, with all the Six Nations; though the Cayuga Tribe have never acted so as to incur the displeasure of our brothers of the United States. We cannot look upon ourselves as so much to blame as you represent, for it was but yesterday (as it were) that we had a Council-fire at Albany, and the agreements there made I still retain fresh in my memory. The Six Nations know that we are not usually guilty of ill conduct. We ever used to rectify the errors and misconduct of the Six Nations.

Brothers: I think we do not usually offend our brethren, and that our minds are still disposed to peace, as they ever have been. In our wars with the Southern Indians, when we had occasion to travel through the territories of the Great Knife, we have been surprised to see his hatchet stick in our heads, and our dead warriors covering the ground; but yet, brothers, when we recurred to mind the covenants made by our ancestors with Queder, at Albany, in which it was agreed if any difference should arise between us and you, it should be immediately settled, we composed our minds.

Brothers: Our being in fault is not so much owing to ourselves as to the Onondaga Kaguatanawji, who induced our giddy and foolish people to go, by promising that they should have large presents if they went. But the sensible part of our warriors could not be seduced by his promises, and rejected his solicitations.

Brothers: We apprehend that our people were rather induced by the hopes of procuring clothing for themselves, than any malicious motives, as they had been informed that the Bostonians were unable to furnish them with any necessities, not even a charge of powder. We think that it would not have happened if traders had been sent up as usual, with goods and ammunition, to supply our wants.

Brothers: You shall now know our minds. Both our Sachems and Warriors are fully and strongly disposed to peace. It is farthest from our intentions to break the peace, as our minds, together with all our Confederacy to the westward, are united at our Central Council-fire at Onondaga. We have been anciently intimately acquainted, and it has never entered into our minds that we should separate from you, or break that connexion.

Brothers: Our people who went down on the occasion which you have mentioned, are now returned home. They were not personally concerned in those transactions, but only looked on. They would have returned back before they reached the place of action, had not the Onondaga chief persuaded them to stay, and called them Bostonians. When the party of our warriors who went into Canada returned, they left five of their party employed in making a canoe to come off. Apprehensive, however, that Aquatanajey would again change their minds, they desired Tehagawangey, the Onondaga Sachem, to use his influence in bringing them back, which he promised to do. We shall communicate to you any intelligence we may receive from them, and let you know if they return. As the Six Nations always inform you of every material occurrence that happens, so they will still continue to do. The Onondaga Sachem has a belt from our female governesses, in charge, with directions that if every other measure should fail, he should address our warriors in their names, requesting them to return.

Brothers: This is all we have to say. You may depend that our minds shall never be divided from yours. Both our Sachems and Warriors are fully resolved to cultivate peace and harmony with our brethren of the Provinces.—(A belt of fourteen rows, with several diagonal bars and small pyramidal figures.)

PETER, Chief Warrior of the Oneidas, made the following Speech:

Brothers, Commissioners of the Thirteen United Colonies, attend: As the Chiefs and Warriors of the Six Nations and their dependencies are met together at this time, we thought it a very good opportunity to speak. We, the Chiefs of the Warriors of the Oneidas, address the Commissioners, as also the Oohkaugis, and their brethren the Tuscaroras, and likewise the inhabitants of Kounosorago. The Warriors of those places now speak.

Brothers, Commissioners: We have given good attention to what you have said at this place, and receive it in our hearts, as real truth.

Brothers: We think it very right what you have said, and need not be ashamed of. You have told us all our faults very freely, but we can tell you that we are not to blame in any of the things which the Six Nations are accused of. Whoever has done mischief will endeavour to exculpate himself. We need not.

Brothers: You have declared that you desire nothing but peace with the Six Nations. As you have given us no offence, why should we not equally desire peace with you? Say. There are some amongst us who regard you, and some who do not. As we are born and bred together on this great Island, why should we not love each other? Our ancestors made a covenant of peace for us.

Brothers: This speech comes from our hearts, not from our lips only. We speak once for all. We fear God, who looks upon us and knows our promises, and if we do amiss, we are willing immediately to make satisfaction. If we do anything that grieves you, of which we are insensible, we desire that you will tell us. We look to our chiefs; we do not choose to make them ashamed. We warriors never say much, we speak our minds at once. Our chiefs speak a great deal; they are acquainted with and often quote the institutions of the ancients. We desired our chiefs to speak for themselves only, and that we would speak for ourselves; that if anything should be done contrary to what we promise, the chiefs may not be the liars, but we will be obliged to take the blame on ourselves.

Brothers: We have restricted our young warriors from saying anything but what tends to peace, because you desired us to mind nothing but the affairs of peace; and if any of our young warriors should, contrary to the advice we have given them, interfere in your quarrel and fall, it will not disturb our minds; neither will we regard it, nor will it break the friendship that now subsists between us. We will not desire you to take the axe out of the heads of those that fall; for our young warriors know the danger of going to war, and if they fall, it is a thing not uncommon; what they have to expect, and what often happens. We shall think our young warriors are instigated by the devil if they intermeddle in your dispute, as they are all sensible of our agreements with you, and the friendship that subsists between us. As we have agreed to mind nothing but peace, we shall think it strange if any one injures our warriors while they remain in peace. But if anything fatal should happen, and any one should strike a hatchet into their heads, we expect that it shall be immediately removed.

Brothers: Possess your minds in peace with regard to us, as we do with regard to you. This is all we warriors have got to say.—(A belt of eight rows, with transverse lines throughout the whole.)

ADAM, an Oequaga Sachem's Speech to the Commissioners.

Brothers: The treaty that was held at Fort Stanwix, when the line was settled between the Indians and the white people, we supposed was held as well in the names of the people of these Provinces, as in the name of the King, as they were then all of one mind. In this treaty it was promised us that if we would covenant to settle the line, none of the white people would be permitted to encroach upon our lands; and that if any should encroach upon us by passing the line, he should be punished with death. This, brothers, is the promise made to us at the time of the settlement of the line; but, brothers, some of your people have of late made encroachments upon our lands, by surveying our hunting-grounds close up to our habitations.

Brothers: We beg you will consider of it, and hope you will give us redress.—(Four strings.)

The COMMISSIONERS answered:

Brothers: We have taken into consideration the information you gave us with this string.

Brothers: Attend to our answer, and let all the Nations attend thereto. You say that you suppose the treaty held at Fort Stanwix was as well in the names of the white people of these Provinces as in the name of the King.

Brothers: We must inform you that for upwards of thirty years past all lands that have been purchased have been purchased in the name of the King, and after they were purchased the King sold them again to the white people. The greater, the much greater part of the lands bought of you in that time were for the great men on the other side of the water. The inhabitants born on this great Island have very little of it.

Brothers: You may remember that you seldom have held a treaty in which you were not asked to sell some of your lands. Since we have had the management of your affairs, we have never desired you to sell any.

Brothers: As you do not know who the people are that have surveyed your lands beyond the line, we shall give you a letter to the Minister, that he may inform you, and you may be assured that our great Council at Philadelphia will effectually put a stop to such wicked practices, and punish every person that shall offend against their orders. If any person should come on your lands, we desire that you will bring them immediately to the Minister, that he may write down their names, and inform us of it, and then we shall immediately proceed against them.

Brothers: You may all rest assured that no white people will be suffered to pass the line settled at Fort Stanwix; for although that agreement was made with the King, yet as you are satisfied with it, we shall take care that it is complied with.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 18, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Last night about nine o'clock I received some despatches from General Washington, enclosing a letter for you, and those I now send you. I opened your letter by mistake, in the presence of the express, my Aid-de-Camp, Mr. Livingston, and Mr. Taylor, but finding the mistake, immediately closed it.

I enclose you an extract of the General's letter to me, in answer to some animadversions I made on what I supposed had been done at New-York.

Captain Varick has this moment received yours of the 16th. Only five quires of cartridge-paper now to be found on a search I had yesterday made, and that was sent to Colonel Dayton at Fort Stanwix. A considerable quantity has some time ago been written for to New-York. I have again mentioned to General Washington the necessity of expediting it to this place.

Yesterday Dr. Barker delivered me the Adjutant-General's letter of the 1st instant, directed to the commanding officer here. He is in custody. Pray order down the witnesses, that he may be tried.

Lieutenant McMichael, of Colonel Dayton's regiment, a volunteer of the name of Smith, and one Ridley, (a clerk to Major Fonda.) are deserted to the enemy. They were pursued to Oneida Lake, and had just got into a boat when the party pursuing arrived at the Lake.

Three men out of five who went on a scout to Oswego were either killed or taken by the Mississaga Indians within six miles of Oswego. The other two, who were both wounded, are returned to Fort Stanwix, conducted by some of the Six Nations, who fell in with them in the woods.

Adieu. I am ever most sincerely and affectionately your most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

P. S. A letter from the General, just received, advises me that the articles in the enclosed list left New-York on the 10th instant.

A Return, made NEW-YORK, JULY 8, 1776, to His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the UNITED COLONIES, of sundry articles shipped for ALBANY, in good order, by HUGH HUGHES, Assistant Quartermaster-General, on board the Sloop GENERAL WOLF, ANDREW DOWN Master, and to be delivered to the Hon. Major-General SCHUYLER, or his order.

8 boxes of Musket-ball, one thousand one hundred and thirty-five pounds weight.

5 tons of Lead.

20 reams of Cartridge-paper.

6 Saws.

ANDREW DOWN.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 18, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of the 17th, with nineteen batteaus, which came safe to hand. The Massachusetts troops and tents were all sent forward before the arrival of the boats, but since the boats came to hand a number more tents have arrived, which I immediately forward by this conveyance.

Your Honour may depend I shall immediately forward the Bay troops and tents as fast as they arrive, according to orders; and am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, August 18, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The enclosed will satisfy you as far as I am satisfied in respect to Mr. Traverse. It may not be amiss to detain him if an enemy, or to maintain him if a friend. Your better judgment will decide the matter.

Last night another gondola arrived from Skenesborough, and Colonel Wynkoop writes me word that a row-galley and another gondola will be finished by Sunday. As the carpentry goes on so brisk, I dare say you will take care our fleet meets with no delay for want of the other requisites.

General Arnold assures me he has from time to time informed you of all his demands. More artillery and more powder will be wanted, if our vessels continue to increase thus rapidly.

I desire you will send me my letter to the General, with his to me, which were both enclosed to you in my last. I have no copy of them, therefore would be glad you would not disappoint me in sending them.

I hope your treaty has concluded to your satisfaction. My respectful compliments to Mrs. Schuyler. I wish we had some of your good butter and vegetables, for a cabbage or a turnip has not been seen here since I came.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,

HO. GATES.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Tyonderoga, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment received your letter from Crown-Point of yesterday evening. It is my orders you instantly put Commodore Wynkoop in arrest, and send him prisoner to Head-Quarters at Tyonderoga. You will at the same time acquaint the officers of the fleet that such of them as do not pay an implicit obedience to your commands are instantly to be confined and sent to me for trial.

I am, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

HO. GATES.

To General Arnold.

COLONEL STEWART TO GENERAL WATERBURY.

Ticonderoga, August 18, 1776.

SIR: General Gates is exceedingly surprised to learn from a person arrived here that the tent-poles, after being brought such a great distance from home, should be left within about ten or fifteen miles of Skenesborough; he therefore begs you will immediately send the empty wagons back for them, and by no means give the wagoners certificates, or put them in any way of getting paid, until they again return to you with the poles.

I send you by the bearer the two thousand feet of seasoned plank which you requested in your former letter, and am, &c.

By order of the General: W. STEWART, A. D. C.

To Brigadier-General Waterbury.

GEORGE PITKIN TO BENJAMIN PAYNE.

Hartford, August 18, 1776.

DEAR SIR: George Burnham desires me to write to Governor Trumbull to get him released, that he may prosecute his business as a gunsmith. Am sensible of the necessity of it, but for me to write only on his request, cannot do it in character. Captain Pitkin came from his Honour yesterday, and his Honour is of the opinion that the publick should not too much suffer in some important matters; and has promised all the workmen and procurer of materials for the powder mill to stop, and one tanner in Captain Pitkin's company to stop and take care of two tan-yards. I give it as my individual opinion that it is necessary he should stay to prosecute his business, but the necessity you best understand. Likewise understand that Major Newbury gave martial orders for him to stay till further orders; if so, there will be no need to apply to the Governour.

I am, with esteem, your very humble servant,

GEORGE PITKIN.

To Benjamin Payne, Esq.

MESHECH WEARE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Hampton Falls, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have received your favours of the 16th and 17th instant. I am extremely sorry at the delay our troops meet with by the villanous practice of the Doctor at Number Four. The Committee here will take the most speedy care respecting that matter. We are greatly obliged to you for your readiness to assist us with cannon were it in your power; it is an article we extremely want, and have no doubt should have received from you could you have done it with safety.

I am, with great regard, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

To the Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq.

GEORGIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Tuesday, August 19, 1776.

General Lee waited on the Board, and proposed the following questions for their consideration:

1st. Whether, as the post on St. Mary's is now abandoned, and the whole country between that river and the St. John's broke up, and as there is no possibility of transporting cannon, ammunition, provisions, or collecting a sufficient number of men for the siege and reduction of Augustine, an irruption into East-Florida can be productive of so great and important advantages to the general cause, or to this State of Georgia in particular, as to compensate for the trouble and expense, and what these advantages are? What are the means of certainly supplying the troops with grain and meat? how their baggage is to be transported? whether it can be safely transported by water? if it cannot, whether wagons can pass? if the road is practicable only to horses, how pack-saddles are to be provided?

Ordered, That Messrs. Jonathan Bryan and Nathan Bronson be a Committee to answer the questions proposed by General Lee.

SIR: The Council having taken into consideration your Excellency's questions this day laid before them, are clearly of opinion that an irruption into the Province of East Florida will be attended with the most salutary consequences to this Province, and of course render service to the whole Continent.

The reasons which weigh with them are as follow:

1st. That they conceive the reduction of Augustine to be a very considerable object with the Continent in general, but this Province in particular.

2d. They are led to hope, that if the whole country around is ravaged, the cattle on the east side of St. John's driven off, and the inhabitants obliged to evacuate their plantations and fly into the Castle, the scarcity of provisions and the want of fresh supplies of many articles from the country, will of itself oblige the garrison to submit to our arms.

3d. That supposing this last consequence not to happen, yet the driving our enemies so far from our country will be of infinite advantage in this, that it will be a means of preventing the loss of negroes, either by desertion or otherwise by land.

4th. That the country being in our possession, will not only, from principles of dread, attach the Indians to our interest, but also put it in our power to prevent our enemies from holding any intercourse with these savages, or having any opportunity to tamper with them, or supply or stir them up against us. And we conceive that after the Province shall be so broke up, a single troop of Horse, appointed to range on the west side of the river St. John's, will be quite sufficient to cut off all communication between the Creek Indians and the people of East-Florida.

5th. By carrying distress and war into the country, we incline to think the inhabitants of East-Florida will find themselves so much engaged at home as not to be able to fit out privateers against this Province till we are better prepared for them. This Province has been harassed, and they expect to be much more so, with privateers, in case some vigorous blow is not struck against East-Florida; and we are inclined to think the plunder which will fall into the hands of the soldiers will compensate them for the difficulty and toil attending their march.

As to the other question, viz: What are the means of certainly supplying the troops with grain and meat? how is the baggage to be transported safely by water?—we are of opinion, that while the troops remain on this side of the river Altamaha, there will be no occasion to do more than send a commissary ahead to provide rice and beef at different stages, as the troops advance, the country all along abounding with provisions, after they pass this river. We think it will be necessary to send a quantity of rice in boats, with directions to meet the troops at different places; and we are informed that these boats may go with great safety, there being an excellent inland passage to a place called Picalatto Creek, less than twenty miles from St. Augustine. We imagine these boats must be procured in or about Savannah or Sunbury, and therefore we would recommend that the troops send such of their baggage as they can't conveniently carry in these boats. Some horses will certainly be necessary for troops upon their march, which, together with pack horses, we think may be got in this place. Wagons will be useless, as they cannot proceed above fifty miles from this town.

GENERAL LEWIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburgh, August, 1776.

SIR: I have ordered the First and Third Battalions to march with all speed to the Flying-Camp in the Jerseys. The Third being stationed on Potomack at the time they received their marching orders, may be expected before the other; and for another reason too, the time for which the first battalion was raised being nearly expired, it took several days to reinlist them on Continental establishment. The numbers at present are not complete, but I hope a few days will make it nearly so, if not quite. The officers of that battalion have shown a noble spirit in exerting themselves to the utmost in engaging the men on this occasion. They are anxiously forward in joining the battalions to the northward, hoping they will have an opportunity of distinguishing themselves. They will march next Monday.

In a letter I wrote the honourable Congress by General Mercer, addressed to you, I begged particular instructions respecting the filling up such vacancies as had or might happen in the line of officers in this State; to which I have received no answer. Many vacancies there are at present, which make me once more beg particular instructions on this head. It is absolutely necessary for the good of the service that it should be known whether promotion by a regular succession of the nine battalions of this State is to take place, or whether it be confined to the particular battalions in which such vacancies happen. To me the former method is most clear of exception, and bids fairest to give seniority the preference; which I conceive to be a rule in all armies, where merit did not on particular occasions make it necessary to overlook this rule.

Since I wrote by General Mercer, Colonel William Christian, who commanded the First Battalion, and Colonel William Dangerfield, who commanded the Seventh, have resigned. We have at present four battalions without commissioned Colonels to command them, to wit: the First and Third, which go to the northward, and the Fifth and Seventh. General Mercer wrote me that Colonel Charles Scott's commission, (who we supposed would have the command of the Fifth, by the resignation of Colonel Peachy,) and other commissions, had been sent from Philadelphia. They have never come to hand. Colonel George Weedon has for the present the command of the Third; Lieutenant-Colonel Isaac Read appointed to the First; Lieutenant-Colonel William Crawford to the Seventh, they being the oldest Lieutenant-Colonels. In this way they will act until the pleasure of Congress be known.

To the general list, signed by the President of the Committee of Safety, mentioning the names, ranks, and dates of commissions, and sent by General Mercer, I refer you, by which you will be able to give promotion in any method the Congress may be pleased to adopt. At present the officers of inferior rank to Lieutenant-Colonels, where vacancies have happened, have risen by seniority in their respective regiments, and will continue so to act until the pleasure of Congress be known, which I wish to be soon, that all differences of opinion with regard to rank may be settled.

Dunmore, with his whole fleet, sailed last Wednesday out of our Capes; one part of the fleet turned to the north, and the other steered southwardly.

I am, honourable sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I enclose a list from the Second and Sixth Battalions, which may be of service in filling up the vacancies. The First and Third Battalions will produce such list when they reach Philadelphia. As soon as I am prepared with such lists from the other battalions, which are now at distant stations, shall send them.

LEWIS.

INSTRUCTIONS TO DELEGATES OF ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY, IN MARYLAND CONVENTION.

To CHARLES CARROLL, Barrister, SAMUEL CHASE, REZIN HAMMOND, and BRICE THOMAS BEAL WORTHINGTON, Esquires, Representatives of ANNE ARUNDEL County:

GENTLEMEN: We the subscribers, freemen of Anne Arundel County, taking into our most serious consideration the important business you are to meet upon, the 12th of this instant, think it our indispensable duty to give you the following Instructions:

It is with the utmost concern and displeasure we find that the last Convention excluded all such of our countrymen who did not possess fifty acres of land, or a visible estate of £40 sterling, in the election of Representatives; thereby unjustly depriving near half of the free inhabitants of this State of the inestimable right of free suffrage, nevertheless subjecting them to all the pains and burdens of Government. This glaring injustice, hateful distinction, and apparent impolicy, we are determined to use our utmost efforts to get redressed; and that our free, honest, well-affected brethren, as they proportionably bear with us every burden and brave every danger, shall equally share every privilege. We therefore direct and instruct you to move for, and use your utmost endeavours to establish, in the new Government: That all freemen, natives of this State, above twenty-one years of age, and well-affected to the present glorious cause in which we are engaged, shall have the right of a free vote in the election of all officers who are to be chosen by the people, provided such persons shall have resided one year next preceding the election in the County, District, City, or Town, where he shall offer to vote; also, that every foreigner above twenty-one years of age, well-affected to the present glorious cause, having a visible estate of £30 currency, or a freehold of fifty acres of land, and who has resided as a freeman two years next preceding the election in the County, District, City, or Town, where he shall offer to vote, shall have the free suffrage in the election of all officers who are to be chosen by the people; also, that all elections be free, and made viva voce, in the manner heretofore used in this State; also, that Annapolis be represented, but that the inhabitants thereof be not allowed to vote for the Representatives for this County; that there be chosen by the people an Upper and Lower House annually—these two Houses to be distinct and independent of each other, and to form the Legislative power; and also that the persons appointed to hold the Executive power, have no share or negative in the Legislature; also, that no person shall be eligible to sit in either House, or Legislature, or Congress, who holds any office of profit, or any pension, or any part of the profit thereof, either directly or indirectly, or who holds any office in the regular military service, or marine service, either Continental or Provincial; that the trial by Jury be held and kept sacred, and the habeas corpus preserved; also, that Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Clerks of Counties, and Surveyors, be chosen by the people, annually, of each County; that a well-regulated Militia be established in this State, as being the best security for the preservation of the lives, liberties, and properties of the people; that every Militia company choose its own officers, and battalions their Field-Officers; that Adjutants, drummers, and fifers, with drums, fifes, colours, and cartouch-boxes, be provided at the publick expense for the different battalions of Militia, and guns for such unarmed men who are not able to purchase the same, and that the Colonels of each battalion be empowered to contract for the above, procure the same, and draw on the Treasurer for the amount; that all moneys to be raised on the people be by a fair and equal assessment, in proportion to every person's estate, and that the unjust mode of taxation by the poll, heretofore used, be abolished, and that Assessors be chosen by the people of each district in each County, annually; also, that the votes and proceedings of the Assembly be published, except such parts as relate to military operations and measures taken to procure arms and ammunition, and that they sit open, except when particular business requires their being private; also that the votes and proceedings of Congress be published, except as aforesaid.

(Signed by eight hundred and eighty-five Freemen.)

To the Electors of ANNE ARUNDEL County:

GENTLEMEN: We were honoured on Saturday afternoon with Instructions from a considerable number of the inhabitants of this County, on points of very great importance, relative to the formation of a new Government for this State. As your Delegates, we esteem ourselves bound by your instructions, though ever so contrary to our opinions. We conceive several of your last instructions, if carried into execution, destructive of a free Government. We are reduced to this alternative: we must either endeavour to establish a Government without a proper security for liberty or property, or surrender the trust we have received from you. We submit to you the propriety of reconsidering your instructions. We would with pleasure wait on you at the most convenient places in the County, to explain our reasons against the restrictions you are pleased to impose on us; but we are prevented by our necessary attendance on the publick business. If you could make it convenient to meet at the city of Annapolis, on Monday, the 26th instant, we will attend you. We are now ready (as we ever have been) to serve our country at every hazard; but we cannot submit to be instruments for its destruction.

We are, gentlemen, with sincere respect and esteem, your obedient servants,

CHARLES CARROLL,
BRICE T. B. WORTHINGTON,
SAMUEL CHASE.

Annapolis, August 19, 1776.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COL. HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 150.]

Annapolis, August 19, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 14th of August, and are of opinion your plan for forwarding the troops is a very good one, and therefore we approve of it. Any expenses that may be incurred you will be pleased to pay, and send down the accounts properly authenticated, and you shall be reimbursed, besides satisfaction for your trouble. When you want cash, apply with the order enclosed to the Eastern-Shore Treasurer, and he will let you have £300. What further may be expended, let us know, and you shall be paid. We would have you apply with all diligence to making bayonets, and also barrels of every kind, more especially the large ones contracted for. We are, &c.

To Colonel Henry Hollingsworth.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO KENT COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 151.]

Annapolis, August 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Council of Safety request you will buy up what wooden bottles you can, not exceeding three hundred, for the use of the Province. The order of Convention for the marching of our troops was rather unexpected, and our workmen cannot supply the bottles so expeditiously as the service requires. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation, Kent County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL EWING.

[No. 151.]

Annapolis, August 19, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 18th, and observed your complaint, which arises not from us, but a very different cause: we mean, your companies' not being armed. The order of Convention is, that all the companies are to march that can be armed and equipped. Captain Forrest and Captain Brooks have no arms but what they have borrowed or can borrow of the Militia. We have therefore ordered them to their stations in Calvert and St. Mary's, to supply the place of Captain Beall and Captain Thomas. Captain Hanson's company we have ordered to march to this city, and also Captains Bowie and Tillard, on their way to the camp, when they can get armed and equipped. When that can be done, we shall give you the proper orders on the Commissary of Stores. We are sorry to have occasion so often to repeat what we had before told you, that your companies are not to march unarmed. As soon as they get arms, we shall order them to march immediately.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Thomas Ewing.

ISAAC GRIEST TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore-Town, August 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have been with the tent-makers, and find Mr. Johnson has made up all the tent-cloth he had. Mr. Jacobs has two boys at work, and has stuff by him to make upwards of twenty tents, and has sailmakers at work on old sails. He says he has orders to get more tent-cloth from Elk-Ridge; but I am certain Johnson will do them much sooner, as he has now four or five hands idle. No tent-cloth came from Parker. No brushes or priming-wires, save one hundred and fifty, to be had here in less than two weeks. The knap and haversacks for the two companies are painted this day, and to-morrow, if possible, shall send them over the Bay. Shall send down the cartouch-boxes, &c., by the first opportunity. I can find no cloth in town at less than 25s. per yard, and it will take more than two yards to make a blanket. Colonel Ewing has taken almost all the canteens that are made, but I have been with the coopers and directed them to work night and day, and not take time to muster till they had served the Flying-Camp, for which I hope you will excuse me.

I have delivered cartouch-boxes and gun-slugs to the Captains of the three companies here and twelve blankets, which were all in the magazine.

I don't know what will be done for blankets. All our guns are in bad order, and very few bayonets. The smiths are all at work on them. I shall do all in my power to obey your orders.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

I. GRIEST.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

BALTIMORE COUNTY COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, August 19, 1776:

Present: S. Purviance, Chairman; W. Lux, Vice-Chairman; J. Merryman, A. Buchanan, R. Alexander, C. Ridgely, (of Wm.), W. Aisquith, J. Calhoun, J. Craddock, B. Griffith, W. Tolley, Jun., A. Britton, T. Sollers, J. Sterrett, E. Talbot, J. Cockey, D. Lux, T. Gist.

Mr. George Lumley having produced a certificate from Dr. Weisenthall of his being ineffective, the fine of 40s. imposed on him as a Non-Enroller was remitted.

Complaints being exhibited by Jacob Kitsmiller, Isaac Sell, and Isaac Sell, Jun., to this Committee, that Mr. James Clarke, of this town, had refused to sell them Salt at the price stipulated by this Committee; whereupon the said James Clarke, upon summons, appeared, and confessed that he had taken a higher price than was allowed, and alleged in excuse for his conduct that his Salt was much better in quality than what others in town were selling for, and imagined that the Committee would not censure him for a breach against their Resolve regulating the price of Salt, when, in his judgment, the purchaser was benefited by the extraordinary advance, and agreed to give it to him.

Mr. Clarke then produced a concession, which was judged insufficient; and the following question was proposed and put by the Chairman: Whether any concession whatever from Mr. Clarke be accepted or not?

Resolved in the negative.

For the Negative.—Messrs. Sollers, Britton, Gist, Talbot, Sterrett, Aisquith, Ridgely, Cockey.

For the Affirmative.—Messrs. Lux, Merryman, Tolley, Griffith, Calhoun.

Whereupon it was Resolved, That Mr. James Clarke be published as an enemy to his country.

The fines assessed on John G. Williams and John Dimmett are remitted, the former having enrolled with Captain Garritson, and the latter with Captain Foster.

A Warrant was given to Captain Garritson to distress the goods of Samuel Fendall, Jun., Joseph Carter, and William Huffman, in the sum of 40s. each, for non-attendance at eight several meetings of his Company.

A Warrant was also given to Captain Phillips against two of his Company, for 16s. each, on account of absence at four several meetings of said Company.

The complaint exhibited against Mr. Christopher Limes, on Monday last, of his having attempted to join Lord Dunmore without success, and declaring that he would join Lord Howe; but no proper evidence being produced to support the charge, the said Limes was reprimanded, discharged, and advised to behave himself better in future.

Mr. John Crosier exhibited a complaint against Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth for offering to sell Tea at an exorbitant price, which is referred for consideration to the next meeting of the Committee on Monday next.

Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth appeared, in consequence of the summons of this Committee, and acknowledged the truth of Mr. Crosier's allegation against him.

It having been represented to this Committee that Robert Alexander, Esq., had uttered several reprehensible expressions in a speech made to the people at the close of the polls for Delegates for Baltimore County in the Provincial Convention, this Committee think it their duty to take notice of the matter, and summon Dr. Robert Lemmon, Messrs. Charles Ridgely, (of Jno.,) George Lux, Benjamin Levy, and James Cox, to give in their evidence relating to it.

Attest:

GEO. LUX, Secretary.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE OPENING OF THE ELECTION IN DOVER FOR THE CHOICE OF MEMBERS OF CONVENTION, AUGUST 19, 1776.

COUNTRYMEN, FRIENDS OF LIBERTY: Having a few things to mention to you previous to your entering upon the principal business of the day, without making any formal apology for so doing, which you would deem unnecessary, for I know your candour, I only request your favourable attention a little while. Where measures relating to the publick are founded on pure, liberal, and upright principles, they who take an active part in them, being properly qualified for the task, cannot but possess a conscious firmness, a noble self-complacency; while they who, in the more retired walks of life, observe and feel the salutary effects of those measures, have little more to do than give their approbation, and to sit down in quiet: they earnestly wish and hope for their country's safety, should that remain yet doubtful, and will heartily rejoice therein, when it becomes established. Of this latter number I account myself. With many others, peaceably yet very ardently, am I looking for the complete propitious issue of American defensive efforts; and though there be manifold dangers still to excite apprehension, and difficulties not a few to be encountered, yet have we cause to thank a gracious Providence that thus far our affairs are tolerably successful. Publick men and publick operations, throughout these rising States, will, with very few exceptions, I really believe, shed on the American name conspicuous, lasting honour.

In the course of human events, there happen in every country, at one period or another, certain distinguished occurrences, upon which a great deal depends with respect to the subsequent fortune of the people. The resolutions taken on these capital occasions and the plans adopted, do usually produce effects, either wholesome or malignant, that must require considerable time, perhaps some ages, before their strength can be exhausted and their influence spent. A very signal era in the political affairs of this Continent we are likely to see fixed in our day.

The English colonists, who from their earliest settlement till the present year, invariably acknowledged their dependence upon the parent State, and boasted of it as their protection and glory, have a good while past found that British claims are growing so exorbitant, an unconstitutional domination of both King and Parliament is gaining ground so rapidly upon them, enforced by all the fury and desolation of war, that in order to save themselves and their posterity from impending ruin, they could not but dissolve the bond of their ancient union, and become henceforth independent.

This their Delegates, vested with competent authority, exercising all the precaution, wisdom, and sagacity which the magnitude of the case demanded, have finally resolved on and declared in General Congress.

In perfect consistency with this great plan, that honourable body have recommended to the several States the forming such Constitutions, and new-modelling their internal police, in such manner as may best suit the genius and circumstances of each respectively, and conduce most to make the people happy, being strictly attentive withal to the important interests of the Continental Union.

On the present day, therefore, in consequence of regular appointment, the Freemen of the Delaware State have assembled to elect their Representatives for the express purpose of establishing a system or charter of Government, deriving its spirit and virtue from the people's authority.

It may be laid down, indeed, as a first principle, (and I presume we have the best writers on Government to support us,) that all power resides originally in the people. Some have talked, and written too, of a Divine right, upon a very different principle: but never yet could they render their positions even plausible. It appears much more reasonable to suppose that the Ruler of the Universe hath lodged the Divine right in the hands of the governed.

By whomsoever the reins of Government are held—whether its forms be simple or compound—whether the departments be few or many in the State—it is the people's authority that is deposited with each; and to them the constituted powers are, beyond a doubt, accountable.

The general welfare—the people's happiness—being the end or main object of all, they are to judge; for they can discern and feel how far that end is answered, and, in their collective capacity, to act as exigencies may require, but ever through the medium of prudence and sound discretion.

Had not the rulers of Great Britain, to whom we so long with pleasure acknowledged ourselves subordinate, infringed upon our liberties, and broke down the barriers of publick security; had they not made light of the most sacred compacts; and given repeated wounds to the good old Constitution, at least as far as America is concerned, we would by no means have taken those steps that of necessity we must now pursue. A fondness for innovation we have never shown. Opposition to Constitutional authority we have never given. All we have been asking for, and all we now wish to attain, is "peace, liberty, and safety;" and if we cannot enjoy these blessings in one system, we must try another. This is the footing on which we stand; here is the ground on which we proceed; and we trust in God it is firm enough to bear us.

You must be sensible, then, my respected countrymen, of the high privilege long since clearly recognised, fully ascertained to you: the privilege, the right of governing yourselves; a circumstance absolutely essential to civil liberty. But as this can only be effected by delegation, it being utterly inconvenient and impracticable for the whole people personally (for instance, in such a body as attends here to-day, or one a vast deal larger) to be present at the passing of every ordinance and law, it is incumbent on them to be exceeding careful who they appoint to act in their behalf. Want of proper circumspection in this particular is highly culpable; I scarce know anything that can excuse it. And whether such infidelity to themselves and to their country proceeds from people's indolence of temper; from a supine indifference about the matter—who or what kind of men are appointed; or whether it springs from venal corrupt views; or, lastly, from faction and the manœuvres of party business, the evils accruing to society are much the same; the consequences in the end may prove fatal.

Now, brethren convened on this occasion, you are well acquainted with the purpose of your meeting; you know the importance of it. There never was, perhaps, an election held in this County, or this Government, half so interesting as the present. Be very cautious, be rational, be dispassionate, be prudent, be just to yourselves and to your children.

What you have to do is, to choose suitable men; men who have skill and integrity equal to the business you are sending them upon. The Congress hath pronounced you independent and free; it will rest with your Convention, by their judicious management, to secure to you the happiness and safety that may result from that declaration. For a State may be free and independent with respect to the impositions of any foreign Power; and nevertheless, through the vices of its own policy, or the arbitrary disposition of its own Rulers, the people of it be slaves, or at best, have a very precarious security, and a defective enjoyment of their privileges.

Bare good meaning in your Representatives, without capacity, is insufficient; so is capacity without an honest heart. You can find men among you possessed of both; men, I trust, unbiassed by prejudice, not warped by passion, above the narrowness and illiberality of injuring the general welfare out of private resentment, or for private interest. They also, in particular, who have already conducted themselves well in the sphere of publick usefulness ought not to be overlooked now by a grateful sagacious people.

Be upon your guard against a party spirit, or you will be misled. Beware of those who would increase subsisting jealousies, and exasperate you against each other. Though such supporters of the common cause, be they of what distinction or side they please, it matters not, do assume a patriotick semblance, or may address you under signatures no less than of Roman dignity, listen not to their story with attention over-credulous; think for yourselves; judge for yourselves. "They zealously affect you, but not well." Their ways and means are quite incompetent to beneficial ends. The spirit of patriotism is no headlong noisy effervescence, nor angry ebullition of the mind; it delights not in tumult, revenge, or outrage. It is a pure manly flame, superior to the mists of faction, regarding no party names, exalting the soul to deeds of diffusive virtue. It is allied so close to the spirit of Christianity as to claim these as its predominant qualities: an undimmed firmness, a generous expansive benevolence, with zeal, wisdom, and clearness of understanding; for it, too, is "a spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

Permit me, then, to charge you with an affectionate solicitude—to entreat you, as a brother and fellow-inhabitant, whose hopes and interests are one with yours, to lay divisions and animosities entirely aside; they will, unless relinquished, distract our councils, enervate, retard, and disfigure our most useful proceedings at home, and utterly discredit us abroad. Let us be united and at peace, by all means, among ourselves. If ever unanimity was a virtue, it must be one at the present juncture, and a preëminent virtue it is in a worthy cause.

It is more than probable that in the process of this day there will be diversity of opinions amongst you, and a contrariety of endeavours; there will be planning, no doubt, and counter-planning. This may arise from the nature of the business, for aught I know, and possibly, in itself, may not be censurable in the least, or hurtful to the bond of peace, provided men act from an upright motive, conducting their plans or their opposition, if they must oppose one another, with humanity, good sense, and decency. But "bitterness, and wrath, and clamour, and evil speaking, and malice,"—O fy! fy on them! they are to be classed with things most "rank and foul in nature."

At an election it is implied that certain persons, either upon their own motion or proposed by some or other of the electors, do stand candidates for an appointment, whatever it is. Here, then, the electors or constituents have a right to exercise their own judgment; and people will differ sometimes in opinion. They have the privilege of choosing for themselves, and they may differ in their choice. But still, it is every one's indispensable duty to inform his judgment as well as possible, and to use his privilege so as not to abuse it. The sure way is, to conduct yourselves clear of prejudice and undue influence.

I step not forward as an advocate for tests, on occasions of this sort especially; yet, perhaps, if every one who sets up at an election, and every voter, laying his hand upon his heart, were virtually to put some such test to himself as the following: Do I solemnly think that I am a suitable person for the place or trust I am soliciting? or, do I solemnly believe that the person or persons I vote for, and whose interest I am pushing, are duly qualified? and is my opposition to others grounded on principle?—it would tend to preserve both civil and moral liberty.

The mention of this test brings to my mind another: I mean that which the honourable House of Assembly have empowered the Judges of this election to put, as they may think fit, to all or any of the voters. What I would observe on it (and I do it with great deference) is no more than this: If it was only meant as a restraint upon those who may be disaffected to the American cause, it was meant well; but if it should prove a bar to any tender or scrupulous consciences, so that a considerable class of men, otherwise good friends to their country, are withheld from their right, it is a pity. However, you, gentlemen, Inspectors and Judges, have a discretionary power in the matter, I apprehend; and we need not doubt your exercising it in a manner delicate and unexceptionable.

Now I conclude, wishing this County success in the event of this interesting day, and desiring for the sister Counties a similar felicity. May we and they always have a succession of able, good men, to manage our political concerns, incorruptible guardians of the rights of freemen, the honest Representatives of an honest people.

Like another Sparta, may this little State be wise, and brave, and great; great in strength, but greater still in virtue; holding its rank with unimpaired dignity in the scale of American empire.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, August 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 5th instant has come to hand, and am much pleased to hear of the success of the New-England privateers in capturing British ships. May they go on to distress the British trade, till they are taught wisdom by misfortune, since nothing else will effect it. I opened your letter to Colonel Whipple, agreeable to your order, in which I find you want information about the agency and marine affairs; but as Colonel Whipple will be able to satisfy you as to those matters, (who will be with you before this,) I shall say nothing about them.

Since Colonel Whipple left us the ship Morris arrived here from Havre-de-Grace, in France. She has brought on Continental account above one hundred bolts of sail cloth, amounting to between fifty and sixty thousand yards. She has also brought for this Colony fifty-three tons of lead, and seven and a half tons of powder, &c., &c.

A ship has likewise arrived from Lisbon, with necessaries for the Continent, but cannot give the particulars. She left Lisbon the latter end of June, and left several other of our vessels there, who were permitted to trade freely, notwithstanding the report which lately prevailed, that the Portuguese had seized all American ships in their harbours.

One vessel from Statia, and one vessel from the French West-Indies, have also arrived, and have brought in about five tons of powder, &c. By a letter from Statia, dated 28th July, we are told that the Dutch have refused to renew the prohibition for sending out arms and ammunition; that the English have seized two of their ships, and sent them into England, under pretence of their supplying us with arms, &c.; that in consequence, the Dutch had ordered sixty ships of war to be fitted out, and to raise twenty thousand additional land forces, and had refused to lend England the Scotch regiments, as they had before agreed to. What dependence is to be placed in this intelligence, I can't certainly say, but believe some part of it, at least, is true, I hope all. By sundry letters, it appears that both the French and Dutch are very fond of our trade, and have sent and are sending to the West-Indies large quantities of arms, and every other article that we are like to want.

The insolence of the commanders of the British men-of-war in the West-Indies, is become intolerable. It seems that one of them some time since went into the harbour at Statia, and after waiting some days, attempted to take possession of some American vessels there, but was prevented by the Dutch. She then left the harbour, and the next day seized a ship bound from Statia to Amsterdam, and carried her into one of the English Islands, and there he detains her. This has so exasperated the Dutch, that the Governour of Statia has (it is said) ordered the Captains of the ports to fire on any English man-of-war that comes within reach of their guns. This looks like kicking up a dust.

I am, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To Mr. John Langdon.

P. S. August 20th.—Yesterday a vessel arrived at Egg-Harbour, that was sent to the West-Indies on the account of the Congress. It is said she has brought six hundred stand of arms and ten tons of powder. The particulars of the fire-ships attempting the men-of-war, and burning a tender, and of the men-of-war getting down by New-York, you will hear before this reaches you. Ut sup. J. B.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, August 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Having the pleasure and satisfaction of your approbation of my past conduct in the Army, beg leave to acquaint your Honours, that I am still ready and willing to serve in my proper rank in the Army, and attend your further orders.

I am, with due respect, your Honours' most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

WILLIAM COX TO WILLIAM ATLEE.

Philadelphia, August 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your agreeable letter of the 8th instant came safe to hand a few days ago, by John Hubley, Esq., enclosing £175, for which I am extremely obliged to you. May you get ten thousand per cent. interest for this advance. She is a fine brig, and mounts twelve six and four pounders, with swivels, cohorns, howitzers, muskets, blunderbusses, pistols, &c., with provisions and other necessities for a four months' cruise. She carries ninety men, and is commanded by one of the most agreeable Captains that perhaps ever sailed out of this port, a seaman and warrior every inch of him: his name is Hamilton. I expect he will sail in a few days. My brother has been offered twenty-five per cent. advance for the half of his half, and would not take it. Enclosed is a letter for Mrs. Atlee, to whom be pleased to give my compliments; and am, your very humble servant,

WM. COX.

PHILADELPHIA COUNTY COMMITTEE.

Philadelphia, August 19, 1776.

Whereas the Militia of this County have bravely, at this emergency, stepped forth and pledged their all in contending for our most sacred and invaluable rights, which are inalienably derived from the laws of God and nature; and whereas many of those persons have left families, who are destitute of every means of acquiring an honest living:

Resolved, therefore, That those poor families, at this unhappy situation of affairs, ought to become the objects of publick compassion, and that they cannot be treated with too much lenity, as a recompense for the inestimable services that may be done by their husbands, who are now subjecting themselves to the hardships and dangers of war, while others enjoy perfect tranquillity, with every happiness that their domestick repose can suggest.

As there are gentlemen appointed in every Township to distribute such sums of money to the families of the poor Associators, now in actual service, as their several necessities may require,

Resolved, That it be earnestly recommended to those gentlemen to be actuated purely from principles of humanity, and that they make an equitable and frugal distribution of the money deposited in their hands, by paying proper attention to the distressed, at the same time avoiding the imposition of impostors; and upon the whole, that they discharge the trust reposed in them with great care and fidelity, as they will be accountable to the Treasurer of this Committee how they have distributed their several sums.

This day appeared before the Committee a certain James Thomson, of the Township of Oxford, and voluntarily made the following acknowledgment:

"Whereas I have at sundry times been guilty of saying many imprudent things, inimical to the natural rights and liberties of America, and have threatened violence both to my neighbours' properties and families during their absence in the Militia: I do hereby, from a sense of my fault, most humbly beg the pardon of all those whom I have offended by my misconduct, and promise before this Committee that I will for the future conduct myself as an orderly well disposed person.

JAMES THOMSON."

The above named Thomson declaring that he is afraid to return home to his lawful employment without this Committee will interfere with their protection:

Resolved, therefore, That it be recommended to the inhabitants of the Township of Oxford, and all others, that they would forgive the said Thomson, and suffer him to return home unmolested, as he does, with every mark of conviction becoming a penitent, solemnly promise and declare, that he will ever hereafter behave himself with becoming decency and respect to all ranks of people.

Signed by order of the Committee:

ENOCH EDWARDS, Secretary.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Elizabeth-Town, August 19, 1776.

Gen. MERCER desires his most grateful acknowledgments may be signified to the gentlemen Associators of Pennsylvania, for the great attention they have paid to every part of military duty while under his command. He is happy to have it in his power to relieve them, agreeable to order of Convention, and hopes the quota of men to be furnished by such battalions will be speedily made up, in proportion to the numbers on duty here, that no delay may be given to the most honourable dismission of the remainder.

LANCASTER COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Inspection and Observation, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 19th August, 1776:

Present: Mathias Slough, William Atlee, Henry Dehuff, Lodwick Lowman, John Miller, Eberhart Gruber, Christopher Crawford.

William Atlee in the chair.

Resolved by the Committee, That John Bruce, an Associator in Captain Withers's Company of Militia, in Colonel Ferree's Battalion, be not marched with the Militia, he being a Gunbarrel-maker, and it being contrary to the Resolves of Congress to march tradesmen of that kind. And it is the opinion of the Committee, that Alexander Hunter, a Fuller, also in Captain Withers's Company, ought to remain at home to pursue his business, he being the only Fuller in that neighbourhood.

William Frenniman, of the Seventh Regiment, is permitted to work with Doctor Christian Voght, at the Saltpetre making business, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him agreeable to the Resolves of the Committee.

Cuthbert Harcope, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to work with Henry Musser, at the Nailer's business, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the Resolves of the Committee.

GENERAL ROBERDEAU'S ADDRESS.

The following Address of General Roberdeau to the Pennsylvania Associators at Amboy, is published by an order of the Convention of Pennsylvania, of August 19, 1776.

JOHN MORRIS, Jun., Secretary.

GENTLEMEN: As it hath pleased Providence, for the exercise of our patience, and for the defence of that freedom which we inherit from the great Giver of all things, to call us from our families to the field; and as I have the honour of being your General officer, I trust you will take it well in me to endeavour to point out to you whatever appears necessary, either for your own particular good, or the more noble object—the good of all.

It is our unavoidable lot to live in the day of trial; and, for my own part, as I am persuaded, from the haughty disposition of the English nabobs towards us, that a day of bloody separation must one time or other have happened; on that account, I say, I think it my duty to rejoice, and to reckon it among the number of my felicities in this world, that it hath happened at a time when I can bear my part therein. If we can leave peace and freedom to our children and posterity, we leave them a fortune more valuable than gold.

As to our present condition as soldiers in camp, I would advise you to reflect, that a young Army, so suddenly collected, and having everything to learn and to provide, will unavoidably be put to many inconveniences, especially at first. It is a new life to us all, and young beginners in every state must expect trouble; but as we have taken up the sword, so likewise must we take up the cross of a soldier, and go through the difficulties as well as the dangers of the field. Hardship is the soldier's fate, and there is as much true honour in bearing it with a manly fortitude as in facing the cannon of an enemy. Patience under difficulties is one of the first virtues in a military character, and without which, no man, however brave, will ever be a soldier.

A number of complaints have been very justly made respecting the provision delivered out by the Commissaries, and I assure you that no care or duty has been or shall be wanting in me, in concurrence with my senior in command, General Mercer, to have the provisions good, and the quantities justly given out; yet, after all, we must not expect to have things about us with that order and economy with which we had them at home. In times like these, some sacrifice of convenience must always be made to necessity.

And if any man among us is so lost to all sense of virtue in this important struggle for life, liberty, and property, and the conservation of them to posterity—who cannot, for a short time, put up with a soldier's fare, that he may afford his country that service she calls for, and which is greater than, in all probability, will ever be in his power, through his whole life, to render again—such a man is beneath mine and every honest American's respect or notice. Your reasonable complaints will be remedied, and until that can be accomplished, I recommend it to you to show your good sense by your good nature, and put up with things as well as your can.

But I find myself under the unpleasant necessity of taking notice of a dissatisfied spirit which, somehow or other, has crept in among some of us. Of your valour I have no doubt, and I warn you, as friends and fellow-soldiers, that you listen not to those (should there be such among us) who would stir up discontent and uneasiness. "Let us go home," has been the cry of some. What! my friends; turn your backs on your enemies in three or four weeks' time? Is it worth putting the Continent to the expense of equipping and marching a body of men for the service only for a few days, and half that time spent in going and coming? Besides, can you expect anything less than that the enemy will follow you to your homes, joined by a large body of Tories, that will flock to them the moment you leave this spot? "But we have wives and families," you will say, "and our business is at stake." The more reason, then, you have to stay. You are the very men whose duty it is not to go. Here is the spot to make your defence. If you have a mind to keep the enemy from ravaging your country, fight them on the sea-shore. If you would preserve your property and families in peace, then let not those who would destroy the one, and distress the other, set their foot upon your shores. And if any of you have wives, connexions, friends, or relations, who urge you to return, they may just as well invite the enemy to come along with you. There is no difference, in effect, between retreating and being defeated. Consider it well, gentlemen; think for your country's good; look but across the water, and for your honour's sake, never let it be said that an army of sixpenny soldiers, picked up from prisons and dungeons, freed from transportation, the whipping post, and the gallows, fighting in the worst of causes, and for the worst of Kings, bore the fatigue of war with stouter hearts than you.

That we have left a number of disaffected men behind us, who have contributed nothing or no just proportion to the service of the country which gave them bread, and which has raised them from poverty to plenty, is true, and too true; and that there are others who are meanly seeking to enrich themselves by your absence, is equally true; but let not their vices be our example. If they have failed in duty, it is no reason we should. And I have the pleasure of informing you, that the Convention has taken that matter under consideration, as appears by the following extract from their proceedings:

"In Convention, July 23.

"Whereas the Associators of this State, on the requisition of the honourable Continental Congress, have freely and bravely gone into the field for the defence of the common liberties of America, while the Non-Associators remain at home in peace and security, without affording, by personal service or otherwise, that just and necessary assistance they owe to the State for their protection:

"Therefore, Resolved, That this Convention will take the most effectual measures to render the burden and expense of the inhabitants of this State just and equal."

I have now, gentlemen, to remind you of the condition on which you marched and engaged in the present service, which was, to continue therein "until the Flying-Camp of ten thousand men could be collected to relieve you, unless you should be sooner discharged by Congress."

These, gentlemen, are the express words. I have written to the Convention to hasten the completion of the Flying-Camp, and I need not point out to you the ruin and destruction that would follow were any of you to quit your station before you are relieved. The enemy, in that case, would be encouraged to attack, either those who were brave enough to remain, or the Army at New-York, and perhaps a thousand of your brethren may fall for every hundred of you which at this time should withdraw from duty, a circumstance, gentlemen, you would never through life be able to reconcile to your consciences; especially as it is possible that, by our formidable numbers and unanimous spirit, the enemy may be disheartened from attacking us.

I am desirous, gentlemen, of having the matter plainly understood among you all, and I should be deficient in duty both to you and the publick, were I to speak a language that might tend to amuse or deceive you. I have no interest distinct from yours to make my entreaties necessary; the cause is as much yours as mine; you have the same at stake which I have. I am ready at any time to go with you through every necessary difficulty or danger, and I expect from you the same disposition. Only consider the duty you owe to yourselves, to your families, and to your country, and you need no other inducements. When you forget these, which I think it impossible you should, every other will be in vain. And, as a necessary companion to your bravery, I would recommend to you, gentlemen, a strict observance of the discipline and duty of a soldier; a true spirit of liberty is a spirit of order; there can be no liberty preserved without order. The English Army derive all their strength from a close attention to discipline; with them, it supplies the want of virtue. In short, gentlemen, though our cause is the most noble that man ever fought to defend, yet bravery, without order, will not be sufficient for the work we have to do. As we abound in the first, let us add to it the advantages of the last; and with those united, under the smiles of Heaven, we have no reason to fear a glorious issue to our righteous cause.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Newark, August 19, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered at Head-Quarters by Mr. Ludwick, whom I sent for to Amboy, in consequence of your Excellency's letter of yesterday. Enclosed is some intelligence that may be of consequence. I am pushing on troops to Bergen to the amount of one thousand. I hear the Third Virginia Regiment is on the march to join the Army. Please to signify your intentions as to the disposition of such Virginia troops as may arrive—whether they are to proceed on to New-York or remain in the Flying-Camp.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

H. MERCER.

To General Washington.

Jonathan Woodman, Isaac Osborne, and Robert Peas, say, that on the 2d of June they were taken in the schooner William, belonging to Salem, in her passage from St. Martin's, by the Cerberus frigate; that they were carried into Halifax and shipped on board the Peggy transport, from which they escaped last night. They further say, that the Phenix man-of-war was grappled by one of our fire-ships, and narrowly escaped being burnt; that the ships, in their passage down, received some shots, and the Phenix had one man killed; that on Thursday night last, a boat came from the Phenix down to the fleet, a Lieutenant in which received a cannon-ball through his thigh from one of our batteries. The accounts as to the number of the enemy's troops are various; that the Army is sickly, especially Lord Dunmore's, who brought but one hundred and six, black and white, with him; that General Clinton's conduct at Charlestown is much blamed—he is accused of cowardice, and some say he will be hanged; that before nine o'clock, boats are suffered to pass through the fleet without interruption; that they have built about twenty new flat-bottom boats, every ship, besides, having one; that last week several bodies of troops were embarked—some yesterday, and the ships that received them all unmoored; that the Hessian troops appear old and indifferent; that the Highlanders seem very desirous of deserting, three of whom have been lately taken in the attempt and hanged, and one shot.

The Examination of Captain BRITTON, who landed from on board a brig bound to NANTUCKET, belonging to the whale fishery, which had been discharged by Lord HOWE.

Captain Britton sailed from Halifax with four hundred Light-Horse. From the best intelligence that he could collect, there are about seven hundred Light-Horse on Staten-

Island. It is thought there are about twenty-five thousand effective men, eleven thousand of whom are Hessians. The general report was, that they intended to attack Long-Island first, and, if possible, to storm the fort opposite the city, in order to prevent their shipping being annoyed when the attack is made on New-York. The Hessians were landing on Staten-Island as fast as possible when he left it; and, from a conversation he had with several Hessian officers, he has no doubt, from proper encouragement and opportunity, they would join the Americans; that Captain Talbot, of the Niger, with two other frigates, had received orders to go round the east end of Long-Island into the Sound, in order to cut off the communication between Long-Island and the main; that it is generally thought they mean to attack Long-Island with their Grenadiers and Light-Infantry, and at the same time to send the remainder of their Army up the North River, and land above the town, by which means they expect to secure General Washington and the Army without firing a shot. That Captain Britton believes the attack is only delayed until a favourable wind and tide offers, as they intended it on Saturday morning last; that they are certain of success, as they are of opinion our men will not stand more than one fire; that the mode of attack is, to give one fire, and then rush on with fixed bayonets. That a number of boats from Long-Island came over with fresh provisions and intelligence during his confinement; and that a negro from Staten-Island goes over to the Jersey shore every night to receive letters lodged in some private place; and that he believes they have daily intelligence of all our movements. A negro escaped from Staten-Island this morning, who says that all the troops from this quarter were to march on Wednesday next, and to be replaced by Hessians.

Head-Quarters at Amboy, August 18, 1776, one o'clock.

GENERAL ROBERDEAU TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Newark, August 19, 1776, half-past eleven o'clock, A. M.

SIR: The post-rider just passed through here, with a very incredible story, which he told with great confidence, viz: that you had received a flag from Lord Howe, "proposing to retire with the fleet and army, and that he was willing to settle the present dispute on any terms you should ask;" for which he quoted the authority of an officer in your Army, who told him he might spread the news without the least reserve, for that the officer offered to swear to the truth, for that he had it from you. As this intelligence might have a tendency to lull the inhabitants, I thought it my duty to make it the subject of an express, without counselling General Mercer, who is gone forward towards Amboy.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DANIEL ROBERDEAU.

To His Excellency General Washington, Commander-in-Chief, Head-Quarters, New-York.

P. S. The intelligencer further informed that the reason of this hasty move from Lord Howe was news from England of a rumpus with France.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 20, 1776.]

New-York, August 19, 1776.

SIR: I have nothing of moment to communicate to Congress, as things are in the situation they were when I had last the honour of addressing them.

By a letter from General Ward of the 12th, I find that Whetcomb's regiment, on the 8th, and Phinney's, on the 9th, marched from Boston for Ticonderoga. Governour Trumbull, also, in a letter of the 13th, advises me that Ward's regiment, in the service of the States, was on the march to this Army, and that he and his Council of Safety had in the whole ordered fourteen Militia regiments to reinforce us. Three of them have arrived, and amount to about one thousand and twenty men. When the whole come, we shall be on a much more respectable footing than what we have been; but I greatly fear, if the enemy defer their attack for any considerable time, they will be extremely impatient to return home; and if they should, we shall be reduced to distress again. He also adds, that Captain Van Buren, who had been sent for that purpose, had procured a sufficient supply of sail-cloth for the vessels to be employed in the Lake, and a part of the cordage in that State, and a prospect of getting the remainder.

As there will be a difficulty, in all probability, to circulate the papers designed for the foreign troops, and many mis-carriages may happen before it can be effected, it may be proper to furnish me with a larger quantity than what I already have.

Enclosed I have the honour to transmit you a general return of our whole force at this time, in which are comprehended the three regiments of Militia above mentioned. I am sorry it should be so much weakened by sickness. The return will show you how it distresses us.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your most obedient,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. The post just now arrived has brought a further supply of papers for the Hessians, which makes my requisition unnecessary.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL ROBERDEAU.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 19, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of this date, and thank you for the intelligence thereby communicated.

The report propagated by the post-rider is totally destitute of truth in every instance; and as it may have the fatal tendency you seem but too justly to apprehend, I beg, sir, that you will take such steps to contradict and suppress it as you shall think most likely to effect it. I am, &c.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Brig. Gen. Daniel Roberdeau, Pennsylvania Militia.

QUARTERMASTER HUGHES TO GENERAL GATES.

New-York, August 19, 1776.

SIR: By order of his Excellency General Washington, I have the honour to enclose you a return of sundry articles shipped on board the schooner Union, Captain Sanford, which I wish safe to hand.

I am, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

HUGH HUGHES, A. Q. M. G.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

A Return made, New-York, August 19, 1776, to His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esquire, General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, by order of Colonel STEPHEN MOYLAN, Esq., Quartermaster-General, of the following articles, shipped for ALBANY, in good order, by HUGH HUGHES, Assistant Quartermaster-General, on board the Schooner UNION, PHILO SANFORD, Master, and to be delivered to the Hon. Major-General GATES, or his order.

Double-headed Shot: For 18-pounders, 60; for 12-pounders, 80; for 9-pounders, 80; for 6-pounders, 100.

30 reams of Musket Cartridge-paper.

9 Bullet-moulds.

33 cwt. 1 qr. and 4 lbs. of Grape-shot.

PHILO SANFORD.

STEPHEN MOYLAN, Q. M. G.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 19, 1776.

Yesterday morning being cloudy and rainy, the Phenix and Rose took the advantage, and weighed anchor, but kept on the eastern shore, which prevented General Mifflin from bringing a gun to bear upon them. They passed through a passage which we had left open, and which was to be stopped in a day or two. About a quarter after six they appeared at Greenwich, on which our batteries and galleys prepared to attack. They passed all our fortifications (it is thought) without much damage. Coming directly opposite the city they fired several broadsides, but with little or no execution. They had on board a deserter, who helped to stop the place, and who showed them the way through which they passed. They have joined their fleet, with the loss of one of their tenders, which was burnt the other night by the fire-ships, and the Phenix narrowly escaped.

We have this day one whole regiment employed to load a number of vessels with stones to sink between the Grand Battery and Governour's Island, which they will effect in a day or two.

A deserter from the enemy yesterday says, that five thousand men are to attack Long-Island, and the rest New-York on Tuesday next.

The brig Enterprise, Captain Joseph De White, and sloop Beaver, Captain Stewart Dean, two letters of marque, belonging to this port, after an engagement of two glasses, have taken two ships, viz: the Earl of Errol, a new vessel, two hundred and seventy tons burden, Captain John Bartlett, from Grenada, bound to London, mounting six two-pounders, laden with two hundred and twenty-two hogsheads of sugar, four hundred and fifty-nine bags of cotton, twenty-nine hogsheads of coffee, and one pipe of Madeira wine, valued at £25,000, has safely arrived in Boston harbour; and the ship Nevis, Captain Coffin, laden with five hundred hogsheads of sugar and seventy hogsheads of rum, supposed to be arrived at Casco Bay; both taken the 22d of July. Yesterday arrived thirty sail from Connecticut, with troops on board. The brig Sea Flower, Captain Savage, mentioned in my last to be taken by the enemy, is now in the Sound, and expected down next tide, laden with salt and medicines.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 19, 1776.

A flag of truce came up on Saturday to get liberty for Lord Drummond and three others to come on shore. Some will be allowed, but not his Lordship; he broke his parole. He wants to go to Congress to treat about reconciliation. The General sent word, that if Lord Howe would send a man of honour to Congress, he would give him a passport.

COLONEL HITCHCOCK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 19, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: It gives me pain to trouble your Excellency at this time, when concerns the most important that ever filled the human breast must lie with weight upon your mind; but when I see promotions all around me, and am told that your Excellency has also assured Colonel Varnum that he shall be promoted, your Excellency will not think it strange that it should sensibly touch me. Colonel Varnum and myself are the only two Colonels that at the beginning of the war came out from the Colony of Rhode-Island. Both left the bar there together, and were then upon a par. Ambition, then, must prompt us both to wish at least to rise alike, because in that Colony there will and must of course be a stigma fixed indelibly on the character of him who should be so unhappy as not to be promoted. It is true, in the settlement of ranks he was made senior Colonel; Though while we lay at Roxbury, by General Greene's orders, (for we came from the Colony without any rank settled,) we cast lots for seniority, which I then obtained. However, your Excellency, in your late orders, has been pleased to assure us that seniority shall not determine promotions. What, then, should entitle him more than myself to preferment I can't conceive. If I have not attended to the cares of my regiment, if I have not conducted my regiment with as much prudence, if I have not executed every order and command with as much punctuality, or if my moral as well as military conduct since I have entered the service under your Excellency has not been as exemplary and as distinguished as Colonel Varnum's, I wish not to be promoted with him. For the determination of this, I will appeal to General Greene, who intimately knows us both. Did my state of health permit, I should have waited on your Excellency in person; but as yet it does not, though, thank God, I am much better, and intend in a few days to help drub those mercenary sons of tyranny.

I wish not to detract from the character of any officer, or to do an act to prevent any from promotion—I know it is the pride and ambition of every military person; but I must, with great submission, say, that if I am so unhappy as to fall so far short of your Excellency's esteem and regard as not to be recommended to Congress equally with Colonel Varnum, in justice to my character, (which must suffer from whence I came,) that moment that he shall receive preferment and myself unnoticed, I shall beg leave of your Excellency to resign my commission and go home, and at the end of the campaign my whole regiment, both officers and soldiers, will follow me. I don't mention this as hinting that I will ever be instrumental in it, because God forbid I should ever thus injure my country, which constantly engages my whole attention; but such has been and such is now the ambition that runs through the regiment, because the regiment which I command came from a senior County than that which Colonel Varnum commands, and they always thought they ought to have been the oldest regiment, so that I am certain all the persuasion that can be used will not then prevent their quitting the service.

With the greatest esteem, and a readiness to execute all commands, I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

DAN. HITCHCOCK.

To His Excellency General Washington, Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces of the American States, New-York.

COLONEL McDUGALL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Tuesday, one o'clock.

SIR: The substance of the examination of the woman which your Excellency directed me to take, is as follows, viz: That her name is Mary Debeau; that she lived with Mr. John Livingston about eighteen months ago, and resided two weeks in New-York before she went to Staten-Island the day the man-of-war passed up the river; that she embarked with seven men, good livers in appearance, and eight or nine women and ten children, landed to the right of the fleet and Army, and that no person questioned her or her companions there about her or their business, or any other subject; that her errand there was to see her husband's mother. She can give no account of the state of the Army on the Island, nor precisely where she stayed. That she left that on Sunday last, in the afternoon, in company with ten or eleven men and women, and passed the fleet on her left, and landed at the foot of Leary's Street, (where the ferries to Powles-Hook are kept,) between seven and eight last night, and that the boat was not examined in crossing the bay, nor any of the passengers questioned when they landed; that her husband, John Debeau, is in our service, (she thinks in the First Battalion of Militia; that she knows not the name of any of her companions who went down or came up with her, except one Cassens, who said he lived lately near the Exchange; that from what she could collect, the business of her companions down was to secure a place of retreat, and those who came up to take their families out of town.

She answers so evasively, that I am at a loss to determine her true character. I have, however, had her searched by matrons for papers, but found none. From her appearance and deportment, I am inclined to conclude she is a follower of the enemy's Army. And as the Committee of the town is composed of persons from every quarter of the town, I submit it to your Excellency whether they will not be most likely to search this matter to the bottom, and discover her fellow passengers, if her story be true.

I have the honour to be, your Excellency's very humble servant,

ALEX. McDUGALL.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters.

CAPTAIN SUYDAM'S REPORT.

Camp, Long-Island, August 19, 1776.

I, the subscriber, went down to Rockaway, just at day-break, with my company of Light-Horse, pursuant to an order from Brigadier-General Heard, to take care of some boats. At the house of Van Brockel I discovered a number of men issue out of the door and run, some of them partly dressed, and some of them in their shirts only. Immediately I ordered my men to pursue them, and presently overtook three of the number and took them prisoners. Two of them got to the woods and hid under the bushes. On finding them I ordered them to surrender. One of them did; the other absolutely refused, although one of my men had his gun presented to his breast; on which my men alighted and took him. The prisoners' names are as follow: James Dickerson, Peter Mills, Richard Lewis, Person Langdon, and William Newton. After I had taken the above prisoners, I examined the beach, and found a boat and four oars and a paddle. In the boat were three sheep, four ducks, and a large bottle with water.

LAMBERTH SUYDAM, Captain of the Troop.

William Newton being examined, declares, that he stood his draught at New-York, and that he had found a man in his stead, and accordingly produced a certificate from Captain Steel, in Colonel Remsen's beat, in New-York, certifying the same; and further declares, that on account of the difficult times in New-York he left the city, with his family, about three weeks ago; that he had, since he came here, expressed his desire of getting off, to keep out of the way; that a person (whom he did not know) told him there would be an opportunity in two or three days; that, accordingly, an opportunity offered, and he and five others (whose names he did not know) embarked, but would not confess where they were bound for; that they landed at the beach between ten and eleven o'clock last night, and went to the house of Mr. Van Brockel, between one and two o'clock; that he knew not who put the sheep and ducks on board. Being asked whether the prisoners in the house were with him, he thought it was not a question which he was bound to answer, but intimated they were; and at his withdrawing, desired it might not be discovered that he had intimated it.

Mr. Van Brockel, who lives on the beach at Rockaway, declares, that very late last night two men came and knocked at his door, and after he had let them in, they told him there were four more out of doors, and he asked them why they kept out in the rain. Declares that after they had been at his house between two and three hours our men came on them; that he does not know where they came from, nor where they were going; that he knew none of them but Pearson Langdon.

Pearson Langdon examined, at first said he did not know where the boat was taken from, nor where it was; but afterwards confessed it belonged to one Isaac Denton; that they came out of Mott's Creek; that there were six in the boat; that he meant only to keep out of the way while they were draughting men, and did not intend to go further than the beach where he was taken; he does not know who put the sheep and ducks aboard. Being asked if the prisoners then in the house were in the boat, he said they were, and that the person who made his escape from the Troop was one Jonathan Smith.

Abraham Probasket being examined, declares, that yesterday afternoon he went with Mr. Van Brockel from Jamaica to the beach at the house of Van Brockel; that late at night some men came and knocked at the door, and were let in; that he knew none of them but Peter Mills; that this morning, when the Troop came up, he counted the men that were in the house—that there were six.

James Dickerson being examined, saith, that he belongs to Dutchess County, in Phillips's Patent, a trader there; that last winter he came to New-York to settle some accounts with the merchants; that while he was in York the river froze up so that he could not return; that as he had relations at Oyster Bay, he came up and spent two or three months with them; that at his return into Dutchess County it was there reported he had been on board the man-of-war, and that there was a person who had been on board of the man-of-war, who would swear it; that he was threatened with being sent a prisoner to the fort at the Highlands, there to be obliged to roll gravel, and that they pushed their bayonets into his guts to make him do it; that he went to the person who it was said could swear to his being on board the man-of-war; that he carried him to the Committee, and he declared before the Committee on oath that it was a lie—that he had never said Mr. Dickerson had been on board of the man-of-war; that this summer, while he was in New-York, a person told him of a person he had seen on Long-Island who had been obliged to leave his home with a wife and eight children; that he inquired who the person was, and being told, he knew him, and determined to come over, find the man out, and carry him to the Committee of his County to make up the matter, so that the man might stay in peace with his family; that he has been on the Island ever since. Being asked where he was going in the boat, and whether he put the sheep and ducks on board, he said he knew nothing of the boat, and ducks and sheep that were aboard; and if we had anything to charge him about the boat, we must prove it. Upon being told that he knew he did not speak the truth, for we could prove by the confession of one or two of the prisoners that he was one that was in the boat, he seemed struck with confusion. Being offered his bundle with clothes, if he would tell which bundle it was, he refused to own that he had any clothes; but after two or three hours, when he found it did not avail him anything, he then owned one of the bundles.

Peter Mills, of Jamaica, being examined, saith, that hearing that one-half of the Militia was to be draughted, he intended to stand his draught, and go himself if draughted, but that his mother would not let him, and persuaded him to keep out of the way; that the reason of his being on the beach was, that Mr. Lewis had a desire to see the beach, which he had not seen for a great many years; that he went with said Lewis; denied his going in the boat with the others, or that he knew anything of the sheep or ducks; said that he had no other clothes with him but what he had on his body; but he likewise afterwards owned one of the bundles.

Mr. Lewis being examined, saith, that he lives in Westchester; that he came over here after a legacy that was left him by his grandfather; that he met with Mills at his uncle Mott's; that they two went alone to the beach; walked it afoot; first said it was about eleven at night, but being asked if he saw anything of the boat at the beach, he said yes, that he saw them when they first got to the beach in the evening. Being told how he had contradicted himself about the time of night he arrived at the beach, and that it did not avail his denying being aboard of the boat, for that we had positive proof he was, he said he heard we could prove it, confessed they were all equally concerned in the boat.

The above examinations taken at the Widow Fosster's, at Rockaway, August 18, 1776, before the Captain of the Troop and the subscriber.

JOSEPH ROBINSON.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO COLONEL SETH REED.

Head-Quarters, Albany, August 19, 1776.

It having been represented to General Schuyler that Colonel Seth Reed is much indisposed, and that it is probable a change of air would conduce to the reestablishment of his health, the General grants him leave to absent himself from his regiment until such time as his health shall be so far restored as to enable him to discharge the duties of his station.

By order of the General:

JOHN LANSING, Jun., A. Sec'y.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM ALBANY, DATED AUGUST 19, 1776.

General Schuyler is returned from the German-Flats, where he had to feed and satisfy nearly fifteen hundred Indians. They promise a strict neutrality. Some scalps have been taken near Oneida Lake. A scouting party of ours were attacked by a party of Indians, three killed and scalped, two wounded and escaped, and fell in with some of the Indians that had been at the treaty, who brought them safe to Fort Stanwix. A report of a large body of troops from Canada at Fort Ontario, and that Claus and Butler are there. You will see Carleton's orders of the 7th of August, which were brought by Major Bigelow, who went with a flag of truce to carry the Declaration of Independence and the resolutions of Congress relative to the affair at the Cedars. An officer who went on a reconnoitre at St. John's and Chambly, fell in with a regular officer on horseback, alone, on the road between La Prairie and St. John's, summoned him to surrender himself prisoner, but he, clapping spurs to his horse, rode off; our officer fired at and shot him. He appears to have been a Brigadier-General, of the name of Gordon.

H. GLEN TO WALTER LIVINGSTON.

Schenectady, August 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you on Saturday concerning Mr. Ten Eyck's flour, and had expected your answer the same day, as I have sixty batteauxmen here waiting for a loading, and unless I have Mr. Ten Eyck's flour, I cannot load them. I now send my negro boy express, and expect he won't be detained long. Mr. Ten Eyck will expect the price you give the merchants in Albany.

I would be glad to know what I must give for peas. Here are some peas to be got. And should there be any hard soap in store, Colonel Dayton's regiment is much in want of it. Pray order some over early in the morning, that it may go off in the boats I am going to send.

Mr. Abraham Fonda was with me, and tells me he has a number of barrels he has made to send off to the West-Indies, but they are larger than common—cost him 2s. 6d., and if I will give that price, he will pack them with flour.

Your answer by this express I hope will be, that I may satisfy all the flour merchants here. They seem all to have some complaint in regard to the flour casks. I shall have occasion for all their flour before fall.

Mr. Ten Eyck is very particular in having as much now and at any other time as the Albany merchants; and don't forget to send me an order that I must have his one hundred barrels his son had engaged to send to Fort George.

Yours, &c.,
H. GLEN.
To Walter Livingston, Esq., Dep. Com'y General.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 19, 1776.

SIR: This day Colonel Woodbridge and his Major arrived at the suburbs of our encampment, and were stopped by a sentinel which I had placed there, because they had been lately inoculated. I have ordered them to remove to some distance back in the country, and to keep themselves private from those who may be on their march to this place, till further orders. They have been cleansed a little more than a week. I should be glad of particular advice from your Honour in this case, and it shall be strictly observed.

With respect to the tent-poles you mention in your last, I have just seen the Commissary of Massachusetts State, and he informs me that five hundred sets of tent-poles were brought from Watertown within seventy miles of this place, two hundred of which will be delivered at Ticonderoga, and the remainder are left at the distance above mentioned, on account of the badness of the roads, and cannot be brought on without an immense expense. This is the report of the Commissary, Mr. Abbot, to me. He further says that he has desired the Captains to take off the irons, and order the soldiers to bring them on in their packs. He says the remainder of the tents will certainly be here to-morrow night, and they shall be forwarded to you with all expedition.

I am, dear General, your most obedient and very humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

P. S. Colonel Mott arrived here yesterday, and upon inquiry I find he has been diligent in preparing his regiment for their march to this place, the greater part of which are on the ground. The only company behind will be in a day or two. He has just received the melancholy news of his wife's death, and is in great affliction, as he has left three young children behind him, without anybody to take care of them but the servants. On this account, as well as because a number of valuable papers were left only under the care of his wife, which require the immediate protection of some faithful person, he applied to me for leave to go home, and to be absent about three weeks. I thought proper to refer him to your Honour on this head, not doubting but that you will readily comply with his request. I would acquaint your Honour that I have met with a bad wound in my leg, which at present confines me, but hope to be about in a day or two.

This moment I have received a letter from General Schuyler, fully justifying my conduct in my late orders respecting the officers referred to in this, who are just come out of inoculation.

COLONEL NOTT TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 19, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I arrived here yesterday from Connecticut, my Lieutenant-Colonel and some other officers of my regiment with me. I should have been here long ago, but could not possibly get my regiment equipped. It was with the utmost difficulty, in that part of Connecticut where my regiment was raised, that I got the men armed. I have lost no time in arming and equipping the regiment, and providing some tents, which I have procured, and they are coming within twenty miles of this place. I had one company come in this morning, and another will be in this evening or to-morrow morning, who are yet destitute of any camp-kettles; otherwise, I believe, the regiment will be pretty well equipped for service.

I have now to inform your Honour, that about thirty miles back on the road, I received a letter forwarded by his Honour Governour Trumbull, by which I am informed that my wife, who I left in a perfect state of health, died the sixth day after I came from home. I lost one child a few weeks before I came from home, and an infant child since, by which my family is reduced to only three small children, the oldest under nine years, and no other person belonging to the family. I left my keys and all my papers in the care of no other persons but her who is now taken away. I have papers of the utmost consequence, and notes of hand, &c., to the amount of near £1,000, lawful money; and God only knows what will become of either my three small motherless children or my interest, unless I have liberty for about fifteen or twenty days to go and take a little care of them. I have been hitherto wholly devoted to the service of the country, and have been steady in the business since the war began; but I have still remaining some feelings for those tender connexions of wife and children; of the former, according to the Divine decree, I am deprived; and unless I can have liberty to go for a few days and attend to the latter, I fear my present state of mind will not admit of my being of any service here. General Waterbury thought I had better write to your Honour, not doubting my obtaining permission. If I thought it were for the good of the service that I should resign the regiment, or if your Honour should be of that opinion, I shall readily do it, rather than be deprived of seeing and taking a few days' care of the remaining small children I have left. The gentleman who waits on your Honour with this is the Lieutenant-Colonel of my regiment, whom I beg leave to recommend to your favour and notice, who will also be able to inform your Honour more particularly.

I am, sir, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

SAML. MOTT.

To the Honourable General Gates.

FIELD-OFFICERS AT TICONDEROGA TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Ticonderoga, August 19, 1776.

SIR: We have taken the liberty to enclose to you some papers, containing part of the proceedings of a General Court-Martial lately held here, which we beg you will lay before Congress. We are sorry to take up any part of your time with them, but we have been forced to it by General Arnold's appeal; an appeal, however, which we believe is heretofore unheard-of, as it is from the sentence of a General Court-Martial. We have sent an account of the transactions as they happened, naked and unadorned, for we are under no apprehensions of censure, conscious that we had nothing but the good of our country and the discipline of the Army in view. If we deserve censure at all, we conceive it to be for not having exercised that power we were certainly invested with, but which we declined upon motives of consideration for the General, in hopes he might thereby have become sensible of the impropriety of his conduct, and saved us a very disagreeable alternative. That it had not that effect was not our fault. We will detain you but one minute longer whilst we make this remark, viz: there must be in the Army (as in every other society) some supreme court of dernier resort; whether a General Court-Martial be that court or not lies with Congress to determine.

We have the honour of subscribing ourselves your Honour's most obedient, humble servants, &c.,

ENOCH POOR,	ISRAEL SHREVE,
WM. MAXWELL,	THOS. POOR,
WILLIAM BOND,	JOTHAM LORING,
Z. P. DE HAAS,	ANTHO. J. MORRIS,
ELISHA PORTER,	NICH. HAUSSEGGER,
FRANCIS JOHNSTON,	JOHN SEDGWICK.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

N. B. The members of the Court-Martial whose names are not subscribed are on command.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Tyonderoga, August 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed is an exact copy of the orders and letters I sent you yesterday morning at six o'clock, which I am surprised not to find complied with by the arrival of Mr. Wynkoop at this post. I desire that matter may be no longer delayed, and that he be sent, as I have already ordered, immediately, under arrest, to me at Tyonderoga.

I am, sir, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

To General Arnold.

GENERAL GATES TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Tyonderoga, August 19, 1776.

SIR: Last night I was honoured with the receipt of your Excellency's letter of the 12th instant. Mine of the 11th must, before this, have reached Lebanon. Enclosed I send your Excellency a list of the fleet of the United States now at Crown-Point, under the immediate command of Brigadier-General Arnold. As soon as the three row-galleys, now almost completed at Skenesborough, are finished, I shall despatch them, with those equipping here, under the command of Brigadier Waterbury, to reinforce the squadron now with General Arnold. These two gentlemen are intimately acquainted with maritime affairs, and being also men of undoubted character and honour, I have the greatest reason to hope for success from the united endeavours of such experienced officers. This Army, in particular, and the Continent in general, are under the greatest obligations to your Excellency for the care and attention you so constantly exert to serve them. The small-pox is the enemy I now dread the most, and am straining every nerve to annihilate the infection. In this I fear I am counteracted by some atrocious villains; but that Providence which governs and directs all things, will, I trust, preserve this Army, and finally rescue America from the tyranny with which it is threatened.

I am, sir, &c.

HORATIO GATES.

To His Excellency Jonathan Trumbull.

GENERAL GATES TO REV. MR. OLCOTT.

Tyonderoga, August 19, 1776.

REVEREND SIR: Being entirely unacquainted at Number Four, my respect for your character induces me to send you enclosed a copy of my letter of the 11th instant to Major Hawley, and to request you will prevail upon the Chairman of your Committee of Safety instantly to assemble the Committee, and call before them a certain Dr. Stevens, whom I would have sworn as to the number of the officers and soldiers of the Army that he has inoculated as they passed through Charlestown upon their march hither. When that is done, I desire the Doctor, with his poison, may be sent to close confinement in some place remote from the route taken by the troops in their march to Tyonderoga. I must further entreat you, sir, to recommend it to the Committee to give strict orders to have every officer and soldier who has had the disease to be perfectly cleansed before they are permitted to march to Tyonderoga.

You will most eminently serve your country by complying with this request, and lay a lasting obligation upon, reverend sir, your most obedient,

HORATIO GATES.

To Rev. Mr. Olcott, Charlestown, Number Four.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 19, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of yesterday, and have ordered Commodore Wynkoop to Head-Quarters. No other person in the fleet has disrespected my orders. I believe the Commodore was really of opinion that neither of us had authority to command him. He now seems convinced to the contrary, and is sorry for his disobedience of orders. If it can be done with propriety, I wish he may be permitted to return home without being cashiered.

I am, very respectfully, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

COMMISSARY GILBERT TO GENERAL GATES.

Charlestown, No. 4, August 19, 1776.

SIR: I would inform your Excellency of my proceedings here, and likewise of the proceedings of others. I have used my utmost endeavours to forward the troops through this place, with provisions for their march to Ticonderoga. By the order from the Commissary-General, I have met with great difficulty in getting provisions for the Army, on the account of the country being not well stocked with provisions and the shortness of time that I had in getting them. Sir, I would inform your Excellency that I have had a sufficiency to supply any number that is come to this town since I arrived here. The gentlemen may say they have been detained for the want of provisions, but I can make it appear, by all the gentlemen in this place, that that is not the thing that detained them. Some companies were here seven, eight, and nine days, and would not march, for the reason that their Field-Officers were not come up. One company, (Captain Howard's, belonging to Colonel Brewer's), would not march forward, on account of his people suffering in the woods for the want of kettles and canteens, much fearful of cooking his provision on the road. I told him that I would let him have a barrel of pork in his company, in case he could not cook on the road. Colonel Brewer sent discretionary orders for him to go forward, if he could get provisions here for his march; and in case he could not, to return back by the way of Bennington, where they have proceeded. Sir, I have got enough to supply any number that will come this way this season, bound to the Army at Ticonderoga.

From your most humble servant,

JOSEPH GILBERT, Dep. Commissary.

COLONEL SEYMOUR TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, August 19, 1776.

HONoured SIR: The general (and perhaps too severe) method adopted by the Militia here, that none would go, unless all went, to New-York, has stripped us so much of men and arms, that the inhabitants feel themselves under some apprehensions, considering the number of prisoners here and the guard we are obliged to keep every night; in short, our guard has failed already, principally for want of sufficient arms, which, with some repairing, might answer the present purpose. One George Burnham, of this place, one of the Militia, has been detained, by advice of the gentlemen of the town, till this time, who is our only armourer left. He must join his company this week, unless your Honour can give orders for his detention. He can scarcely be called an able-bodied man. It will undoubtedly be more for the publick safety and advantage to keep him here, than let him go, especially as he is likely to be constantly employed in repairing arms. Must beg your Honour's answer as soon as may be upon this subject.

I am, most respectfully, your Honour's obedient, humble servant,

THOS. SEYMOUR.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull, at Lebanon.

P. S. Major Newbery thought he might be excused, but the company he belonged to was so strenuous, that nothing would satisfy them—all must go or none. However, they are gone, with expectation he will join, unless excused by your Honour.

REV. WILLIAM GORDON TO GENERAL GATES.

Jamaica Plains, August 19, 1776.

FRIEND GATES: I am suspicious lest we have some low-lived fellows at Watertown who open letters from Ticonderoga; but as I can scarcely believe they will venture to look into one directed for your Honour, have therefore written to you instead of Colonel Trumbull. Miss Tyler expected to hear from him on Saturday, but there was no packet; however, she learned from Edes, the printer, that there was a paper, giving an account of Carleton's approach, to the Congress, letter, &c., which he designed to publish to-day, some things in it excepted, which he said ought not to be published. How the paper came, and who had it, when he was inquired of about it, he could not tell. I am jealous that paper was the Colonel's, and was designed for Miss Tyler. You will examine into that circumstance, and let me know. Have desired one of the Council to inquire of Edes, that the affair may be discovered if possible, mentioning what fatal consequences may arise if letters are opened after that manner.

Learn that the week before last our friends at New-York were much in the same state as at the beginning of last January. If our dilatoriness does not ruin us, we shall be indebted to a special Providence. A vessel from Portugal brings word that the Empress of Russia is dead, and that the Portuguese expect to be attacked by the Spaniards, unless a match should prevent it; but should Portugal and its appendages become annexed to Spain by marriage, that will destroy the political balance of Europe as fully as though effected by conquest. This way we have a deal of rain, but are healthy, and have the prospect of great plenty. Could I get somebody to preach for me a few Lord's days, would, Heaven permitting, visit you and our friends at New-York; but the difficulty of procuring supplies makes my coming somewhat uncertain. We go on taking vessels with rum and sugar. Not having had any flying reports of the enemy's attacking New-York, infer there was nothing of that kind on Thursday morning. Wish to have the campaign wear away without their doing anything, unless I could be assured that they would be beaten; but that must be left with infinite Wisdom. We are poor judges what will be best for the whole family of God—I mean all created intelligences. We must therefore leave everything with Him who will execute his own wise purposes. My respects to Colonel Trumbull and others.

Your affectionate friend,
To General Gates, at Ticonderoga.

WILLIAM GORDON.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, August 19, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 12th instant I received on Saturday evening. I gave immediate attention to your orders, and as it was judged extremely difficult, if not impracticable, to convey the mortars by land, I gave orders to the proper persons to prepare everything necessary for conveying them by water, and to work day and night until they were completed. This day they will go on board of lighters to Sandwich, from which place they are to be conveyed over the narrow neck of land to a place called Buzzard's Bay, where they will be put on board two lighters, and conveyed to Rhode-Island, from thence, keeping near the land, to New-York. I ordered they should be put on board two vessels for the greater safety, that if one should meet with any misfortune, the other might perhaps go safe. I have given Mr. Davis, Deputy Barrack master, the care of them, as he was well acquainted with the coast, and have directed him to make all possible despatch in conveying the mortars with their appurtenances to New-York.

An invoice of them is as follows: 2 Sea-Mortars, with upper and under beds; 1 Truck-Carriage; 1 dozen Hand-spikes; 4 Iron Crows; 2 Spruce Poles, for a pair of Shears; 2 Hoisting-Tackles; 3 Guis; 2 pair of Slings; 4 Luff-Tackles; 2 coils of small Cordage.

I have ordered Ensign Gould with his party (who were going to New-York by land) to go on board the vessels as a guard, lest the enemy should send their boats from some of their cruisers and attack the lighters.

Great is our solicitude for you and the Army under your command at New-York, as we are in constant expectation of the enemy's making a violent attack. May the God of armies give you success.

I am, your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,
To General Washington.

ARTEMAS WARD.

THOMAS W. WALDRON TO MESHECH WEARE.

Dover, N. H., August 19, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: This is intended by Stephen Evans, Esq., who goes to Exeter on Mr. Mitchell's affair, with an inventory of the goods in his store at Dover the 9th of July last. It was thought best that the new manœuvre should be attended by the major part of our Committee. With reluctance I attended to make it a majority, and shuddered to think the first governmental act I was concerned in after a Declaration of Independency appeared oppressive. I declined signing the inventory as Chairman, at the same time saying, if it was necessary it should have such a signature. I was ready to join in appointing another, the rather as I did not mean any court should have my name to an affair that appeared to me no better supported.

If the present struggle is to preserve the undelegated rights of Americans for themselves, posterity, and such as have or shall emigrate hither, and the McMasters (a set of Scotch pedlars, such as are to be found from end to end of the Continent where a boat from the sea can be waterborne,) are not friends to our endeavours for freedom, does it comport with any ideas of the liberty contended for, or the rectitude, justice, and honour intended by our liberation from island lords, to take from them or others, on slight evidence, their books, papers, and effects, without shadow of trial, and contrary to the practice of any but despotick States? and won't it sound harsh in the ears of those we have or may invite to a connexion with us?

I suppose the act excluding the Stuart family was disagreeable to one-third at least of the people, yet I don't remember to have heard of any coercive steps taken but against those who were in actual opposition to the Hanover succession; so if some few or many do not think our opposition to Ministerial mandates just, and keep within the line of their own affairs, how can it be avoided, seeing men have it no more in their power to think than look alike? (while the Colonies have reason to joy in unparalleled unanimity.) But these things apart, I suppose no step could have been taken so agreeable to the Company as that ordered by the Colony Committee; hence they will avail themselves by saying their goods are confiscated, and they thereby disenabled doing their creditors justice. Such ideas I realized and communicated to most of our Committee before the order about the goods was sent from Exeter hither.

As there are men at this day (and clothed with power, too) who smell treason in everything beyond their ken, as well as in ideas different from their own, (sublime ones,) these free thoughts are sent you, in full confidence that they will be kept from the eyes of such pests to everything valuable from the cradle to their coffin.

Wishing politeness, justice, and lenity among the shining characteristics of the American States, and that the guides through present difficulties may have Divine direction, I am, honourable and dear sir, your most respectful, humble servant,

THOS. W. WALDRON.

Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq., at Hampton Falls, or Exeter.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, DATED ST. AUGUSTINE, AUGUST 20, 1776.

The smallest degree of sense or prudence must have shown any person the necessity of keeping this weak, infant Province as much as possible in a state of neutrality; instead of which our rulers have been spiriting up the Creek and Cherokee Indians to fall upon the frontiers of Georgia and Carolina. The Creeks have been prudent enough to remain quiet, but the unfortunate Cherokees have been the dupes of such advice. They have murdered many women and children on the borders of Carolina, but they are now suffering very severely for it.

Not content with this Indian business, Messrs. Moore and Clarke, at the head of a body of plunderers, have been sent into the Province of Georgia. These freebooters, in the most cruel and wanton manner, destroyed the crops, broke up the plantations, drove off the cattle, and carried away the negroes belonging to several of the Georgia planters. The Militia of that Province assembled under Colonel Mackintosh, and have retaliated on the miserable Colony of East-Florida. Every settlement to the northward of St. John's River is broken up, particularly Lord Egmont's, and the planters thrown in the greatest distress. The party of troops stationed at the new fort on St. Mary's River are made prisoners, as are also Sir James Wright's two brothers, Charles and Jermyn. We have not yet learned what Colonel Mackintosh intends further—whether he means to come here or return into Georgia.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH. [No. 152.] Annapolis, August 20, 1776.

SIR: There is a quantity of flint-stone at Emerson's ware house, on Wye River. We want a person that understands the manufacturing of flints. If any such person is to be had in Baltimore, send him to the Council of Safety immediately, and he will meet with proper encouragement. We are, &c.

To Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth.

CAPTAIN DARNES TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Queen Anne's County, August 20, 1776.

SIR: It is with pleasure I acquaint you that my company is really armed, and vastly anxious to receive their marching orders. We are still unprovided with camp equipage. We have, I suppose, twenty blankets, and expect some brought in to-day to our Committee.

There has a report prevailed among us, though not much credited, that the arms in our hands were to be put into the hands of Captain Dean's company. Such an order, I verily believe, would give general dissatisfaction to the company, as there has been a great deal of pains taken by many in the company to procure arms. Am not under the least doubt but if camp equipage can be provided, we shall be ready to march the first of next week. We are much in want of linen, therefore shall stand in need of your assistance: I am told the Council have a quantity by them. Shall be glad of an order from you for two bolts of osnaburgs, and the camp equipage necessary for my company, as soon as possible.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,
JOHN DARNES.

To William Richardson, Esq., Caroline County.

ISAAC GRIEST TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore-Town, August 20, 1776, twelve o'clock, P. M.

GENTLEMEN: I have just delivered the knap and haversacks to Mr. Hurt for the two companies, with one hundred and fifty brushes and priming-wires, which is all we have in Baltimore, and these are but this hour made ready. Mr. Hurt is going off this afternoon. He can get no more brushes till they come from Lancaster. Pray is the Flying-Camp to be furnished with bayonet-belts out of the magazine? Colonel Hall wants them slung. Pray let me know by Mr. Johnson.

Yours to command,

I. GRIEST.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

N. B. I wrote you by Mr. Johnson on yesterday, but he did not get away till this day.
J. G.

Philadelphia, August 20, 1776.

We are informed by the Captain of a vessel belonging to this city, who escaped a few days ago from Staten-Island, that the German troops lately arrived from Halifax are landed on the Island, where it is said they are to wait the arrival of another reinforcement (which is hourly expected) before the attack will be made on New-York. He adds, that the British troops speak with great contempt of General Washington's Army, and are assured that they will have the pleasure of soon meeting and spending the winter with General Burgoyne and his troops in New-York.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN WILLIAMSBURG, VIRGINIA, DATED PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST 20, 1776.

We have been in hourly expectation of the great decision at New-York, but it has not yet happened. About three nights ago, an attempt was made to burn the two ships which had gone up the river. One of the two fire-rafts prepared for that purpose grappled the Phoenix ten minutes, but was cleared away at last. A tender, however, was burnt. The two ships came down on Sunday evening, and passed all our batteries again with impunity. Lord Dunmore is at Staten-Island; his sick he sent to Halifax; his effective men he carried to Staten-Island; and the blacks he shipped off to the West-Indies, as a recompense for their services. Two gentlemen, who had been taken prisoners by the enemy, have made their escape. They say they are now twenty thousand, and that another division of five thousand foreigners is still expected. They think that Lord Howe will not attack these ten days, but that he does not wait for his last division, being confident of victory without. One of these informants was a Captain of a Continental vessel going for ammunition, whose mate and crew rose and took her, and, falling in with the division of the Hessians which accompanied their General, were brought to. The General, learning from the dethroned Captain what had happened, immediately threw the piratical mate in irons, and had the Captain to dine with him every day till they got to Halifax, where he delivered him, vessel, &c., over to the English.

A gentleman who lived some time in this city, but since last winter has become a resident of St. Eustatia, writes, that by a Dutch ship from Amsterdam, they have advice that the States of Holland had refused to renew the prohibition on the exportation of powder to the Colonies, or to cede to the English the Scotch brigade in their service, as also to furnish some men-of-war asked of them by the British Court. This refusal so piqued the Ministry, that they had been induced to take several Dutch ships; amongst them, two that sailed from St. Eustatia, which were carried to London, and another to St. Kitts; in consequence whereof, the Dutch have armed forty ships-of-war, ordered sixty more to be built, and are raising twenty thousand land forces.

The Governour-in-chief of the French West-Indies has not only refused to permit the Captain of an English man-of-war to make prize of our vessels in their ports, but forbid him to come within gunshot of them; and the enemy's armed vessels being withdrawn from our whole coast to New-York, shows us the good effects of their absence, by daily arrivals of ammunition, &c.

The Canadians who had been Captains in our Canadian regiment, and whom General Gates writes are known in the Army to be worthy of good credit, made their escape from St. John's, and came over to our Army from Ticonderoga. They give the following intelligence, viz: That the enemy did not fortify any place we abandoned; that they had two thousand men at Isle-aux-Noix, under General Frazer, two thousand at St. John's, under Carleton, and some at Montreal—two hundred and fifty only being left at Quebeck. It was reported that four thousand English troops, which were to have been a part of that Army, had perished at sea, which gave great uneasiness. The fleet brought over timber, &c., for fifty boats, which they attempted to transport by land from the mouth of the Sorel to St. John's; but could not for want of carriages, and had therefore been destroyed. Carleton, to make amends for this, had employed Canadians to build batteaus at St. John's; but he has rendered himself very odious to those people, by levying contributions on them in general, and confiscating the estates of all those who followed our Army, or who absconded.

Great numbers of the Germans desert daily, and are anxiously concealed by the inhabitants; seventy Brunswickers disappeared in one day. Their officers are so much afraid of bushfighting and ambushes, that they will not head any parties to pursue the runaways. The men have the same fears, which prevent them from deserting in so great numbers as it is supposed they will, when once our fleet shall appear cruising on the Lake to receive and protect them.

Between the 22d and 24th ultimo, Carleton and the other Generals abandoned all their posts on this side the Sorel, except St. John's, with as great precipitation as our poor sick Army had done, carrying with them their artillery and provisions. This was occasioned by the arrival and mysterious manœuvres of a fleet at Quebeck, supposed to be French, who hoisted different colours, and fired at tenders sent from the town to inquire who they were. The enemy left at Isle-aux-Noix two hundred men to send intelligence of our operations, and it is said they will go down the river if we return into Canada. For this event, the Canadians are offering up prayers at the shrines of all their saints. Carleton, some time ago, hearing that we were returning with a considerable reinforcement, was so terrified that he would have retired immediately, had not some of his spies come in and informed him of the deplorable situation to which the small-pox had reduced our Army. They are now, however, recovering health and spirits.

General Gates writes, that he had accounts of the roads being crowded with Militia coming to his assistance; six hundred from New-Hampshire came in while he was writing his letter, being the first. His fleet had sailed from Ticonderoga to Crown-Point, consisting of the following vessels, viz: one schooner and a sloop, of twelve four-pounders, ten swivels, and fifty men; one schooner, of four four-pounders, four two-pounders, ten swivels, and thirty-five men; one schooner, of two four-pounders, six two-pounders, eight swivels, and thirty-five men; two galleys, mounting each one twelve and two nine-pounders, eight swivels, and forty-five men; two galleys, of three nine-pounders each, eight swivels, and forty-five men; besides two others that are not quite rigged. Eight more galleys would be ready to join them in a fortnight, when they were to proceed down the Lake; and General Arnold, who is said to be a good sailor, had undertaken the command. We have two hundred fine ship-carpenters, mostly sent from hence, at work, with whose assistance, I hope, such a fleet will soon be exhibited on that Lake as it never yet bore.

The Indians have absolutely refused Carleton in Canada, and Butler at Niagara, to have anything to do in this quarrel, and applaud, in the highest terms, our wisdom and candour for not requiring them to meddle. Some of the most sensible speeches I ever saw of theirs are on this head; not spoken to us, but behind our backs, in the Councils of our enemies. From very good intelligence, the Indians of the Middle Department will be quiet; that treaty is put off till October.

SAMUEL GRIFFIN (DEPUTY ADJUTANT-GENERAL) TO THE BOARD OF WAR.
Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, August 20, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: I have an apology to make to your honourable Board for having delayed transmitting to you a general return of the Army (under General Mercer) so long; but have confidence to hope you will readily excuse me when I inform you, that by the General's orders I was obliged to attend all the last week at Newark and Pawles-Hook, to forward the troops sent to reinforce General Washington. Mr. Peters sent us a copy of a return which he informed was such as you would wish to have. I am sorry he was at that trouble, as we have (exclusive of blanks and lines) a great number of blank returns of that sort by us, which, though very proper for Regular troops, are by no means so for Militia, at least for the Pennsylvania Associators, who have no fixed number of either officers or men for any one battalion. I of course cannot tell what they want to complete the different posts; they have never had any fixed number of men stationed at them, but have been reinforced and reduced twice or thrice a week, as the General thought necessary. Whenever a sufficient number shall arrive, the General proposes to fix a certain number of battalions at each post, which will enable me to put the Army on a regular footing, and to make the returns regular, and, I hope, agreeable to your honourable Board.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
SAMUEL GRIFFIN.

To the Hon. the Chairman of the War Committee.

A General Return of the Army in NEW-JERSEY, under the command of the Hon. HUGH MERCER, Esq., Brigadier-General, in the service of the AMERICAN STATES, PERTH-AMBOY.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, August 20, 1776:

Present: Wm. Atlee, Chairman; Wm. Bowsman, Lodwick Lowman, Wm. Brown, Casper Shaffner, Henry Dehuff, John McMullen, and Wm. Clark.

Ordered, That Jacob Winter, Jacob Winter, Jr., Philip Winter, James McElwain, and Henry Hare, give good freehold security in £1,000 each, for their good behaviour to all people, particularly to Thomas Smith and his family.

Jacob Winter, bond £1,000, and John Messencope, bond £1,000, to the State of Pennsylvania; conditions for the good behaviour of the said Jacob Winter to all the Subjects and Inhabitants of this State, and particularly to and towards the family and estate of Thomas Smith.

Acknowledged in Committee, August 20, 1776.

Henry Hare, bond £1,000, and John Messencope, bond £1,000, to the State of Pennsylvania; conditions for the good behaviour of Henry Hare towards all the Subjects and Inhabitants of the State, and particularly towards the family and estate of Thomas Smith.

Acknowledged in Committee, August 20, 1776.

Philip Winter, bond £1,000, and John Haaver, bond £1,000, to the State of Pennsylvania; conditions for the good behaviour of the said Philip Winter towards all the Inhabitants of the State, and particularly towards the family and estate of Thomas Smith.

Jacob Winter, Jr., bond £1,000, and Daniel Rinport, bond £1,000, to the State of Pennsylvania; conditions for the good behaviour of the said Jacob Winter, Jr., towards all the Subjects of the State, and particularly to and towards the family and estate of Thomas Smith.

Samuel Elliot, on oath, says, that in mowing-time last, he was in company with Jacob Winter, Jacob Rees, Samuel Winter, and James McElwaine; and speaking of the Militia, one of them (he thinks McElwaine) said that if any officer insisted upon his going with the Militia, he would shoot him if ever they came to a battle the first man; and if he insisted hard upon him, he would shoot him before he marched; that they all (to wit: the said four persons) agreed to the same, and swore they would put their resolves in execution.

James Steel, on oath, says, that he was mowing at the same time with Samuel Elliot, and heard the above Jacob Winter, Jacob Rees, Samuel Winter, and James McElwaine, say, if any officer asked or insisted upon their marching with the Militia, they would blow a ball through him, and swore to it most heartily.

William Steel, on oath, says, that he was also mowing at the same time with Elliot and Steel, and heard the above four persons say and swear that the first man who insisted upon their going with the Militia should be the first man they would shoot.

James Brooks says he was raking at the time of mowing above mentioned, and heard from the same four persons, or some of them, expressions the same as above.

Patrick Kelby, on oath, says, that on Sunday was two weeks, he was going from his home to one Mahaffy's. On the road, he met Jacob Winter, Jr., and Samuel Winter; that they insisted upon his alighting from his horse, which he did, and entered into conversation with them about the present war; and the said Jacob Winter and Samuel Winter both said that if Major Smith insisted upon their going to the Camp, he would be a dead man; whether he went, or stayed at home, he would be a dead man. The examinant told them it was dangerous for them to destroy him; to which they answered, it was all one; if they went to the war, they might be killed, and they might as well die at home as abroad; that the said Jacob Winter said that the Major had insisted upon his going, and he was determined not to go.

Christopher Linn says, that about a week before Major Smith was shot at, he heard Jane Cunningham, the wife of Robert Cunningham, say that she had heard there were three rifles loaded to shoot Major Smith.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 22, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

New-York, August 20, 1776.

SIR: I was yesterday morning favoured with yours of the 17th, accompanied by several resolutions of Congress, and commissions for officers appointed to the late vacancies in this Army.

I wrote some days ago to General Schuyler, to propose to Generals Carleton and Burgoyne an exchange of prisoners, in consequence of a former resolve of Congress authorizing their commanders in each department to negotiate one. That of Major Meigs for Major French, and Captain Dearborn for any officer of equal rank, I submitted to General Howe's consideration by letter on the 17th, understanding their paroles had been sent to him by General Carleton; but have not yet received his answer upon the subject.

In respect to the exchange of the prisoners in Canada, if a proposition on that head has not already been made, (and I believe it has not,) the enclosed copy of General Carleton's orders (transmitted me under seal by Major Bigelow, who was sent with a flag to General Burgoyne from Ticonderoga, with the proceedings of Congress on the breach of capitulation at the Cedars, and the inhuman treatment of our people afterwards) will show it is unnecessary, as he has determined to send them to their own Provinces, there to remain as prisoners; interdicting at the same time all kind of intercourse between us and his Army, except such as may be for the purpose of imploring the King's mercy. The assassination which he mentions, of Brigadier-General Gordon, is a fact entirely new to me, and what I never heard of before. I shall not trouble Congress with my strictures upon this indecent, illiberal, and scurrilous performance, so highly unbecoming the character of a soldier and a gentleman, only observing that its design is somewhat artful, and that each boatman with Major Bigelow was furnished with a copy. I have also transmitted Congress a copy of the Major's journal, to which I beg leave to refer them for the intelligence reported by him on his return from the truce.

By a letter from General Greene yesterday evening, he informed me that he had received an express from Hog-

Island Inlet, advising that five of the enemy's small vessels had appeared at the mouth of the creek with some troops on board; also, that he had heard two pettiaugers were off Oyster Bay, the whole supposed to be after live stock; and to prevent their getting it, he had detached a party of Horse and two hundred and twenty men, among them twenty Riflemen. I have not received further intelligence upon the subject.

I am also advised by the examination of a Captain Britton, master of a vessel that had been taken, transmitted me by General Mercer, that the general report among the enemy's troops was, when he came off, that they were to attack Long-Island, and to secure our works there if possible, at the same time that another part of their Army was to land above this city. This information is corroborated by many other accounts, and is probably true. Nor will it be possible to prevent their landing on the Island, as its great extent affords a variety of places favourable for that purpose, and the whole of our works on it are at the end opposite to the city. However, we shall attempt to harass them as much as possible, which will be all that we can do.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

COMMISSARY TRUMBULL TO COLONEL CHESTER.

New-York, August 20, 1776.

Commissary Trumbull presents his compliments to Colonel Chester, and is necessitated to apply to him to release Captain Isham from doing duty in Colonel C's regiment, to take Mr. Champion's place, who supplies the whole Army with fresh beef, and is unhappily taken sick. Captain Isham is acquainted with the business, and no person that I can conceive of can do the business but he, and it is of the last importance that it should be done. I also request Colonel C. to recommend, or at least consent, to the Adjutant-General that Captain Isham be excused duty till Champion recovers.

Your humble servant,

Jos. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Chester.

COMMISSARY TRUMBULL TO COLONEL CHESTER.

New-York, August 20, 1776.

DEAR SIR: My beef man is sick; there is not another but Captain Isham within my knowledge who can supply his place. It is of the utmost importance that your regiment, as well as the rest of the Army, should eat, which they cannot do without him. The alternative is put: justly now judge, Whether it is best for one man to fight only, or twenty thousand men to starve?

Your humble servant,

Jos. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Chester.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

King's Bridge, August 20, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have the pleasure to inform you that we have taken out of the wreck of the tender lately burnt up the North River the following cannon, viz: one six-pounder, two three-pounders, one two-pounder, and ten swivels; one caboose and apron, two cutlasses, two gun-barrels, one crow-bar, and four grapplings and chains. Lieutenant Loudon, of Colonel Nicoll's regiment, with two of the company to which he belongs, went off, and towed the wreck on shore, under the fire of the cannon of the ships, a cannon ball passing within a few inches of his head. He is an undaunted officer, and with great fatigue has taken these cannon out of the water. I therefore beg leave to recommend this service in particular to your Excellency's notice, and if you should think some reward proper to be given, it will be gratefully received by the adventurers, and perhaps prompt others to daring actions.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL DUBOIS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Windsor, August 20, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I received your Excellency's letter of the 9th of August, and, agreeable to your order, have procured returns of all the officers of the regiment under my command of the men inlisted by them, except three Captains, who are at present in New-York. The number which, as yet, they have been able to inlist consists of thirty men; twenty-three of whom are well armed, and will be ready to march on Saturday next, agreeable to your Excellency's order.

At a meeting of the officers this day they requested me to petition your Excellency that you would be pleased to order them into immediate service at New-York, or wherever your Excellency may think fit. As the country is very much drained of men, every man that can any way be spared being already in the service, they think if they were in present service they might not only have an opportunity of exerting themselves to the utmost of their power, but might also complete their companies out of the Militia whenever it is thought expedient to grant them that liberty. They all express the most ardent zeal for the service, and are unwilling to be idle at this important crisis.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and humble servant,
LEWIS DUBOIS.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 20, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 18th instant is just now come to hand. A strange insatiation seems to prevail in people. How Wyntkoop should imagine that he was not to obey General Arnold's orders, he being the oldest officer then on the spot, I cannot imagine. As you are on the spot, it is more in your power to judge of the propriety of sending Wyntkoop down than in mine. If he comes down, I shall order him to remain here until the pleasure of Congress is known, by whom (and not by me) he was appointed, and therefore I cannot venture upon a dismissal. I am extremely happy that General Waterbury is to join General Arnold. I know him to be a good man, as well as a good officer.

The sail-cloth and good part of the cordage procured in New-England is on the way to Skenesborough, but none of the artillery articles, said to have left New-York on the 10th instant, are yet arrived.

It is impossible for me to judge of what provisions, &c., may be wanted with the Army and at the different posts, without returns from the Commissaries, &c. These must come to me through the proper channel. Mr. Livingston is the Deputy Commissary-General in this department; and in the absence of Mr. Trumbull, the Commissary-General, he is to furnish me with a general return, made out of the returns of the Commissaries at the different posts. This he cannot do, unless the Commissaries at those posts send him the returns. Be pleased to order Mr. Avery immediately and weekly to make returns to Mr. Livingston, that I may know how the Army is supplied with provisions. If he should refuse this, you will be pleased immediately to advise me thereof, that I may take proper steps to enforce a compliance with my orders.

I wait with impatience for news from New-York. A deserter, it is said, advises that the enemy had ordered three days' victuals to be dressed. It is certain that an attack is daily expected.

I am preparing to remove Elmore and Nicolson's regiments to the westward together; they will not exceed five hundred effectives. I fear to be under the necessity of further reinforcements in that quarter; and where to procure them, unless from the northward, I know not. The enemy will make every push they possibly can; but if we can hold our ground this campaign, all will be well. Adieu.

I am, most sincerely, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable General Gates.

P. S. August 21.—All the stores are arrived from New-York, and leave this place in teams to-day. But there is not quite a ton of grape-shot, and only one piece of blue bunting for colours.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, August 20, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your favours of the 12th and 13th instant, and beg leave to return my thanks for the advices contained in them. Although I hope soon to be at Ticonderoga, yet as despatches will be constantly going from hence to your Colony, it will be necessary that a post-rider should go from hence and exchange packets with Mr. Brown; but as I do not know what road he rides, will you be so good as to advise the Deputy Paymaster-General of it, and desire Mr. Brown to forward your letters to him by express, with a line from such part of the road as he may find, on inquiry, nearest to this place, signifying on what days it will be proper for the rider from hence to meet him there on his way to and return from Ticonderoga.

I returned here on the 15th, at night, from the German-Flats. The Indians have promised to remain neutral; and as the Oneidas, Tuscaroras, and Ooghquagas, are, I believe, real friends, and the Delawares more immediately dependant upon them, I have great hopes that no depredations will be committed on the frontier inhabitants. I have given Mr. Trumbull the proceedings at the late treaty, to make such extracts as he pleases for your Honour.

I have some reason to believe that an attack on Fort Stanwix and the Mohawk River is meditated by the enemy from Oswegatchie. Colonel Dayton's regiment, two companies of Colonel Wyntkoop's, and a company of inlisted Militia, are now in that quarter, and I am preparing to move Colonel Elmore's and Colonel Nicolson's to the German-Flats; the latter is very weak, not exceeding one hundred privates. The bounty, premium, and pay, which you have promised the seamen, shall be fully complied with. The terms are more reasonable than we had reason to expect at this time, when seamen are so scarce. I have desired Mr. Trumbull to refund the money you have advanced for axes, &c.; and as his chest is now pretty well stocked, he will pay off what is still due to the troops from your State.

We are in daily expectation to hear of a battle at New-York. May the God of armies strengthen and support ours on this very important occasion, and confound our enemies.

I am informed that the forces that went from hence to Connecticut are doing all in their power to increase the jealousies that so unjustly prevail against me in different parts of the country. Conscious of the rectitude of my conduct, I should pass by in silent contempt every infamous traduction, did I not apprehend that silence would be construed a tacit avowal of my guilt. I have therefore entreated Congress for a minute inquiry into my conduct. If the misfortunes in Canada are occasioned by malconduct in me, or any other charges of a criminal nature can be supported against me, I shall deserve and ought to be held up to publick detestation at least. If not, if I clearly exculpate myself, as I have it in my power to do, the odium ought to be transferred to those who are in fault, and justice done to my much-injured character.

I have sent such orders to General Waterbury as I hope will prevent any evil consequences that might be occasioned by the imprudence of those soldiers who have inoculated for the small-pox on the route from the Eastern Colonies to Skenesborough.

I am, with every friendly wish and sincere esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany Committee Chamber, August 20, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: A representation has been duly laid before this Board, setting forth that Stephen De Lancey, Abraham C. Cuyler, John Monier, Benjamin Hilton, and John Duncan, prisoners formerly sent from this city to Connecticut, have endeavoured, by false reports, to depreciate the character of his Honour General Schuyler in the opinion of the good people of Connecticut, and by artful insinuations to aggravate and foment jealousies and prejudices, which may tend to injure the general cause; we have therefore thought proper to transmit your Honour an account of the crimes of those gentlemen, that their former and present conduct being considered together, they may be treated in such a manner as the publick safety at this interesting crisis demands. We would, with submission, mention to your Honour that a separation at least would be proper. Your Honour's wisdom and prudence will dictate such other steps as may be necessary. We are also informed, that Lieutenant Angus Mc-

Donald has the privilege of the town of Hartford and six miles around it; and we doubt not that thereby a correspondence is carried on between the officers confined at Weathersfield and the prisoners from this city at Hartford, and from thence probably over the whole Continent. We think it would, therefore, be advisable, if your Honour coincides in opinion with us, to restrain the liberty now enjoyed by Mr. McDonald, so far as may prevent the possibility of his injuring us.

We are, honoured sir, your most obedient servants,
JOHN BARCLAY, Chairman pro tem.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull.

H. GLEN TO WALTER LIVINGSTON, COMMISSARY-GENERAL.

Schenectady, August 20, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 18th and 19th I have now before me, and have noted the contents. I have been with Mr. Ten Eyck, and delivered him his letter, and showed him mine. He tells me he cannot agree to take 16s.; but the flour I can have, on these conditions: that should flour be more between this and the 10th day of September next, at Albany, he will expect to have it; and if it is not more than 16s. at that time, then he will take 16s.; and that is the case with the rest of the gentlemen. I must beg the favour of you to let me know by the bearer, immediately, whether I must make the bargain as above, or what I must do in this case. The batteans are all ready, and the people victualled to go; and Mr. Ten Eyck's flour I must have, as I cannot load the boats without his, being a large quantity.

I am, dear sir, yours,

H. GLEN.

To W. Livingston, Esq., Dep. Com. General.

COLONELS PETTIBONE AND CHAPMAN TO GOV. TRUMBULL.

New-Haven, August 20, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: We are here upon our march to New-York, according to orders received. As we had no Chaplain or Surgeon appointed for either of our regiments, and were credibly informed that it was expected we should make this necessary provision at the expense of the publick, we have engaged the Rev. Joseph Strong, of Simsbury, to go with us as our Chaplain, (who is now with us here,) and Dr. Jonathan Bird, of the same town, to be our Surgeon and Physician. We therefore request, if it be agreeable to your Honour, that these two gentlemen may be favoured with the usual warrants for serving our regiments (viz: the Eighteenth and Twenty-Second) in their respective characters, and that the warrants may be forwarded to one of us at New-York.

We are, with all respect and duty, your Honour's most obedient, humble servants,

JONA. PETTIBONE, Colonel.
SAM'L. CHAPMAN, Colonel.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

DAVID MATTHEWS TO JOHN MCKESSON.

Hartford, August 20, 1776.

SIR: I have made so many fruitless applications lately that I am almost discouraged from putting pen to paper again. Is it not very hard, Mr. McKesson, that the Convention will not furnish me with some resolve or certificate, in order to enable me to contradict a most hellish report that has been propagated, and is verily believed throughout this Colony, that I was concerned in a plot to assassinate General Washington, and to blow up the Magazine in New-York. The Convention well know that such a report prevails; they also know that it is as false as hell is false. Solely owing to this report I have been obliged to decamp from Litchfield, where I was stationed, and where the Committee thought my life in imminent danger.

I arrived here yesterday, and find that the same infernal report has been industriously propagated here, and that I am shunned as much as Lucifer would be, and am only waiting here for some further directions from Governour Trumbull, to whom a person is gone for that purpose. Surely, my old friend John, if my life was to be made a sacrifice, there was a more gentlemanlike way of doing it than of being sent into a country to be fired at from behind a barn or stone fence.

Could any person that ever knew me suppose that it would fall to my lot to say, that there is not a place for me to rest the sole of my foot on. Hard times; but so it is. I sometimes would willingly hope that the letters which I have heretofore written have not come to hand, or something would have been done to contradict this infamous charge. In short, I was fully persuaded that I would have an opportunity of showing to the world that every charge brought against me was false. I am now tossed about to and fro, and no one to deliver me. May this never be the lot of any of my countrymen.

I should be glad to hear from you, whether I have anything to expect, by which my person may be safe or not. I should not have wasted so much paper and ink were it not that the very existence of a wife and ten children depends on my life, and who are rendered more distressed by such villanous reports as have been propagated.

I wish you health and happiness; and am, sir, your humble servant,

D. MATTHEWS.

To John McKesson, Esq., Secretary to the Convention of the State of New-York.

P. S. 22d.—I am now on my march back to Litchfield again, as I could not be suffered to remain here unless confined in jail. What horrid treatment is this! Governour Trumbull would willingly have done everything to accommodate me here, but our Convention say I must be confined. It is too much for mortal man to bear. I am now to stand fire at Litchfield. May God only spare my life to meet my enemies face to face.

JOHN MACKAY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Greenwich, in the State of Connecticut, }
August 20, 1776. }

SIR: The Authority, Selectmen, and Committee of this town, have yesterday received from his Honour the Governour of said State a requisition, dated the 12th instant, to embody all the householders not obliged to do duty in any training band, in order to march forthwith to New-York, to join the Army under your Excellency's command. We thereupon warned all the able-bodied men in the town to assemble at six o'clock this morning; but as the Militia is already gone into the service, and this town hath been pretty much drained of men in the progress of the war, we find there are now but few fit to go, and these few badly equipped. The householders have been at different times stripped of their fire-arms to supply those who turned out in defence of their country; all which being maturely considered by the said authority, &c., it was judged most proper to advise your Excellency of our difficulties, in order to know from your Excellency whether the service requires the whole of the few men remaining in this town to be raised immediately; and if so, whether they can be supplied with arms on their arrival at New-York.

As the bearer, Doctor Mead, a member of the Committee, will deliver this, we think it superfluous to add any more, further than that we are, with the greatest esteem, your Excellency's obedient, humble servants.

Per order of the Authority, &c.:

JOHN MACKAY, Chairman pro tem.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

MAJOR HAWLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Northampton, August 20, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: As it is proper that you should be made acquainted with the terms upon which all the men under your command have engaged in the service, and as it may have happened that our Council, through the multiplicity of their business, may have neglected to transmit to you the resolve of the General Assembly upon which our first recruits for your Army were raised, your Honour will not consider me as officious in sending to you that resolve. You will observe, sir, that the non-commissioned officers, as well as the privates, are entitled to a month's advance pay; and I beg leave to inform you, that as in some companies which went from the County of Hampshire the non-commissioned officers were not appointed when they marched, they have not received any more advance pay than that of private soldiers. That was the case in Captain Lyman's company, and I take it to have been so in Captain Gray's. Pursuant to an after-resolve, (of which I am not possessed,) the commission officers were to have a month's advance pay, which those from this County have generally received.

I have many things on my mind which I want to suggest, but shall defer them to another opportunity.

I most heartily wish your Honour health, victory, and, on every account, a happy campaign; and have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JOSEPH HAWLEY.

To General Gates.

P. S. According to your desire, sir, I have done everything in my power to suppress the pernicious and iniquitous practice of delaying the march of officers and soldiers for the sake of taking the small-pox. Yours, J. H.

PETER PENNIMAN TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Minden, August 20, 1776.

SIR: Soon after the arrival of the Scotch officers at this town, pursuant to the order of the honourable Board, we wrote a few lines to your Honour, requesting a solution of certain questions relative to the manner of conducting ourselves with regard to said officers and their servants. One of the Selectmen was ordered to sign said letter in the name of the rest, but it seems inadvertently omitted it, which we suppose might be the reason of our not being favoured with an answer; and, by way of excuse, we must say, that we were not apprized of the above-mentioned omission (at least most of us) till a few hours ago. And as the same difficulties still remain on our minds, we are under a necessity of troubling your Honour with another epistle on the subject.

As we observed in our former letter, two large roads pass through this town, one of which leads from Worcester to Providence, Rhode-Island, and the other from New-York and Connecticut to Boston. The latter of these has for many years been called the Middle Post Road. Now, these officers (at least some of them) are desirous of boarding in the centre of the town, where these great roads intersect each other; the Selectmen are not willing to gratify them in this respect, thinking it would not be altogether agreeable to the spirit of the resolves of Congress. The officers take it as an abridgement of the liberty granted them, and insist that they have a right to board where they like in any part of the town. We beg to be instructed in this matter.

Another difficulty has arisen with regard to these officers' servants or waiters; they have brought five men servants and two women, wives, they say, of two of the men servants. The resolve of Congress makes no provision for servants; nor did your Honour mention anything concerning them in your letter to the Selectmen. The officers refuse to pay for their board; and we cannot find any one willing to trust to any pay. A difference having arisen between one of said officers and his servant, the officer has left the house where he used to board, and he left his servant behind, refusing to pay his board; the entertainer, to secure his pay, detains the officer's trunk and part of his clothing. We must entreat your Honour to explain our duty to us in these matters.

We are, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servants.

In the name and by the order of the Selectmen of the Town of Minden:

PETER PENNIMAN.

COMMITTEE OF MIDDLESEX COUNTY, MASSACHUSETTS.

At a meeting of the Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, for the several Towns in the County of Middlesex, assembled at Concord, in said County, August 20, 1776: Present the Committees of thirty-two Towns, and about one hundred Members.

Voted, and chose the Honourable James Prescott, Esq., Chairman.

Chose Oliver Prescott, Esq., Clerk.

Then passed the following Resolves unanimously:

Whereas confederacies are judged to be formed or forming in many parts of the country, and may be strengthened, and many other great inconveniences ensue from such persons who are inimical to the cause of American liberty collecting together: Therefore,

Resolved, That we will use our best endeavours to prevent such persons assembling together for such purposes, and restrain them from all intercourse with each other, or with the officers or privates sent into this County, or any of these States, as prisoners, by confining them to their towns or farms, or laying them under bonds, or by committing them to close custody, or otherwise, as may be judged proper, agreeable to the orders of this State; and that all such as are notoriously inimical, (whatever their pretensions may be,) shall be disarmed and confined to the limits of their towns or farms, until properly released from said confinement by said Committee.

And whereas divers wicked persons, intending to defraud the inhabitants of these States, and for the sake of base and unlawful gain, have forged, altered, and uttered divers Notes and Bills of this and the other American States, and have also used divers artifices and much low cunning to depreciate the value of our Paper currency, to the great damage of the good people of these States, &c.: Therefore,

Resolved, That we will use our utmost efforts in discovering all such frauds, and bringing to condign punishment all such wicked persons as aforesaid, agreeable to the laws of this State.

It is recommended to the Committees of Safety for the several towns in the County aforesaid, that such persons as are prisoners, and have hired themselves out for their support, be not permitted to go out of the limits of such towns, until the time of their contract be fulfilled, unless some other person go with them, at the order of the Committee of such town where they reside; that their respective masters see that they keep good hours, and conduct themselves well in their families; that the said prisoners be not allowed to frequent publick houses, and have no spirituous liquors on the Sabbath, on any pretence whatsoever; and that they be not permitted to dwell with any person judged to be inimical to the American States.

It is also recommended to the several towns in the County aforesaid that may be defective, that they procure, as soon as may be, their town-stock of powder, and furnish such of the poor in their several towns with fire-arms, as are not able to equip themselves agreeable to the order of this State.

And whereas there are divers persons in these States now on parole, who frequently visit the officers and privates who are prisoners in the several towns, to the great danger and disquietude of the good people of this State: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee of Reading be desired to acquaint the honourable Board therewith, and desire that all such towns as have officers quartered in them may be excepted from said parole, that so all such intercourse may be prevented for the future.

It is also recommended that the Committees of the several Towns in this County desire their Representatives to use their utmost influence in the General Court to procure an order of this State, that all persons travelling through the same shall have passes, denoting their friendliness to the American States, and make provision for the taking up and examining all suspected persons.

And we do hereby bear testimony against all mobs, riots, and disorderly proceedings; and will endeavour to suppress all vice, immorality, and profaneness.

Voted, That a Committee be appointed to call County meetings for the future, if occasion requires, and that they write to the Committees of the several Towns, and inform them in said notification for what purpose said meeting is called.

Then chose Ephraim Wood, Esq., Jonas Haywood, Esq., and James Barrett, Esq., a Committee for that purpose.

Voted, That the Clerk be desired to transmit an extract from the Minutes to the publisher of the Monday and Thursday paper.

Extract from the Minutes:

OLIVER PRESCOTT, Clerk.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

At the Court at St. James's, the 21st day of August, 1776. Present: The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas the time limited by his Majesty's Order in Council of the 17th of May last for prohibiting the exporting out of this Kingdom, or carrying coastwise, Gunpowder, Salt-petre, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition, will expire on the 23d of this instant, August; and whereas it is judged expedient that the said prohibition should be continued for some time longer, except in those cases where (for the benefit and advantage of trade, and for the use and defence of ships trading to foreign parts, and of the transports and victualling vessels employed in his Majesty's service) his Majesty, by his several Orders in Council of the 13th and 27th of October, and of the 6th and 22d of November 1775, and of the 5th and 19th of February last, has thought proper to permit and allow the exportation of and carrying coastwise Gunpowder, Saltpetre, Arms, and Ammunition, under certain conditions and restrictions mentioned in the said Orders: His Majesty doth therefore, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, hereby order, require, prohibit, and command, that no person or persons whomsoever (except the Master-General, Lieutenant-General, or principal Officers of the Ordnance, for his Majesty's service) do, at any time during the space of three months, to commence from the said 23d day of this instant, August, presume to transport into any parts out of this Kingdom, or carry coastwise, any Gunpowder, Saltpetre, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition, or ship or lade any Gunpowder, Saltpetre, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition, on board any ship or vessel, in order to transporting the same beyond the seas, or carrying the same coastwise, except in the cases comprised within the aforementioned Orders in Council of the 13th and 27th of October, and the 6th and 22d of November, 1775, and of the 5th and 19th of February last, without leave or permission in that behalf first obtained from his Majesty or his Privy Council, upon pain of incurring and suffering the respective forfeitures and penalties inflicted by an act passed in the twenty-ninth year of his late Majesty's reign, intituled "An act to empower his Majesty to prohibit the exportation of Saltpetre, and to enforce the law for empowering his Majesty to prohibit the exportation of Gunpowder, or any sort of Arms and Ammunition; and also to empower his Majesty to restrain the carrying coastwise of Saltpetre, Gunpowder, or any sort of Arms or Ammunition." And the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain, the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, the Master-General of the Ordnance, and his Majesty's Secretary at War, are to give the necessary directions herein, as to them may respectively appertain.

STEPH. COTTRELL.

At the Court at St. James's, the 21st day of August, 1776. Present: The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas his Majesty was graciously pleased, by his Royal Proclamation, bearing date the 22d day of March last, to promise and declare that the bounties of £3 for every Able Seaman, and of £2 for every Ordinary Seaman, fit for his Majesty's service, should be paid in the manner thereby directed to every such Able and Ordinary Seaman, not above the age of fifty, nor under the age of eighteen years, who should, on or before the 30th day of April then following, enter themselves to serve in his Majesty's Royal Navy, either with the Captains or Lieutenants of his Majesty's ships, or the chief officers on board such tenders as should be employed for raising men for the service of the Royal Navy: And whereas the time thereby limited was, by Orders in Council, prolonged and extended from the said 30th day of April to the 31st day of this instant, August; and it being judged expedient for his Majesty's service that the said bounties should be continued to be paid for some longer time; his Majesty, with the advice of his Privy Council, doth therefore order, and it is hereby accordingly ordered, that the time limited for payment of the said bounties be prolonged and extended from the said 31st day of this instant, August, to the 31st day of October next, inclusive; whereof all persons concerned are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

STEPH. COTTRELL.

THOMAS JONES TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Virginia, Northumberland County, August 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have delivered to Mr. Thomas Walker, at the request of Captain Nicholson, four hundred and thirty-two half barrels of gunpowder, eighteen chests of arms, loose muskets, and twenty pieces of osnaburgs. Mr. Walker tells me he received only four hundred and thirty-one half barrels of powder. The persons I intrusted to deliver it are certain they delivered the whole quantity. I hope it will be found right.

As soon as I was informed by Captain Conway of his arrival, and that the powder, &c., was landed and stored not more than two miles from navigation, in the lower end of the County, I thought it by no means a safe place for so valuable a cargo, especially as Lord Dunmore's fleet was lying at no great distance from it; therefore I directed it to be carted about twelve or fourteen miles higher up the country, where it might be more immediately under my inspection. This, together with the necessity of having a constant guard, has occasioned a considerable expense, but not more, I hope, than will be thought requisite. The several accounts were laid before the Committee, who regulated them as they thought proper, except some few which I made a particular agreement for.

You may be assured, gentlemen, that I have acted as if it had been upon my own account, and the trouble I have been at you are exceedingly welcome to. I think myself happy in having had it in my power to serve the Province of Maryland, particularly upon so interesting an occasion. There is still a balance due to the Colony of Virginia, of £3 18s. 2d., which Captain Walker has promised to pay.

I am, with regard, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,
THOS. JONES.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, President of the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CECIL COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 153.]

Annapolis, August 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We approve very much of what you have done, and send you five hundred pounds currency by Captain George. You will be pleased to purchase all the guns and blankets you can for the use of the Province. There are not enough to be had here, and are greatly wanting. Cartouch-boxes, bayonets, belts, and gun-slugs, are sent up to Chester-Town for the Eastern-shore companies, and Colonel Richardson has orders to distribute them among his battalion. Canteens are high. We have a number of workmen engaged in making wooden bottles at 2s., a few at 2s. 7d., and hope to supply you from Kent.

Enclosed is an order of Convention relative to the pay and rations of the Flying-Camp Militia. Knapsacks and haversacks are making at Baltimore-Town, and shall be sent up for the companies, and priming-wires and brushes, if our contractors furnish them in time, which we expect they will do. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Cecil County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO ISAAC GRIEST.

[No. 154.]

Annapolis, August 21, 1776.

SIR: We have received your favours of the 19th and 20th instant. If Jacobs will not set all his hands to work on the tents, and give the utmost despatch in his power in having them completed, he must deliver the linen to Johnson, as the troops must not be detained on their march to the northward. Cloth at twenty-five shillings is abundantly too high for blankets. We think the bottle-makers should be exempt from mustering while they are engaged in the service of the publick, and don't doubt that their Captains will excuse them for not attending. They must work day and night. Bayonet-belts must be supplied the Flying-Camp out of the magazine. We shall want six hundred more knapsacks and haversacks, and desire they may be immediately made as soon as the linen arrives from Parker, which will be in a day or two at farthest. Deliver it to Johnson to be made up into tents. We are, &c.

To Mr. Isaac Griest, Quartermaster.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[No. 155.]

Annapolis, Maryland, August 21, 1776.

SIR: The President informs us that, by the order of the Convention, he wrote to you for £10,000, for money advanced by this Province on account of this Congress. If the requisition in that letter is complied with, we shall be obliged if you will order the money to be paid into the hands of Stephen Stewart, who will convey it safely to us.

We are, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servants. By order:

DANL. OF ST. THOS. JENIFER, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Honourable Congress, at Philadelphia.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO SAMUEL DORSEY.
[No. 156.] Annapolis, August 21, 1776.

SIR: We approve your patterns for a tent, but cannot give the price you ask. One of the Baltimore tentmakers was here, and says he will make them with a round seam for two dollars. If you would make them with such seams on your model, we would have you proceed; otherwise, be pleased to make some agreeable to the Baltimore pattern, at twelve shillings. If you do not care to make them on those terms, send the linen you have to Baltimore-Town to William Johnson, who has agreed to make at those prices.

The tent-poles we will pay you for according to the price given at Baltimore, which we cannot now ascertain. We wish to hear more fully about the bayonets.

We are, &c.
To Mr. Samuel Dorsey, Anne-Arundel County.

CAPTAIN DARNES TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Queen-Anne's County, August 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yesterday Captain Dean produced an order from your Board, ordering the arms out of the hands of my company into that of Captain Dean's, which I think exceeding hard, as I myself, the rest of the officers, and many of the privates, have taken very uncommon pains to collect arms for the use of this company.

I suppose the situation of my company may have been misrepresented to you. Mr. Joseph Nicholson, one of your Board, informs me it has; that is, that there was not a probability of arming my company. I can venture to assure you that by Saturday next we shall be well armed. I make not the least doubt, gentlemen, but in that case you would prohibit the culling of my arms.

My men are exceedingly distressed for want of linen; it is not to be had here. Therefore shall be much obliged by two bolts of linen. Please despatch it immediately, as we are daily expecting orders to march.

Am, gentlemen, your very ready, humble servant,
JOHN DARNES.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

DOCTOR WEISENTHALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Baltimore-Town, August 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Dr. Finley, is one of the candidates that has offered himself several times for a Surgeon's place in one of the battalions of Militia. He is well known to Colonel Hall, of whom probably best inquiry may be made concerning his fitness for the service. Mr. John Dorsey, of Frederick County, likewise has applied, of whom I had opportunity to speak the last time I was in Annapolis. Mr. John Johnson has been long willing to accept a Mate's station, who is at present in Frederick-Town. As I have not received your particular directions concerning Surgeons of the Militia, I have taken the liberty to mention only the above, as Dr. Finley intended to go down personally.

Colonel Ewing's battalion marched away without any Surgeon, though I furnished them with some trifling medicines, especially to Captain Posey, who had the most sick, as well as Captain Young's company.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
C. WEISENTHALL.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

AMOS GARRETT TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Hartford County, August 21, 1776.

SIRS: I received by the hands of Colonel Aquila Hall the sum of £50, to be applied towards the Saltpetre Works under my care. The same is continued carrying on, but—what is the reason I can't say—we can't produce the quantity I have heard made at some places. We are assiduous at the business, and lose no time from the work, except when employed in collecting the stock. The exact quantity made I can't justly say, having not weighed off for some time. I expect some odds of two hundred weight. We daily increase the same something.

I have sent down by this conveyance seventeen bayonets and seven muskets fixed with bayonets. The muskets and bayonets were to have been presented to the Committee of this County for the use of the publick; but this opportunity offering immediately to Annapolis, and Mr. John Hall, Lieutenant in Captain Paca's company, informing of their being immediately wanted, I thought it advisable to send them down, and trust your Honours will have them valued, and allow me what they may be valued at, and pay the same, and of the bayonets, as per account enclosed, to Mr. Hall, who will receive and transmit it to me.

There is also in the box a gun our Committee agreed to give a man forty-five shillings for, which I paid him. Some small repair I did to the lock, and is charged in the account, as also two bayonets put to two guns Colonel Carvell Hall put into my hands to repair, and some charges for the repairs. I also send in the box a gun sent by Mr. Gabriel Christie, and one other Mr. John Hall got from some other person, all which hope will get safe to hand. I will continue to make the bayonets; but the fitting these muskets and repairing some other old guns from our neighbours has kept my man, who is but slow, employed.

I am your Honours' most humble servant,
AMOS GARRETT.

CÆSAR RODNEY TO THOMAS RODNEY.
Philadelphia, August 21, 1776.

Last night, by the post, I received an account of your defeat in the election, and in which I was not disappointed, being convinced you continued to be sanguine in your expectations without taking the necessary steps to carry a point of that sort; added to all the rest of your bad policy, you suffered Caldwell's company to march away just before the election, when there was no necessity for it, as the other companies were not half full in any of the Counties. Parke tells me the conduct of your Light-Infantry heretofore had drawn down the resentment of the people, which put it in the power of that party who were opposed to you to make this use of it.

As to the orders which Hodgson has on me, he can't stand in need of the money; for, knowing that I could not be down, and that Mr. McWilliam had not the wherewithal to satisfy his order, the Delegates procured of Congress three thousand dollars for the purpose of advancing a month's pay to the soldiers and contingent expenses, fifteen hundred of which have been sent down to Colonel Patterson. However, as you have paid him forty odd pounds in part, it is so far well. I hope you have taken his receipt, but cannot tell how you ascertained Hume's debt, as you had not the bond.

As Mr. Read will go to the Convention, and our Colony requires two Delegates to make a representation, I shall come home next week if possible; but if I should not be down time enough, pray attend to the Orphan's Court. The present Convention is solely for the purpose of framing Government, and will not be allowed to go out of that line, except it be so far as is necessary to supply the Flying-Camp with such things as may be heretofore omitted. The people may perhaps think better of this matter the next time they chloose. I am yours, &c.,

CÆSAR RODNEY.

To Mr. Thomas Rodney.

P. S. One Woodcock, at Wilmington, has been speaking to me about a privateer he was applied to to build by Captain Pope. He says he has a parcel of carpenters sent to him and cannot go on for want of the iron-work, rum, &c. Some person among you ought to go immediately and enter into a contract with him and find the means of supplying him.

PETITION OF THE OFFICERS OF THE FIRST AND SECOND REGIMENTS OF VIRGINIA.

Presented 21st August, 1776, and agreed to be explained and sent to the Delegates in Congress.

[Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governour and Council of State of the Commonwealth of VIRGINIA:

The Petition of the Captains and Subalterns of the two OLD VIRGINIA Regiments humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners, actuated by the love of their country, were forward to enter into military duty, and promised to themselves those advantages of rank to which their early services would of right entitle them. That although they were, many of them, actually imbedded and encamped near Williamsburgh before the two first regiments of North-Carolina Continentals were even directed to be raised, as your petitioners are informed, yet your petitioners, holding at that time only Colonial commissions, having the highest respect for the authority of the Congress, cheerfully submitted to the precedence given the North-Carolinians, although younger in the service than themselves, and then employed in the Colony of Virginia, to which your petitioners belonged. That the same temper, which prompted your petitioners to submit in the instance above specified, does also dispose them to insist upon that rank to which they are entitled. That your petitioners are well informed that the two first regiments are upon the Continental establishment from the first of November; they are therefore much at a loss to account for the present date of their commissions, which are brought down as late as the middle and last of January, by which your petitioners will lose their just rank in the Continental line, an inconvenience which will be particularly felt by the First Regiment in their junction with the troops to the northward, as the dates of commissions will be the only criterion by which to ascertain the right of command. Your petitioners are also of opinion that the Congress probably intended to give rank to the two first regiments by taking them upon their establishment so early in the last fall. Your petitioners are informed, and have good reason to believe, that their present commissions were dated without a particular attention to the consequences, which will so materially affect your petitioners, especially if succession should be taken through the whole Continental line. Your petitioners therefore look up to your honourable Board for redress in the premises, and trust that, if necessary, your honourable Board will make such representation to the Congress upon the subject of this address as shall give it success.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

Rank to commence from the day they were taken into Continental pay.

MEMORIAL OF PREUDHOME LA JEUNESSE.

[August 21, 1776, referred to the Board of War.]

To the Hon. JOHN HANCOCK, Esq., President:

The Memorial of PREUDHOME LA JEUNESSE, of MONTREAL, in CANADA, humbly sheweth:

That by his great zeal for the American cause in the late expedition of Canada, he was much distinguished by the commanding officers of the Continental Army; but after their retreat he could not be of further use, and was directed to offer his services to the honourable the Continental Congress. That he has been in Philadelphia upwards of six weeks, inactive, and much desirous to enter into the Continental service, daily pressed upon by his own countrymen and other Frenchmen, or persons who understand French, wishing to be employed under your memorialist, of whom he might have fifty or more, if he had a commission to enlist them, and who will certainly disperse if they have not soon an answer. That his said countrymen, and more especially your memorialist, can never return to their homes whilst a King's Governour is in full possession thereof; but whenever it should be thought proper for the Continental Army to reënter Canada, your memorialist thinks that a corps of Canadians, Frenchmen, and others who speak French, might be of great use in that service. Your memorialist once more prayeth that his case may be considered, and that the honourable the Congress would be pleased to grant him a commission of Captain of a corps of Canadians, Acadians, French, and others who speak French.

And your memorialist, as in duty bound, &c.,

PREUDHOME LA JEUNESSE.

Philadelphia, August 21, 1776.

At a Board of War, August 21, 1776.

Agreed to report to Congress, That the Petition of Preudhome la Jeunesse be granted, and a Commission be given him to be Captain of a Company of Canadians, Acadians, and French, to belong to Colonel Livingston's Regiment, and to join the Army at Ticonderoga as soon as may be.

PASS FOR SERGEANT SUTHERLAND.

In Committee, Lancaster, August 21, 1776.

Sergeant Sutherland, of the Seventh Regiment of Royal Fusileers, prisoner-of-war at Lancaster, in Pennsylvania, hath permission to go from Lancaster to Reading, with letters from Captain Kinnear, and accounts relative to that regiment, to be presented to General Prescott, and is to return to Lancaster on or before the 24th day of August instant, and deliver up this passport.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM ATLEE, Chairman.

Sergeant Sutherland, on his arrival at Reading, produced the above passport, and is now on his return, in which none will molest him.

August 22, 1776.

JAMES READ, Chairman of Committee of Berks.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 23, 1776.]

New-York, August 21, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed I have the honour to transmit you a copy of my letter to Lord Howe, as well on the subject of a general exchange of prisoners in the Naval line, as that of Lieut. Josiah in particular, and of his Lordship's answer, which, from its matter and manner, is very different from General Carleton's orders which were forwarded yesterday.

The situation of the armies being the same as when I had the pleasure of addressing you last, I have nothing special to communicate on that head, nor more to add, than that I am, with all possible respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 17, 1776.

MY LORD: Being authorized by Congress, as their commanders in every department are, to negotiate an exchange of prisoners; and presuming, as well from the nature of your Lordship's command as the information General Howe has been pleased to honour me with, that the exchange in the Naval line will be subject to your Lordship's directions, I beg leave to propose the following mode of exchange for your Lordship's consideration, viz: "Officers for those of equal rank, and sailors for sailors."

If the above proposal should be agreeable to your Lordship, I am charged in a particular manner to exchange any officer belonging to the British Navy in our hands and of equal rank, for Lieutenant Josiah, who was lately made prisoner in a ship retaken by the Cerberus frigate. The reason, my Lord, of my being charged to propose the exchange of Lieutenant Josiah in preference to that of any other officer is, that authentick intelligence has been received that, regardless of his rank as an officer, he has not only been subjected to the duties of a common seaman, but has experienced many other marks of indignity. As a different line of conduct, my Lord, has been ever observed towards the officers of your Navy who have fallen into our hands, it becomes not only a matter of right but of duty to mention this to your Lordship, to the end that an inquiry may be made into the case above referred to.

From your Lordship's character for humanity, I am led to presume the hardships imposed on Lieutenant Josiah are without either your knowledge or concurrence, and therefore most readily hope that upon this representation your Lordship will enjoin all officers under your command to pay such regard to the treatment of those that may fall into their hands as their different ranks and situations require, and such as your Lordship would wish to see continued by us to those who are already in our power, or who may hereafter, by the chance of war, be subjected to it.

I have the honour to be, my Lord, with great respect, your Lordship's most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To the Right Hon. Lord Viscount Howe, Admiral and Commander-in-Chief of the British Navy in America.

Eagle, off Staten-Island, August 19, 1776.

SIR: Concurring with the proposition you have been pleased to make in your favour of the 17th, for an exchange of prisoners in my department, viz: "Officers for those of equal rank, and sailors for sailors," I will take the liberty to propose an officer of the same rank with Lieutenant Josiah when he arrives. The Cerberus being absent, I have no other information respecting the situation of Mr. Josiah, than what is communicated in your letter; but the matter, you may be assured, shall be inquired into, and every attention paid to the rules of propriety, as well as the dictates of humanity, on all such occasions.

Principles and conduct form the true distinction of rank amongst men; yet, without a competent habit in the manners of the world, they are too liable to meet with unmerited disregard. But insult and indignities to persons of whatever rank, who are become parties in these unhappy disputes, cannot be justified, and are, I persuade myself, as much disapproved of by every officer under my command, as they can never cease to be by me.

I am, with great personal respect, sir, your most humble servant,

HOWE.

To General George Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, August 21, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On Monday I received your favour of the 16th instant, with its several enclosures. The time you were in treaty I can readily conceive was very irksome and disagreeable; however, if the good consequences you intended are produced, you will think it well spent.

General Carleton's orders, for their indecent, illiberal scurrility, are equal, if not superior, to anything I have seen, and are such as I could not have expected from a person of his high rank. He holds forth a language very different from General Howe, as you would perceive by the copy of his letter I transmitted you. The assassination of General Gordon is a matter entirely new, having never heard of it before. The paper made up as a letter, and directed to me, which Major Bigelow brought with him, only contained a copy of the orders.

I am glad the works at Fort Stanwix are going on so well, and that they have so much provision in store. In a little time I hope they will be strong and complete.

By a letter from Governour Trumbull I am informed that a Captain Van Buren had procured a sufficient quantity of sail-cloth and part of the cordage wanted for the galleys in Connecticut, and that the rest would be probably obtained there. Upon the whole, I hope necessaries to fit them out will be obtained one way or another.

The enclosed letter from Colonel Stark was transmitted and referred to me by General Gates, in order that I might determine upon the subject of it. I should suppose the value of rations ought to be settled with the Commissary, or submitted to Congress for their decision. I do not conceive it is with me to direct in this instance, and therefore think it right to give notice of it by this opportunity.

Since my last of the 13th nothing worthy of mention has occurred in this quarter, unless the ships-of-war having left their stations up the North River and joined the fleet again, is considered as such. On Sunday morning they came down with their remaining tenders. It is more than probable that an attempt by two of our fire-vessels to destroy them a night or two before contributed to their departure. The enterprise, though conducted with spirit and resolution, did not succeed to our wishes, only one tender having been burnt. The Phenix was grappled for some time, but cleared herself without damage.

I am, sir, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER ON BOARD THE ROYAL SAVAGE, IN LAKE CHAMPLAIN, DATED AUGUST 21, 1776.

To-morrow, wind and weather permitting, we sail towards St. John's, where we may soon expect to come to action. Our fleet consists of one sloop, three schooners, four galleys, and seven gondolas, the whole well officered and manned, and under command of General Arnold. If we meet with the enemy, doubt not but we shall support our charge.

RICHARD BRUERÉ AND OTHERS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

At the White-Plains, by order of the General Committee } for the County, August 21, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: On the 6th day of July last past, having given our parole to you at this place, under the consideration of being allowed a sum of money barely sufficient to pay our board and for the common necessities of life, and that the said sum was to be repaid by ourselves or friends before our departure from the country, and as one of us has written without the receipt of any answer or money to pay our way, we think it somewhat extraordinary, and you must have given the necessary orders for our being supplied, which have been neglected by some other of your officers. We have also been informed that some of your officers imagined the whole allowance of two dollars per week was to be paid for our board and washing, little considering what other necessities are wanting on these occasions; and as the small sum before mentioned, which we are to repay, we humbly conceive to be our own, and that the Committee having billeted us to such houses as may be most expedient for your convenience, we are left at liberty to bargain for ourselves. We are at present six weeks in arrear to our landlord; and must beg, gentlemen, that you will give us some answer.

From, gentlemen, your humble servants,

RICHD. BRUERÉ,
THOS. R. HARRIS,
SAM'L. COX.

To the Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress of New-York, at Harlem.

DUTCHESS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Dutchess County, August 21, 1776.

Resolved, That persons be appointed to inspect and take an account of all the Salt in this County, except what may be intended for the private use of families; and that no person presume to sell any Salt in, or remove it out of the County till the further order of this Committee; and that the persons so to be appointed be authorized to send for any persons, and examine them under oath, touching the premises.

Resolved, That Mr. Thomas Storm, a member of this Committee, be authorized to wait upon the Convention of this State, and inform them that there is a quantity of Salt in this County, but supposed to be not more than sufficient to supply the inhabitants of the County, at one bushel for each family, and that it is exceedingly wanted; and pray the advice of the Convention, whether the Salt may be sold and distributed, or whether, notwithstanding the wants of the County, it ought to be reserved for the use of the Army; and if the latter, which will be the most prudent and eligible mode of keeping and reserving it.

By order of the Committee :

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

PETITION OF CADWALADER COLDEN, JUN.

To the Honourable the Representatives of the State of New-YORK, in Convention:

The Petition of CADWALADER COLDEN, Jun., of ULSTER County, Esq., humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner, impressed with the most painful apprehensions of the calamities that would flow from a separation of the American Colonies from the Government of Great Britain, did, in the beginning of the present most unhappy disputes, appear opposed to such measures as, he imagined, would involve his country in distress; in consequence of which, he was stigmatized by those from whom he differed in sentiment, with the odious appellation of an enemy to his country, and thereby became the object of invective, slander, and malevolence, and was often insulted and frequently threatened with destruction of his person and property. This notwithstanding your petitioner's attachment to the rights of private judgment, and although he conceived the freedom of disquisition and debate, on topics which affected the publick weal, to be the birthright of Englishmen, and a privilege which particularly distinguish the freeman from the slave. Nevertheless your petitioner, willing to avoid the giving the least cause of offence, determined no longer in vain to oppose the prevailing current opinion, of which, his determination, he, by letter, acquainted some of the Committee in the County so long since as the 3d of May last was a twelve-month, and in a few days after was among the first that signed the General Association. Since which time, your petitioner doth aver, that he hath in no way whatsoever opposed or obstructed any publick measures, nor hath he, in any one instance, either persuaded or dissuaded any man from pursuing the propensity of his own inclinations. In testimony whereof your petitioner hath publickly called upon his accusers and persecutors to adduce any proof to the contrary. Notwithstanding which, and without the least cause, your petitioner's house was surrounded by an armed body of men, commanded by Colonel Palmer, in the dead of the night of the 24th of June last, and on being granted admission, he, the said Palmer, and divers others, proceeded to search every part of the house of your petitioner for arms and ammunition, &c., and also examined his desk and chest of papers; and though said Palmer declared himself perfectly satisfied that your petitioner was destitute of all offensive weapons, &c., he nevertheless seized on the person of your petitioner, and sent him under strong guard to New-Windsor, and the next day he was conveyed as a prisoner to Newburgh; whereupon, being called before the Committee, he excepted to their jurisdiction, alleging its locality to their own Precinct, and that he lived in the Precinct of Hanover, and if guilty of any offence, the Committee of said Precinct was of competent authority to take cognizance thereof, and therefore desired that any matter he might stand charged with might be referred to the Committee of Hanover. But this being overruled, your petitioner appealed to the County Committee or Convention. Upon which, he was then discharged, giving his parole to appear before them when notified by a letter from the Chairman of that Board. That the next day your petitioner heard that Colonel Palmer, and some of the party who had surrounded his house in the night, had in the neighbourhood pretended to be in pursuit of a man said to be come from on board the man-of-war; that at the house of one Mary Knap they had actually overtaken and seized a man, (one of their own party), who was made to confess or say, that he had made his escape out of your petitioner's house when he heard the party coming to it in the night; and that he had delivered to your petitioner letters or messages from on board the man-of-war, and had also brought a letter to said Mary Knap from her husband, who was on board the man-of-war. That, considering the temper of the times, your petitioner thought such a report, if believed in his neighbourhood, might be of dangerous consequence to him, therefore immediately wrote a letter to the Chairman of the County Committee, (not knowing him to be one of the Committee he had already seen before,) acquainting him of the circumstances of this affair, and desiring a hearing before the County Committee. But before this letter got to the hands of the Chairman, the Committee had sat, and ordered your petitioner to appear before them on the 9th day of July, to answer the charges that then might appear against him touching his being an enemy to the American cause. A copy of which order was served on your petitioner. That accordingly, on the 9th day of July, your petitioner appeared before the County Committee; and that though no charge was even adduced against your petitioner, much less supported, of his acting inimical to the liberties of his country, or that he in any manner whatsoever opposed, obstructed, or counteracted publick measures, and that the story concerning the man from on board the man-of-war escaping out of your petitioner's house was acknowledged by Colonel Palmer and some of his party to be only a piece of fun, (as he called it,) or contrivance formed to impose on the said Mary Knap; yet, to the surprise of your petitioner and the astonishment of the County, your petitioner was ordered to the common Jail of the County, in close confinement, under every circumstance of indignity and disrespect. From whence your petitioner took the liberty to inform your honourable Board of his grievances, and to pray for relief.

And your petitioner further sheweth, that though the President of your honourable Board was pleased to answer his letter the 16th of July, in which he informed him that your Board was pleased to refer the matter back to the County Committee, yet he did not receive the letter till the 31st; neither did the Chairman of the County Committee give notice to your petitioner of the matter being referred back to the Committee, nor send him the President's letter, till applied to for it. That your petitioner, upon the receipt of said letter, hearing that the County Committee was to meet the 6th instant, and not knowing whether they would please to call him before them, wrote a letter to the Committee, and also made application to them through his friends, desiring their reconsideration of the rigorous treatment he had received by a close confinement in a Jail, for near five weeks, without any charge against him, (as has been already shown,) and soliciting his discharge. Notwithstanding which, all the indulgence your petitioner was able to procure has been a release from the common Jail, upon giving security in the exorbitant sum of £2,000, not to go off his farm until fully discharged by your honourable Board.

Your petitioner, therefore, relying on the equity and humanity of your honourable Board, doubts not but that, as you are the advocates of freedom, you will show yourselves equally the patrons and protectors of the innocent and oppressed, and speedily grant him an ample release from the unmerited and arbitrary restraint he at present labours under. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

CADWALADER COLDEN, JUN.

Coldenham, August 21, 1776.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Crown-Point, August 21, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: When I parted with you to go on command to Cumberland Head, I little expected you would so soon leave us. My surprise was great on my return to find you were gone. Part of the troops marched away, and the rest were ordered to Ticonderoga. I have always considered this as a post of great importance. The works were in ruins, but they might have been repaired before this. Five thousand men, in my opinion, would have manned them, and stopped the enemy here had they attempted to advance. Wiser councils have fixed on Ticonderoga. That place is made very strong. Great attention has been paid to the fleet. It is now truly respectable. It goes down the Lake to-morrow under General Arnold. I make no doubt it will prevent the enemy from coming up this year, unless some extraordinary disaster should happen to it.

There is a considerable number of Indians and Canadians with the Regulars at the Isle-aux-Noix. I expect some of them will be paying me a visit here in a few days. I am preparing to entertain them.

The Sixth Battalion has always remained here. We expected almost every day to go up to Ticonderoga. As the whole Army was to be removed there, I did not throw up any works till a few days ago. I thought it very necessary that my camp should be secured. I fixed on an eminence on the east side of the Point, and have made some strong intrenchments on the land side, and shall throw up some works on the side next the water, which will secure us against surprise; and a few pieces of artillery, if I can find them, would cover our retreat, should the main body of the enemy approach. The General has been pleased to approve of my intrenching, and directed me to stay here. My men have got in good spirits, and seem very well contented at their present station.

I should apprehend that some troops should be continued on this Point till spring, when the place should be fortified strongly. Should the enemy get possession of it, very bad consequences will follow. A regiment of the Eastern troops might come here when my regiment leaves it.

General Gates is reforming the Army, and is very successful. He pursues the same plan I have heard you speak of to keep off the small-pox. Should anything extraordinary happen in this quarter you may expect that I shall trouble you, now and then, unless I find it disagreeable to you.

I am, honoured, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble and obedient servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 20, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Wm. Hillhouse, Jed. Elderkin, Nathaniel Wales, and Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, To draw an Order on the Pay-Table in favour of Captain James Chamberlain, for Advance-Wages of 20s. per man for his Company, now ordered to New-York.

Order delivered Captain Chamberlain 20th August.

Voted, That his Honour the Governour is authorized and desired to furnish Captain McCall and Lieutenant Jacob Dewit of Norwich with as many Fire-Arms and Bayonets as they shall want to supply their men, out of the Colony Arms, in the hands of Mr. David Trumbull.

A Return of Officers for a Company, formed out of the Gentlemen of the Horse, under the command of Captain James Chamberlain, being made to his Honour the Governour and his Council of Safety, by which it appears that said Company have chosen James Chamberlain for their Captain, Noah Chapin, Jun., their Lieutenant, and Simeon Chapman for their Ensign, which is approved; and it is thereupon Voted, To accept and approve said Officers; and they are hereby established in their several Offices to which they are chosen, to serve in said Company, as a Foot Company of Militia in defence of these States, until the present exigency is over; and his Honour is desired to commissionate them.

Commissions granted August 20, 1776.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 21, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, Wm. Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., and Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

An Account exhibited by Mr. John Leffingwell, of Norwich, for sundry repairs of Fire-Arms and stocking six Guns, amounting to £12 11s. 11d.; said Gun-Stocks were charged at 12s. each, out of which, 2s. on each Gun-Stock is deducted, which amounts to 12s. out of said sum of £12 11s. 11d., which leaves the sum of £11 19s. 11d., which is granted to said Mr. John Leffingwell on said Account, and an Order is to be drawn for the same accordingly.

Order drawn 21st August, delivered Colonel Huntington.

Mr. Jepson, of Hartford, applied to this Board for the purchase of four Cannon, six-pounders, at the Furnace at Salisbury, for the use of a Privateer; which being considered, and the question put, whether this Board will at present admit the sale of said Cannon, and passed in the negative.

Voted, That a Lieutenant, one Sergeant, and fifteen Privates, be detached from the Company under command of Captain Thompson, at Black-Rock, in New-Haven, and go to Milford, and there assist the inhabitants in building a Fortification at the Harbour in that place. And that the Selectmen of Milford have liberty, at the expense of said Town, to take four of the Colony Cannon from the Furnace at Salisbury, (viz: three nine-pounders and one twelve-pounder, if such are on hand, or as soon as they can be obtained,) and also one ton of Shot, suitable for said Cannon, to be used in the Fort, till further orders from the General Assembly, or the Governour and this Council. And if the General Assembly, or Governour and Council aforesaid, shall order said four Cannon to any other place during the present contest, the expense of transporting said Cannon, &c., to be repaid to said Town by the Colony. And the Overseers of said Furnace are hereby directed to deliver said Cannon and Shot accordingly.

Copy delivered Mr. John Harpin, August 21, 1776.

Voted and Ordered, That Isaac Doolittle & Co., owners of the Powder-Mill at New-Haven, deliver three hundred weight of Powder into the hands of the Selectmen of Milford, taking their receipt to account with the Colony for the same.

Order delivered John Harpin, August 21, 1776.

Voted, To draw an order on Colonel William Pitkin, for three hundred weight of Gunpowder, in favour of the Selectmen of Chatham, taking their receipt to account for the same.

Order delivered Mr. Hosmer, August 21, 1776.

Voted, To draw an order on Colonel William Pitkin, for five hundred weight of Gunpowder, in favour of the Selectmen of Middletown, taking their receipt to account for the same.

Order delivered Mr. Hosmer, August 21, 1776.

Voted, To draw an Order on Colonel William Pitkin, for three hundred weight of Gunpowder, in favour of Jabez Hamlin and Titus Hosmer, Esquires, and the rest of the Committee, for overseeing the Lead Works at Middletown, &c., keeping a proper account thereof.

Order delivered Mr. Hosmer, August 21, 1776.

Voted, To appoint Mr. Bela Elderkin, of Windham, and he is hereby appointed, Second Lieutenant of Marines on board the ship-of-war belonging to this State.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Lebanon, August 21, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose the copy of a letter from the Hon. Major-General Gates, [of August 11,] with General Carleton's orders, and the letter to Major Hawley therein mentioned.

Permit me to add, that the practice of inoculating for the small-pox, which has been fallen into by the troops from your State, (as well Captain Ferguson's company at Glasgow, as others at Number Four,) every way hurts the publick service, and exposes the other troops anew to that infection, which has already rendered abortive the hopes of the Army, proved fatal to many, ruined the health of more, and exposed the whole to destruction. I have full confidence that this practice will appear in the same dangerous point of view to you as it does to General Gates, and that you will use such measures as your wisdom shall dictate to prevent any ill consequence from the past, and any future practice of the like nature. At the same time, I beg leave to assure you that every precaution will be taken in this State to prevent that fatal infection from being carried into the Army by the troops or others going from hence.

I am, sir, with great truth and regard, your obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. President of the Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

In Council, August 21, 1776.

Ordered, That the Committees of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, of the several Towns and Plantations in this State be, and they are hereby, empowered and directed to take effectual care to keep within the limits of their respective Towns and Plantations all Prisoners of War who now are or shall hereafter be committed to their care, and agreeable to an order of Congress, the 21st May, to superintend their conduct; and in cases of gross misbehaviour, or refusing to labour for their support, (excepting such Officers as are on parole,) to confine them in the County Jail. And the Sheriff of the said County is hereby ordered and directed to receive into his custody any such Prisoners as the Committee or Committees may send them for their misbehaviour. And the said Committees are hereby directed to report their doings to the Council as soon as may be. And further, any Prisoners of War strolling from the Town to which they have been destined to other Towns, be by the Committee of said Town sent to the common Jail. And the Secretary is directed immediately to publish this order in the several Newspapers.

In Council, August 22, 1776.

Ordered, That the Committee of Correspondence, &c., in the several Towns in this State, do forthwith transmit to the Sheriff of the County whereunto they respectively belong, an accurate list of all Prisoners of War in their respective Towns, expressing their names, and to what Company or Corps they did belong; to the end that the several Sheriffs may be able to make a true return thereof to this Board as soon as may be, and, as the Congress have requested, an immediate Return of all Prisoners of War within this State be made to them.

A true copy. Attest: JOHN AVERY, Dep. Sec.

In Council, August 22, 1776.

Ordered, That the Sheriffs of the several Counties within this State do make a Return of the names of all the Prisoners of War that shall be returned to them by the several Committees in their respective Counties, together with such as may be confined in the several Jails within their respective Precincts, to the Council, that a Return thereof may be made to Congress as soon as may be.

A true copy. Attest: JOHN AVERY, Dep. Sec.

Council Chamber, Watertown, August 21, 1776.

Ordered, That the several Committees appointed by a Resolve of the Great and General Court, on June 25, 1776, to enlist five thousand of the Militia in their respective Counties for the reinforcement of the Continental Army in Canada and New-York, do forthwith make Returns to the Council of the number of men enlisted in each County, and what Companies have actually marched to each of those departments, with the number of men there is in each Company, and when they marched, and, in general, of all their proceedings relative to the said enlistment; and that the Committees appointed by a Resolve of July 10, 1776, to raise two other Regiments for the Northern or Canada Department, do forthwith make the like Return; and that the foregoing Orders be published in the Boston and Watertown Newspapers.

By order of the major part of the Council:

JOHN AVERY, Dep. Sec.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO MAJOR GAINS.

State of New-Hampshire, in Committee of Safety, }
August 21, 1776. }

SIR: You are hereby appointed Mustermaster, to muster the following companies of soldiers, raising for the Continental service, under the command of Captains Hodgdon, Calfe, Brown, Clements, and Dearing, passing ninety in each company, officers included, receiving none but good able-bodied, effective men, well equipped; and make return of muster-rolls as soon as may be.

MESHECH WEARE.

To Major George Gains.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: In answer to the favour of your letter of the 3d of June, relative to the embarrassment and confusion which had been occasioned in the Army by vacancies having been filled up here and also by you, I am to inform you that the Secretary of War, having taken his Majesty's pleasure thereupon, and written to you fully on that head, I flatter myself all those difficulties are removed, and that for the future you will have none of the like nature to complain of.

I am, &c.

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I have the favour of your letter of the 4th of June last, with two enclosures; the one, a state of the goods removed from Boston, and the other, a plan on which the corps of Loyal Nova-Scotia Volunteers was then formed; and as your plan holds forth encouragement to those who have success in recruiting, I trust the officers, by their activity and attention, may be able soon to complete the corps.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: Your letters of the 7th and 8th July, from Staten-Island, were delivered to me by Lieutenant-Colonel Blunt, of the Fourth Regiment, and I had the honour of laying them before the King. His Majesty entirely approves of your prudence in waiting for the arrival of one of the expected reinforcements; nor is this, your discretion, the sole object of his royal approbation; it has been graciously extended to the whole of your conduct and plan; in both of which you have exhibited such wisdom, zeal, and attention to the service, as deservedly reflects the highest honour upon you, and must contribute most effectually to the support and advancement of the honour of Government.

As his Majesty had reason to imagine that Vice-Admiral Lord Shulldham had stationed a proper number of ships off the harbour of Boston, in order to thwart all designs which the Rebels might have of seizing any of the succours which might be sent to you, he has been much hurt and surprised to find that so many of the Highland corps have had the misfortune to fall into the hands of the enemy. And I am to inform you that orders will be sent to Lord Howe to make inquiries into that matter.

His Majesty expressed great satisfaction at the account which you give of the coming in of so many of his subjects. Such a step, whilst it proves that they are impressed with a grateful sense of their situation, in obeying the mildest and best of Kings, will, it is to be hoped, when they find themselves sure of receiving protection, induce others to give similar proofs of their loyalty and zeal for Government.

I have sent to the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury the particulars of your request respecting an early supply of woollens, linen, and shoes, for the Provincial troops, and have no doubt but a due and speedy attention will be paid to it.

The behaviour of Captains Reynor and Curtis, in their respective commands, has given the King great satisfaction.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour of receiving and laying before his Majesty your letter, dated Halifax, June 7, 1776, wherein you acknowledge the receipt of my despatches of the 1st and 7th February and 28th March.

Sensible as you were that the interests of your King and country required your presence in the neighbourhood of New-York, I am not at all surprised at the lively mortification which you suffered on account of your tedious detention at Halifax, and in being so long prevented from executing those plans which your zeal and wisdom had projected, and to which the high order of the troops was likely to ensure success. It must at that time have been some alleviation of your uneasiness, to know that the delay was not occasioned by any neglect; and it will afford you no small degree of present satisfaction to be informed that the King, having read and considered the reasons which you assign for your detention at Halifax, is of opinion that an earlier removal from there was impracticable. His Majesty was also pleased to express his entire approbation of your idea respecting the intended motions and employment of the Army.

I herewith transmit you a copy of a despatch sent to General Sir Guy Carleton, which I think makes it unnecessary for me to enter into a discussion of that part of your letter which relates to the difficulties that might arise upon a junction of your respective armies. A duplicate of this despatch is sent herewith, which, for fear any accident should happen to the original, you will transmit to Sir Guy Carleton by the first opportunity. And as Lord Howe has the command of the fleet, and there happily subsists the most perfect harmony between you, I flatter myself that there is no occasion for me to say anything about the disposal of the transports. With regard to the Forty-Seventh Regiment, I must beg leave to refer you to my former letter of the 21st of June.

The loss of the ordnance store-ship in Boston Bay is an unlucky and very mortifying circumstance; and I am to acquaint you that orders are given for a strict inquiry to be made into that affair.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR TRYON.

Whitehall August 22, 1776.

SIR: I am very glad to find by your letters of the 8th of July, which I received by Lieutenant-Colonel Blunt, that your information of the disposition of the inhabitants of the Province continues to give you ground to expect that when the presence of the Rebel force is removed, and protection held forth by the King's troops, they will in general give testimony of their fidelity to his Majesty and attachment to the Constitution.

The steady loyalty of the people of Staten-Island cannot be too much commended, and their affectionate reception of the troops under General Howe cannot fail to recommend them to the particular favour of Government; and I have the pleasure to acquaint you that it is his Majesty's command that you do signify to them, in the most publick manner, his Majesty's very great satisfaction in their conduct, and in the proofs they have given of their loyalty and affection, and to assure them of his Majesty's paternal regard and constant protection.

The next advices we receive from General Howe will, I trust, make it necessary for me to give you some instructions respecting your government. In the mean time I have the satisfaction to repeat the assurances I have been before authorized to give you, that your perseverance in the line of conduct you have adopted, upon such laudable motives, is very much approved by the King.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

To Governour Tryon.

P. S. Mr. Knox having, by my directions, transmitted to the War Office that part of your letter, No. 7, respecting Lieutenants Grant and Campbell, enclosed I send you a copy of the answer thereto.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I have had the honour of laying before the King your letter, dated Montreal, 20th June, 1776, wherein you transmitted to me the agreeable news of the repulse of the Rebels at Trois Rivières, and of the precipitate manner in which they had evacuated Canada; and I have the satisfaction to inform you that his Majesty much approves of your conduct, and that of the officers and forces under your command.

The zeal manifested by his Majesty's national and foreign troops is very commendable; and although the hasty retreat of the enemy deprived them of an opportunity of distinguishing themselves in action, I am thoroughly persuaded that the high opinion which you entertain of them is well founded, and that you will upon no occasion find yourself disappointed in depending upon their fidelity and valour.

The very particular and disagreeable situation that you have, in your letter of the 2d June, described Captain Fors-ter to have been in, made it necessary for him to enter into the agreement concerning his prisoners that you have sent me a copy of; the reasons he has given for his conduct are solid, and show the humane feelings of a brave officer.

It is hoped that the prisoners you will have been able to take, will be the means of procuring the release of such of his Majesty's officers and loyal subjects as are in the disgraceful situation of being prisoners to the Rebels; for although it cannot be that you should enter into any agreement or treaty with Rebels for a regular cartel for the exchange of prisoners, yet I doubt not but your own discretion will suggest to you the means of effecting such exchange, without the King's dignity and honour being committed, or his Majesty's name used in any negotiation for that purpose; and I am the more strongly urged to point out to you the expediency of such a measure, on account of the possible difficulties which may otherwise occur in the case of foreign troops serving in North-America.

I have had the pleasure of finding Captain Le Maître (who brought your despatches) a very intelligent person, and I had a particular satisfaction in recommending him to his Majesty's favour, as an officer of merit, and one for whom you interest yourself.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour to lay before the King your letter of the 22d of June, wherein you acquaint me that you had formed the Army under your command into four Brigades, and given the command of them to Lieutenant-Colonel Nesbitt of the Forty-Seventh Regiment, Lieutenant-Colonel Frazer of the 24th Regiment, Lieutenant-Colonel Powel of the Fifty-Third, and Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon of the Twenty-Ninth; and his Majesty was pleased to observe thereupon, that those officers might continue to act as Brigadiers until part of your Army should be ordered to join the troops under the command of General Howe, and that then their rank of Brigadiers must cease, in order to prevent the impropriety of their having higher rank and pay than several of the Lieutenant-Colonels who are their seniors in that Army.

You will here permit me to inform you that the King, upon reading that part of your letter of the 20th June, where you take notice of the troops under the command of Major-General Phillips, was pleased to observe, that although officers of Artillery, when ordered on duty, certainly command according to their rank and the dates of their commissions, yet that it never has been the custom of the British service, nor, as it is apprehended, of any other in Europe, that either General officers or others of Artillery, should roll in duty with the officers of the line; and that Major-General Phillips having acted under you in that predicament, must not in future be considered as a precedent.

I am, &c., &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: The rapid success of his Majesty's arms in driving the Rebels out of Canada does great honour to your conduct, and I hope soon to hear that you have been able to pursue them across the Lakes, and to possess those posts upon the frontiers which may more effectually secure your Province from any future insult.

His Majesty, in appointing you Commander-in-Chief of his forces in Canada, was pleased to extend your commission to the frontiers of his Provinces bordering thereupon, wisely foreseeing that it might be necessary for the completing your plan of operations, that you should march your Army beyond the limits of your own Government. I trust before this letter reaches you that you will, by your spirit and activity, have cleared the frontiers of Canada of all the Rebel forces, and will have taken the proper measures for keeping possession of the Lakes. That service being performed, his Majesty commands me to acquaint you that there still remains another part of your duty to be undertaken, which will require all your abilities and the strictest application—the restoring peace, and the establishing good order and legal Government in Canada. It is an object of the greatest importance to this country; the difficulties attending it are immense; but his Majesty depends upon your zeal and upon your experience for carrying it into execution. The rewarding those who have preserved their loyalty, and the punishing those who have forsaken their allegiance, will tend to the future safety of your Province, by convincing the inhabitants that the laws can be executed for the protection of the innocent and the punishment of delinquents. His Majesty, ever anxious for the happiness of his subjects, commands me to inform you that no time should be lost in beginning so important a work, and that you do therefore return to Quebeck, detaching Lieutenant-General Burgoyne, or such other officer as you shall think most proper, with that part of your forces which can be spared from the immediate defence of your Province, to carry on such operations as shall be most conducive to the success of the Army acting on the side of New-York; and that you direct the officer so detached to communicate with, and put himself as soon as possible under the command of, General Howe. You will order such artillery as you will judge necessary to proceed with this detachment. And as a great quantity of heavy cannon and military stores were sent, upon the supposition that Quebeck might have been in the hands of the Rebels, you will, upon requisition from General Howe, supply him with such cannon and stores as may not be wanted for the protection of Canada.

I cannot finish this despatch without repeating to you the confidence which his Majesty places in your duty, your zeal, and your attachment to his service; and that you cannot more effectually recommend yourself to his loyal approbation and favour than by exerting yourself as successfully in your civil capacity as you have already done in your military command.

I am, &c., &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, August 22, 1776.

SIR: The proofs which many of the Indians have already given of their zeal and fidelity, and the manifest utility which large parties of them must be of to the Army, leaves no room to doubt but you will have exerted every means in your power to induce them to a general declaration in our favour; and the better to enable you to prevail on them to do so, a considerable supply of goods, suitable for presents to them, has been provided; the greatest part of which is sent out on board the Lord Shuldham, armed victualler, now at Cork, in her way to Quebeck, and the remainder will be sent by one of the victuallers which are to sail from hence.

Mr. Hey not choosing to return to Quebeck, his Majesty has been pleased to promote Mr. Livius to the office of Chief Justice of the Province in his room. Mr. Southouse, who had lately been appointed Attorney-General, is made a Judge of the Common Pleas for the District of Montreal, and Mr. Monck, Solicitor-General of Nova-Scotia, succeeds Mr. Southouse as Attorney-General.

A mistake appearing to have been made in Mr. Owen's warrant, by appointing him a Judge for the District of Detroit instead of Montreal, a new warrant has been made out which rectifies that mistake, and the Receiver-General will have orders from the Treasury to pay him the salary for the past year, according to his present appointment.

Enclosed I send you two intercepted letters of Benefield & Company, merchants at Montreal, which will inform you of their connexion with the Rebels, and the service which they proposed rendering them if they had been suffered to continue in the possession of the Province.

I am, &c., &c.,

GEO. GERMAINE.

SILAS DEANE TO COUNT VERGENNES.

Paris, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I was this morning informed of the arrival of Mr. Arthur Lee, and that he would be in Paris to-morrow. This was surprising to me, as I knew of no particular affair that might call him here; and considering the extreme jealousy of the British Ministry at this time, and that Mr. Lee was the agent of the United Colonies in Great Britain, and known to be such, I could wish, unless he had received some particular intelligence from the United Colonies, that he had suspended his visit, as I know not otherwise how he can serve me or my affairs, now (with the most grateful sense I mention it) in as favourable a course as the situation of the times will admit.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. I.

C. STEVENSON TO DOCTOR FRANKLIN.

St. Eustatia, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I received some days past a packet from Amsterdam, to my address, for you, which I forwarded by Mr. Russell via Virginia, whose confidence and care I could safely rely on.

Yesterday I received a second, (marked B,) which will be handed you by Mr. Forbes, bound for Philadelphia. I have his assurance of his particular attention, and hope it will be received in safety.

I shall at all times be ready to render you my services of this or any other kind without reserve.

And am, with every respectful attention, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

CORNS. STEVENSON.

To Doctor Benjamin Franklin.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

In Marine Committee, Philadelphia, August 22, 1776.

SIR: As you are now about to return to Rhode-Island, where we understand the Alfred and Cabot remain inactive, we think proper you should exert your utmost endeavours, in conjunction with the commanders of those vessels, to get them equipped and manned with all possible expedition for a six months' cruise.

We think a most important service may be performed by the Alfred, Columbus, Cabot, and Hampden, by despatching them for Newfoundland, with orders to destroy the British fishery there. They must make prize of every British ship or vessel they meet with; they must seize and destroy their fishing boats and stages, and make prisoners of all their fishermen, or such of them as will not freely enter into our service. And as it is highly probable they may take more prizes than they can conveniently spare men to bring into port, it may be proper in such case to destroy them. The season is now come when the Newfoundland men begin to load their fish cargoes, consequently no time must be lost; and if the Columbus is not in port when you reach Rhode-Island, you'll despatch the Alfred, Cabot, and Hampden, immediately, appointing such place of rendezvous and such signals as will enable them to meet again in case of separation, and also enable the Columbus to follow and join them; and whenever she returns from her present cruise, you must order her on this service, giving the commander of her a copy of the instructions, signals, &c. We doubt not there are some British ships of war on the Newfoundland station to protect their fishery, and of course our Commanders may act with such caution as to avoid being taken themselves; but we hope this will not prevent a spirited and resolute conduct in the execution of this expedition, which we flatter ourselves will in the event prove highly detrimental to our enemies—honourable and beneficial to the United States of America. These being the objects we have in view, we desire that your orders to the Commanders may be adapted in the best manner your knowledge and experience can devise to obtain the ends proposed.

When this small squadron have done the enemy as much mischief as they can in that quarter, they must proceed into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and there take cruising ground as may be most likely to intercept the supplies of Indian goods and other stores that we suppose will be sent from England for Canada when they know that our troops have evacuated that country.

There is another object well worthy of their attention, but we fear the acquisition of it is too uncertain to found a cruise upon—we mean the capture of Hudson Bay ships, which, in their return, must be very valuable. If the Captains should be of opinion that by dividing their force they can accomplish both these services, we would submit that point to your and their determination. We have no doubt but they will take valuable prizes in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, if the cruising ground is well chosen; and they must send their prizes for such of our ports as they will be most likely to reach with safety.

We deliver you herewith some of the Marine books, list of Continental Agents in every State, and several of the printed Declarations of Independence. They may do well to notify the inhabitants of the French Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon of this Declaration, and sound how the inhabitants stand affected towards us, assuring them the French Government favour our cause, and will probably become our allies by treaty. Perhaps our ships may find shelter and protection in these Islands, if the enemy have ships in that quarter too strong for us.

Should this fleet take any prizes whose cargoes might be particularly useful to the inhabitants of these States, they may do well to convoy such into port; and if they gain any intelligence that the Commanders think important, they must despatch one of the small vessels with the account to us, putting into the first port, and sending an express with it to the General or to us.

You will instruct the Commander of each vessel to write us, by all opportunities, of their proceedings, and of the occurrences they meet with. They must make us monthly returns of their crews, of the supplies made to them, of the provisions, and make copies of their log-books and journals, to be transmitted to us at their return. They must be careful of their ships' stores and materials; use their officers and men in such a manner as will recommend the service, and at the same time preserve strict discipline. They will no doubt, from principles of humanity and generosity, treat their prisoners with all kindness and attention their respective situations and circumstances will admit of; and we hope their conduct will in all things be such as to merit the continuance of our confidence.

You will direct the Commanders of each vessel to be very exact in keeping a list of all persons on board that are entitled to prize-money, mentioning their names, stations, and shares, copies of which they must furnish the Agent or Agents, that receive the prizes, in order that just and equitable distribution of prize-money may in due time be made.

We also wish to have a full and just valuation of all the cannon, stores, &c., which you brought from Providence that have been appropriated to publick use, or that remain for that purpose; and we desire you would have the vessels you took and the property in them libelled and tried, in order that such part as is condemned may be sold, the accounts settled, and distribution of the prize-money made.

We are, sir, your very humble servants,

JOHN HANCOCK,	GEO. WALTON,
ROBT. MORRIS,	SAML. HUNTINGTON,
STEP. HOPKINS,	FRA. LEWIS,
JOSEPH HEWES,	GEO. READ.

To Esek Hopkins, Esq., Commodore Continental service.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN HACKER.

Philadelphia, August 22, 1776.

SIR: Since the dates of those orders we have already addressed to John Paul Jones and you, as Commanders of the Brigantine Hampden, we have, in consultation with Commodore Hopkins, altered your destination, as you will learn from him. You are, therefore, to receive fresh orders from the Commodore, and obey them as if from, sir, your very humble servants.

To Hoisted Hacker, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO NATHANIEL SHAW, JUN.

Philadelphia, August 22, 1776.

SIR: Commodore Hopkins recommends the purchase of the armed schooner his fleet lately carried into New-London as an advisable measure for this Committee to adopt; and in hopes to promote the publick service thereby, we now request you will purchase said schooner on the best terms in your power, and assist the Commodore to fit, equip and man her with all possible expedition as a Continental cruiser. He is ordered to offer the command to Captain Chew, of New-London, and we hope he may accept it, as he is so well recommended by your Committee. You will supply this vessel with all necessary provisions and stores for a six months' cruise, providing the whole on the best terms, and in due time rendering us an account thereof.

If you have not money sufficient for his purpose, your draught on us will be duly honoured, by, sir, your very humble servants.

To Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO NATHANIEL SHAW, JUN.

Philadelphia, August 22, 1776.

SIR: The Secret Committee have directed Mr. Barnabas Deane, of Whethersfield, Connecticut, to deliver you sundry articles he has imported on Continental account, which you are to receive for use of the American Navy, granting Mr. Deane a receipt for the whole, in order to answer the accounts of the said Secret Committee; but as Mr. Deane is in want of some of those very articles, as well as others, for the frigate built under his direction, you are to supply any of these, and assist him in procuring any other articles wanted for that ship, charging the same to his account, or to the ship's, as you shall judge most proper.

You are hereafter to render us an account of the expenditure of all stores you receive or buy on account of the Continent.

The salt you will keep for the purpose of putting up pork the ensuing season for the use of the Navy.

We are, sir, your humble servants.

To Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., Esq.

MEMORIAL OF REDMOND BURKE.

[Read August 22, 1776. Referred to the Board of War. Postponed for further consideration.]

To His Excellency the President and the Honourable Members of Congress:

The Memorial of REDMOND BURKE:

GENTLEMEN: Your memorialist having set forth in a former memorial to his Excellency the President, which he begs leave to refer to, that on account of his health and other motives, not necessary to mention, he had obtained leave from General Lincoln to withdraw from the Army in the Southern Department, in order to serve in a more favourable clime, is sorry now to be under the disagreeable necessity to declare some of these motives, which, for very obvious reasons, besides trespassing on your time, might far better be buried in oblivion. They were gross indignities, added to flagrant injuries. A considerable part of the pay and rations granted by Congress being withheld from him for above a year, during the Presidency of Rawlins Lowndes, Esquire, in South-Carolina, and the command of General Howe, notwithstanding repeated applications to his Colonel and these two gentlemen, as will appear from indubitable vouchers; and having applied to General *Lincoln for redress some time after the fall of Savannah, the defeat of Briar Creek, and the loss of our galleys at Purisburgh, your memorialist was first desired to attest his claim before a magistrate, though 'twas sufficiently evident, from the date of his commission and the resolve of Congress, together with the certificates of the Paymasters and Commissaries, which were adduced; and having accordingly attested his claim, was then required to get a certificate from his Colonel, then in camp, that he believed the oath to be true. Your memorialist was then at length induced to do what nothing but the vicinity of the enemy could have prevented his doing long before, namely, to gratify his Colonel's ardent desire, which he had often evinced, by withdrawing from the Army in that department, in order to try the service elsewhere. The Colonel being in other respects a man of worth, and for a long time particularly friendly to your memorialist, and being since killed in action, 'twould be a painful task to unfold the motives of his pique, or enumerate the many little injustices that proceeded from it; suffice it to say, that to put an end to animosity, he obtained the General's leave at Purisburgh to withdraw, and informed him of his intention of serving to the northward. And now, gentlemen, he begs to refer you again to his former memorial, which was presented to his Excellency the President of Congress, and which he desired should be laid before the Board of War. The Board have determined upon it in a manner that, 'tis hoped, will appear very injurious and unworthy that fidelity and perseverance with which your memorialist flatters himself he has acted in struggling through innumerable difficulties to rejoin those whom he esteemed his friends, in rejecting overtures made to him both on the Continent and in the Isles, in neglecting very flattering opportunities of comfortably settling amongst opulent relations in Jamaica, to say nothing of his service since the very commencement of hostilities, and his having lost, in General Provost's ravage of South-Carolina, whatever little property he had by his own industry acquired, his house being pillaged and burned at that time, nor of what is of far greater consequence to him, his having forfeited by his attachment to the American interest whatever claims he might have in the British dominions. He has only further to relate, that since his arrival here, while waiting for the determination of the Board of War, his necessities were seized on for diet and lodging, and to the liberality of the Freemasons only 'tis owing that he is not now languishing in a prison for debt. The memorialist submits the premises to the candour, justice, and humanity of Congress.

* The memorialist does not mean, in enumerating losses, to reflect on General Lincoln, who is well known to be a brave and faithful servant of the publick.

Philadelphia, August 22, 1776.

On Monday last Captain Alexander Hunter came to town, who was taken last January by Lord Dunmore, and returned to Great Britain, from whence he got a passage in one of the fleet which brought out the second division of Hessians, from which he made his escape in a boat yesterday week. By him we learn that the first division of foreign troops sailed the beginning of May; and the second, consisting of twenty-seven sail, the 26th; that they fell in with each other off Sandy-Hook, and came in together on Monday, the 12th instant; that made up about one hundred and ten sail, and contained eight thousand Hessians and Waldeckers, and one hundred of the English Guards. They were in general healthy, except a little of the scurvy and itch. The English troops on Staten-Island were embarking when he left the fleet, and the foreigners were disembarking to encamp on Staten-Island. He also informs that there were five thousand foreigners more to follow in a third division.

From the best accounts, we find the force at Staten-Island to be—

General Howe , from Halifax , with	8,000
The Scotch , who embarked at Glasgow for Boston , 3,400, out of which 850 were taken by our cruisers,	2,350
The defeated troops under Cornwallis and Clinton from South-Carolina , supposed not more than	2,500
The two divisions of Hessians , Waldeckers , and English Guards, which arrived on Monday , the 12th instant,	9,000
Lord Dunmore's scrubby fleet, about fifty fighting men, but with negroes, Tories, &c.,	150
Total,	22,000

Number of Marines unknown.

Ships Asia and Eagle, of sixty-four guns, the Roebuck and Phoenix, of forty-four, one bomb, and about twenty frigates and sloops-of-war. They have also about three hundred sail of transports, store-ships and prizes.

Some persons, in calculating the above, add fifteen hundred, as part of the Army destined for Carolina, of whose arrival we have not had any account, either at South-Carolina or Staten-Island.

BERKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation for Berks County, at Reading, August 22, 1776. }

Mr. Berie Hertel de Rouville, and his son Mr. Jean Baptiste de Rouville, having represented to this Committee that they are in great want of money for their support during their stay at Reading, and that if one of them could go to the city of Philadelphia, he could negotiate business with Monsieur Picotte de Bellestre, in Bucks County, and procure from him a necessary supply of money for the support of them, the said Messieurs de Rouville, and therefore praying the permission of this Committee for one of them to go to Philadelphia on the business aforesaid, the Committee grant permission to the said Mr. Jean Baptiste de Rouville to go directly to the said city of Philadelphia, and to be absent on the business aforesaid for the space of ten days from his departure to-morrow evening, under an engagement to present himself to the honourable the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania, and to exhibit to them this passport immediately on his arrival in the city.

By order of the said Committee:

JAMES READ, Chairman.

In Committee of Safety, August 26, 1776.

Allowed to pass to Bristol for the purpose above-mentioned.

SAML. MORRIS, Chairman.

COLONEL WILSON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 26, 1776. Referred to Mr. Jefferson, Mr. Franklin, Mr. J. Adams.]

Amboy, August 22, 1776.

SIR: A number of copies of the resolutions of Congress offering rewards to the foreign troops who will desert the service of Great Britain, have been transmitted here. Permit me to express my surprise that no distinction is made between officers and privates. Several other gentlemen—one of them a German, well acquainted with the manner and disposition of his countrymen—have signified their concern on this account. I am informed that a Colonel in the Hessian Army has given intimations that he would willingly listen to overtures. Perhaps it is not yet too late to offer additional rewards to officers in proportion to their rank and pay.

I am, with much esteem, sir, your very humble servant,
JAMES WILSON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 26, 1776.]

New-York, August 22, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour to transmit Congress a copy of a letter I received yesterday evening by express from General Livingston; also, copies of three reports from Colonel Hand.

Though the intelligence reported by the spy on his return to General Livingston has not been confirmed by the event he mentions, (an attack last night,) there is every reason to believe that one is shortly designed. The falling down of several ships yesterday evening to the Narrows, crowded with men, those succeeded by many more this morning, and a great number of boats parading around them, as I was just now informed, with troops, are all circumstances indicating an attack, and it is not improbable it will be made to-day. It could not have happened last night, by reason of a most violent gust. We are making every preparation to receive them; and I trust, under the smiles of Providence, with our own exertions, that my next, if they do attack, will transmit an account that will be pleasing to every friend of America and to the rights of humanity.

I have the honour to be, with all possible respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Elizabeth-Town, August 21, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: In the utmost haste I must inform you, that very providentially I sent a spy last night on Staten-Island to obtain intelligence of the movements of the enemy, as many things, apparently new, were seen from our lines. He has this moment returned in safety. The substance of his information I must give you in short. He went on the Island about midnight, and got, undiscovered, to the house of the person to whom he was sent, who informed him that the whole force of the enemy, of every kind, was thirty-five thousand men, fifteen thousand of whom were left on the Island, but all the rest embarked; that they expected to attack every hour, he thinks this night at farthest. It was to be on Long-Island and up the North River. That the fifteen thousand men were to land and attack at Bergen Point, Elizabeth-Town Point, and at Amboy. He has heard the orders read, and heard the Generals talk of it. The wagons are all laid out and ready; that they appear very determined, and will put all to the sword. They are in great want of provisions; pork tolerably good, but flour exceedingly bad. They have eat up all the cattle, and are now killing and barrelling up all the horses they meet with. All the field-pieces are taken on board except two. The informant may be depended on, being employed by the General, and carries his baggage. He has been employed in purchasing cattle; he has given ten pounds for a cow, and ten dollars for a sheep. That the Tories on the Island are very illy treated lately, so that the inhabitants, who at first were so pleased, would now be willing to poison them all; they take from them everything they choose, and no one has anything they can call their own.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

WILL. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington, at New-York.

The Bearer is to pass all ferries and posts, and to be hastened with all speed.

WILL. LIVINGSTON.

Narrows, August 21, 1776.

SIR: Twelve small vessels and two men-of-war came in from sea late yesterday evening. The small craft and one of the men-of-war joined the fleet at the watering place. Some of the blue-coated gentry embarked yesterday afternoon below the Narrows, and then moved up. The Admiral had a large company on board in the evening; his ship was ornamented by displaying a variety of colours on the occasion.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

EDWD. HAND.

To General Nixon.

Narrows, August 21, 1776, nine o'clock.

SIR: Since I reported this morning, nineteen transports have been filled with men, and they still continue to embark.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

EDWD. HAND.

To General Nixon.

Narrows, August 21, 1776, five o'clock, P. M.

SIR: There are at least fourteen sail of transports, some of them crowded with men, now under sail; and more, from the noise, are hoisting anchor. Those under sail move down as fast as they get from among the fleet.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

EDWD. HAND.

To General Nixon.

LORD STIRLING TO COLONEL NIXON.

August, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have taken the earliest opportunity of communicating your letter of this day, with the paper enclosed, to the General. He has ordered me to tell you, that while one regiment only was on Governour's Island, he never had an application of the like kind; that since he has reinforced it with another regiment, several of those applications have been made; that in our present situation Governour's Island is more strong and better guarded than any other post of the Army; that when the expected reinforcements arrive, your post will have a proportional reinforcement; and that in the mean time it is your duty to make the best defence you can with the force under your command, ever relying that the General will pay the highest attention to every post, and particularly to so important a one as that which is under your immediate command.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

STIRLING, Brigadier-General.

To Colonel John Nixon.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 22, 1776.

This night we have reason to expect the grand attack from our barbarian enemies; the reasons why, follow: The night before last, a lad went over to Staten-Island, supped there with a friend, and got safe back again undiscovered; soon after he went to General Washington, and upon good authority reported, that the English Army, amounting to fifteen or twenty thousand, had embarked, and were in readiness for an engagement; that seven ships of the line, and a number of other vessels of war, were to surround this city, and cover their landing; that the Hessians, being fifteen thousand, were to remain on the Island, and attack Perth-Amboy, Elizabeth-Town Point, and Bergen, while the main body were doing their best here; that the Highlanders expected America was already conquered, and that they were only to come over and settle on our lands, for which reason they had brought their churns, ploughs, &c.; being deceived, they had refused fighting, upon which account General Howe had shot one, hung five or six, and flogged many.

Last evening, in a violent thunder-storm, Mr. (a very intelligent person) ventured over. He brings much the same account as the above lad, with this addition, that all the horses on the Island were, by Howe's orders, killed, barrellled up, and put on board, the wretches thinking that they could get no landing here, and of consequence be soon out of provision. That the Tories were used cruelly, and with the Highlanders were compelled to go on board the ships to fight in the character of common soldiers against us. The British Army are prodigiously incensed against the Tories, and curse them as the instruments of the war now raging.

Mr. further informs, that last night the fleet were to come up, but that the thunder-storm prevented. The truth of this appears, from the circumstance of about three thousand red-coats landing at ten o'clock this morning on Long-Island, where, by this time, it is supposed our people are hard at it. There is an abundance of smoke to-day on Long-Island, our folks having set fire to stacks of hay, &c., to prevent the enemy's being benefited in case they get any advantage against us. All the troops in the city are in high spirits, and have been under arms most of the day, as the fleet have been in motion, and are now, as is generally thought, only waiting for a change of tide. Forty-eight hours or less, I believe, will determine it as to New-York, one way or the other.

The thunder-storm of last evening was one of the most dreadful I ever heard; it lasted from seven to ten o'clock. Several claps struck in and about the city; many houses damaged; several lives lost. Three officers, a Captain and two Lieutenants, belonging to Colonel McDougall's regiment, encamped opposite to us, were struck instantly dead, the points of their swords for several inches melted, with a few silver dollars they had in their pockets; they (the persons) were seemingly roasted. A dog in the same tent was also killed; a soldier near it struck blind, deaf, and dumb. One in the main street was killed, as likewise ten on Long-Island; two or three were much burnt and greatly hurt. When God speaks, who can but fear?

PETITION OF ABEL NOBLE AND PETER TOWNSEND.

To the Honourable House of Convention of the Representatives of the State of NEW-YORK:

The Petition of ABEL NOBLE and PETER TOWNSEND, Proprietors of STIRLING Iron Works, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners having contracted to make about sixteen tons of large anchors, eighteen tons of bar iron, and five tons of steel, for the Continental service, have, for the making the said anchors, constructed a new anchor work, as the bellows and cranes of the old works were not sufficient for the wroughting of anchors of twenty-seven and thirty hundred weight; but forasmuch as the artificers and labourers have been and still are liable to be draughted out of the Militia, your petitioners will not be able to perform their contract unless the said artificers and labourers are protected from serving in the said Militia: Your petitioners therefore most humbly pray that your Honours will be pleased to grant a protection to so many artificers and labourers as are mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed, from serving in the said Militia, until the said contract shall be performed, and also to the number of hands mentioned in the said schedule for carrying on the furnace, which is now under blast, and which must unavoidably stop unless such protection be granted. And your petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

ABEL NOBLE,
PETER TOWNSEND.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

King's Bridge, August 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has thought fit to appoint a Court to inquire into the conduct of the Captain of the row-galleys in the late action up the river, and seems desirous that all the information possible should be obtained from home, and that you, in particular, should attend, if you could be spared—if nothing extraordinary should happen in the morning, I would have you ride to the city and attend the Court, which is to sit at ten o'clock. I think it would be best also to take two or three gentlemen with you who seem to be best acquainted with the affair.

I am, dear sir, your humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To General Mifflin.

CADWALLADER COLDEN, JUN., TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Coldenham, August 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 16th of July I had not the honour to receive till the evening of the 31st, and am sorry that I am still under the necessity of troubling you again on the same subject, though not from the same disagreeable place. Upon the receipt of your letter, I wrote to the County Committee, which I heard was to sit the 6th of August, desiring them to reconsider my case, and also got some of my friends to attend their meeting, who inform me that the Committee was about coming to a resolve that, as I had appealed to the Congress, (now the Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York;) I should remain in jail till discharged by them; but, with much difficulty, my friends prevailed with them to accept of security for my abiding on my own farm until fully discharged by your honourable Board; upon which I was sent for, and gave security accordingly. I then desired to have a copy of the proceedings of the County Committee in my case, in order to lay before your Board, which was refused; but they resolved to send a copy to you. I sent to the Chairman, ten days ago, to know if he had sent them, and informed him that I wanted to apply to your Board for my discharge, and that it was necessary you should be furnished with what the Committee had to allege against me, and the minutes of their proceedings thereon. He said he could not get ready the copy of those papers in less than eight days. Yesterday I sent to him again, and the papers were not yet made out, but Mr. Boyd said they should be ready by this morning.

I think it hard that I am not allowed a sight of those papers. However, am confident, if they have the least regard to decency and truth, they can't contradict one assertion contained in my petition to your honourable Board. Perhaps they may not send a copy of my last letter to the Committee; therefore shall send a copy of it by the bearer, for your perusal, as it contains an explanation of a sentence that passed from me when before the Committee the first time, which I have not touched upon in my petition, but they may perhaps have made use of it against me.

Since I wrote that letter, it has occurred to me that perhaps the reason of my being disappointed in meeting with that relief I so confidently expected from your Board, was owing to the mode of application, which I did not advert to when I first applied to you. I hope the enclosed petition will be more unexceptionable, and that you will please to lay it before the honourable Convention, and use your good offices that the prayer thereof may be granted, to, sir, your most obedient, most humble servant,

CAD'R COLDEN, JUN.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President of the Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York.

P. S. One great reason that I am so solicitous to have my discharge is, that I want to be at liberty to go to see my honoured ancient father once more, who, I am sure, must be overwhelmed with grief and anxiety, at this critical moment, for the fate of a country in which he must soon leave all that is dear to him.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 22, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: You may rely upon my diligence in forwarding the galleys as fast as possible. The business has been much retarded by so many of the carpenters being sick, and the misfortune I met with in hurting my leg, which for some days has rendered me incapable of attending upon the business; but my leg is growing better fast, and shall endeavour to forward the business with all possible despatch. I have been very uneasy myself that the galleys are not completed before now.

I sent an express to Albany some days ago for deck nails and other necessities, for the galleys, which will be here tomorrow, without fail. In compliance with the General's request, I shall send to Albany to General Schuyler for what necessities we shall want for the shipping.

Instead of a thousand axes his Honour Governour Trumbull mentioned in his letter, there was but eight hundred and two came to hand. I shall send the remainder by this conveyance.

I am, dear General, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, JUN.

To General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO EGBERT BENSON.

Tyonderoga, August 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The 29th ultimo I granted Doctor Stringer, at his earnest request, a permission to go to New-York with all expedition, to procure medicines for the General Hospital and Army in this department. He made me a solemn promise he would not delay an instant in returning to his duty, with the medicinal stores so much wanted, and which the troops here are almost ready to mutiny to obtain. I am this day informed that Doctor Stringer, instead of fulfilling his promises and returning with all imaginable despatch to his duty, is gone a preferment hunting to the Congress at Philadelphia, while the troops here are suffering inexpressible distress for want of medicines. I entreat, sir, you will instantly lay this letter before General Washington, and receive his commands for sending a supply of medicines to Doctor Potts, at Lake George. Not one of the ten chests of medicines, which you told me at New-York were sent to the ten regiments that marched in the spring from thence, have ever been received by either of those regiments; therefore be sure you send the supply now demanded by some person whose particular duty it will be to see it delivered to Doctor Potts. Many of the Regimental Surgeons here have not any medicines, nor do I believe there is a pound of bark in the whole camp. I cannot be long answerable for the consequences of the shameful neglect of the Army in this department. The United States expect the same good service from their troops here as everywhere else. This they cannot have, unless they command the same attention to be paid the health of their soldiers here as elsewhere.

I am, dear sir, your affectionate humble servant,

Ho. GATES.

[Copy to Dr. John Morgan, Director-General of the Hospitals.]

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 22, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: A small reconnoitring party which I sent down towards Gilliland's is just now returned. The Corporal tells me all is very quiet there; that Gilliland and the few other inhabitants there had informed him that there had been no appearance of an enemy since the flag of truce came up; that Gilliland seemed very friendly, and was very anxious to know our operations, but received very little satisfaction from the party.

Gilliland also mentioned, that Captain Frazier had told him that there were no parties of Regulars out, but forty Indians had, contrary to the desire of the officers at the Isle-aux-Noix, passed the sentries and insisted upon going to war; and that that party of Indians were out when Frazier was at McCauley's. The Indians may have returned back, but it is possible they still may be up this way. The scouting parties ought to be very careful.

I am, sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

Newport, August 22, 1776.

By a gentleman from Dartmouth we are assured that a privateer belonging to Fair-Haven had taken a very large Jamaica ship, with seven hundred hogsheads of sugar, two hundred hogsheads of rum, and a large quantity of cotton. This ship was so valuable that the Captain of the privateer, who was the best pilot for the Eastern-Shore of any on board, went on board the ship to carry her in, and was parted with by the privateer last Sunday week. The privateer is arrived with more prisoners than men belonging to her.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, August 22, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday I received your favour of the 7th instant, and make no doubt you have received mine of the 12th and 13th instant, to which I beg leave to refer. I find, by my son's letter of the 17th, you have returned to Albany, and was so full of business you had not time to write me. Shall be obliged to you for such particulars of the treaty with the Indians as may be communicated, when your leisure will permit.

The axes and clothing are already sent by the same route you direct in your last to Skenesborough. I am informed the last ten or fifteen miles of that road are difficult to pass; and as a ready communication with the Army is of importance, I hope it may be mended and made passable. I now enclose you an account of the cost of the axes and estimate of the cost of transportation, also an account of the sums advanced to the head carpenters, and also to the sea Captains, to enable them to raise men for the Lake service.

Since my last, Captain David Hawley, of Fairfield, and Captain Frederick Chappel, of New-Haven, have been with me, and have undertaken, each of them, to raise a company of seamen, and proceed to Ticonderoga with all expedition. I have recommended them to General Washington, and requested him to permit them to enlist seamen out of our Militia now at New-York. I have advanced to each of them £100, being the same sum advanced Captain Warner before, making £540 in the whole. It is agreed to allow said Captains six shillings for each seaman they shall enlist, for their trouble and expenses.

I likewise enclose you invoices of clothing already sent forward for the use of the Northern Army; more is providing and will be forwarded as soon as possible, with tents for our troops serving there, of which I have to request you to advise Congress, before whom I shall lay the accounts for payment. I send the clothing to you without their particular orders for that purpose, but not without thinking it absolutely necessary.

Our furnace at Salisbury continues in blast. I have given the overseer orders to prepare the swivels you request as fast as can be done conveniently without putting a stop to casting cannon. Six, nine, and twelve-pounders are cast there. Should any of them be wanted at the northward, shall be willing to supply you as far as in our power. The bearer will stop at the furnace, and procure a more full and particular account when the swivels will be ready, and inform you. Would you have them sent out by the way of Skenesborough, or to the North River as before proposed?

Inoculation for the small-pox, I find, has been practised by troops on their march to join your Army. I hope a practice so pernicious in every respect will be discouraged. I have taken the liberty to suggest my fears and sentiments to General Gates on this subject. Indeed, sir, if it is not timely restrained, it appears to me it must prove fatal to all our operations, and may ruin the country.

In obedience to orders from Congress, I have appointed the Regimental Paymasters to the regiments from this Colony. I think the measure a good one, but am told that Congress has never marked out their duty, nor given any instructions on that head.

I flatter myself it is now in your power to discharge the balance due to us on last year's account. With that hope, the bearer, one of our Committee of Pay-Table, waits on you, and by him shall likewise hope to receive the sums due on the account for axes and cash advanced to carpenters and seamen, now enclosed to you.

Yours, &c., &c.,

J. TRUMBULL.

To Major-General Schuyler.

Boston, August 22, 1776.

Last Thursday was sent into Marblehead, by the Franklin vessel-of-war, Captain Skimmer, and on Saturday last was conveyed round to this harbour, a brig from St. Augustine, bound for Bristol, with five thousand raw and half-dressed deer skins, and about two tons of indigo. There were on board of said brig a Lieutenant, a Sergeant, and a Drummer, of the Fourteenth Regiment, going on the recruiting service.

Monday last arrived at Portsmouth a vessel from Holland, laden with dry goods, drugs, spices, &c.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, August 22, 1776.

SIR: Your Excellency's letter of the 13th instant came to hand last evening, and, agreeable to your directions, I shall order Captain Burbeck, with his company of Artillery and the company of Artificers, to march as soon as possible for Norwich, and from thence to go by water to Norwalk and New-York.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
ARTEMAS WARD.

To General Washington.

P. S. Major Wadsworth was appointed Major of Brigade to this division of the Army the 22d day of April; and when the Continental regiments were ordered to New-York and Ticonderoga, as the brigade was divided, I directed him to do duty as Brigade-Major to the regiments that are ordered in to take the place of the Continental regiments, until further orders.

THOMAS RICE TO JAMES WARREN.

Pownalborough, August 22, 1776.

SIR: In obedience to the recommendations of the General Court, I have obtained what subscriptions I could in the east Precinct in said town for the exchanging hard money for Continental bills, and herewith transmit the same. I found in general a ready mind amongst the people, but they had not ability. Our means of getting money, not only in this town but County, is at an end; and what little the people had, they were obliged to part with for the necessaries of life. Everything the people have in their power to do for the publick weal they are in general ready to perform, and hope impossibilities are not expected.

I am, in behalf of the Committee of Correspondence, &c., your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. RICE.

To Hon. James Warren, Esq.

We whose names are hereunto subscribed, not only in obedience to the recommendation of the General Court, but from an earnest and sincere desire to promote the liberty and happiness of America, do voluntarily offer to exchange hard money for Continental bills, when called upon therefor, to the amount of the number of dollars affixed to our respective names, to be applied to carrying on the war in Canada.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO PETER PENNIMAN.

In Council, August 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Council have received yours of the 20th instant, and have ordered the Sheriff of the County of Worcester to remove all the prisoners in the town of Mendon to the town of Grafton. Every officer that has had a servant allowed him is to support his servant so long as he retains as such; and if any officer refuses to do it, he is not to be allowed any servant for the future. And that the servant who has been dismissed be sent to the Sheriff of the County of Worcester, to be by him confined in jail, unless he will consent to go to labour for his support in such town, and to continue within the limits thereof as you shall appoint him.

To the Committee of Correspondence in the Town of Mendon.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO ELIJAH GROUT
AND SELECTMEN OF CHARLESTOWN, NO. 4.

In Committee of Safety, August 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: A letter from General Gates complains loudly of the conduct of some persons acting as physicians in your town, inoculating soldiers for the small-pox, thereby hindering them from joining the Army where there is no danger of the infection; and that he fears by their means the disorder will be spread in the new Army. We are of opinion, that there is great danger that the small-pox may be carried from Number Four to the Army, which, if it should happen, will be of the most destructive consequence; therefore recommend it to you to put an immediate stop to inoculation in your town, and take the most strict care to have all infection cleansed, which will ease the minds of our brethren in the Army, and probably prevent much damage to them.

To Elijah Grout, Esq., and Selectmen of Charlestown.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, JUN., TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Virginia, Williamsburgh, August 23, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: I do myself the honour to transmit you an account of the state of my office at this day. Balance on hand, \$140,856 $\frac{2}{7}$. The 20th instant is pay-day again to the whole Army, and after the warrants are discharged, I shall send another account, that the honourable Congress may judge when I shall want money again.

I have the honour to be, your very obedient servant,

BENJ. HARRISON, JUN.,

Deputy Paymaster-General.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN DARNES.

[No. 155.]

Annapolis, August 23, 1776.

SIR: It was represented to our Board that your company had but about forty muskets, those very indifferent, and that there was not any probability of your getting a sufficient number to make up the deficiency. Upon this information, as the Convention has directed us to despatch all the companies of Flying-Camp Militia that could be armed with the utmost despatch, and as Captain Deans wanted but a few effective arms to complete his company, we issued the orders, which we should not have done had we been truly informed of your circumstances. Advise us of the number you have delivered to Captain Deans, and we will replace them as soon as possible, that your company may march. We have not any linen. We are, &c.

To Captain Darnes.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO EDWARD PARKER.

[No. 156.]

Annapolis, August 23, 1776.

SIR: We will take the blankets you told Captain Norwood you could procure for the publick, fifty for his company, and the remainder you will keep till further orders. Be pleased to have them valued by two gentlemen who may be indifferent, and the price shall be paid to you or your order, on transmitting the account. We are, &c.

To Mr. Edward Parker.

J. NICHOLSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Queen Anne's County, August 23, 1776.

SIR: Captain Darnes has been exceedingly active in endeavouring to arm his company of the Flying-Camp, to march to the northward. He has nearly got them equipped for that purpose. He only wants thirty fire-locks, which he can procure from Winters, provided he can obtain the consent of the Council of Safety; without which, he will not spare them, as he looks upon them to belong to the publick, in consequence of his contract. Captain Darnes has been encouraged by me to make application to you for them, upon a supposition that that part of the Flying-Camp which belongs to the Western Shore will be armed there. Indeed, if Captain Darnes obtains the consent of the Council to get Winters's arms, it will be the means of getting off Captain Fiddiman's company likewise, because Captain Darnes will then be able to spare some guns from his company, which are inferior to Winters's arms, but at the same time are so much superior to any Fiddiman is likely to procure for his company, that he will gladly accept of them, and march off early next week.

I shall do myself the pleasure of waiting upon the Council next week, as soon as Mr. Johnson is elected for Caroline, which will immediately be the case, without opposition. I speak thus, from assurances made me by every man of interest and note in the County, every one of whom I have had personal interviews with. I congratulate you on the favourable turn our affairs are likely to take in Canada.

I am, with much respect, sir, your very humble servant,

J. NICHOLSON, JUN.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, President, &c.

APPOINTMENT OF JAMES WHITE AS DEPUTY-COMMISSARY OF THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia, August 23, 1776.

To all whom it may concern: Be it known, that Colonel Joseph Trumbull, Commissary-General, has thought proper to appoint me Commissary for the States of New-Jersey and Pennsylvania; and in consequence thereof, I have thought proper to appoint James White Deputy-Commissary for the Province of Pennsylvania.

The allowance for the troops marching through to Headquarters, is one pound of beef per man per day, one pound of bread per man per day, and one gill of rum per man per day, or three pence in lieu thereof, six pounds of candles per week for one hundred men for guards, and eight pounds of soap for one hundred men per week.

I do certify, that the above allowance is issued at Amboy and the other posts in New-Jersey, agreeable to my instructions from Colonel Trumbull, Commissary-General.

CARPENTER WHARTON.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO LIEUTENANT BALDWIN.

Philadelphia, August 23, 1776.

SIR: The Continental schooner Wasp, under your command, being now thoroughly repaired, well fitted, equipped, and manned, you are immediately to proceed in said schooner on a cruise against the enemies of these States. We deliver you herewith a Marine book, by which you will know who are our enemies, and also how to conduct yourself in conformity to the Continental Rules and Regulations. You have likewise a list of the Agents in the several States, to some of whom you must address the prizes you take.

We deliver you herewith a letter for a gentleman in Bermuda, which is of much consequence to America. You are therefore to proceed with the utmost expedition to Port Ellis, at the east end of that Island, and deliver the said letter as quickly as possible; receive from him any others he may send in return; and as you will then be near the best cruising ground for West-India ships, you may make a cruise about that latitude, for such length of time as your provisions will enable you to keep the sea, unless success should tempt you to return much sooner with a good prize.

Use your people well, but preserve strict discipline; treat prisoners, if any you make, with humanity, and in all things be duly attentive to the honour and interests of America. If you can get any seamen at Bermuda, ship as many as you can accommodate, and bring us the best account you can obtain of the state and condition of that Island with respect to provisions, number of inhabitants, what cannon, arms, &c., they have there, and inquire particularly after any British men-of-war that have been there, that are there, or that are expected. Should you be unfortunately taken, either going to or after you leave Bermuda, be sure to destroy all letters you may have for us from that Island. Should you gain any intelligence you may think important, you must quit all other pursuits to inform us thereof as soon as possible.

Wishing you success, we are, sir, your humble servants.

To Lieutenant John Baldwin, commanding the Schooner Wasp.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

"In Committee of Inspection and Observation for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, June 1, 1776:

"Whereas the Honourable Continental Congress, by their Resolve of the 30th of May, empowered the said Committee to regulate the price of Salt:

Therefore, Resolved, That the said article of Salt shall not exceed the following prices, viz: coarse Salt, 7s. 6d. per bushel, 3s. 9d. the half bushel, and 2s. per peck; fine Salt, 8s. per bushel, 4s. the half bushel, and 2s. 2d. per peck."

And whereas Stephen Shewell and Joseph Shewell, inhabitants of this City, have knowingly counteracted said Resolution of the 1st of June, by selling coarse Salt at 12s. per bushel, and 1s. 6d. the half peck, and fine Salt at 2s. the half peck; and being charged with a breach of said Resolve before this Committee, Joseph Shewell, being present, acknowledged the charge to be just:

Therefore this Committee, in discharge of the duty they owe to the publick, and in order to show to the world their resolution to support their limitations, which they are of opinion are founded on just and generous principles, after giving them previous notice, do declare and hold up to the world the aforesaid Stephen Shewell and Joseph Shewell as enemies to their country, and preclude them from all trade or intercourse with the inhabitants of these States.

Committee-Chamber, August 23, 1776.

NATHANIEL DONNELL, Sec. pro tempore.

ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Woodbridge, August 23, 1776.

The Battalions of Associators from the City of Philadelphia having completed six weeks' military service for the defence of the Colony of New-Jersey, are hereby, agreeable to orders of Convention, relieved from further duty on this station, and directed to proceed to Philadelphia as soon as the necessary accommodations for their march can be procured. General Mercer takes this opportunity to return his hearty thanks to those gentlemen for the readiness with which they have, on every occasion, executed such parts of the military service as their stations required.

H. MERCER, Brig. Gen.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED ELIZABETH-TOWN, AUGUST 23, 1776.

Last week I left the Army upon the Mohawk River, at the breaking up of the treaty with the Indians. We had present nineteen hundred and sixty-six, including men, women, and children, of the Indians, who have solemnly engaged for a strict neutrality. Both the passes into Canada are now so well fortified that I think we have no reason to apprehend the enemy will enter that way.

The fort on the pass from the Mohawk River to Wood Creek, called Fort Stanwix, has been repaired by Colonel Dayton's regiment, by the order of General Schuyler. It is a very important station, and I believe, without exception, the strongest fort on the Continent. A wide ditch is sunk round it, about ten feet deep, the glacis on the outside are raised six feet above the surface, and the wall of the fort within the ditch ten feet, and that is picketed upon the top. We have several pieces of cannon, from six to twelve-pounders, and the passes up Wood Creek can be stopped in a few hours, so that no artillery or baggage can be brought from the Lakes, and small-arms cannot hurt us. This fort upon the 5th instant we honoured with the name of our worthy General—Fort Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 26, 1776.]

New-York, August 23, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to inform Congress, that yesterday morning, and in the course of the preceding night, a considerable body of the enemy, amounting by report to eight or nine thousand, and these all British, landed from the transport ships mentioned in my last, at Gravesend-Bay, on Long-Island, and have approached within three miles of our lines, having marched across the low cleared grounds near the woods at Flatbush, where they are halted, from my last intelligence.

I have detached from hence six battalions, as a reinforcement to our troops there, which are all that I can spare at this time, not knowing but the fleet may move up with the remainder of their Army, and make an attack here, on the next flood tide. If they do not, I shall send a further reinforcement, should it be necessary, and have ordered five battalions more to be in readiness for that purpose. I have no doubt but a little time will produce some important events. I hope they will be happy. The reinforcement detached yesterday went off in high spirits; and I have the pleasure to inform you, that the whole of the Army, that are effective and capable of duty, discover the same, and great cheerfulness. I have been obliged to appoint Major-General Sullivan to the command on the Island, owing to General Greene's indisposition. He has been extremely ill for several days, and still continues bad.

By yesterday evening's post I received a letter from General Ward, enclosing a copy of the invoice of ordnance stores taken by Captain Manley, with the appraisement of the same, made in pursuance of my direction founded on the order of Congress, which I do myself the honour of transmitting.

You will also receive the treaty between the Commissioners and the Indians of the Six Nations and others at the German-Flats, which General Schuyler requested me to forward, by his letter of the 18th instant.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 23, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday morning the enemy landed at Gravesend Bay, upon Long-Island, from the best information I can obtain, to the number of about eight thousand. Colonel Hand retreated before them, burning, as he came along, several parcels of wheat, and such other matters as he judged would fall into the enemy's hands. Our first accounts were, that they intended, by a forced march, to surprise General Sullivan's (who commands during the illness of General Greene) lines; whereupon I immediately reinforced that post with six regiments. But they halted last night at Flatbush. If they should attack General Sullivan this day, and should show no disposition to attack me likewise, at the making of the next flood, I shall send such reinforcements to Long-Island as I may judge expedient, not choosing to weaken this post too much, before I am certain that the enemy are not making a feint upon Long-Island, to draw our force to that quarter, when their real design may perhaps be upon this.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath, at King's Bridge.

P. S. The flood tide will begin to make about eleven o'clock, at which time, if the detachment ordered yesterday were to move to the high and open grounds about Mr. O. De Lancey's and Bloomingdale, they would be ready to come forward, or return back, as occasion should require; it will give them a little exercise, and show them wherein they are wanting in any matter.

COLONEL COOKE TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, August 23, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Upon the recommendation of your Honour of the 12th instant, a number of able-bodied effective men, not obliged to do duty in any train-band, with sundry gentlemen of the Horse, within the limits of my regiment, amounting in all to fifty-two men, among which are a very considerable number of old commission officers, voluntarily engaged in the publick service for this present important emergency, and yesterday I here led them to the choice of officers; and by a major vote they nominated the following persons, viz: Joseph Smith, Jun., for their Captain; John Trowbridge, Jun., Lieutenant; and Eleazer Hubbee, Ensign; and have joined themselves to my regiment as a distinct company. I therefore desire your Honour to send them commissions. With them came Major Starr, of the Light-Horse, who was very active in procuring them to engage in this service; and as both my Field-Officers were in the service, I desired him to officiate as Major of my regiment, which he cheerfully accepted of, and which I doubt not will meet with your Honour's approbation.

As the Militia regiments from the County of Fairfield were destitute of any Chaplains, the Rev. Ebenezer Baldwin generously offered his services, and is now here officiating in that capacity for my regiment and for the Fourth; and if it be agreeable to your Honour, I desire he may have a warrant for that purpose. And as my regiment came also without any Doctor, and several of the men were taken ill soon after our arrival, and help of that kind very difficult to be obtained here, I desired Dr. Charles Peck (who has been improved many years as a Physician, and who came down with the company above mentioned) to officiate in that character, and trust he will be of great service; and would therefore desire that he also may have a warrant, either for a Surgeon or a Surgeon's Mate,

I am, sir, with all due respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
JOSEPH P. COOKE.

A PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency the Honourable WILLIAM HOWE, General and Commander-in-Chief of all His Majesty's Forces within the Colonies lying on the ATLANTICK OCEAN from NOVA-SCOTIA to WEST-FLORIDA, inclusive, &c., &c., &c.

Whereas it is represented that many of the loyal inhabitants of this Island have been compelled by the leaders in rebellion to take up arms against his Majesty's Government: Notice is hereby given to all persons so forced into rebellion, that on delivering themselves at Head-Quarters of the Army, they will be received as faithful subjects, have permits to return peacefully to their respective dwellings, and meet with full protection for their persons and property. All those who choose to take up arms for the restoration of order and good government within this Island, shall be disposed of in the best manner, and have every encouragement that can be expected.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters on Long-Island, this 23d day of August, 1776. WM. HOWE.

By his Excellency's command:

ROBERT MACKENZIE, Secretary.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

King's Bridge, half-past one o'clock, P. M., }
August 23, 1776. }

DEAR GENERAL: I am so unhappy as not to have received your letter until this moment, having been all this forenoon with the Engineers, viewing the ground and laying out the works; but upon sight of your letter, I have ordered the detachment here to parade and march for Mount Washington as soon as possible, and the detachment at that place, which consists of near eight hundred, to march forward agreeable to your Excellency's direction.

I hope soon to hear good news from Long-Island. I have never been afraid of the force of the enemy: I am more so of their arts. They must be well watched. They, like the Frenchman, look one way and row the other. However, I trust they will not find Americans deficient either in fortitude or policy.

A floating bridge, or number of boats, seems to be highly necessary for a communication on Harlem River. I submit to your Excellency's consideration, whether some of the fire rafts (as they are called) might not be employed to advantage for this purpose.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's humble servant,
W. HEATH.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL NICOLL.

King's Bridge, August 23, 1776.

COLONEL NICOLL: You are forthwith to march with the detachment lately put under your command to Fort Washington, where you are to halt (unless there should be an alarm) until evening, and then return here; but if there should be an alarm, you are to march on towards Bloomingdale and join General Mifflin, who is gone forward, and under whose command you'll be.

I am, sir, your humble servant,
W. HEATH, M. G.

P. S. As soon as two companies are paraded, you will march them forward, leaving an officer to order the others after you, as fast as they come on the parade.

GENERAL HEATH TO COMMISSARY OF PROVISIONS.

King's Bridge, August 23, 1776.

SIR: A number of Militia belonging to Captains Pitkin, Lomas, Cheney, Forbes, and Grant, of Colonel Wolcott's regiment, on their march from Connecticut to New-York, are destitute of provisions, and cannot obtain any at the publick houses; their number is something short of two hundred. Upon their application to you, you are to supply them with one day's provisions to carry them to the city.

I am, sir, yours, &c., WM. HEATH, M. G.

To the Assistant Commissary of Provisions at Mount Washington.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

King's Bridge, August 23, 1776—two o'clock P. M.

DEAR SIR: Being out with the Engineer I did not receive the enclosed until just now. I have ordered the detachment here to parade immediately, and march as far down as your post. You will immediately march the detachment at your post forward as far as you may think proper, agreeable to his Excellency's direction. Colonel Nicoll, who commands the detachment here, will halt at your post unless there should be an alarm, when he will follow as fast as possible. If all should be quiet he is to return before evening.

I am, dear sir, your humble servant,
WM. HEATH.

To General Mifflin.

GENERAL TEN BROECK TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

August 23, 1776.

SIR: As the necessities of the service at this present time require all the regiments to be completely filled with their proper officers, I must acquaint you the North Regiment, which was Colonel Graham's, is deficient of two Colonels, and of several other officers, who are gone in the service. I beg you lay this before the Convention, and pray the following persons may be promoted as Field-Officers in the regiment: Robert G. Livingston, Jun., Colonel; Major Simon Westfield, to be Lieutenant-Colonel; Major Landon, to be the first Major; and Captain David Van Ness to be second Major. Staff Officers: Henry Van Hovenberg, Adjutant; Cornelius Schormerhorn, Quartermaster. As for the Captains and subalterns, I cannot make a proper arrangement. If they must be elected in by the companies, as has been customary, the precedent is bad, and we get unfit persons for officers, who have no command over the men. I shall wait your directions to me in the same, and act accordingly. Ask only for blank commissions for three companies, and shall fill them as you direct.

I am, your very humble and obedient servant,
PETRUS TEN BROECK.

To the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

COLONEL CORTLANDT TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 23, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have received your favour of yesterday, and have made the contents known to General Waterbury, Colonel Wynkoop being absent. He left this in order to recover his health, which was greatly impaired. I found him very unwell on my arrival. Hope his departure may be agreeable, as he desired me to acquaint the General that he would return as soon as his health would permit.

General Waterbury was thinking to have sent me up to Cheshire's, but is now resolved that I shall stay. I am informed the road from Cheshire's to Fort Edward is still very bad, and Wood-Creek wants more clearing out.

Many of the carpenters are sick, so that the carpenters go on but slowly. There are several carpenters among the troops, I am informed, and have advised General Waterbury to draught them for that purpose. Give me leave, dear sir, to assure you that nothing shall be wanting on my part to execute whatever commands the General thinks proper to order, and will do my endeavours to forward on the works, which go on better for being well looked to. The General will please further to advise me; who am, with respect, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP CORTLANDT.

GENERAL GATES TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 2, 1776.]

Tyonderoga, August 23, 1776.

SIR: Having an opportunity by a safe hand going immediately to Philadelphia, I do myself the honour to enclose your Excellency a list of the Naval force of the United States now at Crown-Point, under the immediate command of Brigadier-General Arnold. I also transmit your Excellency my orders and instructions to General Arnold, which I earnestly wish to merit the approbation of Congress. I have lately reported all extraordinary occurrences in this department to General Schuyler, and doubt not but he has constantly forwarded them to your Excellency. Saturday se'nnight, I expect the whole of the Militia of the different States, with the two established regiments from Boston, will be arrived here. I shall thereupon send your Excellency a general return of this Army. I have that confidence in Congress, that I am persuaded no supplies wanted in this Army will be withheld from it longer than the time that it is absolutely necessary to prepare and send them.

The enclosed letter, signed by myself, and in the name of all the officers of the regiments from Jersey and Pennsylvania, I beg leave to present to your Excellency, and to entreat your recommendation of their request to Congress.

With great respect, I am, sir, your Excellency's most faithful and obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To His Excellency John Hancock, Esq.

HORATIO GATES, Major-General.

To the Hon. John Hancock, &c., &c.

Ticonderoga, August 22, 1776.

SIR: In justice to our country and ourselves, we cannot help informing you, that attempts have been made (and nearly effected) to intercept all intelligence to and from the gentlemen of the Army. Not only letters of a publick nature, as well to General Officers as others, have been opened and detained, but even letters of private and domestick concern exposed to the malevolent eye of men evidently inimical to our cause. Under these circumstances, we cannot possibly be possessed of that intelligence our situation and the importance of our cause require. The Eastern troops receive letters free of postage twice every week, from their respective Provinces, in consequence of resolves passed by their Conventions, whereby no less than two post-riders are constantly employed. The same respect and indulgence we conceive ourselves equally entitled to; as gentlemen and as officers we expect it. We would, therefore, wish to see a regular post established upon the same principles, who should constantly ride between Philadelphia and this place. Unless this scheme be immediately adopted, we shall conceive ourselves slighted; in short, we shall consider it a manifest injury to our country, as the enemy will still continue to receive information of all our motions, and we remain totally ignorant of theirs. However, your known zeal in the cause, as well as your regard for the Southern troops, will, we trust, induce you to use every necessary precaution in conveying intelligence to us. We write to you as President of the Congress, therefore beg you will lay this letter before them.

We have the honour to subscribe ourselves your most obedient, humble servants,

- HORATIO GATES, Major-General.
- A. ST. CLAIR, Colonel.
- MATT. OGDEN, Lieutenant-Colonel.
- JAMES IRVINE, Lieutenant-Colonel.
- ANTHY. JAS. MORRIS, Major.
- ISRAEL SHREVE, Lieutenant-Colonel.
- ANTHY. WAYNE, Colonel.

GENERAL ORDERS—BY GENERAL GATES.

Head-Quarters, (Ticonderoga,) August 6, 1776.

(Parole, London.) (Countersign, Dresden.)

The following promotions are ordered to take place in Colonel De Haas's Battalion, viz: Ensign Robert Allison, Second Lieutenant, vice Christopher Staddle, promoted; George Archer, Third Lieutenant, vice R. McCullum resigned; John P. De Haas, Jun., Ensign, vice John Low, deceased; Jacob Shallus, Ensign, vice Benjamin Rice, promoted.

Head-Quarters, August 7, 1776.

(Parole, Amsterdam.) (Countersign, Camden.)

Colonel Moses Hazen, tried at a General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Poor is President, and charged with neglect of duty in general, and in particular for refusing to receive into the store the goods General Arnold sent to Chamblée by Major Scott, and not placing proper guards, and suffering them to be plundered. The Court having deliberately weighed and considered the charge against Colonel Hazen, are clearly of opinion it is without foundation; they do therefore adjudge him "not guilty," and unanimously acquit him with honour. The General confirms the sentence of the General Court-Martial, and orders Colonel Hazen to be released from his arrest.

Head-Quarters, August 9, 1776.

(Parole, Uzbridge.) (Countersign, Bergen.)

Captain Carlisle, of Colonel Bedel's Regiment, tried by the General Court-Martial of which Colonel Poor is President, for behaving unbecoming to the character of an officer, in attempting to fire upon Lieutenant-Colonel Wait, and abusing him. Upon due consideration of the evidence, the Court unanimously find the prisoner guilty, and sentence him to be cashiered. The General approves the sentence, and orders Mr. Carlisle to adjust what accounts he may have in camp, and then immediately to leave the Army.

Head-Quarters, August 10, 1776.

(Parole, Portsmouth.) (Countersign, Salem.)

Lieutenant-Colonel Cortlandt, with the officers and soldiers of Colonel Wynkoop's Regiment, and the Companies of New-York Militia, to go in batteaus to-morrow morning, early, to Skenesborough. They are to take as many boats as possible. The Batteau-Master to deliver them the boats this morning.

The Batteau-Master is immediately to send to the different encampments, and collect all the oars. Neither officer nor soldier is for the future to use any of the oars for any other purpose than that they were designed for. Proper poles must be cut, to carry provisions and baggage.

Colonel Wingate's and Colonel Wyman's Regiments to furnish twelve Subalterns, twelve Sergeants, twelve Corporals, five Drums, and two hundred and fifty-nine Privates, to assist in manning the Fleet. They must be sent to Brigadier-General Arnold, at Head-Quarters, at six o'clock this evening. They will have the same extra allowance as the other troops serving in the Fleet. The General desires that as many seamen as those corps can furnish may be sent with the above command.

Lieutenant Brown, of Colonel Winds's Regiment, tried by the General Court-Martial of which Colonel Poor is President, for ungentlemanlike behaviour in general, disobedience of orders in not coming on from New-York with the regiment, for discharging soldiers from the Continental service, and receiving money from the soldiers for their dismissal. The Court having considered the evidence in this cause, do adjudge Lieutenant Brown is not guilty, and do acquit him.

Ensign Ross, tried at a General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Poor is President, for leaving the Army, and going on to Crown-Point with a batteau and men, contrary to orders. The Court, considering the evidence on this charge, find him guilty; but, from the peculiar circumstances of his case, and the apparent necessity of his proceeding to Crown-Point, do therefore adjudge him only to be reprimanded by the Commanding Officer of the Regiment.

The General approves both the above sentences, and orders Lieutenant Brown to be released from his arrest, and the sentence on Ensign Ross to be executed immediately.

One Field-Officer, three Captains, six Subalterns, six Sergeants, six Corporals, two Drums, and one hundred and forty-four Privates, to march to-morrow morning at daybreak to the landing, to take thirty batteaus across to Fort George. The Field-Officer will return with his party directly upon his delivering the boats at the Fort, and halt for that evening at some miles distant to the northward, and proceed the next morning at daylight to the landing at the end of the Lake. This command to be furnished entirely from the Fourth Brigade.

Head-Quarters, August 11, 1776.

(Parole, Dickinson.)

(Countersign, Philadelphia.)

The Guard in the Fort, formerly kept by Colonel Wynton, is to be relieved by the Fourth Brigade.

Colonel Wingate's and Colonel Wyman's Regiments, of the New-Hampshire Militia, are to be considered as part of Colonel Stark's Brigade, and to obey his orders.

Colonel Patterson is to take the command of the Second Brigade during the absence of Colonel Reed.

Head-Quarters, August 12, 1776.

(Parole, Adams.)

(Countersign, Willson.)

Inquiry to be made if there are any Blockmakers in any of the Corps. Their names, regiments, and companies, to be reported to the Deputy Adjutant-General this evening.

When the weather clears up, the General hopes the troops will turn out in a spirited manner to finish the works. The honour of the Army, and the preservation of the liberties of America, depend upon their animated exertions this campaign; that happily finished, freedom will be restored to America, and every inhabitant, under his own vine and fig tree, may enjoy the inestimable blessings thereof.

After Orders.—The Court-Martial, of which Colonel Poor was President, is dissolved.

Head-Quarters, August 13, 1776.

(Parole, Willson.)

(Countersign, Harrison.)

The Brigade of the Massachusetts Militia commanded by Brigadier-General Bricket is to encamp upon the high ground to the westward of the old fort of Ticonderoga.

General Bricket and Colonel St. Clair will agree upon the spot, and mark out the camp accordingly.

The General observes that cooking in the streets of some of the encampments has been permitted. The Officers commanding Brigades will in their Brigade Orders positively forbid such an unsoldierlike and pernicious custom to be continued. If the Commanding Officers of Corps are at any time remiss in their duty, the Commandants of Brigades will, without reserve, take notice of it.

Mr. William McCalla, tried by the late General Court-Martial of which Colonel Poor was President, for selling a batteau, the sails and part of the rigging of a schooner, and four barrels of pork, belonging to the Continent, at Chamblee.

The Court, on examination, do adjudge Mr. McCalla guilty; but, from the appearance of the testimony, are of opinion that it is rather on account of great imprudence than fraud. They do therefore adjudge him to be publicly and severely reprimanded at the head of Colonel St. Clair's Brigade.

The General confirms this sentence of the General Court-Martial, and orders the execution immediately.

The Majors of Brigades are to attend punctually at eleven o'clock for orders. Those who are at a distance may send an Adjutant in bad weather, but the orders will at no time be given to a Sergeant.

Lieutenant Robert Pearsly, of Colonel Wingate's Regiment, is appointed Wagonmaster-General, in the room of Lieutenant Doty, who has resigned on account of sickness.

Head-Quarters, August 14, 1776.

(Parole, Johnston.)

(Countersign, Morris.)

Two Captains, six Subalterns, eight Sergeants, eight Corporals, four Drums and Fifes, and one hundred and fifty Privates, are to be draughted from the Brigade of Massachusetts Troops commanded by Brigadier-General Bricket, to join and do duty with the Corps of Artillery. General Bricket will direct that the Corps furnish only active, able-bodied men for this service.

The following promotions are ordered to take place in Colonel Stark's Regiment:

Ensign C. Stark, Second Lieutenant, Adjutant, vice Lieutenant Chandler, deceased.

Ensign Timothy Blake, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Battin, deceased.

Ensign Thomas Pritchard, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Carr, deceased.

Mr. Patrick Cogan, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Pritchard, promoted.

Mr. Al. Center, Ensign, vice Lieutenant Stark, advanced.

The Commanding Officers of Corps are directed to see that all the sails belonging to the publick, which have been used as tents, be immediately delivered in to Mr. Lane, as Conductor of Naval Stores. A number of oilcloths belonging to the Artillery have been used as covers of tents; these are likewise to be immediately delivered to Major Badlam, Commanding Officer of Artillery.

Head-Quarters, August 15, 1776.

(Parole, Allen.)

(Countersign, Miffin.)

All persons possessed of any whited brown or white paper may have ready money for it at Head-Quarters, or the like quantity and quality immediately returned upon its arrival from Lake George.

The Commanding Officers of Brigades will, Regiment by Regiment, examine the men's arms and ammunition, and report all deficiencies to the General.

A return of the powder-horns and shot-bags now in each Corps to be sent to-morrow, at orderly time, to the Adjutant-General.

When more salt arrives from Albany, the Commissary is to issue weekly eight quarts to one hundred men until further orders.

Thomas McCoy is appointed an Ensign in the Sixth Battalion of the Pennsylvanians; he is to be obeyed as such.

After Orders.—A General Court-Martial, taken from the Regiments in the First Brigade, consisting of one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, and ten Captains, to sit to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, at or near the President's tent, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them; all evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court. Colonel Greaton President.

Head-Quarters, August 16, 1776.

(Parole, Gerry.)(Countersign, Rush.)

All the brass blunderbusses in camp belonging to the publick or taken from the enemy are to be delivered in immediately to Mr. Lane, Conductor of Naval Stores.

The Majors of Brigades are to see that the weekly returns are delivered in correct and punctually at orderly time to-morrow.

The Chief Engineer to see all the spades and axes in store helved, and a party are to be constantly kept grinding axes. When men are brought to the parade of a morning for work, the General expects their tools to be ready for them.

The Massachusetts Brigade to furnish three hundred men, with officers in proportion, for fatigue to-morrow.

Strayed yesterday from Head-Quarters a fat sheep belonging to the General. He has that opinion of the soldiers under his command that they will return him his sheep whenever they find it.

Head-Quarters, August 17, 1776.

(Parole, Braunton.)(Countersign, Wythe.)

The First, Second, and Third Brigades, to mount the two following Guards for the security of the encampment upon Mount Independence: one main Guard at the Isthmus, consisting of one Field-Officer, two Captains, six Subalterns, six Sergeants, six Corporals, four Drums and Fifes, and one hundred and twenty Privates. The other Guard is to mount upon the hill above the lines upon the west point, where the redoubt is marked out, and is to consist of one Captain, three Subalterns, three Sergeants, three Corporals, two Drums, and sixty Privates. Colonel Wayne, who surveyed the mount, with the officers commanding Brigades, will station the Guard at the Isthmus. The Guard in the rear of the redoubt above the lines will be stationed by the Adjutant-General, the Chief Engineer, and the Commanding Officer of the Artillery.

The Chief Engineer to deliver fifteen axes to the Field-Officer of the main Guard, and ten to the Captain of the redoubt Guard, to-morrow morning at guard mounting. They are to be answerable for these axes to the Officers who relieve them, and those Guards are not to be relieved until the axes are in good order delivered to the relieving Officers.

One Captain, three Subalterns, three Sergeants, three Corporals, two Drums, and one hundred Privates, from the Brigade commanded by General Bricket, to parade at Head-Quarters at twelve o'clock, to take twenty batteaus to Skenesborough. Captain Williamson will deliver the batteaus to the Commanding Officer of the party.

Forty Seamen from the same Brigade, to be draughted and paraded at Head-Quarters to-morrow morning at seven o'clock, to go on board the fleet at Crown-Point. They will go down in two batteaus. The Officer commanding them will apply to General Arnold for his orders.

Colonel Greaton is to take the command of the First Brigade during the absence of General Arnold.

Head-Quarters, August 18, 1776.

(Parole, Jefferson.)(Countersign, Lee.)

In every duty, whether guard, detachment, or fatigue, the Officers are to be proportioned to the number of men, according to the establishment of the Army. A Field-Officer is to command any number above two hundred.

A General Court-Martial, taken from the Regiments of the Fourth Brigade, consisting of one Lieutenant-Colonel, two Majors, and ten Captains, to sit to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, to try such prisoners as may be brought before them. All evidences and persons concerned, are to attend the Court. Lieutenant-Colonel Ogden, President; Captain Joseph Morris to attend the Court as Judge Advocate.

Head-Quarters, August 19, 1776.

(Parole, Rutledge.)(Countersign, Deane.)

The Commanding Officers of Regiments and Corps are to be answerable that every officer, non-commissioned officer and soldier, who shall hereafter be infected with the small-pox, be immediately sent to the General Hospital at Lake George; but previous to their being sent they are to make oath as follows:

I, A. B., do solemnly swear, by the ever-living God, that I have not received the infection of the small-pox by inoculation, or by any application internal or external, but have taken the same in a manner entirely unknown to me, and as I firmly believe, by the oath I now take, in the natural way, and no other. So help me God.

In case any man refuses to take the above oath, his conscience accusing him that it would be perjury so to do, he is to declare the name of the person who inoculated him, and the place where it was done, that the perpetrators of so villainous an act may be instantly brought to condign punishment.

After Orders.—A General Court-Martial in the Second Brigade, consisting of three Field-Officers and ten Captains, to sit to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock, at the President's tent, to try such prisoners as shall be brought before them.

Head-Quarters, August 20, 1776.

(Parole, Williams.)(Countersign, Gerry.)

Edmund Monro is appointed Quartermaster of Colonel Reed's Regiment, of Brigadier-General Bricket's Brigade, in the room of Mr. Brett.

The General Court-Martial, of which Colonel Greaton is President, is dissolved.

Head-Quarters, August 21, 1776.

(Parole, Henry.)(Countersign, Carroll.)

Marauding is become so frequent that the General expects every officer will in a spirited manner exert himself to prevent it, and bring the perpetrators to exemplary punishment. Last night a poor inhabitant was robbed of all himself and distressed family had to depend upon for their winter support, by certain villains, who said they belonged to the Jersey Regiment. There are more villains that wear blue, than those suspected in the Jersey Regiment. The General recommends it to the Commanding Officer of the Fourth Brigade to endeavour by every means in his power to discover and bring to justice all persons suspected of pillaging and marauding. The Army is paid to protect, not pilfer the inhabitants.

The Colonels of the Regiments of Militia are forthwith to bring in their demands for mileage and billeting, that they may be discharged without delay.

Mr. Ryan, Adjutant of Colonel Wayne's Battalion, of Pennsylvania, tried at a General Court-Martial, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Ogden was President, on an accusation of assaulting and abusing Major Haussegger, is found guilty by the Court, and sentenced to be severely reprimanded by Colonel St. Clair, at the head of the Fourth Brigade.

The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be put in execution, at such time and place as Colonel St. Clair shall think proper.

The General Court-Martial, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Ogden was President, is dissolved.

Head-Quarters, August 22, 1776.

(Parole, Richmond.)(Countersign, Gunden.)

The following Resolves of the most honourable the Congress of the United States of America, are to be strictly observed by the Surgeons and Surgeons' Mates of this Army:

"Resolved, That the several Regimental Chests of Medicines and Surgical Instruments, which now are or shall hereafter be in the possession of the Regimental Surgeons, be subject to the inspection and inquiry of the respective Directors of Hospitals, and the Director-General; and that the Regimental Surgeons shall, from time to time, when thereto required, render account of the said Medicines and Instruments, to the said Director, and if there be no Director in any particular departments, to the Director-General. The said accounts to be transmitted to the Director-General, and by him to the Congress, and the Medicines and Instruments not used by any Regimental Surgeon, to be returned when the Regiment is reduced, to the respective Directors, and an account thereof by them rendered to the Director-General, and by him to the Congress.

"That the Regimental and Hospital Surgeons in the several departments make Weekly Returns of their sick to their respective Directors in the said departments.

"That all extra expenses for bandages, old linen, and other articles necessary for this service, incurred by any Regimental Surgeons, be paid by the Director of the department, with the approbation of the commander thereof."

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Tyonderoga, August 23, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: This will be delivered to you by Doctor McCrea, whom, at the recommendation of Doctor Potts, I have appointed First Surgeon to the fleet under your command; he has instruments and medicines, two things much in request with you. Mr. Francis Hagan accompanies Mr. McCrea as his Assistant Surgeon. I cannot procure any instruments for him here, but wish you could hire Doctor Spiram's for the voyage. You are, I am told, acquainted with Doctor McCrea. I am assured his abilities are their own recommendation. Another gondola sails from hence this morning, and the row-galley will sail to-morrow. Yesterday Mr. Titcomb, master-carpenter from Skeneborough, returned thither from hence; he got a good recruit of ship-carpenters, twelve of his gang being now sick; he is a fine-looking fellow, and seems desirous to command the row-galley he has just finished; he professes himself a seaman. From the sense and manly appearance of Mr. Titcomb, I think you would do well to appoint him; but I shall not interfere further than to recommend him. I wrote yesterday to General Waterbury, to spur him up to reinforce you with all speed with the row-galleys. I am confident he will exert himself to join you as expeditiously as possible.

The rumour we heard of an action at New-York proves preinature. The enemy had embarked from Staten-Island, but not landed again, when the last accounts came from thence. It is positively asserted that the Hessian General had sent to General Washington to know what treatment the prisoners of that Principality were to expect, and was answered that they must expect to be treated as hirelings. May health, honour, and success attend you.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,
HORATIO GATES.

To Brigadier-General Arnold.

P. S. Captain Thatcher, of Colonel Swift's regiment, is just come from Governour Trumbull, where I sent him express. He says you had consented to his commanding a row-galley. He seems very fit to do it.

CAPTAIN NELSON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 2, 1776.]

Ticonderoga, August 23, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I beg leave to acquaint you of my having received information that a number of troops are raised and still raising in Westmoreland County, and being myself desirous of serving my country in that quarter, if approved of by your Honour, where I might be of service to the publick and my family; at the same time, I do not mean by this to insinuate that I am tired of the service to the northward, as I am ready and willing at all times to march wherever ordered; but having, agreeable to resolve of Congress, joined a regiment (Colonel De Haas's) by order of General Arnold, in Canada, which in all probability will march home in the fall, was the reason of my making this request. Your Honour, I hope, will consider my request, and, if approved of, permit me to march my company to the westward when the regiment arrives in Philadelphia.

I have the honour to be, your Honour's most humble servant,

JOHN NELSON,
Captain of the Rifle Company.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 23, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have this minute received yours by Doctor McCrea, and am very happy at his arrival, as I was determined to have sailed the first fair wind, even without a Surgeon. I believe him to be a very good one. I have borrowed Doctor Sparham's instruments. I am glad to hear the gondola and galley are likely to join me so soon. I have not the least objection to Captain Titcomb's commanding one of the galleys. I think he had better take the second he is building, as taking him from his gang before she is finished will retard the business. I believe Captain Thatcher a very good officer, and could wish he might take the command of one of the galleys which is done. General Washington's answer to the Hessian General, I hope, will have the desired effect. I think it very proper. I thank you for your good wishes, and am, with every sentiment of friendship and esteem, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Gates.

COLONEL BREWER TO GENERAL GATES.

Bennington, August 23, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I am now on my march from this place with part of my regiment or battalion. The Council of this State, or the Committee appointed to provide my regiment with camp utensils, have not yet sent them, by reason of which my men are entirely destitute. My marching orders are urgent from them; likewise I find the same from you to the Commissary here. I am determined to push as far as I can find any kind of pot or kettle to look in. Have sent my Adjutant with this to your Honour, begging your advice and instructions in that matter; also, where you would have me repair to with my regiment. The other part of my regiment will be on their march next week; by them I expect the camp utensils will come, as I have sent two expresses to Number Four, and one to Watertown, now after them. Upon seeing a letter from you to Major Hawley relative to the conduct of inoculation at Number Four, I find that a damn'd puppy of a quack has carried on the diabolical practice at Williamstown, about twelve miles from this. I have made bold to send your sentiment in that matter to the Committee of that town this morning, and make no doubt they will either do him justice, or send him to you to receive his reward.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

SAML. BREWER, Colonel.

To General Gates.

New-London, August 23, 1776.

Last Saturday a French sloop arrived here from the West-Indies, loaded with sugar, molasses, and coffee, and a few articles of European goods.

Three vessels have arrived here from New-York with Tories, collected from that city and Long-Island, who are sent into the country towns.

By means of the great number of prizes carried into different ports at the eastward, Jamaica rum is sold at 4s. 4d. per gallon by the hogshead, and sugar at five dollars per one hundred weight in Boston.

Three of our people (soldiers) who were prisoners at Quebeck have made their escape, and arrived at Rhode-Island. They report that the officers who are prisoners in Quebeck meet with hard usage.

JOHN AVERY TO RICHARD PETERS.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, }
August 23, 1776. }

SIR: Yours of the 6th instant has been received, and such steps are taken as 'tis presumed will enable the Council speedily to furnish you with a particular list of prisoners in this State. In the mean time they would observe that there have been upwards of four hundred privates and twenty-one officers, being Highlanders, but lately dispersed into different towns in this State, besides twenty-one other officers and many more privates. Many, and perhaps the largest part of the privates, are, by their own consent, at labour for their subsistence.

The list of officers of the troops raised here, the date of their commissions, &c., will be forwarded as soon as the Council can have the proper returns made to them.

By order of the Council:

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary Board of War.

GENERAL LEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Savannah, August 24, 1776.

SIR: Your letter with the thanks of the Congress reached me at Purisburgh. The approbation of the freely-chosen Delegates of a free and uncorrupt people is certainly the highest honour that a man of any sentiment can be ambitious of, and I shall consider it as a fresh stimulus to excite my zeal and ardour in the glorious cause in which I am engaged. May the God of righteousness prosper your arms in every part of the empire in proportion to the justice with which they were taken up! Once more, let me express the high satisfaction and happiness I feel in this honourable testimony, and, once more, let me assure the United States of America that they cannot meet with a servant (whatever may be his abilities) animated with a greater degree of ardour and enthusiasm for their safety, prosperity, and glory.

The present state of this Province, its strength and weakness, I shall transmit to the Board of War, according to the directions I have received.

Be persuaded, sir, that I am, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To the Hon. John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL LEE TO BOARD OF WAR AND ORDANCE.

Savannah, August 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Any irregularity of returns of the forces under my command will not, I hope, be imputed to me; the extensive business of superintending the safety of so vast a territory as that which the Congress have committed to my charge, renders it impossible for me to attend to the detail of the regiments, or, in any reasonable time, to collect and digest the various returns; but I have given orders to the Brigadiers to be as accurate as possible on this subject in their respective districts, and have no reason, from my knowledge of the men, to think they will be deficient. As a thorough knowledge of the present condition of this Colony, of its strength and weakness, is certainly a matter of very serious consideration, I shall lay before the Board the best and most accurate information I am able.

Georgia is a State of much greater importance to the empire of America than is generally supposed, at least than what I myself imagined before I visited it. The variety of navigable rivers, commodious harbours, and fine inlets; the prodigious quantities of rice, and immense stocks of cattle, both on the islands and on the main; but, above all, the gentleness and salubrity of the winter seasons, with the convenience of its situation for commerce with the West-India Islands, would render it a most valuable possession to the enemy. The Altamaha, a very noble river, already furnishes a considerable quantity, and may, in time, furnish any quantity of lumber. The garrison of St. Augustine, and, indeed, the whole Province of East-Florida, draw their subsistence from Georgia; and if all intercourse with her were cut off, that nest of robbers and pirates would probably fall to the ground, and of course the empire of the United States become more round and entire. These circumstances, summed up together, must evince the importance of keeping Georgia, or any part of it, out of the hands of the enemy. The means of doing it demands the utmost attention. I have turned my thoughts to the subject, and shall beg leave to submit the result to the consideration of the Congress. The present state of the strength of this Colony consists of Colonel McIntosh's battalion, (a return of which is here enclosed,) a company of independent Artillery, consisting of three officers and twenty-three privates, with about twenty-five hundred Militia of all sorts; but in a very great part of these (as I learn from the authority of their own Captains) very little confidence can be placed, their principles being extremely contaminated by a most pernicious banditti of enemies to the common liberty. McIntosh's battalion is really a very fine one, (one of the best, I think, on the Continent;) but as, perhaps, it might appear a hard task to insist on this battalion's acting with the necessary rigour against some of their nearest connexions and relations, accused of being concerned in treasonable practices, it is my intention to remove them either into South or North-Carolina, where they can be more serviceable, and have an opportunity of completing themselves, which, in this State, from the dearth of men, is impossible, and replace them with an equal or greater number from South-Carolina.

Such is the present condition of the strength of Georgia; very far from being adequate to its defence. My scheme for its security is, as row-galleys and armed boats are so well calculated for what is called the inland navigation as to give them an infinite advantage over vessels merely sailing, (which, in these strait, confined waters, have no room for manœuvring,) to depend upon them; they will secure the rivers against the predatory incursions of the enemy, prevent the desertion of negroes, sweep the coasts clear of tenders; but, above all, facilitate the means of the different States mutually assisting each other with troops, cannon, provision, and other requisites, which is now effected with difficulties, slowness, and monstrous expense. Three galleys are already on the stocks in this port, and we have armed and equipped several boats with swivels, and one gun on the bow of each; the least of them capable of containing thirty men, and rowed with fourteen oars. Sailors, of whom we find so great a scarcity, are not necessary for this species of vessels; the soldiers are competent to the business. Besides the equipment of these galleys and boats, I proposed establishing little forts or redoubts in certain situations on the rivers St. Mary's, Satilla, Sapello, and Altamaha, which may enable us to make incursions from time to time, when circumstances require it, into East-Florida, and render it dangerous for them to make attempts of a similar nature into Georgia. These redoubts or little forts will likewise serve as places of rendezvous, refreshment, and retreat, for bodies of horse rangers, which ought continually to be patrolling on the frontier. Such are the best methods, after having consulted the most intelligent people, which, in my opinion, can be devised for the defence and security of this State, unless, indeed, we could prevail on the Province to contract their frontier, by breaking up all their settlements on the other side of the Altamaha, which, to me, I confess, appears a wiser and more economical measure; but this, I am afraid, is not to be accomplished.

I must now beg leave to lay before the Board a matter of the highest concern, and which certainly demands the most serious attention of Congress, as, unless remedied, it may not only distress the circumstances of the publick, but bring a disgrace on the American character—I mean the unconscionable advantages which individuals, merchants, mechanicks, farmers, and planters, are suffered to take of the publick necessities. If boats, wagons, horses, drugs, clothing, skins, necessaries, even little refreshments, such as fruit or garden stuff, are wanting for the soldiers, no price being regulated, the extortion is monstrous; the expenses of the war must not only be prodigiously swelled by this want of regulation, but the officers and soldiers are disgusted to the service by the toleration of such impositions; for instance, the Virginians and North-Carolinians are so much out of temper with Charlestown on this head, that should it again be attacked, and the assistance of these troops again be requisite, I am afraid we shall find a dangerous repugnance in them to march, when ordered. I most devoutly wish, therefore, that Congress will make it an object to remedy this evil. Might they not recommend or enjoin the Legislatures of the different States to appoint a Committee of Assessors from their respective bodies to fix the prices of the different articles in their Provinces? Whether this method is or is not proper, I cannot pretend to say; but something, I must repeat, should be done.

The waste, difficulty, and expense arising from a want of method in provisioning the troops, when assembled in any particular spot, upon an emergency, are so great, that magazines ought to be established in every Province, more particularly in those which have the greatest probability of being attacked; by these means, the troops will not only be better fed, but be an immense saving to the Continent; for the contractors, not being pressed for time, can, at their leisure, purchase every species of necessaries in these parts, where they are best and cheapest; but, when a great and sudden demand is made, either for cattle, corn, spirits, &c., they are under a necessity of taking that which is next at hand, and giving the sellers their own price. On this consideration, in concurrence with the President and Council of South-Carolina, I have thought it expedient to establish some magazines, in South-Carolina, of pork, beef, corn, &c., besides straw and whiskey, which, in these low, damp countries, are absolutely necessary; at all events, this establishment can be no loss to the Continent, as the beef and pork, at least, can always with advantage be exported to the West-Indies. Were I at a less distance from the Congress, I should not take the liberty of laying out a single dollar without having obtained their approbation; but, at this distance, I must assume such a power, or let the publick affairs go to wreck, and of course prove myself totally unworthy of the great trust the Congress have reposed in me.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,
CHARLES LEE.

To the Board of War and Ordnance.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
[No. 156.] In Council of Safety, Annapolis, August 24, 1776.

SIR: This letter will be handed to your Excellency by Mons. Pelieirson D'hugé, who came passenger in an armed brig, purchased for the Province of Maryland by Messrs. Vambibber and Harrison, our Agents in 'Statia and Martinique, who inform that he was warmly recommended to them as a "gentleman of character and experience in the management of artillery." We should have employed him in our Province, had he been desirous of entering into its service.

For, and on behalf of the Council, I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DAN. OF ST. THOS. JENIFER, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN DARNES.
[No. 157.] Annapolis, August 24, 1776.

SIR: We wrote you yesterday the reason of our ordering the deficiency of arms in Captain Dean's company to be supplied out of yours. Enclosed is an order on Winters for forty muskets fitted. You will be furnished with cartouch-boxes, knapsacks with haversacks, bayonet-belts, gun-slings, and wooden bottles, at Chestertown. Colonel Richardson will give you marching orders. A small quantity of osnaburgs arrived this morning, and we send you two pieces for the use of your company. We are, &c.

To Captain Darnes.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO BALTIMORE COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 158.] Annapolis, August 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We send up by Captain Walker a quantity of powder imported in Captain Conway. Our Commissary has orders to receive and have the same stored in or near Baltimore-Town, until the magazine building under your directions can be completed. We should be obliged to you for your assistance in seeing the powder landed and properly secured, and should be glad to hear the magazine is finished, so that it may be removed there for greater safety.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation, Baltimore County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO STEPHEN STEWARD.
[No. 159.] Annapolis, August 24, 1776.

SIR: We request the favour of you to purchase the necessities for the Military Hospital in Annapolis, according to the enclosed memorandum given in by Dr. Tootell.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Stephen Steward, Anne Arundel County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GERARD HOPKINS.

SIR: We send you up by Captain Walker, who commands the small tender belonging to the Defence, some powder he has brought up from Virginia. The quantity you will be pleased to take a particular account of, and give Captain Walker a receipt for. The powder is to be stored in some convenient place in or near Baltimore-Town, until the magazine can be completed. You are to send down forty half-barrels of musket powder by the schooner Resolution; also send by her whatever has been heretofore ordered to be sent, and not already complied with.

We desire you would apply to Captain Nathaniel Smyth, and inquire whether there be any cannon at Whetstone Point not mounted, that can be spared. If there should be, send them down here by the schooner Resolution; also the scow purchased by Jesse Hollingsworth. We are informed there are some nine and eighteen-pounders not mounted, lately brought down. We are, &c.

To Mr. Gerard Hopkins, Commissary of Stores, Baltimore.

P. S. Send also any shot that may be ready.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL RICHARDSON.
[No. 161.] Annapolis, August 24, 1776.

SIR: Captain Darnes has an order on Mr. Winters for forty muskets, which will completely furnish his company, and enable him to supply Captain Dean with some. Captain Bourke's company is now here, but will leave us for the head of Elk this afternoon.

We have appointed Mr. Potter Surgeon Assistant, and we enclose you his warrant. Medicines must be furnished at Philadelphia by the Congress.

We approve of your having the arms repaired in Philadelphia, and desire you will give the necessary orders for that purpose to your companies as they march.

Tents, we are informed, may be had at New-York; they cannot be got here; perhaps they may be got at Philadelphia; if they can, you will get what will be necessary for your battalion. This Province must defray the expense in the first instance, but the charge will be Continental.

We are, &c.

To Colonel William Richardson.

JOHN HANSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Frederick-Town, August 24, 1776.

SIR: By direction of the Committee, I wrote you a few days ago, acquainting you that the money sent here for the support of the prisoners was all expended, and to request you would be pleased to order more to be sent up, which I now repeat. That you may know what sum may be necessary, have enclosed you an account of the expenses attending the prisoners per week; and am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANSON, JUN., Chairman.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, President of the Council of Safety.

COL. HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Head of Elk, August 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Alexander, of the Flying-Camp, having had his company completed for a considerable time past, and hearing nothing from his Field-Officers, hath requested me to inform your Honours that he only waits your orders to march. The guns, bayonets, and cartouch-boxes, are ready, as also the blankets. Cloth might have been had for tents, but as no orders were received on that head, there is no one prepared here. There are about twenty canteens prepared, and I believe the rest may be had here if thought necessary. If anything further is wanted please to command, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

H. HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the Hon. Council of Safety, at Annapolis.

P. S. My bayonet-forgers have been two of them sick for some time, but yesterday began to work again.

CAPTAIN DEAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Head of Elk, August 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Just arrived at the head of Elk, and expected to have been furnished with bayonets and knapsacks and canteens, but find there is nothing provided for me here, nor a Field-Officer to direct me. I purpose continuing my march to Philadelphia, where I hope your Honours will have me provided for. As I am anxious to serve my country, I hope those necessities may not be forgot. I engaged Mr.

Price's boats for £10, who would not go under that sum, but think it was rather much.

I am, in haste, gentlemen, your humble servant,
JNO. DEAN.

To the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, August 24, 1776.

SIR: The late conduct of Lord Drummond is as extraordinary as his motives are dark and mysterious. To judge the most favourably of his intentions, it should seem that an overweening vanity has betrayed him into a criminal breach of honour. But whether his views were upright, or intended only to mislead and deceive, cannot at present be a matter of any importance. In the mean time I have the pleasure to acquaint you that Congress highly approve of the manner in which you have checked the officious and intemperate zeal of his Lordship. Whether his designs were hostile or friendly, he equally merited the reproof you have given him; and I hope for the future he will be convinced that it is highly imprudent to attract the attention of the publick to a character which will only pass without censure when it passes without notice.

The Congress having considered the matter thoroughly, are of opinion to decline taking any publick or further notice of his Lordship or his letters, and particularly as you have so fully expressed their sentiments on the subject in your letter to him. It was the consideration of this point that induced Congress to detain the express till now.

I have the honour to be, with perfect esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation and Inspection, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 24th August, 1776:

Present: William Atlee, Lodwick Lowman, William Bowsman, Casper Shaffner, Christopher Crawford, Eberhart Gruber, John Miller.

William Atlee in the chair.

Thomas Bridges, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to work with Henry Rankin, Caleb Johnson, here in Committee, agreeing to be answerable for him agreeable to the resolves of the Committee.

Resolved, That an addition is necessary to be immediately made to the Barracks; and the Congress and Convention having left it to the Committee to make such addition as we shall judge necessary, it is agreed that the addition be made of brick, by extending the wings so as to have four rooms in length on each side added, whereby there will be twelve rooms on each side more than at present.

William Henry, Esq., is requested to assist the Committee in superintending and directing this work; and Mr. George Burkhart and Frederick Mann it is agreed shall be employed as the Carpenters, and are desired to furnish the bills for scantling, &c., for the building with all expedition.

JOHN FRASER TO DOCTOR FRANKLIN.

Reading, August 24, 1776.

SIR: I took the liberty of addressing some lines to you about two months ago. As I never was favoured with an answer, perhaps they did not reach you; even if they had, I am not surprised that matters of importance should prevent any attention to them; however, as it was about business of the utmost consequence to myself and the peace of my family, I hope you will excuse me if I intrude once more. When I'll have tried every possible chance, I'll have no neglect to reproach myself with. From such considerations, I have wrote sundry letters to Mr. Clinton, whom I personally knew at Esopus; I even wrote about four weeks ago to Messrs. McKean and Samuel Adams, but without so much as an answer. I write this, however, with confidence, yet would be extremely sorry to be deemed troublesome. I will certainly not be so after this, even if unsuccessful now, but quietly trust to fate. The cause of my writing the first time was from my receiving a letter from Montreal, dated the 6th of May, wherein I was informed that you were so good as to agree to my return to Canada; the letter, however, had scarcely come to hand, when I learned that you were come back from Montreal, and was on your way to Philadelphia. I therefore begged you would let me know whether I had been misinformed or not; if I was not, I willingly hoped there was no impropriety in my getting even then my passport. In my first letter I said very little about my case; I will say as little now, because I must suppose you acquainted with the merits thereof. I will only observe, that I was treated with such rigour in Canada, that it was with pleasure I learned the order for Albany, although at the very worst and most inclement time of the winter season. I looked on the cause of my apprehension to be so trivial and insufficient, that I never entertained the least doubt of procuring liberty to return to Canada as soon as I would be heard here. To demand papers that chanced to be in my custody in a publick and judicial capacity, and which papers related to transactions prior to any footing in Canada, I thought there was no right to ask, therefore the greatest impropriety to grant; and I have had the satisfaction of never meeting with any, whatever his politicks, that has differed with me in opinion. As to the papers, in themselves they are not of the smallest consequence; they relate to private persons; and were these papers in ashes, there would be just the same hold of the persons concerned had they remained in Canada. These papers, however, are the cause of my being now eight long months torn from my family—sufferings, to be sure, of a private nature, and nothing in the scales of publick matters; but for that very reason I would fain expect not to be made to suffer any longer for a supposed private injury, but be redressed and let go by the gentlemen who are at the head of publick affairs. I am really sensible this is perhaps the worst time for an individual to expect any attention; but, sir, I have already given my reasons, and I hope you will easily forgive my being so full of my own personal affairs. The obligation would be greater than I can express, would you procure relief, were it even to go to Canada on my parole, to return when required, or at least to get leave to go to Philadelphia. I beg pardon for being so troublesome.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

JOHN FRASER.

To Benjamin Franklin, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 26, 1776.]

New-York, August 24, 1776.

SIR: The irregularity of the posts prevents your receiving the early and constant intelligence it is my wish to communicate. This is the third letter which you will probably receive from me by the same post. The first was of little or no consequence, but that of yesterday gave you the best information I had been able to obtain of the enemy's landing and movements upon Long-Island. Having occasion to go over thither yesterday, I sent my letter to the post office at the usual hour, (being informed that the rider was expected every moment, and would go out again directly,) but in the evening, when I sent to inquire, none had come in.

I now enclose you a report made to me by General Sullivan after I left Long-Island yesterday. I do not conceive that the enemy's whole force was in motion, but a detached party rather. I have sent over four more regiments, with boats, to be ready either to reinforce the troops under General Sullivan, or to return to this place if the remainder of the fleet at the watering place should push up to the city, which hitherto (I mean since the landing upon Long-Island) they have not had in their power to do, on account of the wind, which has either been ahead, or too small, when the tide has served. I have nothing further to trouble the Congress with at present, than that I am their and your most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Long-Island, August 23, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: This afternoon the enemy formed, and attempted to pass the road by Bedford. A smart fire between them and the Riflemen ensued. The officer sent off for a reinforcement, which I ordered immediately. A number of Musketry came up to the assistance of the Riflemen, whose fire, with that of our field-pieces, caused a retreat of the enemy. Our men followed them to the house of Judge Lefferts, (where a number of them had taken lodgings,) drove them out, and burnt the house and a number of other buildings contiguous. They think they killed a number; and, as evidence of it, they produce three officers' hangers, a carbine, and one dead body, with a considerable sum of money in pocket. I have ordered a party out for prisoners to-night. We have driven them half a mile from their former station. These things argue well for us, and I hope are so many preludes to a general victory.

Dear General, I am, with much esteem, your very humble servant,
JNO. SULLIVAN.

To General Washington.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 16, 1776.

(Parole, Enfield.)

(Countersign, Danvers.)

In recommending Paymasters, it is to be observed that no officer can be appointed unless he resigns his former commission, which he is to do in person at Head-Quarters.

Major Livingston and William Blodget are appointed Aids-de-Camp to Major-General Greene; they are to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

David Astin, of Colonel Silliman's Regiment, and Captain Mead's Company, convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys was President, of "breaking open a store and stealing rum, molasses, and fish;" sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes.

John McAlpine and John Hopper, of Captain Smith's Company, Colonel Malcolm's Regiment, convicted by the same Court-Martial of "being drunk on their posts;" sentenced to receive thirty lashes each.

The General approves the above sentences, and orders them to be put in execution at the usual times and places.

The Orders of the 6th instant, respecting soldiers abusing people at market, and taking their things, not being known to the troops who have come in since, it is now repeated that the General will punish such offenders severely; and he requires of the officers who visit the Guards to see whether the former order is put up in each Guard-house, and whether an officer attends at the market agreeable to former orders, and report thereon to their Brigadiers.

Captain Andrew Billings to do duty as Major to Colonel Ritzema's Regiment till further orders.

Unless orders are attended to and executed, they are of no consequence, and the greatest disorders will ensue; the General therefore requests that the officers would be very careful not only that the orders be made known to the men, but that they see themselves that they are executed. If every one in his own department would exert himself for this purpose, it would have the most happy effect.

The badness of the weather has undoubtedly prevented an attack, as the enemy's troops have been embarked some time. The General therefore directs that two days' victuals be kept ready dressed by the troops, and their canteens filled with water, so that the men may be prepared; otherwise, in case of an attack, they will suffer very much.

All tents to be struck immediately on the alarm being given, viz: two guns at Fort George, three from Bayard's or Bunker's Hill, with a flag in the day, and a light at night.

The divisions of the Army, or Brigades doing separate duty, proving very inconvenient, the whole are to be brought into the general detail to-morrow. The Brigade-Majors are to be at Head-Quarters at six o'clock to settle the detail, and the Major and Brigadier Generals are requested to send at the same time a note of the number of men each may want for fatigue, or direct the Engineer having the care of their works respectively so to do.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 17, 1776.

(Parole, Falmouth.)

(Countersign, Essex.)

Benjamin Durant, of Captain Wadsworth's Company, and Colonel Bailey's Regiment, convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys was President, of "getting drunk on Guard;" sentenced to receive thirty lashes.

Patrick Lion, of Captain Curtis's Company, Regiment late Learned's, convicted by the same Court of "sleeping on his post;" sentenced to receive twenty-five lashes.

Benjamin Wallace, of Captain Stewart's Independent Company of New-York Forces, convicted by the same Court of "desertion, and inlisting into another Company;" sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes.

The General approves the above sentences, and orders them to be executed at the usual time and place.

The General recommends to all Commanding Officers of Divisions, Brigades, and Regiments, in issuing their several orders, to be careful they do not interfere with General Orders which have been, or may be issued; and those gentlemen who have not had an opportunity, from their late arrival in camp, to know what have been issued, will do well to inform themselves, and more especially before any special order is issued which may have a general effect.

The Guard ordered to mount at Lispenard's Brewery in the evening, to mount in the day also, and march off the parade with the other Guards.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 18, 1776.

(Parole, Grantham.)

(Countersign, Fairfield.)

As nothing contributes so much to the good order and government of troops as an exactness in discipline and a strict observance of orders, and as the Army is now arranged into different Divisions, those divisions formed into Brigades, and the Brigades composed of Regiments, the General hopes and expects that the several duties of the Army will go on with regularity, cheerfulness, and alacrity. As one means of accomplishing this, he desires that no Regiment, Brigade, or Division, will interfere with the duties of another, but walk in their own proper line, the Colonels taking care not to contravene the orders of their Brigadiers, the Brigadiers of their Major-Generals, and that the whole pay due attention to the General Orders; which can only be set aside or be dispensed with by orders of equal dignity. The Army, under such a regulation, will soon become respectable in itself and formidable to the foe. It is an incumbent duty, therefore, upon every officer of every rank to be alert and attentive in the discharge of the several duties annexed to his office; his honour, his own personal safety, and, for aught he knows, the salvation of his country and its dearest privileges, may depend upon his exertions. Particular causes may, and doubtless will happen, to render it necessary (for the good of the service) that a change of officers, &c., should be made from one Brigade to another; but whenever there appears cause for this, it will be notified by general or special orders.

The General cannot quit the subject, as this may possibly be the last opportunity previous to an attack, without addressing the private men, and exhorting the troops in general, to be profoundly silent, and strictly obedient to orders, before they come to, and also while they are in, action, as nothing can contribute more to their success than a cool and deliberate behaviour, nor nothing add more to the discouragement of the enemy than to find new troops calm and determined in their manner. The General has no doubt but that every good soldier and all the officers are sufficiently impressed with the necessity of examining the state and condition of their arms; but his own anxiety on this head impels him to remind them of it after every spell of wet weather, lest we should at any time be caught with arms unfit for immediate use.

The Regiments of Militia from Connecticut are to be formed into a Brigade, under the command of Brigadier-General Wolcott, who is hourly expected, and in the meantime to be under the command of Colonel Hinman, the eldest Colonel of the Militia.

Though the fire-ships which went up the North River last Friday evening were not so successful as to destroy either of the men-of-war, yet the General thanks the officers and men for the spirit and resolution which they showed in grappling the vessels before they quitted the fire-ships. And as a reward of their merit, presents each of those who stayed last, and were somewhat burnt, fifty dollars, and forty to each of the others. And had the enterprise succeeded, so as to have destroyed either of the ships-of-war, the General could have been generous in proportion to the service.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 19, 1776.

(Parole, Georgia.)

(Countersign, Hartford.)

John Green, of Captain Johnson's Company, and late Colonel McDougall's Regiment, convicted by a General

Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys is President, of "breaking out of his quarter-guard and being absent two days;" ordered to receive thirty-nine lashes. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed at the usual time and place, and the prisoner to be then returned to his quarter-guard.

The Court-Martial to sit to-morrow, for the trial of Lieutenant Hubbel, of the Regiment late Colonel McDougall's. The Judge Advocate will be informed of the witnesses by General Putnam.

A Subaltern's Guard to go over to-morrow, to relieve the Guard at Hoebuck Ferry.

Colonel Hitchcock's Regiment to move to-morrow to Burdett's Ferry, and relieve the party now there; they are to join General Mifflin's Brigade, and receive orders from Major-General Heath, agreeable to General Orders of the 12th instant. General Putnam will order boats.

The Adjutants of such Regiments as have lately come, to apply at the Adjutant-General's Office for blank returns, which they are to fill up and bring in at Orderly time, viz: eleven o'clock every Saturday.

After this day, a Major to mount at the main guard, at the Grand Battery, instead of a Lieutenant-Colonel.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 20, 1776.

(Parole, Hampton.)

(Countersign, Gates.)

Nathaniel Mun, of Captain Peters's Company, Colonel Read's Regiment, convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys is President, of "desertion and reinlistment into another corps."

James Mumford, of Captain Ledyard's Company, Regiment late Colonel McDougall's, convicted by the same Court-Martial of the same crime.

Alexander Moore, Sergeant in Captain Conway's Company, Colonel Winds's Battalion, convicted by the same Court-Martial, of "desertion."

Christopher Harper, of the same Company and Battalion, convicted by the same Court-Martial of the same crime.

Each of the above prisoners were sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes. The General approves the sentences, and orders them to be executed at guard-mounting to-morrow morning, at the usual place.

The troops lately arrived are informed, that it is contrary to General Orders to fire in camp. Such fire-locks as are loaded, and the charges cannot be drawn, are to be discharged at retreat-beating, in a valley, under the inspection of an officer. The officers of such troops are desired and required to prevent all the firing in the camp, as it tends to great disorder.

The Regiments of Militia, now under the command of Colonel Hinman, from Connecticut, are, in case of an alarm, to parade on the grand parade, and there wait for orders.

The officers who have lately come into camp are also informed that it has been found necessary, amidst such frequent changes of troops, to introduce some distinctions by which their several ranks may be known, viz: Field-Officers wear a pink or red cockade; Captains, white or buff; Subalterns, green. The General flatters himself every gentleman will conform to a regulation which he has found essentially necessary to prevent mistakes and confusion.

The trial of Lieutenant Hubbel is postponed till to-morrow.

The General Court-Martial to sit on Thursday, as a Court of Inquiry into the conduct of Adjutant Brice, of Colonel Smallwood's Battalion, charged with "disobedience of orders and disrespectful behaviour to his Commanding Officer."

The General being informed, to his great surprise, that a report prevails, and is industriously spread far and wide, that Lord Howe has made propositions of peace, calculated by designing persons more probably to lull us into a fatal security, his duty obliges him to declare that no such offer has been made by Lord Howe; but, on the contrary, from the best intelligence he can procure, the Army may expect an attack as soon as the wind and tide shall prove favourable. He hopes, therefore, every man's mind and arms will be prepared for action, and when called to it, show our enemies and the whole world that freemen contending on their own land are superior to any mercenaries on earth.

The Brigadiers are to see the spears in the different works under their command kept greased and clean.

General Sullivan is to take the command upon Long-Island till General Greene's state of health will permit him to resume it, and Brigadier Lord Stirling is to take charge of General Sullivan's division till he returns to it again.

Edward Tilghman, Esq., is appointed as an Assistant Brigade-Major to Lord Stirling, the duty of the whole division being too great for one officer. He is to be respected and obeyed accordingly.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 21, 1776.

(Parole, King's Bridge.)

(Countersign, Jersey.)

Adjutant Taylor to do the duty of Brigade-Major to General McDougall's Brigade during Major Platt's illness. He is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Lieutenant Hobbie, of Captain Hyatt's Company, Regiment late General McDougall's, tried by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Wyllys was President, for misbehaviour in leaving one of the hulks in the North River, was acquitted, and the complaint reported groundless. Ordered that he be discharged from his arrest.

A Court of Inquiry to sit on Friday at Mrs. Montagnie's upon Captains McCleave, Stanton, and Tinker, charged with backwardness in duty up the North River last week, and misbehaviour on Sunday last when the men-of-war came down the river. Court to consist of the following persons, and to meet at ten o'clock: General McDougall, President; Colonel Malcolm, Lieutenant-Colonel Wesson, Captain Peters, Lieutenant-Colonel Shepard, Major Brooks, Captain Van Dyck, Members. The Judge-Advocate to attend, and all witnesses.

Fifty men, properly officered, to parade every morning, at six o'clock, at General Putnam's, there to take orders from him. Not to bring arms. These to be continued every day till further orders.

Fifty men, also for fatigue, to parade to-morrow morning, properly officered, on the grand parade, without arms. Take orders from Captain Post.

Ten men, with one subaltern, who have been used to the sea, to parade at General Putnam's this afternoon, two o'clock, to proceed to King's Bridge, up the North River. Take three days' provisions. The like number, for the same service, to parade to-morrow morning, six o'clock, at General Putnam's quarters; take three days' provision. Both parties to parade without arms.

Twenty men, with a subaltern, to parade for fatigue to-morrow morning, without arms, on the grand parade, to proceed to Bayard's Hill, and work upon the well. Take orders from the person who has the direction of digging the well.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 23, 1776.

(Parole, Charlestown.)

(Countersign, Lee.)

The Commissary-General is directed to have five days' bread baked and ready to be delivered. If the Commissary should apply to the commanding officers of regiments for any bakers, they are to furnish them without waiting for a special order.

The General was sorry yesterday to find that when some troops were ordered to march, they had no provisions, notwithstanding the orders that have been issued. The men must march if the service requires it, and will suffer very much if not provided. The General therefore directs all the troops to have two days' hard bread and pork ready by them, and desires the officers will go through the encampment and quarters to see that it be got and kept.

The General would be obliged to any officer to recommend to him a careful, sober person, who understands taking care of horses and waiting occasionally. Such person being a soldier, will have his pay continued, and receive additional wages of twenty shillings per month. He must be neat in his person, and to be depended on for his honesty and sobriety.

The officers of the Militia are informed that twenty-four rounds are allowed to a man, and two flints; that the Captains of each company should see that the cartridges fit the bore of the gun. They then are to be put up in small bundles all the cartridges except six, writing each man's name on his bundle, and keep them safely till the alarm is given, then deliver to each man his bundle—the other six to be kept for common use. In drawing for ammunition, the commanding officers should, upon the regimental parade, examine the state of their regiments, and then draw for cartridges and flints, agreeable to the above regulation. Captain Tilton will assist them in their business, and, unless in case of alarm, they are desired not to draw for every small number of men who may be coming in.

The enemy have now landed on Long-Island, and the hour is fast approaching on which the honour and success of this Army and the safety of our bleeding country depend. Remember, officers and soldiers, that you are freemen, fighting for the blessings of liberty; that slavery will be your portion and that of your posterity if you do not acquit yourselves like men. Remember how your courage and spirit have been despised and traduced by your cruel invaders, though they have found by dear experience at Boston, Charlestown, and other places, what a few brave men, contending in their own land and in the best of causes, can do against base hirelings and mercenaries. Be cool, but determined. Do not fire at a distance, but wait for orders from your officers. It is the General's express orders, that if any man attempt to skulk, lay down, or retreat, without orders, he be instantly shot down as an example. He hopes no such scoundrel will be found in this Army; but, on the contrary, every one for himself resolving to conquer or die, and, trusting to the smiles of Heaven upon so just a cause, will behave with bravery and resolution. Those who are distinguished for their gallantry and good conduct may depend upon being honourably noticed and suitably rewarded. And if this Army will but emulate and imitate their brave countrymen in other parts of America, he has no doubt they will, by a glorious victory, save their country, and acquire to themselves immortal honour.

The Brigade-Majors are immediately to relieve the Guards out of the Regiments ordered to Long-Island from other Regiments of the Brigade, and forward such Guards to the Regiments.

Major Newbury's, Colonel Hinman's, Major Smith's, Colonel Cook's, Colonel Talcot's, Colonel Baldwin's, and Major Strong's Regiments of Connecticut Militia to parade this evening, precisely at five o'clock, on the grand parade. Major Henly will attend, and show them their alarm posts, and direct them in manning the lines.

When any of the Field-Officers for picket or main guard are sick, or otherwise incapable of the duty, they are immediately to signify it to their Brigade-Major. But the General hopes that trifling excuses will not be made, as there is too much reason to believe has been the case.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 24, 1776.

(Parole, Jamaica.)

(Countersign, London.)

All the intrenching tools are to be collected and delivered in to the store. Officers who have given receipts will be called upon, as they are answerable for them, if there should be any deficiency.

The General has appointed William Grayson, Esq., one of his Aids-de-Camp; he is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

In case of action, any orders delivered by Colonel Moylan, Quartermaster-General, as from the General, to be considered as coming from him, or as delivered by an Aid-de-Camp.

The Adjutants of the Connecticut Militia are directed to make themselves acquainted with parapet firing; and the other officers of those corps would do well to attend to it and practise their men every day. Their honour and safety will much depend upon their avoiding any confusion in manning the lines.

The Court-Martial of which Colonel Wylls was President, is dissolved. The Brigade-Majors, in forming the new one, to be careful to have it full, and officers who can attend.

The Court-Martial to proceed, at their first sitting, to the trial of Adjutant Brice, of Colonel Smallwood's Battalion, charged with "disobedience of orders."

The changing of the Regiments occasioning some difficulties in the duty, the Brigade-Majors are to send by the Orderly Sergeant every morning a duty return of the officers and men in their respective Brigades.

The passage of the East River being obstructed in such a manner, with chevaux-de-frise, &c., as to render it dangerous for any vessels to attempt to pass; the sentinels along the river contiguous to where the obstructions are placed are to hail and prevent any vessels attempting to pass, otherwise than between the Albany pier and a mast in the river which appears above water nearly opposite.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, August 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I received your favour of the 18th, with its several enclosures, on Thursday, by Mr. Allen.

My letter of the 13th does not, nor was it meant to contain the most distant hint, of your entertaining doubts or suspicions of my not having communicated to Congress such parts of your letters as were material. It was only designed to answer yours, where you say, since my arrival here you had not written to them on military affairs, supposing whatever information you might give, and which was necessary for them to know, would be communicated by me. My request to be advised of the information you might give Congress of any matters of which you wrote me at the same time, was to prevent my sending them unnecessary intelligence, and the trouble of having needless copies and extracts made out.

I am in hopes the articles mentioned in the letter to Captain Varick will have come to hand before this; also those contained in the enclosed list, shipped on board the schooner Union, Philip Sandford, master, the 19th instant, as the Quartermaster-General has reported to me.

The treaty with the Indians, agreeable to your request, I have transmitted Congress.

It gives me pleasure to find the vessels for the Lakes are in such forwardness, and going on with so much industry. I yet hope we shall have a Navy there equal to every exigency, and that will be superior to those the enemy can build.

Captains Hanly and Chappel are now here, with permission from Governour Trumbull and myself to enlist, if they can, two hundred seamen out of the Militia just sent from the State of Connecticut. How they will succeed, I cannot determine.

I wish you had proceeded as your own judgment and inclination led in the case referred to me for my advice, respecting Colonel Dayton's officers. I am sorry that persons of their rank and of their connexions should have given in to such dishonourable and disgraceful practices; and I feel myself much concerned for themselves and friends. But as the matter is with me to determine; as their making concessions at the head of the regiment would not answer any purpose but that of rendering them objects of ridicule and contempt; as they could never after claim and support that authority over their inferiors that is necessary to good government and discipline; as publick justice and a regard to our military character require that matters of such a nature should meet every possible discouragement; as my conduct might otherwise be deemed reprehensible; and to deter others from the like conduct, which is but too prevalent, I cannot but advise that the several persons concerned be subjected to the trial of a Court-Martial. If the Court should be of opinion that they ought to be broke and dismissed the service, Colonel Dayton, his Major, and other officers, will recommend such as will be proper persons to fill the vacancies occasioned by their removal.

On Wednesday night and Thursday morning a considerable body of the enemy, said to be eight or nine thousand, landed at Gravesend Bay, on Long-Island. They have approached within about three miles of our lines; and yesterday there was some skirmishing between a detachment of them and a party from our troops. Their detachment were obliged to give ground, and were pursued as far as where they had a post at a Judge Lefferts's. His house and outhouses served as quarters for them, and were burnt by our people. We sustained no loss in this affair, that I have heard of, except having two men slightly wounded. Our people say the enemy met with more: they found one dead body, in the habit of a soldier, with a good deal of money in his pocket, and got three hangers and a fusee. They fired a shell from a howitz, which fell on and burst in a house where some of the enemy were; but whether they were injured by it, I have not learned. A firing has been heard this morning, but know nothing of the event.

I am, dear sir, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, August 24, 1776.

SIR: On Thursday last the enemy landed a body of troops, supposed to amount (from the best accounts I have been able to obtain) to eight or nine thousand men, at Gravesend Bay, on Long-Island, ten miles distance from our works on the Island, and immediately marched through the level and open lands to Flatbush, where they are now encamped. They are distant about three miles from our lines, and have woods and broken grounds to pass (which we have lined) before they can get to them. Some skirmishing has happened between their advanced parties and ours, in which we have always obtained an advantage. What the real designs of the enemy are, I am not yet able to determine. My opinion of the matter is, that they mean to attack our works on the Island and this city at the same time, and that the troops at Flatbush are waiting in those plains till the wind and tide (which have not yet served together) will favour the movement of the shipping to this place: others think they will bend their principal force against our lines on the Island, which, if carried, will greatly facilitate their designs upon this city. This also being very probable, I have thrown what force I can over, without leaving myself too much exposed here; for our whole number (if the intelligence we get from deserters, &c., be true) falls short of that of the enemy; consequently the defence of our own works, and the approaches to them, is all we can aim at. This, then, in a manner, leaves the whole Island in possession of the enemy, and of course of the supplies it is capable of affording them. Under these circumstances, would it be practicable for your Government to throw a body of about one thousand or more men across the Sound, to harass the enemy in their rear or upon their flanks? This would annoy them exceedingly, at the same time that a valuable end, to wit, that of preventing their parties securing the stocks of cattle, &c., would be answered by it: the cattle to be removed or killed. The knowledge I have of the extraordinary exertions of your State upon all occasions, does not permit me to require this, not knowing how far it is practicable; I only offer it, therefore, as a matter for your consideration, and of great publick utility, if it can be accomplished.

The enemy, if my intelligence from Staten-Island be true, are at this time rather distressed on account of provisions: if, then, we can deprive them of what this Island affords, much good will follow from it.

The foreigners are yet upon Staten-Island, the British troops are upon Long-Island and on ship-board.

With great respect and esteem, I remain, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

COLONEL KNOX TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, August 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I send you Lieutenant Preston, of the Artillery, to mount the guns and get the implements and ammunition to the post at King's Bridge. You will please to give him such directions as you think proper. You must give him men, as it is utterly impossible for us to spare one from this place. You must also find a boat for the carriages, &c., as General Putnam refuses to let one go from this. I wish you the greatest good fortune; and am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

H. KNOX.

To Major-General Heath, King's Bridge.

JAMES LIVINGSTON TO JOHN JAY.

New-York, August 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am just now informed by Captain Wright that he can raise a company of men in this town and suburbs. Should take it as a particular favour you'd mention the matter to the gentlemen of the Provincial Congress; and if approved of, beg you'll furnish him with money for that purpose. He is a good recruiting officer, and I believe he'll soon raise his company. I shall settle the matter respecting the rank of the officers with General Schuyler, agreeable to orders from Congress. As soon as these two companies of Wright and Stewart are filled, General Washington will order them to the northward, where I propose going to-morrow, or next day at farthest, if not wanted here.

The enemy are at Flatbush—their numbers not known; though we every moment expect an attack. I shall wait your answer this evening.

I am, with respect, yours, &c., JAS. LIVINGSTON.
To the Hon. John Jay, Esq., at Harlem.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 24, 1776.

The day before yesterday a detachment of the enemy landed at New-Utrecht, on Long-Island; they are said to be about nine thousand. Two or three skirmishes happened yesterday between their advanced guards and ours, in each of which we were victorious; we lost not a man, but killed several of the enemy—among the rest, one British and one Hessian officer; the former had a good deal of gold in his pocket; cannot get fairly at particulars; the Hessian had a rifle. We have got several neat cutteaus and fuses, such as officers use, from which we suppose the officers were killed or very badly wounded, and carried off the field by the enemy. The enemy (the advanced guard said to be three thousand) attempted getting to Bedford, on the Jamaica road, but were driven a mile and a half farther back than where they set out from. There is firing on the Island now.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

King's Bridge, August 24, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: In order to ease Head-Quarters as much as possible, and on account of our distance from thence, General or Garrison Court-Martials have been appointed at this post for the trial of offenders. Brigadier-General Mifflin has sent me the enclosed this day, but I pause until I know your Excellency's pleasure, (which I desire you would be pleased to signify as soon as convenient,) whether the before mentioned offender and all others, except in very extraordinary cases indeed, are to be tried by Court-Martials appointed here, or referred to those appointed from Head-Quarters.

A very considerable quantity of sails and rigging, stripped off the vessels lately sunk near Mount Washington, at present remain there. I submit to your Excellency's determination if it would not be well to send them farther up the river, where they might be safely stored, as it cannot be done here, the stores being wanted for other uses.

On the 21st instant the body of a man was taken up at Burdett's Ferry. The commanding officer there not being able to find any civil authority, appointed a court of inquiry to consider the cause of his death, who reported the enclosed. The body was afterwards buried, and the money and effects are in the hands of Colonel Ward. It since appears that Hardenbrook (for that was his name) was by occupation a carpenter, belonging to the city of New-York, who had been heretofore employed by Dunmore and Tryon, and for whom he retained an affection; that upon the day of the ships falling down the river, he attempted to get on board of them, but found a watery grave, the reward of such unrighteousness. I am told that he has a brother in the city, who is a staunch friend to American liberty, and who I suppose is as yet unacquainted with the fate of his brother.

The detachment from the two brigades, amounting to ten or eleven hundred men, with surprising alertness, almost instantly turned out on yesterday, and marched some miles towards the city, and this day, upon the flood tide, formed upon their parade. The officers and men appeared greatly disappointed on yesterday, when they were told that the enemy were not moving, and that they might return to their quarters. The men grow more sickly, as your Excellency will see by the returns.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To His Excellency General Washington, at New-York.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO GENERAL HEATH.

DEAR GENERAL: I request you to appoint a General Court-Martial as soon as possible for the trial of Lieutenant Priestly, of Colonel Magaw's battalion, Captain Beatty's company, who is charged by his Captain with making use of indecent, abusive, and traitorous expressions against his brother officers and his country.

I have ordered the two battalions to parade at eleven o'clock, the time of low water, that we may be ready to march if necessary. Captain Horton gave the alarm yesterday through misinformation. If we discover any movements of the enemy you will hear three cannon. A heavy firing was seen and heard from our post last night, supposed to have happened at Long-Island; fifty cannon, besides small-arms, were heard.

Yours, affectionately,
To Major-General Heath.

T. MIFFLIN.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

King's Bridge, August 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Lieutenant Priestly being charged not only of making use of indecent and abusive, but also of traitorous expressions against his country, I think it advisable to take the opinion of his Excellency General Washington on the affair, whether he shall approve of a General Court-Martial to be appointed here, or that he should be tried by a General Court-Martial appointed by the Commander-in-Chief himself: his determination I will obtain to-morrow. I much approve the vigilant steps you have taken this day, in order to be ready to aid our friends below, should there be occasion for it. Your alertness on yesterday does honour to yourself and corps.

I am, dear sir, yours, affectionately,
To General Mifflin.

W. HEATH.

JOHN THOMAS, JUN., TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

In Committee of Safety for the County of Westchester, }
August 24, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: We have heretofore informed your honourable House that, in consequence of your orders, we had caused a number of disaffected persons to be apprehended and confined in our jail; since which many more have been confined. We must acquaint your honourable House that these persons are chiefly considerable farmers, and this present season loudly calls upon them to attend the putting their seed in the ground, if they could be released from imprisonment with safety to our country. In consideration of which, we are now induced to apply to your honourable House for your orders respecting these persons: whether (as this Committee are very well acquainted with their respective conduct, and capable of judging which of them are dangerously disaffected and which are not) your honourable House will think proper to invest this Committee with power to examine, release, or confine those persons, as to them shall seem just and consistent with the good of our cause. We have undermentioned a list of the names of those persons for your further information.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN THOMAS, JUN., Chairman.

William Rady,

COLONEL SAMUEL DRAKE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 24, 1776.

The members of the honourable Congress of the State of New-York are informed that the officers of the Third Battalion in General Scott's brigade have made choice of Mr. John Eliot as Chaplain for said regiment. The Congress is requested by their signature to establish Mr. Eliot in that office, in which he has served from the 7th of this instant.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAML. DRAKE, Colonel.

To the Members of the Congress of the State of New-York.

JOHANNES SLEIGHT TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Committee Chamber, Kingston, August 24, 1776.

SIR: The report of the Committee appointed by the Representatives of the State of New-York, in Convention at Harlem, together with your letter, &c., we this day received, by which we find that the prisoners now at Kingston are to be removed to Morristown, and that the old paroles are to be cancelled, &c.; but we beg leave to remark, that although we would be very glad to be rid of these guests, we are apprehensive it will be difficult to get them removed, because they are not able, and we suppose not willing, to pay the cost of their removal. Nor can we see how it is possible for us to cancel their old paroles, as they never were in our possession; a copy of them only was sent to us, the originals we suppose remain in Congress. Your further directions about these matters with all possible speed will much oblige your most humble servants.

By order: JOHANNES SLEIGHT, Chairman.

To Abm. Yates, Jun., President of the Provincial Congress of the State of New-York, at Harlem.

DR. POTTS TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, August 24, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Your Honour's favour of the 23d instant, by Mr. Watson, I received this morning. I assure your Honour I have spared him from our huckster's shop every article in my power. What keeps Mr. Henry with the medicines I am at a loss to know. I sent one of my mates three days since to Albany to expedite his coming, and to purchase if possible some articles we are wholly out of. I have also wrote to the Committee of Albany and to Salisbury to send me as soon as possible all the old linen or rags they can procure, as well as to recommend to the farmers and others to cure a quantity of herbs for the use of the Hospital. It pains me much to think of our destitute situation, for should your Honour be attacked, we have not bandages or lint to dress fifty men. I can with confidence assure your Honour nothing shall be left undone in my power to procure every necessary for the good of the Army in my line of duty.

I heartily thank your Honour for your orders respecting the returns of the Regimental Surgeons, as well as your approving of my sentiments in regard to Dr. McCrea. I was greatly surprised in having some patients sent here in the small-pox from among the new levies. I have strictly examined them. I cannot as yet find they have been inoculated. Should I discover such a thing, shall be careful to transmit to your Honour every matter relative to it, as well as effectually secure the patients. One thing I would recommend to your Honour's notice, which I hope you will not think foreign to my duty: as the Army is greatly exposed to intermittents and bilious complaints from their situation, I am humbly of opinion it would conduce to their health if every man was allowed half a gill of bitter rum per day. It can be made with four pounds of gentian root and two pounds of orange-peel to a hogshead. If these articles are not to be had, the Regimental Surgeons can readily procure some snakeroot, centaury, or dogwood-bark, which will answer nearly as well.

Enclosed have sent your Honour the returns of the Hospital, on which I have only to observe, that we have a greater number than appears from the return, owing to the names being struck out of the Hospital book, but I still detain them under the name of convalescents, who will be sent forward in a day or two.

I have taken the liberty to send your Honour a tolerably good wether, and a cask with some beans, squashes, cucumbers, and a few small melons. The moment I can procure any good vinegar it shall be forwarded to you.

I am your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

JONA. POTTS.

ELBRIDGE GERRY TO GENERAL GATES.

Hartford, August 24, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I am here on my journey to Philadelphia, from which I have been absent about a month for health, and by a gentleman for Albany enclose you a Connecticut paper. The Army at New-York, by the last advices, were in statu quo, and by a line from General Washington, of the 6th instant, "the Militia from Connecticut were coming in fast, and they had received aid from Philadelphia and that Government;" also, "the troops in health were in high spirits, and not at all backward in making the last appeal." At Lebanon I was informed by Governour Trumbull, that fourteen regiments of the Connecticut Militia, in addition to their levies, were on the march to join the Army, and would contain on an average about five hundred men each, and that as many more were in readiness to relieve these when it should be found necessary; so that I think New-York will be well prepared for defence.

We have seen Carleton's general orders. What a brute they discover him to be. He is angry that your reconnoitering parties have taken off one of his General Officers; but is it not justifiable upon the principle of retaliation? and will the Continent do justice to their frontier inhabitants, who are indiscriminately murdered by Indians in the service of his Britannick Majesty, unless they continue to repay them in their own coin? For my own part, I think that, until they recall their Indians, we shall be guilty of unpardonable neglect, unless we employ our scouts to take off their officers and men in this way, although the General himself may be in danger, when parading for his pleasure.

We want very much to see you with the sole command in the Northern Department, but hope that you will not relinquish your exertions till a favourable opportunity shall effect it.

At Dorchester, I saw Miss Tyler and friends: she desires to be remembered to General Gates and the Deputy Paymaster-General. I expect, and indeed hope, to see action at New-York; and remain, with esteem, sir, your assured friend and humble servant,

E. GERRY.

To Major-General Gates.

J. TRUMBULL TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, August 24, 1776.

SIR: I enclose you returns of those men who have deserted from the regiments raised in the State of Massachusetts-Bay, now serving in the Northern Army.

It is the earnest request of the Honourable Major-General Gates, that measures be taken for returning them as speedily as may be to the corps to which they belong.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

J. TRUMBULL,
Deputy Adjutant-General.

To the Honourable President of the Convention of Massachusetts-Bay.

COLONEL MOULTON TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Hampton, August 24, 1776.

State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, ROCKINGHAM, ss.

Pursuant to orders directing me to raise and equip fifty-nine men out of the regiment under my command, in order to join and assist our Army at New-York at this important crisis, I have, with the greatest despatch in my power, caused said number of men to be raised and equipped, (saving two,) and have also mustered said men, and paid to each commission officer one month's pay advance, and to each non-commissioned officer and private their bounty, besides £2 10s. to each officer and soldier for their travelling expenses from their homes to Head-Quarters, agreeable to the resolve of the Council and Assembly of said State. And having formed said men into a company, and appointed a Captain and two subalterns to the same, (a list of which is enclosed,) I have ordered said Captain to march off with his company, on Thursday, the 25th instant, and to continue the same with all possible despatch towards New-York, by the way of Hartford, in the State of Connecticut, where I have directed him to stop, to receive directions for his further regulation. I have also furnished him with such copies and certificates as I apprehended would be necessary that he should have committed to his care.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
JONA. MOULTON.

To the Honourable the Committee of Safety for the State aforesaid.

CLAUDE CRESPIGNY TO RALPH IZARD.

Teignmouth, Devonshire, England, August 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was favoured with yours of the 12th, and though I have neither information nor entertainment to send you in return for it, I am at least bound to send you my best thanks; this, indeed, I should have done sooner, if I had not for some days past been rambling about the country; among other places to Mount Edgcombe, which, for its views, is, I think, much the finest place in England.

Mrs. C. is much obliged to you for your good wishes. The benefit she receives from bathing is really wonderful. All the symptoms of weakness and relaxation which she brought with her entirely vanished within a week, and have not since appeared.

We shall remain till the 13th September, when I hope to return to Bath. This place is exceedingly private, (not even a publick room or coffee-house,) and would, of course, be dull, if it were not for our own society. Two of them are well known to you, and send their compliments—C. Townshend and Ley.

We find all our Ministerial acquaintance very happy with the contents of the Gazette of the 10th. I confess I do not see any great cause for exultation. It seems fortunate, indeed, that General Howe had attempted nothing without his reinforcements; but it by no means seems clear that with these reinforcements he will be able to act to any effectual purpose. From what I have heard, it is probable, that instead of making an attempt against New-York, as was intended, all his force will be bent against Philadelphia.

The hopes from Lord Howe's negotiation are, I find, entirely vanished before the opening of his commission. In short, I believe that at St. James's they have only now the wicked hopes of being able to protract the war; and this, I believe in my conscience, they will do, so long as fleets and armies can be paid for. They laugh at the Declaration of Independence; and though cool and serious people must think it the worst piece of intelligence that was ever communicated to this country, I have no doubt but it will be made a matter of triumph with the Government as fulfilling the Ministerial prophecies of that event. In their exultation, they will not choose to remember, that Independence was not predetermined in America, but is only the immediate and necessary consequence of their own acts. I can only say, as Lord Chatham did upon some such occasion: "God may perhaps forgive them, but their country never will."

By the post of to-day, we have just heard that Sir Peter Parker and General Clinton have been but indifferently received at South-Carolina. I suppose the Gazette will not give any particular accounts of this expedition; but if the experiment is lost, some notice must be taken of it.

I have not at present a single correspondent in London, so that I shall be much obliged to you for any particulars that may arrive upon the interesting subject of America, especially such as are not likely to make their appearance in the Gazette.

Mrs. C. unites with me in sincerest regards and wishes to you and Mrs. Izard.

I am, dear sir, very heartily yours,

C. C.

Charlestown, South-Carolina, September 4, 1776.

Advices from the camp near Seneca, of August 25th, inform us, that Colonel Williamson had returned from the expedition through the Cherokee lower settlements. He had an engagement on the 12th near Temawsey, with about three hundred of the enemy, when they were routed, leaving sixteen men dead on the field of battle. Our loss was, killed, Lieutenant Rogers and one private; wounded, Major Downs, Captain Lacey, Captain Andrew Neal, Lieutenant Hargrove, and ten privates. Captains Lacey and Neal, Lieutenant Hargrove, and one private, are since dead. The loss of the enemy, in killed and wounded, was thought to be sixty or seventy men. As desolation was spread throughout the lower towns, the Colonel's next object was the middle settlements, where he expected to meet, about this time, Brigadier-General Rutherford, with two thousand Carolians. Accounts were received at the camp, that Colonel Lewis was preparing to march, with a considerable body of men from Virginia, in order to attack the Overhill settlements, so that there is little doubt but these faithless savages will soon be effectually chastised. Mr. James Holmes, and several others who were prisoners among the Cherokees, have made their escape, and got to Fort James, in Georgia. They say the Indians despair of being able to withstand Colonel Williamson's Army, and that Cameron and one Hugh Hamilton had gone over the Hills, from whence they intend to proceed for Mobile.

CAPTAIN MANTZ TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, August 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I arrived at this city on the 23d instant, to join our respective battalions, commanded by Colonel Charles G. Griffith, by whom I understand we are at the loss of a Major, and desired I should act in that capacity until further order from the honourable Council of Safety, whom I expect will give me the preference, as I raised the first company in this battalion, and I believe that I am one of the first in the Province of the Flying-Camp. If the honourable Council will please to commission me to act as Major, I would be highly obliged to you to forward it as quick as possible; and remain, with gratitude, your humble servant,

PETER MANTZ.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

TO MAJOR-GENERAL PUTNAM—ORDERS.

SIR: It was with no small degree of concern I perceived yesterday a scattering, unmeaning, and wasteful fire, from our people at the enemy; a kind of fire that tended to disgrace our own men as soldiers, and to render our defence contemptible in the eyes of the enemy. No one good consequence can attend such irregularities, but several bad ones will inevitably follow from it. Had it not been for this unsoldier-like and disorderly practice, we have the greatest reason imaginable to believe that numbers of deserters would have left the enemy's Army last year; but fear prevented them from approaching our lines then, and must forever continue to operate in like manner whilst every soldier conceives himself at liberty to fire when and at what he pleases. This is not the only nor the greatest evil resulting from the practice: for, as we do not know the hour of the enemy's approach to our lines, but have every reason to apprehend that it will be sudden and violent whenever attempted, we shall have our men so scattered, and, more than probable, without ammunition, that the consequences must prove fatal to us; besides this, there will be no possibility of distinguishing between a real and false alarm.

I must, therefore, sir, in earnest terms, desire you to call the Colonels and Commanding Officers of corps, without loss of time, before you, and let them afterwards do the same by their respective officers; and charge them, in express and positive terms, to stop these irregularities, as they value the good of the service, their own honour, and the safety of the Army, which, under God, depends wholly upon the good order and government that is observed in it.

At the same time I would have you form a proper line of defence round your encampment and works, on the most advantageous ground. Your guards which compose this, are to be particularly instructed in their duty; and a Brigadier of the day to remain constantly upon the lines, that he may be upon the spot to command, and see that orders are executed. Field-Officers should also be appointed to go the rounds and report the situation of the guards. No person to be allowed to pass beyond the guards without special order in writing.

By restraining the loose, disorderly, and unsoldier-like firing before mentioned, I do not mean to discourage partisan and scouting parties; on the contrary, I wish to see a spirit of this sort prevailing, under proper regulations, and officers, either commissioned or non-commissioned, (as cases shall require,) to be directed by yourself, or licensed by the Brigadier of the day, upon the spot, to be sent upon this service. Such skirmishing as may be effected in this manner will be agreeable to the rules of propriety, and may be attended with salutary effects, inasmuch as it will inure the troops to fatigue and danger; will harass the enemy; may make prisoners, and prevent their parties from getting the horses and cattle from the interior parts of the Island, which are objects of infinite importance to us, especially the two last.

All the men not upon duty are to be compelled to remain in or near their respective camps or quarters, that they may turn out at a moment's warning, nothing being more probable than that the enemy will allow little enough time to prepare for the attack.

The officers also are to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent every kind of abuse to private property, or to bring every offender to the punishment he deserves. Shameful it is to find that those men who have come hither in defence of the rights of mankind, should turn invaders of it, by destroying the substance of their friends.

The burning of houses, where the apparent good of the service is not promoted by it, and the pillaging of them, at all times and upon all occasions, is to be discountenanced, and punished with the utmost severity. In short, it is to be hoped that men who have property of their own, and a regard for the rights of others, will shudder at the thought of rendering any man's situation, to whose protection he had come, more insufferable than his open and avowed enemy would make it, when, by duty and every rule of humanity, they ought to aid, and not oppress, the distressed in their habitations.

The distinction between a well-regulated army and a mob, is the good order and discipline of the first, and the licentious and disorderly behaviour of the latter. Men, therefore, who are not employed as mere hirelings, but have stepped forth in defence of everything that is dear and valuable, not only to themselves but to posterity, should take uncommon pains to conduct themselves with uncommon propriety and good order, as their honour, reputation, &c., call loudly upon them for it.

The wood next Red-Hook should be well attended to. Put some of the most disorderly riflemen into it. The Militia, or the most indifferent troops, (those I mean least tutored and seen least service,) will do for the interior works; whilst your best men should at all hazards prevent the enemy's passing the wood and approaching your works. The woods should be secured by abatis, &c., where necessary, to make the enemy's approach as difficult as possible. Traps and ambuscades should be laid for their parties, if you find they are sent out after cattle, &c.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, this 25th day of August, 1776.

Go. WASHINGTON.

COLONEL KNOX TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, August 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have seen your letter to Major Henly requiring him to come to you immediately. I thought it was agreed upon between you and me that he was to stay till after the expected action, and am very sorry that you thought otherwise. I should be unhappy to oppose his promotion, for whom I have so good an opinion, and must beg the favour of you to appoint an Aid-de-Camp as pro tempore, and when the capital affair is past I shall have the pleasure to present you with as deserving an officer as is in the Army.

In the interim, I am, sir, your very humble servant,

H. KNOX.

To Major-General Heath, commanding the division of the Army at King's Bridge.

COLONEL VARNUM TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Red-Hook, August 25, 1776.

SIR: I am very sensible the important concerns which engross your Excellency's attention at this critical period must render particular applications very disagreeable. But the same benevolence and philanthropy which characterize you the father and the friend of the Army in general, will cause the distresses of an individual to find a place in your compassionate breast. Ever since I waited upon your Excellency, the expectation of a battle hath continued me in my present command. New difficulties arising, I can derive no satisfaction from that quarter. A letter from Mr. Ellery (enclosed) convinces me that promotions in the Army are not designed for those whose principles are disinterested enough to serve the Continent without. My disgrace is unalterably fixed, by conferring the "detur digniori" upon those of inferior standing, without the least competition of superior merit. Was promotion in the Army a favour, my tongue and my pen should be silent; but it is the just reward of merit and rank. I do not esteem myself obligated to the publick for the commission I hold, nor for the greatness of the pay annexed to it. They can challenge no further services from me, whose every effort to deserve their good opinion has been discountenanced. My continuance here can be of no possible advantage. The variety of incidents that may happen in an engagement will possibly demand my submission to the orders of a Brigadier-General, whose standing, till lately, hath been subordinate to mine. Disobedience at a critical moment may lose a victory which is courting our embrace. My pride is too great ever to bend to reasons of policy to the wounding of my honour. How cruel the alternative, to be obliged either to submit to my own infamy, or, by refusing, incur the penalties of death! However, I remember a saying of Sertorius: "A just man will receive victory when it kindly offers, but will not seek or defend his own life upon dishonourable terms."

If my conduct hath hitherto gained your Excellency's approbation, and if my complaint is well founded, how can you deny me, the only consolation left, your permission to retire from a service no longer eligible? My philosophy is at an end. I can no longer command myself, much less can I command others. Disappointment, shame, grief, resentment, all harrow up my soul at once, and force me to adopt the language of Young:

"The day too short for my distress; and night,
E'en in the zenith of her dark domain,
Is sunshine to the colour of my fate."

The enclosed answer to Mr. Ellery's letter, with the other to Mr. Hancock, I could wish to send to Philadelphia as they are; but, while acting under a commission from the Congress, cannot.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
J. VARNUM.

To General Washington.

GENERAL HEATH TO MAJOR HENLY.

King's Bridge, August 25, 1776.

DEAR HENLY: The business of this division daily increasing, and ten regiments distantly posted frequently requiring orders, &c., and Major Keith's time almost entirely taken up in writing, I find myself necessitated to call upon you to attend your duty here. By this time, I presume, you have been able to afford Mr. Shaw so much assistance as to make him fully acquainted with everything necessary from you; and, as I consented to your stay but for a week, I hope there will be no objections to your coming; if there should be, although with reluctance, I shall be constrained to name another Aid-de-Camp in your room, being determined to have my own officers, according to established practice.

I am, dear Henly, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH.

To Major Henly.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 31, 1776.]

Albany, August 25, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday I was honoured with a letter from his Excellency General Washington, enclosing one from Colonel Stark, transmitted to him by General Gates, [5th August,] written in behalf of all the Field-Officers in the Army, copy whereof I do myself the honour to enclose.

Colonel Stark's letter convinces me that the reasons I suggested for not determining what money ought to be given in lieu of a ration were well founded; for if I had done it, I should have differed in opinion with all the Field-Officers in the Army, and with the Commissary; for although I do not presume to say, in contradiction to those gentlemen, especially to the Commissary, (who I should suppose to be well informed,) that a ration does not cost the publick one shilling lawful money of New-England, yet I will venture to say that it ought not to cost the publick so much by at least fifty thousand dollars a year on ten thousand men, or five dollars for each man, and that it can be furnished equally good and equally well for that sum less, and that without the least impeachment of either Mr. Trumbull, Mr. Livingston, or any other furnishing Commissary, as men of integrity and ability; for every man acquainted with publick business must allow that it cannot be carried on, for a variety of reasons, with that economy which prevails in private affairs. Some of those reasons may be found by a retrospect of my letters to Congress during last campaign. To save a sum so very considerable, is, however, well worthy of attention, and I assure Congress that it has claimed much of mine, and that I have given such orders as I hoped would, in a great measure, remedy the evil. I am sorry to say that they have not had the desired effect; and I can suggest but one way more in which it may be done, and that is by contract; for although I am far from being a friend to contracts, on account of the chicane that usually attends them, yet of two evils it is most eligible to choose the least; and a contract well guarded appears to me such. A contract, if entered into, should, I think, in the first place, specify every article allowed for a ration.

2dly. It should determine what ought to be given in other species, or in money, in lieu of such articles as it may be impossible for the contractor to furnish in the present situation of affairs—such as milk, molasses, and rice.

3dly. The contract should specify what is to be given for a ration at Albany, and what at Ticonderoga and Fort Stanwix, that from the difference between the price allowed at Albany and those two places, the price for any intermediate post may be ascertained according to the distance from Albany.

4thly. The contractor should transport the provisions to Ticonderoga and Fort Stanwix, and every intermediate post, at his own risk, excepting only what may be destroyed by the enemy.

5thly. The publick Commissaries at the different posts should receive it, and pass their receipts to the contractor for the quantity delivered, for his voucher. Here the Commissary can have no inducement to give a receipt for more than he receives, as he must be accountable for all he receives, as hereafter directed.

6thly. The contractor, when he delivers any barrelled pork or beef, and the Commissary, before he passes a receipt for the same, should each take two or more barrels out of the parcel, and these being opened, and the meat taken out and weighed, the mean weight shall be allowed as the weight in each barrel in that parcel, and the contractor shall, if the pork or beef be found in good order, have his receipt therefor, and the Commissary shall stand charged therewith.

7thly. As flour casks have always the tare marked on them, the neat weight may be ascertained at the place of delivery by weighing them, which will always be less than when they left Albany, occasioned by the waste in transporting them in carriages.

8thly. The quantity of peas, Indian corn, rice, and the other articles, to be determined by measurement or weight.

9thly. Every barrel of pork or beef, when delivered at any post, to be tapped, that if there should be any deficiency of brine the contractor may fill it up, or the pork or beef to remain in store until issued, at his risk. The starting of hoops by accident, and the tapping of barrels by wagoners and teamsters to lighten the load, have been the cause of great loss, for which it is next to impossible to provide a remedy.

10thly. All flour to be bored, as is done at New-York or Philadelphia, to discover whether it is sound and merchantable. Such as is found otherwise, to be returned to the contractor. In case of a difference in opinion between the Commissary and contractor on this and the foregoing article, the same to be determined by two arbitrators taken by the parties, who may choose another if they do not agree.

11thly. When fresh beef is furnished, the contractor to have it killed at or near the post where it is to be issued, and the quarters weighed and delivered to the Commissary, the Commissary to determine the quantity he chooses to have killed each day, and to pass his receipts for what he receives.

12thly. The contractor obliged to furnish a stipulated proportion of fresh and salt meat.

13thly. The Commissary-General to charge every Commissary with the provisions delivered to him by the contractor, and no person employed that cannot give three thousand pounds good security.

14thly. Every Commissary employed in issuing provisions to take receipts from the troops, not for so many rations, but for such a quantity of each article as may be delivered, thence to determine what may be due to any corps for deficiencies, if any there shall be, and whether any corps has at any time drawn more provisions than it ought.

This is what has occurred to my mind on the subject. If it in any way tends to promote the interest of my country, I shall be fully satisfied.

The Paymaster informs me that our military chest is again so much reduced that a speedy supply will be necessary. I hope the Treasury Board will be ordered to send a supply. I suppose something more than one hundred and twenty thousand dollars per month is expended in this department.

On my way to the German-Flats, Mr. Duane informed me that Congress had ordered ten thousand dollars for the treaty to be held with the Indians. As the publick's creditors on account of the Indian department were very pressing for their money, I have been under the necessity of drawing on the Paymaster for part of what is due. I should be glad to know if Congress approves that I should pay off all the debts in that manner that are already accrued, and those that daily accrue.

Colonel Nicolson's and Colonel Elmore's Regiments (the former consisting of one hundred and twenty-six present fit for duty, and the latter of three hundred and forty-four, officers included) are to march to-day into Tryon County. As the enemy, by our last accounts, were not constructing any vessels of force at St. John's, I begin to apprehend that they will attempt to penetrate by the way of Oswego, as the Indians suggest. The batteaus they build at St. John's may be in order to amuse us, as they may easily convey them down the Sorel to the St. Lawrence, to be employed to the westward. I have ordered scouts to be continually kept out towards Oswego and Oswegatchie, and have desired General Gates to send others to the north end of the Lake St. François, or to any part of the river St. Lawrence above Montreal, that we may have the earliest intelligence possible of their intentions, and prepare ourselves accordingly.

Our naval force on Champlain is increasing rapidly. Three stout galleys and some gondolas I believe are finished since the date of the enclosed return.

If Colonel Campbell is not to return to the Army, it will be necessary to appoint another Deputy Quartermaster-General.

The line of duty for the Regimental Paymasters should be minutely pointed out, as also that of the Muster-Masters; and I should be happy to be furnished with it the soonest possible.

I am, sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient and most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 25, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 20th instant was yesterday delivered me by Captain Wynkoop; he is to remain at this place. The want of subordination and discipline in an army cannot be too much lamented; it is the source whence all disorder and misfortune arise.

The sail-cloth is just arrived from New-England, and will be forwarded immediately.

The Paymaster has sent Mr. Winslow one hundred thousand dollars. He could not spare more. I shall immediately write for a further supply.

Enclose you an extract of a letter from General Washington, of the 21st instant, received yesterday.

I momentarily expect to learn from Congress what money is to be allowed in lieu of a ration of provisions. As it was the Commissaries' business, I have constantly refused to determine what should be allowed for a ration, certain that I should incur the blame of the officers or Congress, and therefore I have informed the latter that I never will do it, unless they or General Washington order me.

Elmore's and Nicolson's corps march to-day to Tryon County. As a few of each of these corps are to the northward, I wish you to send them down, unless they are appropriated to any particular service from which you cannot spare them.

As we do not learn that the enemy are building any large vessels at St. John's, I begin to apprehend that there is too much truth in the Indian account that a large army will attempt to penetrate by the way of Fort Stanwix. The building of batteaus at St. John's may be only done with a design to amuse us, as they can easily be conveyed into the St. Lawrence. Scouts are out constantly towards Oswego and Oswegatchie. I wish two or three trusty hands could be sent across to the north end of Lake St. François, or to any place above Montreal, to see if any batteaus and troops are passing up the St. Lawrence, that we may have the most early intelligence.

If you are not properly supplied with vegetables from Saratoga, would it not be best to send a soldier whom you can depend on, every week, on purpose? I am informed you have no mutton at Tyonderoga: a good number of sheep are at Fort George, from whence you could be from time to time supplied.

I find the jealousies with respect to me have not subsided in the country. I am informed that some Committees to the eastward, in this and the adjacent States, are trying me. I wish Congress may at last comply with my entreaties, and order an inquiry on the many charges made against me, that I may not any longer be insulted. I assure you that I am so sincerely tired of abuse, that I will let my enemies arrive at the completion of their wishes, by retiring as soon as I shall have been tried, and attempt to serve my

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 25, 1776.

SIR: Captain Titcomb's company of carpenters are all sick, except four, and applied for discharges. The tools they brought with them are private property, and they mean to carry them off. And I should be glad to know your Honour's mind, whether I shall stop the tools or not, as we shall of necessity want them for the mechanicks that are draughted out of the companies.

Your Honour thought I should do well to discharge the carpenters as they should apply; but they make such frequent applications that I don't choose to discharge so many of them without further instructions, for it will entirely ruin our business as to the shipping. We supply the carpenters with all the help we can possibly get them out of the regiments.

I am, dear General, in the utmost haste, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, JUN.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. I have now got so well of my lameness that I am able to go among the workmen.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 25, 1776, 7 o'clock, A. M.

HONOURED SIR: Yesterday evening the signal was given for sailing by the General. The vessels moved a little ways down, but the wind was so trifling that they came to, after going about a mile. This morning they seem under way, but not much wind.

Besides our complement of marines which was ordered, yesterday General Arnold sent me an order for sixty men, besides officers, to go in batteaus along with the fleet, and in a few days, he informed me, he would probably send for more of my regiment.

I would have understood by your last letter to me, I should remain at this post with the regiment; but if this plan of General Arnold's is carried into execution, I shall have soon but a small number of them left here; perhaps a few may be thought sufficient for this place.

The greater part of the men of this regiment would incline to engage in the service again after the present year, but if General Arnold is to make detachments upon fatiguing and dangerous parties from this regiment alone, I fear few would remain after the end of the campaign to show their attachment to the cause. The Lake is now sickly. Men in open batteaus will be much exposed to agues, &c. If an expedition were necessary down the Lake, my whole regiment would cheerfully engage in it; but to be on the Lake for any time, as they are no watermen, is disagreeable to them.

I will send out (if I am permitted) continual parties down towards the fleet, as well as upon land, and will be able to give the earliest intelligence of the approach of an enemy, and will maintain the works I am completing till a reinforcement can arrive, or till prudence may make it necessary to retreat before a very superior enemy, if I am not weakened by an over proportion of detachments.

Our men are on fatigue daily, besides mounting strong guards, so that their duty is perhaps equal to any other regiment in the Army for the present, and are ever ready for any commands. I would beg leave to mention to you, as this duty is equal to that of any other regiment, that if men are to go down the Lake, the parties which should join General Arnold in his cruising should be composed from the Army, in the usual course of detail, when my contingency of men will be prepared.

Should you think it necessary upon any occasion that I should go down the Lake with the regiment, on an expedition, I will go with cheerfulness, because it would be my duty, and would at the same time give me and my men an opportunity, perhaps, of revenging ourselves upon the enemy for part of the injuries this regiment has suffered.

I would not be understood to reason upon the propriety of any order which should issue from you; nay, the execution would be the first reasoning. It is for you to command; it is for your officers to obey. As I understood from your last orders that I was to stay here with the regiment, and as we were likely to suffer more than any other regiment, I have used the freedom to address you on the subject.

I have nearly completed a good intrenchment round my camp, and am forming an interior work which will further add to our security. I have been searching rubbish and water for some pieces of artillery. We have got two good small guns, and expect to discover some more. I have wrote to Colonel Balding and Major Hay for some stuff for carriages; I hope it will be sent. I will endeavour to have the artillery properly mounted. The guns may be useful to the Army in future. I have had a canoe down below the Split Rock these two days. All is well there.

I am, honoured sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,
THOS. HARTLEY.
To Major-General Gates.

P. S. I have sent a party for batteaus. The fleet and others have carried away almost all our boats. I have sent up three bad ones to be repaired.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Boston, August 25, 1776.

SIR: One of the enemy's ships-of-war, said to be the Milford, of twenty-eight guns, has, at different times within a month past, been cruising in our bay, and has taken several prizes. She now again makes her appearance, and has chased several vessels into port. It is a misfortune that the Continental ships-of-war lately built in this State could not be sent out for want of guns; but as it is said those built at Providence are provided with guns, it is probable that one or all of them can with some exertion be got ready in two or three days for our bay, and, in case of meeting with the Milford, give a good account of her. It is supposed that some of Admiral Hopkins's ships are also at Providence, and that they can join the others in this service. As we know your Honour's zeal and the zeal of your State to render every possible service to the general cause, which cannot be better promoted than by taking the enemy's ships-of-war, we doubt not that it will be exerted upon this occasion in a way effectual to answer the end proposed. We shall endeavour to procure the loan of guns, and get fitted one of the Continental ships at Newburyport, pierced for twenty-four guns; and shall order one of our armed brigs belonging to this State, now in this port, and several others of them, if within the reach of orders, to join the said ships as soon as they appear here. In order thereto, you will please to inform us of the signals you shall agree upon, by which those ships may be distinguished. This is wrote by the instance of several gentlemen of the Council, all of whom (could they have been convened) would have concurred with it.

With every sentiment of respect, I am, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
JAMES BOWDOIN.
Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of Rhode-Island.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN NICHOLSON.

[No. 162.]

Annapolis, August 26, 1776.

SIR: It will be uncertain whether we can meet with a vessel here to go to James River for the coal; we shall be glad, therefore, if you will procure for us three that will bring from fifteen hundred to two thousand each, and despatch them down to us with the greatest expedition. The Resolution must go with them for their protection. She must call here in her way, as we shall send a person in her, with cash, to contract for the coal. We are, &c.

Annapolis, August 26, 1776.

SIR: The Council of Safety request you will immediately send down what tents you have made; they are much wanting, as all our troops are under marching orders.

We are, &c.

The Committee resumed the consideration of the complaint exhibited against Jesse Hollingsworth for selling Tea above the limited price, who, being called in, confessed the fact; but alleged, in excuse, that he had opened the chests at the earnest request and solicitation of several persons, who voluntarily offered him the price he sold it for, which was offered to him for the whole chest at Philadelphia, where he had determined to send it; that he had not sold one-half of the chest at 10s. He then produced letters which proved that price to have been offered to him for the whole, and that it was selling there at 16s. by the chest. He acknowledged he had done wrong, but was sorry for it. He declared that he had never done any other act to contravene the Resolutions of Congress or Convention; but, on the contrary, had on every occasion exerted his utmost for the service of his country; therefore he hoped that his countrymen, with whom he wished to live in union and harmony, would forgive this first offence, and he should be very careful to avoid any other; and that he would very willingly return to every person who had bought Tea of him the overplus price, provided he or she made an affidavit of the quantity bought within six weeks from this date, or would pay it to any charitable use that the publick may direct.

Attest:

GEO. LUX, Secretary.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WARD.

Philadelphia, August 26, 1776.

SIR: The service in the Eastern Department requiring an officer of rank and experience, and Colonel Whitcomb having declined accepting his commission, the Congress have been induced, both from a regard to your merit while in the Army, and your zeal and attention since you left it, to request you will, if consistent with your health, take the command of the forces in that quarter. As soon as Congress can fix on some officer to relieve you, they will do it, and only desire you in the mean time to continue in command until such appointment. Your readiness to comply with the wishes of your country, gives me the strongest reason to believe you will not resist their application at this juncture.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Ward, Boston.

PETITION FROM GEORGE MEASAM.

[Read August 26, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Members of Congress of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

The Memorial of GEORGE MEASAM, late of MONTREAL, humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist was well known by the late Brigadier-General Montgomery to be a true friend to the American cause, by sundry circumstances, both before and after the capitulation of Montreal. And in consequence thereof, the General thought fit to recommend him as a proper person to intrust the care and management of the Post-Office for that Province, and was honoured with a commission from the Postmaster-General for that purpose, and did direct the same and support it with his own proper moneys until the American Army was obliged to retreat from thence.

That the General was further pleased to desire your memorialist (with Major Lockwood) to superintend the landing of the stores taken by Colonel Easton, commencing the 20th day of November, 1775. And on the 10th day of December following, your memorialist was put in publick orders to superintend the publick stores at Montreal, and did superintend the same, and also the Commissary of Provision's Department, and flatters himself that he has been the cause of saving a large sum of money to the United States, by being a check over the Commissary, and obliging him to keep his accounts in such manner as to show an exact weight of all provisions received and issued, and not accounting for them by rations only, as is generally the case; for in the confused manner the orders were given for provisions, the Commissary's accounts plainly prove they far exceed the quantity of provisions actually issued by a very large amount during the time there was no Commissary-General to superintend that department in Canada. Your memorialist now presumes that department is quite regular, as it is under the care of the Commissary-General.

That your memorialist continued to direct and superintend the other publick stores at Montreal, till the retreat of the Army from thence, and the stores were, by order of the Commanding Officer, issued to the Army for publick service.

That hitherto your memorialist has had no rank, rate, or salary affixed to his said office, and has a very small account still unsettled. Prays to know where he is to be referred to for a settlement.

That at present there is no superintendent Storekeeper of all the other garrison stores at Ticonderoga; and that your memorialist humbly conceives it is highly necessary such an officer should be appointed for that garrison and the Northern Army.

Therefore, as your memorialist was concerned pretty largely in the Indian trade at four different posts above Montreal, and was possessed of other property—land, trade, and dealings in the said Province—and has been obliged to abandon all upon the retreat of the Army from thence, finds himself, under these circumstances, necessitated to pray your Honours will be pleased to confirm him in his appointment as Superintendent and Storekeeper for the Northern Army, or elsewhere, with such rank, rate, or salary, as your Honours shall judge proper.

And your memorialist shall pray, &c.

JAMES WORK TO WILLIAM ATLEE.

Donegal, Pennsylvania, August 26, 1776.

SIR: I understand this morning that this man I here send you, William Davis, is one of the regular prisoners belonging to the companies confined now in Lancaster. I just understand he has been working about this good while, and han't been much in town. I understand he got in drink yesterday, and behaved ill; and as the most of our men are gone to the Army, the poor women and children are afraid to see such a man amongst them, and going at large these distressing times. So that whoever in town has the care and oversight of said prisoners, will take notice that this man by no means be permitted to come into this neighbourhood again, &c.

From your humble servant,
To William Atlee, Esq., Chairman, or to whom it may concern.

JAS. WORK.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 28, 1776.]

New-York, August 26, 1776.

SIR: I have been duly honoured with your favours of the 20th and 24th, and am happy to find my answer to Lord Drummond has met the approbation of Congress. Whatever his views were, most certainly his conduct respecting his parole is highly reprehensible.

Since my letter of the 24th, almost the whole of the enemy's fleet have fallen down to the Narrows; and from this circumstance, and the striking of their tents at their several encampments on Staten-Island from time to time previous to the departure of the ships from thence, we are led to think they mean to land the main body of their Army on Long-Island, and to make their grand push there. I have ordered over considerable reinforcements to our troops there, and shall continue to send more as circumstances may require. There has been a little skirmishing and irregular firing kept up between their and our advanced guards, in which Colonel Martin, of the Jersey levies, has received a wound in his breast, which it is apprehended will prove mortal. A private has had his leg broken by a cannon ball, and another has received a shot in the groin from their musketry. This is all the damage they have yet done us; what they have sustained is not known.

The shifting and changing the regiments have undergone of late, has prevented their making proper returns, and of course put it out of my power to transmit a general one of the Army. However, I believe our strength is much the same that it was when the last was made, with the addition of nine Militia regiments more from the State of Connecticut, averaging about three hundred and fifty men each. These are nine of the fourteen regiments mentioned in my letter of 19th. Our people still continue to be very sickly.

The papers designed for the foreign troops have been put into several channels, in order that they might be conveyed to 'em; and from the information I had yesterday, I have reason to believe many have fallen into their hands.

I have enclosed a copy of Lord Drummond's second letter in answer to mine, which I received since I transmitted his first, and which I have thought necessary to lay before Congress, that they may possess the whole of the correspondence between us, and see how far he has exculpated himself from the charge alleged against him. The log-book he mentions to have sent Colonel Moylan, proves nothing in his favour: that shows he had been at Bermuda, and from thence to some other Island, and on his passage from which to this place, the vessel he was in was boarded by a pilot, who brought her into the Hook, where he found the British fleet, which his Lordship avers he did not expect were there, having understood their destination was to the southward.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Sloop Polly, August 19, 1776.

SIR: While attending in the boat on the 17th instant, I was favoured with yours of that date, and in answer to those points it seemed to allude to, I could then only return a verbal message by Mr. Tilghman, which I flatter myself would remove the suspicions you entertained. As my first motive for asking Lord Howe's permission to land at New-York was to give me an opportunity of explaining myself to your Excellency on the subject of my parole in relation to my return to this place, so the hope I entertained of effecting it in this way made me perhaps too negligent in not saying anything on that subject in my letter to you. Aware, however, of the possibility of not being able to obtain an interview with your Excellency, I had taken the precaution to prepare a letter to Colonel Moylan on that subject, which I read to Mr. Tilghman on his delivering me that from your Excellency, but which I forbore delivering, as not thinking it sufficiently explicit. But should suspicions on any other point in the parole have arisen, I have only to beg that your Excellency will have the goodness to permit me to a personal interview, which will either afford me an opportunity of exculpating myself, or will place me in a situation to suffer that treatment which must follow an infraction of parole.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,
 DRUMMOND.

P. S. I enclose my letter to Colonel Moylan, which I have alluded to, together with the log-book.

COURT-MARTIAL ON COLONEL ZEDTWITZ.

Proceedings of a General Court-Martial of the Line, held at Head-Quarters, in the city of NEW-YORK, by order of His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the UNITED STATES of AMERICA, for the trial of HERMAN ZEDTWITZ, Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army of said States, AUGUST 25, 1776.

Brigadier-General JAMES WADSWORTH, President.

Colonel John Bailey,	Lieutenant-Colonel Johonnot ,
Colonel Smallwood,	Lieutenant-Colonel Ware ,
Colonel Haslett,	Lieutenant-Colonel Bedford ,
Colonel Carey,	Lieutenant-Colonel Beldin ,
Colonel Cook,	Major Hayden ,
Lieut. Col. Sheppard,	Major Sherman .

Wm. Tudor, Judge-Advocate.

The Court being duly sworn, proceeded to the trial of Lieutenant-Colonel Zedtwitz, brought prisoner before the Court, and accused of "holding a treacherous correspondence with, and giving intelligence to, the enemies of the United States."

The prisoner being called upon to plead to said charge, moves the Court that he may be allowed time till to-morrow to plead and prepare for his defence. The Court grant the request of the prisoner, and the Court adjourned to Monday morning, 26th of August, at ten o'clock.

August 26th.—The Court met according to adjournment, and proceeded to the trial of Lieutenant-Colonel Zedtwitz, adjourned from yesterday.

The prisoner being arraigned on the aforementioned complaint, pleads not guilty.

The Judge-Advocate laid before the Court the letter hereto annexed; which being shown to the prisoner, he concedes to be his handwriting; which letter is read to the Court, as follows:—(See the paper marked A.)

Augustus Stein was sworn, and deposes as follows:—(See the Deposition marked B.)

The evidence being gone through in support of the complaint, the prisoner is called upon to make his defence, and produces the paper marked C, which is read to the Court.

The prisoner produced Brigadier Lord Stirling as a witness, who, being sworn, deposes:

LORD STIRLING. In the spring of the year, when the talk was of the Hessians coming out, Lieutenant-Colonel Zedtwitz told me that if he could be permitted to write or communicate with them by the authority of the General or the Congress, he could bring over a number of them. At my request he wrote a letter in Hess, which, he said, was on the subject, but I had no translation of it, and no use was ever made of it. About a fortnight ago he said to me, well, they are now come, my Lord, and I will get my two thousand pounds which the English Government cheated him out of; and went on to tell me how, but I paid but little attention to the story. He never shew me any letter, nor pointed out any method he intended to take to obtain the two thousand pounds, nor have I ever exchanged a word with him since.

The Court, being cleared, are of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of concerting a plan, and attempting to treacherously correspond with, and give intelligence, to the enemy; and the Court sentence and adjudge that the prisoner be cashiered and rendered incapable, and he is hereby cashiered and rendered incapable of ever holding a commission in the service of the United American States.

JAMES WADSWORTH, Brig. Gen., President.

To His Excellency Governor
Tryon & Co

conjectured he had some writing to do for me with respect to the regiment.

Thursday, 22d.—Said Zedtwitz called again, asking sundry questions, such as, whether I would not be glad to return to my native country, and what a person should commence to enrich himself. I told him I could not tell; that I was poor, but had always found a good living in the country, or words to that purpose; on which he went out of the house in my company. Near the same he told me he should have liked to have communicated something to me, had Captain Bauman not been in the way—asking, on my crossing the street to part with him, whether I would be silent; and answering him with yes, he said, for the rest let me alone, I shall be the making of your fortune. I answered, I would wait on him at his house; but received for answer, that would not do; and we parted.

Friday, 23d.—He sent a man for me to wait on him in the camp; when, after entering the tent, he told me that he must divulge what he had to say shortly; which was, that he believed we were all lost. I answered that this was my opinion also. That he wanted me to go to Long-Island with a letter to Governour Tryon; that he had intelligence from him by the means of a woman; that he would strongly recommend me to the Governour, and that I should receive part of the reward at my arrival, and whether I was ready to set off the next day. I answered yes; and Saturday, the 24th, he accordingly called on me, but having no opportunity, as I supposed, to deliver his letter, Captain Bauman being present, he looked at me, and I give him the wink, that I would see him in the camp, which I did, as near as I can guess, about one o'clock, when he delivered me the letter directed to Governour Tryon, now before the Court, and desired me to deliver it to Governour Tryon, which I promised to do.

N. B. I suspected him already on Thursday, the 22d, which caused me to give him the foregoing answers, in order to discover his plan.

AUGUSTUS STEIN.

The Deponent adds: I took the letter. I went immediately to Captain Bowman's house, and broke the letter open and read it. Soon after, Captain Bowman came in, and I told him I had something to communicate to the General. We sent to Captain Hamilton, and he went to the General's, to whom the letter was delivered.

Question. Is the letter which has now been read the letter delivered you by the prisoner?

Answer. It is the same.

[C.]

Self-defence of Lieutenant-Colonel ZEDTWITZ.

In the last war I was detached from the King of Prussia's grand Army as Captain of a squadron of Light-Horse to join the English Cavalry. The Marquis of Granby was my commander. In a short time he was so pleased with my behaviour, that I dined every day at table with him. In five months I received orders to join my regiment. When I parted with my Lord Granby, he said if I lived longer he would promote me in the English Army. I thanked him, and said I was unfit for the English service on account of the tongue. I heard nothing more of him till when the disputes between England and Spain about the Falkland Islands began. He wrote me a letter to Germany, contracting to enlist one thousand Riflemen, fully equipped and fit for service, for which he would pay me £24 sterling per man. He gave immediate orders to enlist twenty of them, and transport them myself to England, and if they answered the end, I should be full Colonel of the regiment, and my advance money should be paid immediately, and the rest of the whole payment should be paid at the same time in letters of credit in Hanover. I marched off with my recruits to London. They were tried and approved of. I delivered the Marquis my accounts, but, to my misfortune, after nine or ten days he died. I applied to his father the Duke of Rutland. He gave me an indifferent answer, and said he had no business with his son's military affairs. I went to General Conway, who served with me in Germany as Colonel of a regiment of Dragoons. He went with me to Lord North for my money, but my Lord told us he knew well that I advanced this money, and as soon as the papers were found I should be paid; if not found, I must wait till next meeting of Parliament. I sent my men, upon my own expense, home; because the English had settled the difference with Spain. I then came with my wife and family to America. Lord North gave me (perhaps for my money) two good letters of recommendation, one to Quebeck to General Carleton, the other to Governour Tryon. This is the cruel fate to be ruined by an English Government for having done it all the service in my power.

After two years residing here, the dispute between England and America began. I was one of the first that entered the service as a Major, and thought to study how to get my money which was robbed from me, and pay my debts which I was obliged to contract in this service. About three weeks ago I went to Lord Stirling, and told him of my loss in England, and told him further that I had formed a plan to get it again at all events. His Lordship answered, that it would be a difficult matter. After this, I wrote the letter now in the possession of the Court, and stood it to write to Governour Tryon such stories as he might believe, without any intention on my part of performing.

1st. My plan and meaning when I wrote about "spoiling the waters," was a mere fallacy to deceive them, as I knew it impossible, as the waters of the city are daily guarded.

2d. What I wrote about Forbes, my intent was to make the Governour believe that he might expect great service from me.

3d. For telling the Governour about sending £2,000 sterling, my meaning was to take that money for myself as my property, and showing the answer to the letter to your Excellency, and sending a receipt back again.

4th. I said in my letter that I wrote a plan to draw the Hessians over to us. I never would have done it. That they (the enemy) must have been long since informed of it, and particularly as the orders have been given in publick to me, which was in a very short time all over the city.

5th. For writing the Governour that I expected to be commander of the forts up the North River was done on purpose, because, had the Governour dined with me, instead of delivering him the forts, should have informed your Excellency, and confined the Governour.

H. ZEDTWITZ, Lieutenant-Colonel.

MAJOR HENLEY TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, August 26, 1776.

DEAR SIR: It would afford me the highest pleasure could I, consistent with my own reason for my country's service, conform to your letter Major Keith has just delivered me. But (as Colonel Knox is pleased to do me the honour to say that he cannot nor will not be answerable for the conduct of his regiment in case I leave him before the action—that I should be ungenerous to him and unjust to myself,) I am sorry cases are so circumstanced as occasions me to beg you'll be pleased to appoint some person to take my place; at the same time do assure you I shall ever think myself under the greatest obligations to you; and am, with all respect, your most obliged, humble servant,

THOMAS HENLY.

To Major-General Heath, King's Bridge.

P. S. I cannot seal this without praying you'll put the most favourable constructions on my conduct. My situation is exceedingly delicate.

Yours, as above,

THOMAS HENLY.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 26, 1776.

Skirmishing continues, but little execution done on either side. A Lieutenant and four of our men were taken prisoners, being deceived by the enemy's rifle-shirts, and mistaking them for our men.

On Saturday a letter was discovered which was written by Lieutenant-Colonel Zedtwitz to Tryon. He says, that having consulted him, he had accepted a commission through necessity, and now commands part of the Rebel mob; that the discovery of Forbes and the Mayor had like to have ruined his scheme; that he had been at General Washington's, who wanted him to transcribe an advertisement, to be distributed among the Hessians, the purport of which was, that he would give each deserter among them, if they would join our Army, two hundred acres of land, a horse and a cow, and the land only if they did not join our Army; that a person at Head-Quarters could be prevailed on to give a weekly return of the number and state of our Army for £4,000 in hard money, and he was not to be discovered even if Zedtwitz lost his life in the scheme; that he said he did not think £4,000 would be given, but he would promise him £2,000; that he (Zedtwitz) was now Lieutenant-Colonel, but daily expected a full commission, when he was to go and have the command of the forts up the North River, &c. He was tried this morning, and confessed the writing; said he did it to deceive Tryon, and get some money which was due to him from the Crown for services performed in Germany. Sentence is not pronounced.

Our people at Elizabeth-Town and the enemy on Staten-Island cannonaded each other yesterday afternoon, without doing any damage except disturbing the congregation.

New-York, Monday, August 26, 1776.

Tuesday last two of our privateers, commanded by the Captains Rogers and Pond, fell in with three vessels from Halifax, and took them; the first and second loaded with hay and wood, a third loaded with Sutler's stores for the Army at Staten-Island. They also took a fourth prize, loaded with oil, bound for Halifax; that are all carried safe into port.

Wednesday evening last we had here as violent a thunder gust as has been remembered by the oldest man now living amongst us. The lightning struck a markie in General McDougall's camp, near the Bull's Head in the Bowery, and instantly killed Captain Van Wyck and his two Lieutenants, Versereau and Depyster. A soldier named Ephraim Bartlet was also killed in the house of Mr. Joseph Hallet, in Hanover Square, and several others much hurt. We also hear four men were killed on Long-Island, and some houses and barns burnt near Tappan.

Tuesday last a number of ships, with troops on board, sailed from Staten-Island out of the Narrows; next day they were followed by many more, and about ten o'clock Thursday morning about ten thousand men landed between New-Utrecht and Gravesend, on Long-Island. Friday a party of them came and took possession of Flatbush, which immediately brought on a very heavy fire from our troops, who are advantageously posted in the woods and on every eminence round that place.

An advanced party of the Regulars are encamped a little to the northwest of Flatbush Church, and have a battery somewhat to the westward of Mr. Jeremiah Vanderbilt's, from whence they continue to fire briskly on our people, who often approach and discharge their rifles within two hundred yards of their works. We have had only four men wounded since the enemy landed; but we are certain many of them fell; one, a Hessian, was killed last Friday—several dollars were found in his pocket, and he had an excellent rifle; and many of the Regulars are in rifle dresses.

PETITION OF GEORGE HARRIS.

To the Honourable Convention of the State of NEW-YORK, now sitting at HAERLEM, in the County of NEW-YORK:

The Petition of GEORGE HARRIS most humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner has lived in Rye, in the County of Westchester, these fourteen years last past, in the capacity of a schoolmaster, during which term in that toilsome occupation he acquired a small estate, between five and six hundred pounds in value, and that with the approbation of his employers, till the unhappy dispute commenced between the Colonies and Great Britain. The cause of the former being warmly espoused by him, and arguments in support of the liberties of America strenuously maintained against his neighbours, in hopes that their minds would be turned so as to set a true estimate on the great and valuable blessings of freedom they enjoyed in this once most happy and generous land, that was the receptacle of the industrious poor emigrating from subjugated countries where slavery and poverty was entailed on them and their posterity—the people of Rye, being wholly devoted to the interest of the Crown, shut their eyes and ears against reason and knowledge, and every day grew more and more disgusted with your petitioner on account of his political principles, till at last a scheme was set afoot to effect his ruin, which was thus: On the 27th day of July last past your petitioner was, in the night, robbed of a silver watch and four dollars in cash by a person whom he thinks and takes to be Izariah Wetmore, of Rye, whose father was competitor with your petitioner for the school, and did what he could to injure him in his business. The next day a certain Mrs. Budd, who keeps a disorderly and base tavern in Rye, whose husband is a man of ill fame and now in arms against his country with the British forces near New-York, entered a complaint against your petitioner, saying that she found his watch near her bed, or in her house, and that he opened her window to disturb her; upon which your petitioner was committed to jail without being examined by any magistrate; upon which the people of Rye, or some of them who favoured the schoolmaster, (Wetmore,) broke open the school-house that I occupied so many years, in which at that time was upwards of one hundred and forty-four pounds in cash, of which they have robbed your petitioner to the amount of more than twenty-six pounds, which he can get no account of. After a confinement of almost three weeks, your petitioner was enlarged, upon his verbal promise of giving security to appear when called upon. Two days after your petitioner was let out of jail, he deposited into the hands of John Thomas, Esq., bonds, exceeding the sum of three hundred pounds, to appear as above. Now he is out of business, and the fruits of his long and steady labour wasting amazingly, as it hath been this month past, his school taken away, and the school-house denied him by James Wetmore, the brother of that arch-Tory or enemy to his country, Timothy Wetmore, who has and does yet keep up the spirit of toryism in Rye, he being their grand Moloch whom they adore and worship, and, indeed, who justly has deserved to have been removed before now to some distant place, where his influence would not reach or be able to debase the people with his pernicious doctrines which he is so fond of inculcating daily, though he now might spare himself the trouble of further preaching, as he has so well grounded the whole neighbourhood in principles most inimical to American freedom and liberty. Your petitioner having given a true and faithful narrative of his grievous and unfortunate case, and he being very near-sighted, and now in years advanced, having for a series of years served to the utmost of his power that base people of Rye, who after his services seek his ruin unmerited, prays you, in your wisdom, tenderness, and compassion, to take his deplorable case into your consideration, and grant him relief, as his destruction is sought by persons that are as great enemies to the State of New-York as the forces under the command of Lord Howe, and as he alone is the person who is a real friend to America in the foolish and simple town of Rye. The relief your petitioner prays is, that your Honours will grant him a line to John Thomas, Esq., ordering that his bonds and watch may be delivered to him, which would enable him to prosecute those that have robbed him and recover his money. Should your Honours think proper at any time to call upon your petitioner to answer the charge of that vile woman Mrs. Budd, (whose house is only frequented by persons that discourse about the hanging the leading gentlemen that stand gloriously for their country, and the straggling or strolling persons that fall in her way, who can be entertained till debauched to the last degree,) he will directly obey and attend, as well as he did perform his promise to Mr. Thomas two days after being out of prison, when he might go away with his substance where he pleased; but his character being so well established for probity, and his innocence such that he could not harbour the most distant thought of running away, which, were he to do, his enemies would be the most rejoiced. The said Timothy Wetmore purposes to prosecute your petitioner as soon as the day is carried by Great Britain, which he thinks is now at the eve, for being, as he supposes, the author of a letter written against him and his principles, and publicly read at the White Plains last spring in the midst of a concourse of people. These are the causes of malice and rancour against your petitioner, who hopes to be relieved by your honourable House; and, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

GEORGE HARRIS.

Haerlem, August 26, 1776.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, August 26, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am honoured with your Excellency's favour of the 21st instant, enclosing Colonel Stark's letter to General Gates.

On the 16th instant I wrote to Congress, desiring that the money to be allowed for rations in this department might be determined; that I had refused to do it until ordered by your Excellency or by Congress, and gave my reasons for it. I have not yet been honoured with their answer. I was perfectly right in my conjecture that if I did it I should either incur the censure of Congress or the blame of the Army. The latter would have happened, for I should not have estimated a ration so high as the Field-Officers and the Commissary have done, conceiving that it may be furnished at a rate considerably less.

The sail-cloth and part of the cordage from Connecticut passed this yesterday, on its way to Tyonderoga. Colonel Nicolson's and Colonel Elmore's regiments (copies of whose returns I enclose) are to march to-day into Tryon County.

As by our latest accounts the enemy are not constructing any vessels of force at St. John's, I begin to apprehend that they build batteaus merely to amuse us, as they can easily convey them into the St. Lawrence to transport troops, &c., to the westward, and that they will attempt, as the Indians suggest, to penetrate by the way of Oswego. I have ordered scouts to be kept out continually towards that place, and also towards Oswegatchie, and have desired General Gates to send others to that part of the St. Lawrence above Montreal, that we may have the earliest intelligence if any troops should be filing off to the westward.

We are greatly distressed for musket ball and cartridge paper, that lately come up being all for cannon cartridges. Please to order up what can be spared from your quarter, as also forty horn-lanterns, and what bullet-moulds can be procured.

Enclose your Excellency copy of a return of our Naval force, which, since the date of that return, is, I believe, augmented with three stout galleys, of seventy-three feet keel, and one or more gondolas.

General Gates has promised me a return of the Army, and in the mean time has sent me the Commissary's return of issues, copy of which I enclose. General Gates advises me, that since the 13th about three hundred Massachusetts Militia have joined, and that there are between twelve and fifteen hundred Connecticut Militia at Skenesborough, and the Sixth Battalion of Pennsylvanians at Crown-Point; and that those are not included in the return.

I am, dear sir, with every respectful sentiment, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, August 26, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Enclosed you will find some letters that were brought to me yesterday by three inhabitants from Mr. Gilliland's, thirty-four miles north from Crown-Point, upon the west side of the Lake. An inhabitant, with his family, who were taken from their plantation by the Indians about a month ago, and carried to St. John's, was released from thence by order of General Carleton, and had a canoe given him to return home, and the within letters put into his hands; he delivered them to the men who brought them to me, as they were going into New-England to fetch their families, and he wanted to go home with his, to look after his cattle and plantation. He told Gilliland that he had it in command from General Burgoyne to assure the inhabitants upon both sides of the Lake that they should not for the future be molested; that they might all continue to live peaceably upon their farms, and recommended it to all those who had fled to return.

The enclosed letters are all (General Thompson's excepted) wrote in so extraordinary a style and manner, that I think the authors must be either suborned by the enemy, or the letters themselves a forgery; for I can no other way account for officers writing such letters. They ought to be sent without delay to Congress, which no doubt you will immediately do. When I inquired of the messengers what the inhabitant who brought the letters to Gilliland's said of the strength and proceedings of the enemy, they informed me he had told them that the enemy were straining every nerve to come and attack us; that they had large boats, or gondolas, which carried each a brass twenty-four-pounder, and that they made no doubt of being an overmatch for us upon the Lake. The messengers were to all appearances very undiscerning, ignorant men, and could give me no further intelligence worth communicating. They seemed happy at being assured the inhabitants were not to be molested, and anxious to set off to fetch their wives and family, and to replace them upon their farms. They say it will be more than a fortnight before they can get back here in their way home. By that time I may know the determination of Congress about them.

I am astonished at not receiving the musket-cartridge paper, which I wrote for so repeatedly and so long ago. I desire you will spare neither pains nor cost to send it here. Grindstones are also excessively in request; we have not one left fit to grind an axe. One hundred reams of musket cartridge paper is as little as should be sent immediately. By a letter this moment received from General Waterbury, I am informed that the ship-carpenters fall sick so fast at Skenesborough that the vessels are much retarded. I shall pick up all I can from the troops here, and send them without delay to Skenesborough. The day before yesterday I despatched twelve. General Arnold sailed with ten of the fleet yesterday morning from Crown-Point. A sloop and a gondola will follow from hence to-morrow. In my last I enclosed you a victualling return and the Commissary's return of provisions at this post; those from Lake George and Skenesborough should be every week sent you from those posts. I cannot think there will be any attack made upon the side of the Mohawk River, as your Indian intelligence declares. Depend upon it, the blow, when it falls, will fall here. Very few of the Militia have arrived here since my last. I understand two of the Continental regiments from Boston are between Number Four and Skenesborough. Two of the Connecticut regiments of Militia are got to that post, and the last two regiments of Massachusetts Militia are, I am told, upon their march up. A very correct general return is preparing, but cannot be finished to go by this conveyance. I am just now told that the two Continental regiments are stopped by your order on their march from Number Four hither. As I am assured by the authority of the Massachusetts Government that they were perfectly cleansed at Boston from all infection, after inoculation, I have ordered them to march here without delay; for notwithstanding the number victualled, we want men. More than one-half that eat do not act. The sick, the lame, and lazy, you well know, make an unreasonable proportion in our Army.

August 27th.—The excessive bad weather yesterday obliged me to delay this despatch until this morning, which has given time to send you the enclosed general return. As I have not frequently a convenient opportunity to forward letters to his Excellency General Washington and the most honourable the Congress, I take it for granted you immediately send all those with the returns I send you, or exact copies thereof, to the General, who, I am certain, will directly transmit them to Mr. Hancock.

The bearer and his companion are sent from Dartmouth College upon business that materially concerns that Seminary. You will give them your attention, and such answer to their requests as you shall think for the publick interest.

I am, dear General, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

Quebeck Harbour, August 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Through the great humanity of his Excellency General Carleton, all the prisoners in Canada are allowed to return to the Colonies on their parole, and will embark for New-York this day or to-morrow. If you can obtain leave of the commanding officer, I would be glad you would meet me at New-York, with my papers, that I may get all my accounts settled on my arrival there. You'll please to take the first opportunity of writing to Mr. Biddle, and inform him of our having obtained liberty to return home; and request him to acquaint our friends at Carlisle, by express, if the post does not immediately set out after the receipt of your letter. If you cannot be permitted to go down to New-York, please to send my horses by some careful person, and give him directions to take Dr. McKenzie's horse from Captain Van Buren's. The Doctor will pay the keeping of him to any person Van Buren sends his account to, at New-York.

The gentlemen with me are all well. My best compliments wait on my friends at your camp; and ani, dear Major, your affectionate, humble servant,

WM. THOMPSON.

Montreal August 14th, 1776.

DEAR SIR. I am permitted by his Excellency which I did not expect to obtain to inform you that I am well as are the other hostages that are with me.

I am much surprised to hear that the Congress instead of redeeming us according to the cartail have not only refused to do it but have demanded Captain Forster to be delivered up to answer his conduct in what they are pleased to term the massacre of the Ceadars. I would fain flatter myself that the Congress would never have thought of such unheard of proceedings, had they not had a false representation of the matter. Do not think I am under any constraint when I say and call that God who must judge of the truth to witness that not a man living could have used more humanity than Capt. Forster did after the surrender of the party I belonged to, and whoever says to the contrary, let his station in life be what it will he's an enemy to peace and a falacious disturber of mankind.

What reason they can give for not redeeming us I can not conceive if they are wrongly informed that the affair of the Ceadars was a massacre why dont they rather fulfill the cartail than let their hostages remain in the hands of a merciless enemy; or do they regard their troops only while the Heavens make them victorious. Were we in the hands of a rigorous power (as they would intemate) have they not every colour of justice, after so enormous a breach of faith loadened with chains, to cast us into some horred place and tell us to languish out our days under a sentance past by our own people. If they say there is some hidden reason in the system of politics, why we should not be redeemed, I answer that it is a hidden reason far beyond the reach of policy to find out. For could they suppose it policy to distress his Majesty's troops by retaining such a number of men, from them it would not only be the breach of their faith that would threaten them for consider the number of prisoners already in the hands of the British Army, and also consider the chance of war that may yet throw greater numbers into their hands; and will people rest content when they find their own rulers willing to let them remain prisoners in the hands of what themselves term (tho' unjustly) a merciless people? or will they not, fired with resentment for such inhuane treatment, take arms to suppress the power that regards them no longer than while their blood is spilling in their service. If this which appears too probable should happen, consider whether those persons will not be followed by a number of their friends which must naturally make a great devison in the Colonies then take a view of Great Britain and her allies pouring on you and let the most sanguine expecter of America then judge how long the Colonies then divided can stand the fury of the combat. I know your influence has been great and for that reason have wrote that you may if possible yet prevent America from being branded with the name of injustice.

If you suspect I write this for the sake of getting my own liberty your suspicion wrongs me 'tis not my own confinement but the breach of a treaty (which even Savages have ever held sacred) that causes me to write.

You'll be so kind as to convey the enclosed to my wife and if ever I had so much of your love as to demand any favor of you let this be the time that I may implore your assistance for my distressed wife & helpless orphan's, may God grant that I may once more see them, till when, I am your affectionate brother,

EBEN. SULLIVAN.

The Hon. General John Sullivan at Dover, Colony of New-Hampshire, near Portsmouth.

Montreal August 14th, 1776.

DEAR SIR, I am permitted by General Burgoine once more to writ, & I embrace it with a worde or two to a friend, not to me only, but to y^e whole world of mankind, and as such and as a brother let me writ, we y^t are hostages here for y^e fulfilling of a cartail made y^e 28th of May between Captain Foster & Genl Arnold, have heard y^t y^e Congress are determind in no wise to fulfill; y^e reasons they have for not doing it; is known perhaps to none but God and themselves, Perhaps they say Captain Foster has broak it on his side, as I have heard our people were fired upon by y^e Savages, & y^t those people were plundered y^t surrendered (by y^e Savages) contrary to y^e capitulation made by Capt. Foster & Major Butterfield; allowing it to be; was it in Capt. Foster's power with about 20 men of his own to stop or in y^e least to hinder y^e outrages of above three hundred Savages; No! neither do I conceive with what propriety that they have made a demand of Capt. Foster & his com^{ny}. They may as well demand y^e sun from y^e firmament; it is not my friend and brother because I am here a prisoner, & am kept from my family & friends y^t I write thus; no such thing, I am with a humain, kind benevolent people. But where oh, where is y^e justness of the case, as I said before, unless they have some reasons in the cystem of pollicy unknown to all worlds except God & themselves; none knows y^e fortune of war; We have now a large number of prisoners in their hands; methinks I foresee nothing but misery & destruction attending such a people who pay no more respect to sacred contracts; in y^e most heathenest parts of y^e globe have they not been most punctually fulfilled; & shall we who call ourselves Christians be less careful; forbid it Heaven; your influence over the people at Concord as well as elsewhere I know is great, I therefore as a prisoner earnestly desire you would use your utmost endeavours towards y^e exchange of prisoners; if the Congress exchanges prisoners it may go well; if not it may prove their fatal overthrow; whoever supposes Capt. Foster to be blameworthy & not to have done his utmost to rescue all y^t fell into the hands of the Savages; their suppositions are groundless, & he blameless. For I know not how soon I may be called out of time into eternity, he behaved as an officer, as a Christian. I must leave you dear sir, not doubting but you have been for a long time in y^e armes of his love before whom we must shortly appear, & to whom I earnestly beg your prayers for me & my dear family, y^t we may each one of us be found att his coming not haveing on our own but his righteousness. I am your friend & brother.

THEO. BLISS.

To the Revd. William Emerson, att Concord, near Boston.

P. S. Duty & love where due. All communication between armes this way is stopt, so to here from you at present, I can't expect. Excuse y^e freedom of this; a gentleman from Quebeck tells me our brother & family are all well & have had the small-pox.

T. BLISS.

To Col. Israel Morey, at Orford, New-Hampshire, in the County of Grafton.

DEAR SIR: I have leave by his Exelency to right to my friends, which I take as a grate favor, to inform you that I am at present well and have ben yused so ever since I have ben a prisnor. I am informd that the Congrass dus Refuse to Fulfil the Cartail Made Betwene Capt. Foster and Gen. Arnel, which I was left as one of hostedgges of that preformance, are sold to our Enemies and Lie intieley to thair marcy, to deel with me so and the orther 3 gentelmen as thay think propper, the Congrass make a handel, I hear, that Capt. Foster aloude the Indein to masacree after thay had taken us; But he Did Not, he saved numbers of lives to my sartain knowledge, and the Indein carred of 13 men to thare homes. Capt. Foster bought ten at 16 Dollers apece not long sence. I cant form a idee which shuld the reson the Congrass can give, why thay did not fulfil the Cartail, they cant but know that twas a seacred thing made by one of thare Genl. Officers. and think all Nation must condem it, for in old times, the hethen lookk on Cartail to be biden. The Colonys cant expect that the kings troops will lay aney constrant on the Indein aney longer, when thay wont fulful sacret contrats. But I resine not without resentment, to my hard fate as Joseph did when his brotheren sold him into Egypt. When I shall return god only knows: remember me to all frends fairwell.

REV. MR. OLCOTT TO GENERAL GATES.
Charlestown, No. 4, August 26, 1776.

SIR: I received the favour of yours of the 19th instant, and agreeable to your Honour's directions immediately notified the Chairman of our Committee of Safety, who immediately summonsed the Committee, and took under consideration the conduct of Doctor Stevens in inoculating the troops. As the Doctor's conduct, on examination, appeared to them much less aggravated than was represented, they thought it sufficient for the present absolutely to forbid the Doctor's inoculating any more, either the marching troops or others, till further orders, and to take all possible precautions that no infection be communicated from any here to the Army.

Death has saved Colonel Fuller the trouble of a Court-Martial, and another of his company is, I hear, at the point of death; so that they are like to pay dear for their imprudence and breach of orders.

Your Honour's zeal and activity for the health and safety of the Army is highly commendable, and very pleasing to us all. We all very sincerely and ardently wish you success, and, particularly, any commands which shall be conducive to the publick service shall be readily and cheerfully performed by your Honour's unknown friend and very humble servant,

BULKLEY OLCOTT.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates.

SAMUEL HUNT TO GENERAL GATES.
Charlestown, No. 4, August 26, 1776.

SIR: We have received the favour of your Honour's request of the 19th instant, directed to the Committee of Safety for the town of Charlestown, and communicated to us through the hands of the Reverend Mr. Olcott, desiring of us to examine into the conduct of Doctor Stevens, in inoculating the troops on their march through this place to Ticonderoga. As we may presume to say we have the publick service of the Army, and the deliverance, freedom, and safety of our country, as truly at heart as any can pretend to, so we cannot but join with your Honour in condemning a practice that must have the most pernicious effects in regard to the health and success of the Army; and had your Honour's information respecting Doctor Stevens's conduct, "that he has inoculated the Militia as fast as they arrived at Number Four," been founded on the truth of fact, we truly acknowledge it would justly have merited the high resentment your Honour has expressed.

Pursuant to your Honour's request, we have called Doctor Stevens before us, and had him under examination. We are sorry to observe that we are under the necessity and disadvantage of examining the Doctor without his being under the solemnity of an oath, by reason that no qualified Magistrate could be obtained to administer it; yet the Doctor has made such solemn declarations before us, which, together with collateral evidence from other quarters, is to us satisfactory as to the true state of the matter relative to his conduct in inoculating. Indeed, sir, we cannot pretend, after due examination, wholly to exculpate the Doctor; all that we think necessary to take upon us at present is, to give your Honour an exact account of what we find to be the true state of the Doctor's conduct, and our doings relative thereto, and then your Honour will be capable of judging how far the Doctor is culpable, and whether or not we have done the duty that might be expected of us in the case.

When Captain Wetherbee began to enlist his company, the small-pox was brief in the Army at Crown-Point. Some who had intended to enlist, and others who had enlisted, in the whole to the number of about twenty-five, applied to Doctor Stevens, and were by him inoculated. Three or four weeks after this, Colonel Wingate, with a number of other officers on their march to Ticonderoga, applied to Doctor Stevens to be inoculated, and were by him refused, and on this ground, that he had lately understood it was contrary to general orders that any of the marching troops should be inoculated. A short time after this, being applied to by Colonel Fuller and Doctor Merriam, partly through their importunity, and partly through their signifying that they had applied to a General Officer for liberty, who had not forbidden them, Doctor Stevens was prevailed upon to inoculate them and their servants and Lieutenant Mooney, to the number of five. And this is the whole number of the marching troops that Doctor Stevens has inoculated, though great numbers have applied to him and been refused. We trust, your Honour, from this representation, will view the matter in something of a different light from what it seems your informant has exhibited.

We only beg leave further to assure your Honour that we will take all possible care that no other of the troops shall be inoculated here, and that all, whether officers or others, now under inoculation here, shall be perfectly cleansed before they march to join the Army at Ticonderoga. We conclude by assuring your Honour that we shall be ever ready to serve you and the Army in this or any other business that may come before us.

SAMUEL HUNT, Chairman of the Committee of Safety for Charlestown.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates.

DOCTOR STEVENS TO GENERAL GATES.

Charlestown, No. 4, August 26, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I was on the 23d instant summoned before the Committee of this town, in consequence of a letter addressed by your Honour to the Rev. Mr. Olcott; which letter, together with the copy of one to Major Hawley, enclosed in it, were read to me. The proceedings of the Committee, and an account of my conduct, so far as it respects the crime whereof I have been accused, will be by them communicated. I should not, therefore, at this time trouble you in this manner, were it not the undoubted right, and I think I may add, the duty of every individual, when injured in his character or property, to speak in his own defence, that the offending party may be brought to justice. You are pleased to say, in your letter to Major Hawley, that "a villain of a Surgeon (or what is commonly called a Doctor) is inoculating the Militia as fast as they arrive at Number Four." As I know of no person who answers your description, I must think you have been grossly deceived and imposed on by some ill-minded person, from sinister views. You are pleased to add further, that "were he" (viz: the Surgeon) "within my reach, it would not be many minutes before he should feel the weight of my resentment." I can therefore make no doubt but some part, at least, of that resentment will be felt by the person who hath so greatly discomposed you by his false information. I think I have a right to expect (I had almost said, to demand) that the informer be pointed out to me, that I may know where to seek a reparation of the injury done me, which can't be considered as trifling, since it has, for a time (at least) brought on me the displeasure of a person of your rank. I can say, with truth, that the bad effects of the small-pox in the Army is an evil which I feel in common with my countrymen, and no one has better wishes for the prosperity of your Honour and the Army under your command than your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

PHINEAS STEVENS.

To General Gates.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Providence, August 26, 1776.

SIR: I am favoured with yours of yesterday, and most sincerely wish it was in my power to comply with your request. Of the two Continental ships built here, neither can be got ready in anything like the time you mention; one of them having such damage in her masts as hath disabled them, and the other not having a Captain appointed for her.

The Alfred is now in the river, but not a quarter part manned, nor hath she any orders for sailing; so that no assistance can be depended upon from this quarter.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

NICHAS. COOKE.

To the Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq.

Hartford, Monday, August 26, 1776.

Last Saturday, a number of gentlemen were brought to this town from New-York, where they were lately taken up on suspicion of entertaining sentiments unfriendly to the American States. We hear they are soon to set out for Norwich, where (for the present) they are desired to remain.

Last Monday, David Matthews, Esq., Mayor of the City of New-York, was brought to this town from Litchfield, and on Friday returned, having obtained liberty to remain there, under the care of Captain Moses Seymour.

Watertown, August 26, 1776.

The Selectmen of Boston, in the last Thursday's Paper, have advertised the publick "that only seventy-eight persons are now under the distemper of the small-pox in that town;" so that, in all probability, the town will be clear of that infection in the course of a fortnight, or three weeks at farthest.

The Hon. Samuel Adams, Esq., one of the Delegates for this State, and Colonel William Tudor, set off from Philadelphia for Boston the 12th instant.

Last week arrived at Newbury a ship of about three hundred and fifty tons burden, taken by Captain Newman. She was bound from Antigua for Liverpool. Her cargo consists of four hundred and fifty hogsheads of sugar, fifty hogsheads of rum, &c.

Last Wednesday arrived at Portsmouth a prize ship of about two hundred tons burden, mounting twenty guns, twelve of which were wood; she was bound from the Bay of Honduras for London, laden with mahogany and logwood, and taken by the Hancock and Franklin privateers.

By the Eastern post, we are informed that on Monday last arrived at Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, a vessel from Holland, with dry-goods, drugs, spices, &c.

The post from Number Four informs us of a gondola, with about twenty-five men, being taken by the enemy in Lake Champlain.

Yesterday morning arrived safe in Marblehead a prize ship from Jamaica, laden with sugar, cotton, &c. She was chased in by the Milford frigate and another cruiser, so near, that one of their forts hulled one of the enemy's vessels. We have not heard by whom she was taken.

AMHERST (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Safety, Amherst, Massachusetts-Bay, }
August 26, 1776. }

Whereas Isaac Chauncey, of said Amherst, convicted of being notoriously inimical to the American States, and confined within certain limits, hath, in defiance of authority, disregarded the injunctions laid on him, and clandestinely departed ('tis supposed) to some part of Connecticut, on no good design:

This is therefore to desire the good people of that State, or of other States where he may be found, to secure him in such manner that he may not have it in his power to injure America.

Also, whereas Lieutenant Robert Boltwood, of said Amherst, convicted and confined as aforesaid, having obtained liberty to journey to New-Haven on account of his health, hath absented himself much longer than was expected:

It is therefore desired that he may be carefully inspected where he is, or be sent to his own home.

Per order: NATHANIEL DICKINSON, JUN.

J. WENTWORTH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Portsmouth, August 26, 1776.

SIR: I have the pleasure to advise the arrival at this port of a prize ship, named the Nelly Frigate, Lyonel Bradstreet, master, from the Bay of Honduras, for London, laden with a cargo of one hundred and twenty thousand feet mahogany logs, and forty tons chipped and unchipped logwood, sent in by the Hancock, Captain Tucker, and the Franklin, Captain Skimmer, in the service of the United Colonies; the vessel and cargo the property of inhabitants of Great Britain. I have labelled her, and shall pursue to trial, &c.

The trial on the recapture of the brig Elizabeth, taken by Commodore Manley and others, in the service of the Continent, and bound for Halifax, ended the 22d instant. The Jury acquitted her and cargo, which appearing so directly contrary to the resolves of Congress and the law of this Colony, that I conceived it my duty to appeal, in justice to the Continent and captors; which I hope your Excellency will approbate. Part of the claimants (notwithstanding the verdict is in their favour) are desirous of compromising with the captors, and offer them their full quota of salvage, which is the one-third of half the value of the vessel and cargo, we having established that the enemy were in possession more than ninety-six hours; but the flagrant error in the Jury forbid my conceding to any compromise for the captors, as in that case I must have surrendered the just claim of the Continent. Added to which, there was taken with the said brigantine a Mr. Jackson, a Mr. Keighley, and a Mr. Newton, passengers, with their effects; and those effects are intended, as the resolves of Congress express, to supply the enemy, and become forfeited. Yet they were released with the rest of the cargo. Each claim is separate. Should your Excellency recommend my compromising with those claimants, who are esteemed friendly, I shall comport with it; but as your last favour desired my pursuing the line of duty pointed out by the laws of the Continent, I shall steadily attend to them, unless otherwise directed. From a principle of humanity I could wish the suffering claimants could be relieved; but I think it out of the line of my duty to help them. In a few days I shall forward the appeal to the Secretary of Congress, and fully advise him thereon; and should he think it necessary, shall attend the trial at Philadelphia, or elsewhere that may be appointed.

The Nelly Frigate is a ship of three hundred and five tons, mounts two three-pounders and four two-pounders.

This Eastern country are anxiously concerned for your Excellency's success in the important battle expected to have taken place ere this; which God grant has terminated in favour of this distressed country.

Remaining with due respect your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

JOSH. WENTWORTH.

P. S. I should not have troubled your Excellency with this business, could I divine where my friend Mr. Moylan's residence is; until which your Excellency will excuse me.

GENERAL BEALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In case the Independent companies are incorporated into a battalion, or any more Regular troops raised in this Province, I beg leave to recommend to your notice Major Daniel J. Adams, who, as an officer under me, has always discharged his duty with the greatest alacrity and spirit, both in and out of action.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

REZIN BEALL.

To the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland, at Annapolis.

CAPTAIN PERKINS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Kent County, Maryland, August 27, 1776.

SIR: Please to send me as much money as will defray the expenses of the company under my command to New-York. The bearer, Mr. Joseph Earle, will receive it for me. Your compliance will oblige yours, &c.,

ISAAC PERKINS.

MOSES CHAILLE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Worcester County, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed commission the honourable Convention were pleased to honour me with in January last. I have since that time altered my situation in life, which makes it inconvenient for me to keep the same. I hope the above reason will be satisfactory for my resigning.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obliged, humble servant,

MOSES CHAILLE.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

E. JOHNSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Observation, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have received your letter requesting our furnishing Captain Brooke's company with arms. We are to inform you that, agreeable to your order of 16th July last, we have purchased a few arms, which, together with those taken from the Non-Associators, were delivered to such of the Militia as went to St. Mary's, but shall now be called in, and we will procure all the arms we can, but are in doubt it will not be in our power to get a sufficient quantity for Captain Brooke's company. You'll please to send some cash to pay for them, and also the sum of £20 10s. current money, to pay the constables of the different Hundreds for their collecting the number of inhabitants in the County, agreeable to your order, which are to be returned on Monday next, and shall be sent to you per next post.

Signed per order:

E. JOHNSON, Clerk.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

DELAWARE CONVENTION.

In Convention at NEW-CASTLE, for the DELAWARE State, begun the 27th day of AUGUST, 1776, and continued by adjournment to the 21st day of SEPTEMBER following:

The Oath and Affirmation, with the Declaration taken, made and subscribed by the Members respectively:

I,, will, to the utmost of my power, support and maintain the independence of this State, as declared by the honourable the Continental Congress; and I will, to the utmost of my ability, endeavour to form such a system of Government for the people of this State as, in my opinion, may be best adapted to promote their happiness, and secure to them the enjoyment of their natural, civil, and religious rights and privileges.

I,, do profess faith in God the Father, and in Jesus Christ his only Son, and in the Holy Ghost, one God blessed forevermore; and I do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by Divine inspiration.

The Constitution or system of Government agreed to and resolved upon by the Representatives in full Convention of the DELAWARE State, formerly styled the Government of the Counties of NEW-CASTLE, KENT, and SUSSEX, upon DELAWARE, the said Representatives being chosen by the Freemen of the said State for that express purpose.

ARTICLE 1. The Government of the Counties of New-Castle, Kent, and Sussex, upon Delaware, shall hereafter, in all publick and other writings, be called The Delaware State.

2. The Legislature shall be formed of two distinct branches; they shall meet once or oftener in every year, and shall be called The General Assembly of Delaware.

3. One of the branches of the Legislature shall be called The House of Assembly, and shall consist of seven Representatives to be chosen for each County annually, of such persons as are freeholders of the same.

4. The other branch shall be called The Council, and consist of nine members, three to be chosen for each County at the time of the first election of the Assembly, who shall be freeholders of the County for which they are chosen, and be upwards of twenty-five years of age. At the end of one year after the general election, the Counsellor who had the smallest number of votes in each County shall be displaced, and the vacancies thereby occasioned supplied by the free-men of each County choosing the same or another person at a new election in manner aforesaid. At the end of two years after the first general election, the Counsellor who stood second in number of votes in each County shall be displaced, and the vacancies thereby occasioned supplied by a new election in manner aforesaid. And at the end of three years from the first general election, the Counsellor who had the greatest number of votes in each County shall be displaced, and the vacancies thereby occasioned supplied by a new election in manner aforesaid. And this rotation of a Counsellor being displaced at the end of three years in each County, and his office supplied by a new choice, shall be continued afterwards in due order annually forever, whereby, after the first general election, a Counsellor will remain in trust for three years from the time of his being elected, and a Counsellor will be displaced and the same or another chosen in each County at every election.

5. The right of suffrage in the election of members for both Houses shall remain as exercised by law at present; and each House shall choose its own Speaker, appoint its own officers, judge of the qualifications and elections of its own members, settle its own rule of proceedings, and direct writs of election for supplying intermediate vacancies. They may also severally expel any of their own members for misbehaviour, but not a second time in the same Sessions for the same offence, if reelected; and they shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislature of a free and independent State.

6. All money bills for the support of Government shall originate in the House of Assembly, and may be altered, amended, or rejected by the Legislative Council. All other bills and ordinances may take rise in the House of Assembly or Legislative Council, and may be altered, amended, or rejected by either.

7. A President or Chief Magistrate shall be chosen by joint ballot of both Houses, to be taken in the House of Assembly, and the box examined by the Speakers of each House, in the presence of the other members. And in case the numbers for the two highest in votes should be equal, then the Speaker of the Council shall have an additional casting voice; and the appointment of the person who has the majority of votes shall be entered at large on the Minutes and Journals of each House, and a copy thereof on parchment, certified and signed by the Speakers respectively, and sealed with the great seal of the State, which they are hereby authorized to affix, shall be delivered to the person so chosen President, who shall continue in that office three years, and until the sitting of the next General Assembly, and no longer, nor be eligible until the expiration of three years after he shall have been out of that office. An adequate but moderate salary shall be settled on him during his continuance in office. He may draw for such sums of money as shall be appropriated by the General Assembly, and be accountable to them for the same. He may, by and with the advice of the Privy Council, lay embargoes, or prohibit the exportation of any commodity for any time not exceeding thirty days, in the recess of the General Assembly. He shall have the power of granting pardons or reprieves, except where the prosecution shall be carried on by the House of Assembly, or the law shall otherwise direct, in which cases no pardon or reprieve shall be granted but by a resolve of the House of Assembly; and may exercise all the other Executive powers of Government, limited and restrained as by this Constitution is mentioned, and according to the laws of the State. And on his death, inability, or absence from the State, the Speaker of the Legislative Council for the time being shall be Vice President; and in case of his death, inability, or absence from the State, the Speaker of the House of Assembly shall have the powers of a President, until a new nomination is made by the General Assembly.

8. A Privy Council, consisting of four members, shall be chosen by ballot, two by the Legislative Council, and two by the House of Assembly: Provided, That no regular officer of the Army or Navy in the service and pay of the Continent or of this or of any other State shall be eligible. And a member of the Legislative Council or of the House of Assembly being chosen of the Privy Council, and accepting thereof, shall thereby lose his seat. Three members shall be a quorum, and their advice and proceedings shall be entered on record and signed by the members present, (to any part of which any member may enter his dissent,) to be laid before the General Assembly when called for by them. Two members shall be removed by ballot, one by the Legislative Council and one by the House of Assembly, at the end of two years, and those who remain the next year after, who shall severally be ineligible for the three next years. These vacancies, as well as those occasioned by death or incapacity, shall be supplied by new elections in the same manner. And this rotation of a Privy Counsellor shall be continued afterwards in due order annually forever. The President may by summons convene the Privy Council at any time when the publick exigencies may require, and at such place as he shall think most convenient, when and where they are to attend accordingly.

9. The President, with the advice and consent of the Privy Council, may embody the Militia, and act as Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief of them and the other military force of this State, under the laws of the same.

10. Either House of the General Assembly may adjourn themselves respectively. The President shall not prorogue, adjourn, or dissolve the General Assembly, but he may, with the advice of the Privy Council, or on the application of a majority of either House, call them before the time they shall stand adjourned, and the two Houses shall always sit at the same time and place; for which purpose, immediately after every adjournment the Speaker of the House of Assembly shall give notice to the Speaker of the other House of the time to which the House of Assembly stands adjourned.

11. The Delegates for Delaware to the Congress of the United States of America shall be chosen annually, or superseded in the mean time by joint ballot of both Houses in the General Assembly.

12. The President and General Assembly shall by joint ballot appoint three Justices of the Supreme Court for the State, one of whom shall be Chief Justice, and a Judge of Admiralty, and also four Justices of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts for each County, one of whom in each Court shall be styled Chief Justice, (and in case of division on the ballot the President shall have an additional casting voice,) to be commissioned by the President under the great seal, who shall continue in office during good behaviour; and during the time the Justices of the said Supreme Court and Courts of Common Pleas remain in office they shall hold none other except in the Militia. Any one of the Justices of either of said Courts shall have power, in case of the non-coming of his brethren, to open and adjourn the Court. An adequate fixed but moderate salary shall be settled on them during their continuance in office. The President and Privy Council shall appoint the Secretary, the Attorney-General, Registers for the Probate of Wills and granting Letters of Administration, Registers in Chancery, Clerks of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts, and Clerks of the Peace, who shall be commissioned as aforesaid, and remain in office during five years, if they behave themselves well; during which time the said Registers in Chancery and Clerks shall not be Justices of either of the said Courts of which they are officers, but they shall have authority to sign all writs by them issued, and take recognizances of bail. The Justices of the Peace shall be nominated by the House of Assembly, that is to say, they shall name twenty-four persons for each County, of whom the President, with the approbation of the Privy Council, shall appoint twelve, who shall be commissioned as aforesaid, and continue in office during seven years, if they behave themselves well; and in case of vacancies, or if the Legislature shall think proper to increase the number, they shall be nominated and appointed in like manner. The members of the Legislative and Privy Council shall be Justices of the Peace for the whole State during their continuance in trust; and the Justices of the Courts of Common Pleas shall be conservators of the peace in their respective Counties.

13. The Justices of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts shall have the power of holding inferior Courts of Chancery, as heretofore, unless the Legislature shall otherwise direct.

14. The Clerks of the Supreme Court shall be appointed by the Chief Justice thereof, and the Recorders of Deeds by the Justices of the Courts of Common Pleas for each County severally, and commissioned by the President under the great seal, and continue in office five years, if they behave themselves well.

15. The Sheriffs and Coroners of the respective Counties shall be chosen annually as heretofore; and any person having served three years as Sheriff shall be ineligible for three years after; and the President and Privy Council shall have the appointment of such of the two candidates returned for said offices of Sheriff and Coroner as they shall think best qualified, in the same manner that the Governour heretofore enjoyed this power.

16. The General Assembly, by joint ballot, shall appoint the Generals and Field-Officers, and all other officers in the Army or Navy of this State. And the President may appoint during pleasure, until otherwise directed by the Legislature, all necessary civil officers not hereinbefore mentioned.

17. There shall be an appeal from the Supreme Court of Delaware in matters of law and equity to a Court of seven persons, to consist of the President for the time being, who shall preside therein, and six others, to be appointed, three by the Legislative Council, and three by the House of Assembly, who shall continue in office during good behaviour, and be commissioned by the President under the great seal; which Court shall be styled The Court of Appeals, and have all the authority and powers heretofore given by law in the last resort to the King in Council under the old Government. The Secretary shall be the Clerk of this Court, and vacancies therein occasioned by death or incapacity shall be supplied by new elections in manner aforesaid.

18. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Courts of Common Pleas, the Members of the Privy Council, the Secretary, the Trustees of the Loan Office, and Clerks of the Courts of Common Pleas, during their continuance in office, and all persons concerned in any army or navy contracts, shall be ineligible to either House of Assembly; and any member of either House accepting of any other of the offices hereinbefore mentioned (excepting the office of a Justice of the Peace) shall have his seat thereby vacated, and a new election shall be ordered.

19. The Legislative Council and Assembly shall have the power of making the great seal of this State, which shall be kept by the President, or in his absence by the Vice-President, to be used by them as occasion may require. It shall be called The Great Seal of the Delaware State, and shall be affixed to all laws and commissions.

20. Commissions shall run in the name of The Delaware State, and bear test by the President. Writs shall run in the same manner, and bear test in the name of the Chief Justices or Justice first named in the commissions for the several Courts, and be sealed with the publick seals of such Courts. Indictments shall conclude, against the peace and dignity of the State.

21. In case of vacancy of the offices above directed to be filled by the President and General Assembly, the President and Privy Council may appoint others in their stead until there shall be a new election.

22. Every person who shall be chosen a member of either House, or appointed to any office or place of trust, before taking his seat, or entering upon the execution of his office, shall take the following oath, or affirmation if conscientiously scrupulous of taking an oath, to wit:

"I, A B, will bear true allegiance to the Delaware State, submit to its Constitution and laws, and do no act wittingly whereby the freedom thereof may be prejudiced."

And also make and subscribe the following Declaration, to wit:

"I, A B, do profess faith in God the Father, and in Jesus Christ, His only Son, and in the Holy Ghost—one God blessed forevermore; and I do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by Divine inspiration."

And all officers shall also take an oath of office.

23. The President, when he is out of office, and within eighteen months after, and all others offending against the State, either by mal-administration, corruption, or other means, by which the safety of the Commonwealth may be endangered, within eighteen months after the offence committed, shall be impeachable by the House of Assembly before the Legislative Council; such impeachment to be prosecuted by the Attorney-General, or such other person or persons as the House of Assembly may appoint, according to the laws of the land. If found guilty, he or they shall be either forever disabled to hold any office under Government, or removed from office pro tempore, or subjected to such pains and penalties as the laws shall direct. And all officers shall be removed on conviction of misbehaviour at common law, or on impeachment, or upon the address of the General Assembly.

24. All Acts of Assembly in force in this State on the 15th day of May last, and not hereby altered, or contrary to the Resolutions of Congress, or of the late House of Assembly of this State, shall so continue until altered or repealed by the Legislature of this State, unless where they are temporary, in which case they shall expire at the times respectively limited for their duration.

25. The common law of England, as well as so much of the statute law as have been heretofore adopted in practice in this State, shall remain in force, unless they shall be altered by a future law of the Legislature; such parts only excepted as are repugnant to the rights and privileges contained in this Constitution and the Declaration of Rights, &c., agreed to by this Convention.

26. No person hereafter imported into this State from Africa ought to be held in slavery on any pretence whatever; and no Negro, Indian, or Mulatto slave ought to be brought into this State, for sale, from any part of the world.

27. The first election for the General Assembly of this State shall be held on the 25th day of October next, at the Court-Houses in the several Counties, in the manner heretofore used in the election of the Assembly, except as to the choice of Inspectors and Assessors, where Assessors have not been chosen on the 16th day of September instant, which shall be made on the morning of the day of election by the electors, inhabitants of the respective Hundreds in each County; at which time the Sheriffs and Coroners for the said Counties respectively are to be elected. And the present Sheriffs of the Counties of New-Castle and Kent may be rechosen to that office until the first day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-nine; and the present Sheriff for the County of Sussex may be rechosen to that office until the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, provided the freemen think proper to reelect them at every general election; and the present Sheriffs and Coroners respectively shall continue to exercise their offices as heretofore until the Sheriffs and Coroners to be elected on the said 21st day of October shall be commissioned and sworn into office. The members of the Legislative Council and Assembly shall meet for transacting the business of the State on the 28th day of October next, and continue in office until the 1st day of October, which will be in the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven; on which day, and on the 1st day of October in each year forever after, the Legislative Council, Assembly, Sheriffs, and Coroners, shall be chosen by ballot in manner directed by the several laws of this State for regulating elections of members of Assembly and Sheriffs and Coroners, and the General Assembly shall meet on the 20th day of the same month for the transacting the business of the State; and if any of the said 1st and 20th days of October should be Sunday, then, and in such case, the elections shall be held, and the General Assembly meet the next day following.

28. To prevent any violence or force being used at the said elections, no person shall come armed to any of them, and no muster of the Militia shall be made on that day, nor shall any battalion or company give in their votes immediately succeeding each other, if any other voter who offers to vote objects thereto; nor shall any battalion or company in the pay of the Continent, or of this or any other State, be suffered to remain at the time and place of holding the said elections, or within one mile of the said places respectively for twenty-four hours before the opening said elections, nor within twenty-four hours after the same are closed, so as in any manner to impede the freely and conveniently carrying on the said election. Provided always, That every elector may, in a peaceable and orderly manner, give in his vote on the said day of election.

29. There shall be no establishment of any one religious sect in this State in preference to another; and no clergyman or preacher of the Gospel, of any denomination, shall be capable of holding any civil office in this State, or of being a member of either of the branches of the Legislature, while they continue in the exercise of the pastoral function.

30. No Article of the Declaration of Rights and fundamental rules of this State, agreed to by this Convention, nor the first, second, fifth, (except that part thereof that relates to the right of suffrage,) twenty-sixth, and twenty-ninth Articles of this Constitution ought ever to be violated, on any pretence whatever. No other parts of this Constitution shall be altered, changed, or diminished, without the consent of five parts in seven of the Assembly, and seven members of the Legislative Council.

GEORGE READ, President.

Extract from the Journals. Attest:

JAMES BOOTH, Clerk.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO COLONEL WHIPPLE.

Philadelphia, August 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Last week the Articles of Confederation were finished by the Committee of the Whole House. They are again printed as now amended by the Committee, and are delivered to the members in the same manner as before, and are to undergo one operation through Congress more before they are sent to the several States for confirmation. What alterations will be made in them I know not; but am afraid none for the better. This will occasion such a delay that there is no probability it will be sent in time to be laid before our Assembly before your return here: so I would not have you wait for it, but return as soon as convenient. The new Articles of War have passed Congress. The plan of a treaty of foreign alliance has passed in the Committee of the Whole.

By the leave of Lord Howe, the famous Lord Drummond has, by a flag to General Washington, proposed sundry articles as the basis of a negotiation or conference, (they are nearly the same as those proposed by Lord North, called Lord North's Conciliatory Propositions;) and he requested leave of General Washington for himself and one or two more to repair to this city to propose those terms, which he had the impudence to say would have been accepted by the Colonies a few months ago. The General did not think proper to give him leave to come here, but in his answer told him he should send the papers to the Congress and wait their answer. He severely reprimanded Lord Drummond for his officiousness in meddling with the business, but especially for his going to the Army under General Howe, contrary to his parole of honour which he gave when he was permitted to leave the Continent. I need not tell you the Congress have not accepted the proposed conference with his Lordship.

Lord Howe has wrote an answer to Dr. Franklin's letter to him which you saw. It is full of professions of friendship for America, and of esteem and regard for the Doctor—very polite, but very artful.

By a letter from the Agent who was sent in the Reprisal, Captain Wicks, to Martinico, he informs us that the Governor (or General, as they call him) told him that he had lately received orders by a frigate from France to give all possible assistance and protection to the American vessels, and that he was ordered to send out some ships of war to cruise round the Island for their defence, and that the same orders had been sent to the other French Islands. He also told the Agent, that if the American cruisers should bring any prizes into the ports of Martinico, he should not prevent their selling or disposing of them as they should think proper. This is in confidence.

We have just received the account of the enemy landing on Long-Island. By the General's account, our men are in good spirits, seem firm and ready for action. From this and from some other circumstances, I hope I shall soon hear of the enemy's defeat and quitting the country, never more to return as enemies; which will give the greatest pleasure and satisfaction to your friend and humble servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

P. S. Mr. William Barril is sick with a fever. Dr. Rush says he is very dangerous. Please to give my regards to our friend Colonel Langdon, as I have not time to write to him. Tell him I have not received his letter last week as usual. I have received yours of the 20th from Milford's. Yours, ut sup., J. B.

FRANCIS LEWIS TO MRS. GATES.

Philadelphia, August 27, 1776.

DEAR MADAM: I was yesterday honoured with your letter dated the 20th instant, and happy to find you enjoyed your health.

Your son, after a few days' stay in this city, went to Princetown, where he is at present, and in as perfect health as ever he enjoyed. I conversed with Dr. Witherspoon yesterday, who informed me that your son applied closely to his books, and highly extolled his abilities; this he spoke sincerely, and without flattery. As I purpose in a few days going to Elizabeth-Town, shall have the pleasure of seeing Bob, and, at my return, shall advise you.

I can assure you that General Gates and the Army under his command at Ticonderoga are well and in high spirits. We have frequent advices from that quarter through the medium of General Washington. There is little expectation of seeing enemies upon the Lakes this summer, whatever may happen the next. General Gates commands at Ticonderoga. General Schuyler is treating with the Indians at the German-Flats. They will always be on separate commands. But we are in pain for New-York. I fear that city is devoted to destruction. Lord and General Howe, Cornwallis, Clinton, and Dummore, upon Staten-Island, with about twenty-six thousand troops, of which they landed eight or nine thousand last Friday, and, by what we can learn, intend in a day or two attacking New-York. I feel for the distress of my family, who are still at White Stone, except Morgan, who, the next day after his return home, set off for Ticonderoga. His mother could not restrain him. We have about twenty thousand troops (say Militia) lining the coast of East-Jersey from Powles Hook to Amboy, and upwards of thirty thousand on York and Long-Island. The fate of this campaign a few days must determine.

I have not time at present to say more than that I am, and ever shall be, dear Madam, your sincere friend and very humble servant,

F. LEWIS.

P. S. It is said that General Carleton has drawn off the major part of his Army from the neighbourhood of the Lakes, and are filed off for Quebec; from which it is conjectured they are to be brought round to reinforce General Howe, as General Burgoyne cannot penetrate the upper country by the Lakes.

RESOLUTION OF THE COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, August 27, 1776.

Resolved, That Captain Peters be requested to appoint double guards of the Associators this night, as a number of the Militia in the Barracks have been very riotous this day; and if they should discover any persons together in a disorderly manner, that they be confined until morning, and that a report be made of them to this Board by the Commanding Officer to-morrow morning.

By order of Council:

DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Vice President.

MEMORIAL OF THE CHEVALIER SAURALLE.

[Read August 27, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Delegates of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in Congress assembled:

The Memorial of the Chevalier SAURALLE, humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist is a young officer, who, after serving two years as a volunteer in the Artillery at St.

Domingo, obtained the rank of Lieutenant in that corps, to which he has preferred offering his services to the honourable Congress, as a letter from Mr. De la Valletiere, Governour of St. Nicholas Mole, shows; which letter, intended for the honourable Congress or General Washington, is without a direction, owing to the Governour's being unacquainted with the proper form of address. Which is humbly submitted to the honourable Congress.

LA CHEVALIER SAURALLE.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN STONE.

Philadelphia, August 27, 1776.

SIR: The Marine Committee have directed me to inform you that the Hornet sloop is now returned from her cruise, during which she has been extremely leaky, as Captain Hallock, the bearer hereof, will inform you.

The Committee have come to a resolution either to purchase the sloop or deliver her up to you, as they will not any longer hire her; but as the greatest part of the materials she now has on board belong to the publick, they would prefer buying her at the valuation, to stripping her; and when you consider that she will be a mere wreck when so stripped, and that the hull is old and shattered, I should imagine you would readily see that it is more your interest to sell than to receive her back in such bad condition, as you will have the hire to this time, in addition to the price. You will, upon the whole, receive a great sum for her.

I am, sir, your humble servant, ROBERT MORRIS.
To Captain William Stone, owner of the Sloop Hornet.

P. S. If you will not sell, pray appoint some person to receive her.

Philadelphia, August 27, 1776.

Since the departure of the able-bodied men from the forks of Brandywine, in Chester County, on the service of their country, the patriotick young women, to prevent the evil that would follow the neglect of putting in the fall crop in season, have joined the ploughs, and are preparing the fallows for the seed; and should their fathers, brothers and lovers be detained abroad in defence of the liberties of these States, they are determined to put in the crop themselves—a very laudable example, and highly worthy of imitation.

The Colonels Ross, Matlack, and Schlegel, are appointed by the Convention of this State, Commissioners for forming the Flying-Camp in New-Jersey.

JOHN HARRIS TO LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

Paxton, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Mr. Bratts, and Lieutenant John Houfman, a First Lieutenant in Paxton township, did last week apply to me for ammunition to be in order to suppress Tory riots, &c., that might happen in their neighbourhood, which they have great reason to apprehend, from some evil-disposed persons lately appearing among them, who rob spring-houses and other houses, (it's said,) frightening women, children, &c., in said township, and Hanover township, above the mountains, as their men are, in general, gone in the service. I think one quarter-cask of the gunpowder at Lancaster, with about sixty pounds of the lead at Mr. William Carson's, to save carriage, might be ordered, and delivered said Bratts by our Committee, (the demand is not greater, and may be of service,) said Bratts or the Committee or military officers of said township, being accountable for said ammunition, and that it may not be expended or wasted, but applied to the use given. For the small quantity of powder and lead of my own, I shall at any time our frontiers may appear to be in danger assist them with it, on application. As I know of not any powder but mine here, do not intend to send it to Lancaster till we have a prospect of better times. The Indians to the northward, southward, and westward, are for war against us, as I am informed by a letter from Northumberland County, by their post, two days ago. The Susquehannah Indians are, only, for peace with us. About twenty Indians, (enemies,) men, women and children, have been many days past at Sunbury, and make said report. I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN HARRIS.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Observation and Correspondence, in Lancaster.

LIST OF PRISONERS, AUGUST 27, 1776.

James Campbell, sent by the Committee; discharged.

Philip Stone, sent by the Committee; discharged.

James Ford, sent by the Committee.

William Poor, sent by the Committee, suspected of assisting the officers in their escape from Lebanon.

Thomas Redmund and John White, accused of the same.

Jemmy the Rover, sent by the Committee, accused of threatening women.

James Mansfield, sent by Squire Gruber, and has since attempted to break Jail.

Peggy King, brought by Captain Henry; discharged.

John Allen, Corporal Kate and Stemple, sent by the Committee; discharged.

John Vincent, sent by the Committee; discharged.

John Fitzgerald, sent by the Committee as a deserter from the Continental forces.

John Tiffdale, sent by the Committee for threatening the inhabitants.

Mary Mitchell, Mambo, a Negro, Dinah, a Negro wench, sent by the Committee for conspiring the death of Clendenin's wife.

Joseph Boon, discharged by order of the Convention, enlisted the next day, and after receiving 40s., deserted and stole a piece of cloth, for which he has since been confined.

Jacob Rese, a deserter from Captain Peter Grubb's Company.

James McIlwain, sent by the Committee, with Philip and Jacob Winter; discharged on bail.

Nancy Brown, brought by the guard for stealing.

Richard, a Negro, brought by the guard; says he is free.

Robert Ritchie, sent by Squire Gruber as a regular prisoner of war; says he belongs to Captain Doyle's Company.

John Dead, kept in Jail by John Kelly.

ROBERT G. LIVINGSTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Newark, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: At this moment, so important to the general welfare of America, it becomes every well-wisher of his country to discourage everything that has a tendency to weaken our present struggles; and as nothing can more effectually injure us in that way than a depreciation of the Continental currency, I was greatly surprised at the conduct of a gentleman of New-York in refusing a sum of money in that currency. The circumstances are these: I was bound with Mr. Samuel Hake to Captain Anthony Rutgers in a bond of £900. The last Saturday I sent the principal and interest due upon that bond by Robert Hyslop to Mr. Rutgers to discharge the same, but he absolutely refused to receive the money offered him, which was in Continental money.

I thought it my duty to inform you of this matter, as it may be attended with the most dangerous consequences to the publick interest; for if such a person as Mr. Rutgers may refuse it, who may not do the same, and where will it end? For my part, I have received lately very large sums in that money, with as great a readiness as I would gold or silver. But if I cannot pass it again, it will be dead and useless to me, and I must of course refuse it from my debtors, which must inevitably introduce the greatest confusion in the country, and which no friend of his country can think of without trembling.

I lay this matter before you, gentlemen, as being thoroughly convinced you will do everything in your power to put a stop to such practices.

I am, with great esteem, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

ROBERT G. LIVINGSTON.

To the Chairman of the Committee of the City and County of New-York.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 27, 1776.

SIR: I have drawn on you this day in favour of Colonel Thomas Lowrey for thirty thousand dollars, to be improved in supplying the troops of the United States in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey with provisions. You'll please to pay the same, and charge them to my account accordingly.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

COLONEL HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, August 27, 1776, eight o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I this minute returned from our lines on Long-Island, where I left his Excellency the General. From him I have it in command to inform Congress that yesterday he went there, and continued till evening, when, from the enemy's having landed a considerable part of their forces and many of their movements, there was reason to apprehend they would make, in a little time, a general attack. As they would have a wood to pass through before they could approach the lines, it was thought expedient to place a number of men there, on the different roads leading from whence they were stationed, in order to harass and annoy them in their march. This being done, early this morning a smart engagement ensued between the enemy and our detachments, which being unequal to the force they had to contend with, have sustained a pretty considerable loss: at least many of our men are missing. Among those that have not returned, are General Sullivan and Lord Stirling. The enemy's loss is not known certainly; but we are told by such of our troops that were in the engagement and that have come in, that they had many killed and wounded. Our party brought off a Lieutenant, Sergeant, and Corporal, with twenty privates, prisoners. While these detachments were engaged, a column of the enemy descended from the woods and marched towards the centre of our lines, with a design to make an impression, but were repulsed. This evening they appeared very numerous about the skirts of the woods, where they have pitched several tents; and his Excellency inclines to think they mean to attack and force us from our lines by way of regular approaches, rather than in any other manner.

To-day five ships of the line came up towards the town, where they seemed desirous of getting, as they turned a long time against an unfavourable wind. And on my return this evening, I found a deserter from the Twenty-Third Regiment, who informed me that they design, as soon as the wind will permit 'em to come up, to give us a severe cannonade and to silence our batteries, if possible.

I have the honour to be, in great haste, sir, your most obedient,

ROB. H. HARRISON.

[Same to General Mercer.]

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN COL. ATLEE'S BATTALION, OF PENNSYLVANIA, DATED NEW-YORK, AUGUST 27, 1776.

Yesterday about one hundred and twenty of our men went as a guard to a place called Red Lion, on Long-Island. About eleven o'clock at night the sentries descried two men coming up a watermelon patch, upon which our men fired upon them; the enemy then retreated, and about one o'clock advanced with about two or three hundred men, and endeavoured to surround our guard; but they being watchful, gave them two or three fires, and retreated to alarm the remainder of the battalion, except one Lieutenant and about fifteen men, who have not been heard of as yet. About four o'clock this morning the alarm was given by beating to arms, when the remainder of our battalion, accompanied by the Delaware and Maryland battalions, went to the place where our men retreated from. About a quarter of a mile on this side, we saw the enemy when we got into the woods (our battalion being the advance guard) amidst the incessant fire of their field-pieces, loaded with grape-shot, which continued till ten o'clock. The Marylanders on their left flank, and we on their right, kept up a constant fire amidst all their cannon, and saw several of them fall; but they being too many for us, we retreated a little, and then made a stand. Our Lieutenant-Colonel, Parry, was shot through the head, and I was under the necessity of retreating with him to this place, in order to secure his effects. Since which I have heard the enemy are within six hundred yards of our lines; which I think will cost them some number of men before they gain them.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 27, 1776.

I sit down, in the midst of confusion, to tell you that our people have been engaged with the enemy on Long-Island all this morning, and are at it yet. We cannot get at particulars. Those who have come over say the enemy have lost the most men. Lieutenant-Colonel Parry, of one of the Pennsylvania battalions, is killed; he died heroically, urging his men on against the enemy. Your kinsman, Hermanus Rutgers, was killed yesterday. Several of the enemy's ships have attempted coming up this morning, but both wind and tide are ahead, and they are hitherto baffled. Our men on the Island behave bravely. Heaven send them victory.

Thirty-five minutes past twelve, P. M.—Firing still continues, with intermissions. A man-of-war coming up, said to be the Roebuck, has just lost, by a flaw, all she gained last tack. Several fires have been kindled on the Island. I believe our people set fire to hay, grain, &c., to prevent the enemy's getting possession of them. Captain Farmer, of Colonel Miles's Regiment, is slightly wounded, and brought to this city. I think some men-of-war will be up next tide.

P. S. The First Battalion of New-York, Colonel Lasher, and the Pennsylvania and Maryland battalions, behaved with the greatest bravery, even to a fault. They were commanded by Lord Stirling. I fear some of the bravest officers from the southward are among the slain. We forced the enemy into their lines. Parry is killed, and Major Abeel, of New-York, killed.

GENERAL WOODHULL TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

West end of Queen's County, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed I send you a copy of a letter from Colonel Potter, who left me yesterday at eleven o'clock, after bringing about one hundred men to me at Jamaica. Major Smith has, I expect, all the rest that were to come from Suffolk County. There have about forty of the Militia joined me from the regiments in Queen's County, and about fifty of the troops belonging to Queen's and King's Counties, which are near all I expect.

I have got all the cattle southward of the hills in King's County driven to the eastward of the cross-road between the two Counties, and have placed guards and sentries from the north road to the south side of the Island, in order to prevent the cattle's going back, and to prevent the communication of the Tories with the enemy. I am within about six miles of the enemy's camp. Their Light-Horse have been within two miles; and unless I have more men, our stay here will answer no purpose. We shall soon want to be supplied with provision, if we tarry here.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

NATHL. WOODHULL.

To the Honourable the Convention of the State of New-York, at Harlem.

Huntington, August 26, 1776.

SIR: I had not arrived at my house half an hour before I received by express from Captain Thomson, of Brookhaven, that two ships, one brig, and three tenders, had landed a number of Regular troops in a place between the Old Man's and Wading River; and that at one of the clock they were shooting the cattle. Major Smith has ordered the detachment designed for your party, to the eastward; and as our men are gone, and the wind fresh to the eastward, well know they cannot lie there. I expect them in our bay before morning, the only harbour in the Sound. Have not ordered any men from here as yet, but am mustering them, to make as good opposition as possible. We must have help here. Everything possible for me, shall be done. I think General Washington should be acquainted. Our women are in great tumult.

In great haste, I am, sir, your very humble servant,

GILBERT POTTER.

To Brigadier-General Woodhull.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

King's Bridge, August 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: By express this moment I am informed that three ships have just come to Anchor Point, above Frog Point. I have detached a regiment to prevent their landing to pillage or burn. You will immediately order two of the brass field-pieces, with ammunition, &c., complete, to this post. Three or four Artillerists at least must attend them.

I have applied to General Washington for the fire-rafts, for the purpose of constructing a floating-bridge over Harlem River. He approves of it if they will answer the purpose. I should be glad of your opinion per the bearer.

You will please to send the express to General Washington immediately. We have not a single horse here. I have written to the General for two or three.

I shall appoint a Court-Martial for the trial of Lieutenant Priestly this day.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately, W. HEATH.

To General Mifflin.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL GRAHAM.

King's Bridge, August 27, 1776.

SIR: By express this moment I am informed that three ships are just come to anchor above Frog Point, near the New City; you will, therefore, without the least delay, march your regiment to that neighbourhood, and prevent their landing or pillaging the stock. You will post your regiment in such manner as most effectually to answer the purpose of defeating the designs of the enemy.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH, M. G.

To Colonel Morris Graham.

P. S. You will send me intelligence as often as anything of importance transpires.

PETITION OF COMMODORE WYNKOOP TO THE CONGRESS.

To the Honourable the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA in Congress assembled:

The Memorial of JACOBUS WYNKOOP sheweth:

That your memorialist has been employed and served in the Continental service, and in the service of the United States of America, from the 28th day of June, 1775, until the 18th day of August, instant. That your memorialist, by his first appointment was a Captain in the Eighth Company and Fourth Regiment of Continental forces, raised in the Province of New-York. That his Honour Major-General Schuyler, Commander-in-Chief in the Northern Department, did, some time after the appointment of your memorialist to the Captaincy aforesaid, offer to your memorialist the command of the vessels on Lake Champlain, and signified to your memorialist that his Honour would recommend your memorialist to the honourable Continental Congress as a person fit for the said station. That your memorialist being at Fort George, did, in the month of January, in the present year, receive a letter from his Honour Major-General Schuyler, informing your memorialist that his Honour expected momentarily to hear from Congress on the subject of his appointment. That in the month of April last, your memorialist, at the city of New-York, did receive from the honourable the Provincial Congress for the Province of New-York a certified copy of a letter written by his Honour Major-General Schuyler to the President of the said Provincial Congress, which is in the words following:

"Albany, March 8, 1776.

"SIR: I am honoured with yours of the 4th instant. The Continental Congress have resolved that Captain Wynkoop should be employed upon the Lakes, under Commodore Douglass. Whether the latter gentleman means to engage in that service I do not know; of this, Congress can very speedily inform itself, as he resides near New-York. Should he not engage, there is no person I would more willingly have to command the vessels than Captain Wynkoop. At any rate, I wish you to send him up the soonest possible, with a sufficient number of sailors for the two schooners and sloop.

"I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

"PH. SCHUYLER.

"To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq."

"The foregoing is a true copy of the original, examined and compared by ROBERT BENSON."

Your memorialist received at the same time an extract

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. I.

from the Minutes of the Committee of Safety for New-York aforesaid, a copy of which follows:

"In Committee of Safety, New-York, April 13, 1776.

"Ordered, That Captain Jacobus Wynkoop do enlist the number of Mariners desired by Major-General Schuyler, for the service at the Lakes, with all possible despatch. That Captain Wynkoop proceed to Albany with the said Mariners to General Schuyler, and take his directions as to the Vessels on the Lakes, until the honourable the Continental Congress shall have appointed him to that command, or some other gentleman shall arrive at the Lake authorized to take the command.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary."

That in consequence of the aforesaid letter and order, your memorialist immediately enlisted a number of sailors, and proceeded up to Fort George, when he received from the Honourable Major-General Schuyler an order, in the words following:

"Fort George, May 7, 1776.

"SIR: You are immediately to repair to Tyonderoga, and take command of all the vessels on Lake Champlain, which you will with the greatest expedition put in the best condition possible for immediate service.

"I am, sir, your humble servant,

"PH. SCHUYLER.

"To Captain Wynkoop."

That your memorialist, expecting the appointment of Commodore of the Lakes, and not being willing to act in a subordinate capacity, did, agreeable to the said order, take upon him the command of the vessels on the Lakes aforesaid, and has since continued in that department, in the service of the said Continental Congress and of these United States, acting and exerting his abilities for the publick advantage. That on the 17th day of August, instant, your memorialist, being on his station, was alarmed by the report of a swivel from one of the schooners under his command, which was succeeded by a similar signal from another of the said schooners, which were making ready to get under sail; and conceiving that they ought not to move without his immediate orders, (unless in cases of alarm, when a boat should be instantly despatched to inform him of the occasion,) and fearing that some design had been formed by the Captains of the said schooners or their crews to go over to the enemy, by the command of your memorialist a swivel was fired to bring to the said schooners. That upon firing of the said swivel, they came to an anchor again, and your memorialist ordered the Mate to go in a boat and bring the Captains on board the Commodore's schooner. All preparations for sailing were stopped, and Captain Premier, commander of one of the said schooners, (the other Captain being on shore,) came on board the Royal Savage, then under your memorialist's immediate command. That your memorialist then desired to know from the said Captain for what reason those guns were fired and preparations made for sailing, who informed your memorialist that he had received from his Honour Brigadier-General Arnold orders to get his schooner immediately under way, and beat down the Lake about eight or ten miles, and if he made any discovery of the enemy, to send a boat and acquaint him of the particulars. That your memorialist, not having received any intimation of being superseded in the command aforesaid, and conceiving that any orders even from the Commander-in-Chief of the Army in the Northern Department, or the commanding officer at Lake George or Tyonderoga, respecting the vessels on the Lakes, should be directed and first communicated to your memorialist, and to be given out by him to the respective Captains under his command, your memorialist also being better acquainted with the state and condition of the said vessels, your memorialist did transmit to his Honour the said Brigadier-General Arnold a letter, in the words following:

"On board the Royal Savage, August 17, 1776.

"SIR: I find by an order you have given out that the schooners are to go down the Lake. I know no orders but what shall be given out by me, except sailing orders from the Commander-in-Chief. If an enemy is approaching, I am to be acquainted with it, and know how to act in my station.

"I am, sir, yours,

JACOBUS WYNKOOP,

"Commander of Lake Champlain."

That your memorialist soon after received a letter from his Honour the said Brigadier-General Arnold, informing your memorialist of the approach of the enemy, and intimating that the Commander-in-Chief had appointed him to take the command of the Navy on the Lake, and threatening your memorialist with an arrest. That your memorialist having thus received information of the approach of the enemy, that the service might not suffer by the dispute of the officers, issued out an order to the Captains of the said schooners, in the words following:

"On board the Royal Savage, August 17, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: You will immediately get under way and go down the Lake about eight or ten miles. If you make any discovery of the enemy, send a boat to acquaint me of the particulars. If none of the enemy appear, you are directly to return.

"Yours,

JACOBUS WYNKOOP, Commander.

"To Captain Seaman and Captain Premier."

That immediately after your memorialist had received the letter aforesaid from his Honour the said Brigadier-General Arnold, his Honour the said Brigadier-General Arnold came on board the Royal Savage, and asked your memorialist how he dared to countermand his orders, and acquainted your memorialist that he had power to take the command of the fleet, and showed a paper containing written orders from his Honour Major-General Gates to that purport. That your memorialist, conceiving that no officer could be placed over him in the naval department unless by appointment from the United States in Congress assembled, or the Provincial Congress for the Province of New-York, except in causes of misdemeanour, and your memorialist being conscious of having done his duty, did acquaint the said Brigadier-General Arnold that he would receive no orders from him as a naval officer, under his present appointment, and that all orders from the commanders of the several posts on the Lake ought regularly to be first communicated to your memorialist. That his Honour the said Brigadier-General Arnold then despatched a letter to his Honour Major-General Gates, acquainting him with the above particulars, and on the 18th day of August, instant, your memorialist received a letter from the said Brigadier-General Arnold, in the words following:

"Crown-Point, August 18, 1776.

"SIR: The following is a paragraph of a letter and orders I have just received from the Honourable Major-General Gates, viz:

"It is my orders you immediately put Commodore Wyndkoop in arrest, and send him prisoner to Head-Quarters at Tyonderoga.
HORATIO GATES."

"In consequence of the above order, I do hereby put you in arrest, of which you will take notice and govern yourself accordingly. A boat and hands shall be ordered this evening or to-morrow morning to attend you to Tyonderoga. Please to let me know what time will be most agreeable.

"I am your humble servant,

"B. ARNOLD, Brigadier-General."

That agreeable to the above order your memorialist immediately repaired to Tyonderoga, and was ordered from thence by his Honour Major-General Gates to the honourable Major-General Philip Schuyler, and was informed by his Honour the said Major-General Gates that he had sent his crime forward.

That your memorialist humbly imagines if he had suffered the said schooners to go off unmolested, and the design of the Captains or crews of the said schooners had been to go over to the enemy, and such design carried into execution, that your memorialist would not have been suffered to escape with impunity; and that therefore it was his duty, when signals and preparations were made by them for sailing, to know their destination and issue out the necessary orders.

Your memorialist therefore humbly requests these United States in Congress assembled to take this memorial into their wise consideration, and grant him such relief as he is in justice entitled to.

JACOBUS WYNKOOP.

Albany, August 27, 1776.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 27, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: In answer to your favour of yesterday, with this I transmit you the original letter I received from General Schuyler relative to the small-pox, by the hands of Captain Thatcher, who now goes down to receive the rigging, &c., for the galleys, and you will oblige me to return it by him. In consequence of the above letter, I immediately despatched several officers, and gave each of them a copy of it, certifying that the above mentioned officers were sent by me to see that the orders of General Schuyler were faithfully to be executed. You will readily see that the general design of his Honour's letter was to prevent the infection of the small-pox from coming among us from any quarter, and it may be that the Continental Regiments, in consequence of the declaration of said letter, have stopped. Lest this should be the case, I shall send off immediately to meet them and hasten them on.

As the seamen were draughted from here to go with General Arnold, I shall be glad, sir, if you would give Captain Thatcher the liberty of bringing with him a few from your place, if any there be, to help rig the galleys. You cannot be more anxious than I am to have them completed. The business is pushed on with all might, and nothing shall be wanting to fit them for action. We are remarkably kept back by sickness, but I think it will be a great advantage to rig them while the carpenter work is doing. Diligent search shall be made for the fellows mentioned in Colonel Trumbull's letter, and if they are found I shall send them to Ticonderoga.

I would mention to your Honour that there are some of Captain Wetherbee's company that were inoculated, that were ordered to keep back, came to this place before I knew of their being in. I have sent them back a little distance, and shall wait your Honour's orders concerning the matter. And am, dear General, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

P. S. The rain has been so great at this place, and the land so overflowed, there is hardly any passing from this to any part of the inhabitants or country.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CROWN-POINT, DATED AUGUST 27, 1776.

Our fleet, consisting of three schooners, one large sloop, four gondolas, and four galleys, now lie in Lake Champlain, near Crown-Point, and expect to sail in three days and lay in a narrow passage of the Lake to prevent the enemy from passing. We have information that the enemy are on their way to this place from St. John's—they have no other craft than batteaus. If they come, I trust we shall give them a warm reception, as our fleet is well fitted and manned. We have now at Ticonderoga about three thousand five hundred effective men, and more coming in daily. The Fort, and every height and point about it, is well fortified; besides we have the command of the Lakes.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

Lebanon, August 27, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 19th, as also that of the 11th instant, have been duly received, and it gives me much satisfaction to learn that our affairs under your department begin to wear so favourable an aspect, and that there is so great a prospect of our being able to preserve our superiority on the Lakes. Your attention and assiduity to prevent the spreading of that contagious disease, which has proved the bane of our Northern Army heretofore, I can't but think most seasonable, judicious, and salutary.

Am obliged for the kind mention you are pleased to make of my exertions, which shall not be wanting, and shall esteem myself happy if any endeavours of mine can serve the just and glorious cause in which we are engaged.

The tents and clothing are forwarding with all expedition. We expected medicine chests and everything necessary would have been provided by the Continent; however, we have sent one chest of medicines forward, and whatever is further wanted should be glad to have the earliest intimation of, that we may afford all the needful supplies in our power. And am, sir, with esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Lebanon, August 27, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 25th instant have just received, and in answer thereto, can only say that I wish it was in our power to afford you that assistance you request. But our armed vessel, as also the Continental brig which lay in our port, are all gone out on a cruise; they sailed last Sunday.

Two ships and two brigs have gone up our Sound to the westward, in order, as is supposed, to block the communication. Two are also cruising off Block-Island and Montauque Point.

The last intelligence from our Army at New-York is, that the enemy have landed about ten or twelve thousand troops on Long-Island, and sundry skirmishes have ensued, in all which we have had the better. They still continue under the protection of their ships. When the last express came away, Saturday last, two o'clock, P. M., they were then engaged. May God grant us success.

From, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, August 27, 1776:

Present, His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Jed. Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

James Jauncey, Esq., of New-York, being in this State by order of General Washington, and on his parole to continue in Middletown, applies for liberty to repair to Westchester, in the State of New-York, and from thence to bring his and his son's families to Middletown. Whereupon it is Voted, That the said James Jauncey, Esq., has liberty to take with him such person or persons as shall be advised to by Jabez Hamlin, Esq., and repair to Westchester, and from thence bring his wife and family, and also the wife and family of James Jauncey, Jun., Esq., to Middletown aforesaid, making as little stay in the State of New-York as may be, in doing the business aforesaid.

Voted, To draw an Order on the Pay-Table for £110 14s., in favour of Isaac Doolittle and Jeremiah Atwater, of New-Haven, owners of the Powder-Mill there, for making Gunpowder for this State, and to be in account, they standing accountable for what Powder they have made, which they say is forty-one hundred weight, as well as for what they shall hereafter make.

Order given August 27, 1776; delivered Isaac Doolittle.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £300, in favour of Colonel Jonathan Fitch, of New-Haven, to enable him to purchase Clothing and Tents for the Northern Army, and to render his account, to be paid in Continental Bills, lodged in the Treasury by Mr. Sherman, if any such in the Treasury, or otherwise out of the proper Treasury.

Order drawn 27th August, and delivered Mr. Doolittle.

Voted, That Captain Michael Melally be, and he is hereby, appointed First Lieutenant of the armed Ship Oliver Cromwell, belonging to this State, and that his Honour the Governour be desired to commissionate him accordingly.

Commission sent him per Thomas Winthrop.

Voted, That John Smith, of East-Hartford be, and he is hereby, appointed Third Lieutenant of the armed Ship Oliver Cromwell, and his Honour the Governour is desired to commissionate him accordingly.

Commission sent per Thomas Winthrop.

Memorandum: Orders to be given to forward Camp-Kettles to the Northward, as they are much wanted.

Troops of the Fort in Groton, for Supplies and Buildings at that place, and to be in account.

Order drawn August 28, 1776, and delivered Ebenezer Ledyard, Esq.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £625 4s., in favour of Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., for Money advanced by him to Captain Harding, of the Brig Defence, in finishing and fixing said Brig for a cruise, to be in account for Brig Defence.

Order drawn 28th August, and delivered E. Ledyard, Esq.

Voted, To draw an Order on the Pay-Table for the sum of £600, in favour of Andrew Huntington, to enable him to purchase Tents and Clothing for the Northern Army, to be paid in Continental Money, lodged by Mr. Sherman, and to be in account.

Order given 28th August, 1776; delivered Ebenezer Ledyard, Esq.

Voted, To draw an Order on the Pay-Table for £500, in favour of Josiah Elderkin, for supplies of Tents and Clothing for the Northern Army, to be paid out of money lodged by Mr. Sherman, if any such, otherwise to be paid in the proper money of this State, and to be in account.

Order given 28th August, 1776; delivered to E. Ledyard, Esq.

Voted, To order the Sheriff of New-London County to transport all the Prisoners from Albany, now confined in New-London Jail, to Preston, there to be delivered into the care of the Committee of Inspection of Preston, and to be kept on their parole, viz: William Pemberton, Alexander Campbell, Thomas Swords, Samuel Anderson, to be supported at their own expense, and Walter Scott, John Scott, Jacob Zimmerman, Nicholas Weaver, Ralph Watson, John Duzenbury, Frederick Williams, Henry Wytenhouse, Dugal Campbell, Benjamin Grinman, Owen Conner, William McMullen, Israel Osborne, and Samuel Messenger, to be allowed to labour for their support, under the inspection of the Committee of Preston.

Order given to the Sheriff and to the Committee August 28, 1776.

Memorandum: August 31, 1776, Colonel Huntington, Colonel Elderkin, Major Hillhouse, and Mr. Wales, attended on business with his Honour the Governour.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Newbury, August 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: According to your desire the Continental men under my inspection have tarried, and about twenty-five have inlisted to tarry until the 1st of December, to be under the command of Samuel Atkinson, Captain, Jonathan Robbins, Lieutenant, and Peter Dustin, Ensign, and will wait upon you for the bounty, marching money, and further orders, as I did not think best to inlist the inhabitants, and have sent Mr. Atkinson and the other two to inlist the remainder. The men will certainly be wanted. If our Army should proceed over the Lake, we shall employ them in that service, to make the road, drive the cattle, &c.; if not, the enemy will certainly come to us. I have sent to General Gates, and doubtless shall in two days know the certainty, and shall transmit to you. Colonel Hand will inform of other matters.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest regard, your most humble servant,

JACOB BAYLEY.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JOHN HANSON.

[No. 164.]

Annapolis, August 28, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of your requests contained in your letter of the 24th instant, we have ordered the Treasurer of the Western-Shore to pay to Mr. Edelin £250, to be applied by the Committee towards the support of the prisoners in Frederick-Town. When this sum is nearly expended, you will be pleased to inform the Council of Safety thereof, that a further supply may be ordered. We are, &c.

To John Hanson, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CHARLES COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 165.]

Annapolis, August 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Conway is just ready to sail, and wants one hundred and fifty pounds of cannon powder. Be pleased to let him have it, and we will cause it to be replaced. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation of Charles County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO ROBERT BERRY.

[No. 166.]

Annapolis, August 28, 1776.

SIR: You are to proceed from hence to the coal mine in Virginia, and there endeavour to purchase five or six thousand bushels of coal. If you can hire vessels to bring the same up, the freight, as also the value of the vessels, if taken by the enemy, will be paid by the State of Maryland.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Robert Berry.

CAPTAIN DARNES TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Chesterstown, Kent County, August 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take this opportunity, by Mr. Smith, to inform you my company is now on their march. Have received knapsacks, haversacks, cartouch-boxes, bayonet-belts, and gun-slugs; but are at a loss for camp-kettles, tent-cloth, and blankets, not having more than about forty blankets: the men complain for the want of them. If we could be furnished with cloth, we could now have tents made here. Captains Smith's and Perkins's companies are exceedingly well fitted with tents. It seems, from the number of troops that have marched for the northward, it would be almost impossible to be supplied there.

Gentlemen, if your Board should think proper to supply me with tent-cloth, camp-kettles, and more blankets, shall think myself infinitely obliged. The things might be put on board a Rockhall boat, where we may get them very handily.

I have had no cash for the support of my company, which I am much in want of.

Mr. Winters has not returned from Annapolis, therefore have not got our arms from him yet.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,
JOHN DARNES.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COMMANDING OFFICER OF VIRGINIA BATTALION.

Philadelphia, August 28, 1776.

SIR: The Congress being informed that you are on your march to New-Jersey, with intention to pass through Yorktown and Philadelphia, I have it in charge to direct that you continue your march from Yorktown by the nearest route to New-Jersey, (avoiding Philadelphia on account of the small-pox,) where, on your arrival, you will execute such orders as General Washington shall think proper to give you.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,
JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Colonel _____, Commanding Officer of one of the Virginia Battalions.

PETITION OF JEAN LAUGEAY, ARTIFICIAL FIREWORKER.

[August 28, 1776, read and referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Continental Congress:

HONOURABLE SIR: Your petitioner, Jean Laugeay, Frenchman, has been brought up to the art of artificial fireworks in France, an art so necessary to make signals and render lights, both to the navies and armies in camp, at the time of night, as to be looked upon by most nations in Europe as a considerable branch of the art of war; the importance whereof being so little known in this part of the world, has induced the petitioner to offer his service to the honourable the Continental Congress of America to be employed by them in the art of fireworks, and in such a station as they may, on inquiring into his character and abilities, judge him most capable of.

Should this honourable House think proper to employ the petitioner in their service, he shall by every means in his power endeavour to discharge the duty intrusted to him with every mark of honesty and fidelity.

I am, honourable sirs, with the utmost duty and respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,

JEAN LAUGEAY.

PETITION OF PAUL FOOKS.

[Referred to the Board of War, 1776.]

To the Honourable the Continental Congress, &c.:

The humble Petition of PAUL FOOKS respectfully sheweth:

That your petitioner, having served under the former, and having been continued under the present Government of this State, in the office of Notary Publick and Interpreter of the French and Spanish languages, and being zealous to serve the righteous cause of American liberty to the utmost of his abilities, he presumes to offer his services to this honourable House as their Interpreter for the said languages. If he has the honour to be employed in this station, he flatters himself he may be useful, as many foreigners who daily arrive here are at a loss for such assistance.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

PAUL FOOKS.

War Office, Philadelphia, August 28, 1776.

As there is the most pressing necessity for all the troops, without exception, who are now in Philadelphia on their way to the camp, to march to Amboy, in the State of New-Jersey, it is hereby most earnestly requested that they do immediately proceed, without waiting for further supplies of arms or any other matter or thing, as care will be taken to furnish them when they arrive at camp.

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

CÆSAR RODNEY TO THOMAS RODNEY.

Philadelphia, August 28, 1776.

SIR: I have at last got from the shoemaker and sent down by the post Betsy's and Sally's shoes. I don't know which pair is Betsy's or which is Sally's; this they must find out themselves, if they ever come safe to hand. However, I know they are very dear, to wit: 14s. 6d. a pair.

I intended to come down, but have been prevailed on by the other Delegates to stay and attend Congress during their absence, the business in Congress being important to each Colony, especially ours. They proposed that the Convention should give the power of voting for the Colony to one Delegate, to prevent our Colony suffering while they were engaged in other business. This I consented to, being determined that the folly and ingratitude of the people shall not divert my attention from the publick good. I have seen Independence declared, and when I see this campaign well ended, (as I hope it will,) and regular Government established, then I intend to leave the publick and take the private paths of life. Future generations will honour these names, that are neglected by the present race.

As soon as I received the accounts from Kent and New-Castle of the elections, I wrote to Mr. McKean at Amboy, and desired he would give immediate attendance at the Convention. He got my letter, and in consequence thereof came to Philadelphia on Sunday night last, and set out yesterday morning very early to New-Castle. While he was here I mentioned to him the circumstance of vesting the power of voting (in Congress) in one Delegate. He liked much to have the power in one, but was so averse to, and determined against, the Convention taking upon them or concerning with the least iota, except the barely framing a plan of Government, that he was of opinion he should never consent to their appointing Delegates, or even altering their power, lest they should afterwards be inclined to hold it out as a precedent for their taking upon themselves some other matters which he thinks they would willingly be at. He says, for his part he is tired of attending the Congress, but is determined they shall turn him nor no one else out; that if they are determined to do those things by the strength of their majority, he will try the strength of the country with them, even at the risk of the Court-House.

In the opinion of many people, the Convention of this Province are making such strides as will effectually knock up both them and their plan. When our Delegates return, I am to go home for the remainder of the fall. I am by promise to hear by every opportunity how they go on at New-Castle.

About ten thousand of the enemy are landed on Long-Island. They have been skirmishing every day since, and we are constantly looking for something important. Washington is in high spirits; says they have overstayed their time, and that he is now ready for them; the sooner the better.

Putnam commands on Long-Island, and has with him Major-General Sullivan, Brigadier-General Lord Stirling, and three other Brigadiers. Remember me kindly to my relations and friends.

I am yours, &c.,

CÆSAR RODNEY.

To Thomas Rodney.

P. S. I wrote to Colonel Haslet since the battalion went to New-York, but have not yet got an answer; therefore don't know how they are there.

DOCTOR FRANKLIN TO GENERAL GATES.

Philadelphia, August 28, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The Congress being advised that there was a probability that the Hessians might be induced to quit the British service by offers of land, came to two resolves for this purpose, which, being translated into German and printed, are sent to Staten-Island, to be distributed, if practicable, among those people. Some of them have tobacco marks on the back, that so tobacco being put up in them in small quantities, as the tobaccoists use, and suffered to fall into the hands of these people, they might divide the papers as plunder before their officers could come to the knowledge of the contents, and prevent their being read by the men. That was the first resolve. A second has since been made for the officers themselves. I am desirous to send some of both sorts to you, that, if you find it practicable, you may convey them among the Germans that shall come against you.

The Congress continue firmly united, and we begin to distress the enemy's trade very much, many valuable prizes being continually brought in. Arms and ammunition are also continually arriving, the French having resolved to permit the exportation to us, as they heartily wish us success; so that in another year we shall be well provided.

As you may not have seen Dr. Price's excellent pamphlet, for writing which the city of London presented him a freedom in a gold box of fifty pounds' value, I send you one of them.

My last advices from England say that the Ministry have done their utmost in fitting out this armament; and that, if it fails, they cannot find means next year to go on with the war. While I am writing comes an account that the armies were engaged on Long-Island, the event unknown, which throws us into anxious suspense. God grant success.

I am, &c.,

B. FRANKLIN.

To Horatio Gates.

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read August 29, 1776.]

Newark, August 28, 1776, five o'clock A. M.

SIR: General Washington had wrote me that some reinforcements would be necessary at New-York and Powles Hook; such troops as composed or were inlisted for the Flying-Camp were ordered to proceed immediately for this place. On the way yesterday evening, General Wooster's Aid-de-Camp met me, with a few lines from the General, signifying it was General Washington's orders that I should march, with all our Army under my command, immediately to Powles Hook. The necessary orders were sent to Amboy, Woodbridge, and Elizabeth-Town, last night, and I hope to have on Bergen, ready to pass over to New-York, if required, from three to four thousand men. Our whole force, including the New-Jersey Militia, from Powles Hook to Shrewsbury, amounts to eight thousand and three hundred. I have directed fifteen hundred to be left at Amboy, four hundred at Woodbridge, and five hundred at Elizabeth-Town. Many of the Pennsylvanians have joined us with arms unfit for service, and some have refused to march on. What I can collect of the operations of yesterday is, that early in the morning the enemy advanced within forty yards of our lines; they received so well-directed fire of cannon and musketry, which obliged them to retreat, that a considerable body from our works sallied out and attacked them, but were repulsed, and obliged to give way to superior numbers.

Some men-of-war tried to get up to New-York, but the tide failed them; one was as high as Red Hook. It was believed that next tide, which makes early this morning, would bring them up. General Washington, with the greater part of the Army, was on Long-Island yesterday; and the action continued at two o'clock, when the note from General Wooster was sent off. Considerable firing has been heard this morning, which still continues. What troops are here I am pushing on to Bergen, and shall be with them immediately.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
HUGH MERCER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 28, 1776.

Yesterday morning the enemy stole through the woods I mentioned to you in my last our men were posted in; it is so extensive we could not sufficiently guard it. They have gained a little ground, but have bought it almost as dear as they did Bunker's Hill. Our Army, at least the small part that was engaged, behaved most manfully; they, as it were, surrounded our people, and we were obliged to fight our way through them. Colonel Smallwood's battalion has gained immortal honour. He was not with it himself; Lord Stirling commanded it, and the Delaware battalion, as part of his brigade. They fought the enemy, treble in number, in open field, several hours, till at last, surrounded on the side of a small creek, they were obliged to make the best retreat they could. Most of them swam the creek. Lord Stirling, at the head of three companies, attempted to force his way through the enemy. Captains Bowie, Veazey, Lieutenants Sterret, Wright, Coursey, Dent, Builer, Praul, Ensigns Furnandes, Courts, are missing, and about one hundred and fifty men of Smallwood's battalion. The officers gave Lord Stirling the character of as brave a man as ever lived. We are very sorry for his loss, and are fearful that he is killed, from the danger he was seen in. General Sullivan is likewise missing, and many other officers, with about three hundred men; however, we are still in hopes of seeing many of them, as they are constantly coming in, having got round through the country; General Parsons has come in in the same way, after being out all this morning. I assure you there has been severe work on both sides. Our people who have come in say the fields and woods are covered with dead bodies; and a deserter informs the enemy have lost near six hundred men. I have the pleasure to inform you among their slain is General Grant, lately Colonel Grant, of the House of Commons, who gave the Americans the character of cowards. General Parsons saw his body; but the soldier who killed him and got his papers, &c., is missing. The enemy once attempted to force our lines, but were repulsed, and are now encamped about a mile from us.

Colonel Smallwood and Colonel Ware were necessarily detained here on a Court-Martial for the trial of Colonel Zedtwitz, who is sentenced to be broke, and rendered incapable of ever holding any military office.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 28, 1776.

We yesterday had a severe engagement with the enemy on Long-Island; they came through a wood where we were posted, in order to come to our lines; they did make an attempt to force them, but were repulsed; they gained a little ground, but at as great a price almost as they did Bunker's Hill. We have missing on our part General Sullivan, and about three hundred others. The Island is so extensive, and the enemy having got round our people, that many of our men made their way through into the country, and are constantly coming in; General Parsons was missing in the same way, but came in this morning. From our people who have come in, we learn the enemy have lost great numbers; a deserter informs near six hundred.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED HEAD-QUARTERS, LONG-ISLAND, AUGUST 28, 1776.

Yesterday General Washington and his suite came over to this place upon receiving intelligence that Generals Howe and Clinton had landed with all the troops, except a few to guard Staten-Island. Immediately on our arrival we heard the noise of a very smart engagement with musketry and field-pieces; it proved to be Lord Stirling's brigade, consisting of Smallwood's regiment from Maryland, the Delaware regiment commanded by Haslet, and Pennsylvania regiment commanded by Atlee, besides some others, who behaved like heroes. They were surrounded by the enemy, who received constant and large reinforcements, whilst our brave men could not get the least assistance from their friends, as there were not men sufficient to fill our lines, and we expected an attack every minute. There were several other smart and pitched battles till evening, when Lord Stirling's men began to retreat. We have about five hundred and fifty missing at present. This morning General Parsons came in with a few men; he brings an account that the enemy have lost five hundred men, and a hat, with two bullet holes, marked Colonel Grant, and his watch. I wish it was General Grant, but their great officers don't like venturing. In the evening the enemy had a number of tents pitched about a mile distance. This morning about four o'clock I accompanied the General around the works, and we saw very large encampments; by these appearances, and information, the enemy are twenty thousand strong. Our sentries are very near theirs, who are about a quarter of a mile distance.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN THE MARYLAND BATTALION, DATED LONG-ISLAND, WEDNESDAY MORNING, DAYBREAK, AUGUST 28, 1776.

I have the pleasure to inform you I have survived a very warm engagement yesterday. Our battalion has suffered much; a great number of both officers and men are killed and missing. We retreated through a very heavy fire, and escaped by swimming over a river, or creek rather. My height was of use to me, as I touched almost all the way. A number of men got drowned. I have lost no officers and but few men. Captain Veazey and Lieutenant Butler fell early in the engagement. We are now all safe in our lines and forts.

The affair yesterday was only a skirmish on the Island, about three miles from our works. The particulars I cannot now give you, but we were deceived, and at one time surrounded with, I am convinced, ten thousand men. Our General, Lord Stirling, is missing.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LONG-ISLAND, DATED AUGUST 28, 1776.

Yesterday's occurrences, no doubt, will be described to you in various ways. I embrace this leisure moment to give as satisfactory an account as I am able. A large body of the enemy that landed some time since on Long-Island, at the end of a beautiful plain, had extended their troops about six miles from the place of their first landing. There were at this time eleven regiments of our troops posted in different parts of the woods, between our lines and the enemy, through which they must pass if they attempted anything against us.

Early in the morning our scouting parties discovered a large body of the enemy, both horse and foot, advancing on the Jamaica road towards us. I was despatched to General Putnam to inform him of it. On my way back I discovered, as I thought, our battalion on a hill coming in, dressed in hunting-shirts, and was going on to join them, but was stopped by a number of our soldiers, who told me they were the enemy in our dress; on this I prevailed on a Sergeant and two men to halt and fire on them, which produced a shower of bullets, and we were obliged to retire.

In the mean time the enemy, with a large body, penetrated through the woods on our right and centre, or front, and about nine o'clock landed another body on their right, the whole stretching across the fields and woods between our works and our troops, and sending out parties accompanied with Light-Horse, which harassed our surrounded and surprised new troops, who, however, sold their lives dear. Our forces then made towards our lines, but the enemy had taken possession of the ground before them by stolen marches. Our men broke through parties after parties, but still found the enemy's thousands before them. Colonel Smallwood's, Atlee's, and Haslet's battalions, with General Stirling at their head, had collected on an eminence and made a good stand, but the enemy fired a field-piece on them, and being greatly superior in number, obliged them to retreat into a marsh, and finding it out of their power to withstand about six thousand men, they waded through the mud and water to a mill opposite them. Their retreat was covered by the Second Battalion which had got into our lines. Colonel Lutz's and the New-England regiments after this made some resistance in the woods, but were obliged by superior numbers to retire.

Colonel Miles's and Colonel Broadhead's battalions, finding themselves surrounded, determined to fight and run; they did so, and broke through English, Hessians, &c., and dispersed Horse, and at last came in with considerable loss. Colonel Parry was early in the day shot through the head, encouraging his men. Eighty of our battalion came in this morning, having forced their way through the enemy's rear, and came round by way of Hell-Gate; and we expect more, who are missing, will come in the same way.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of }
New-York, at Haerlem, August 28, 1776. }

SIR: I am commanded by the Convention to enclose to your Excellency the copy of a letter they received last evening from General Woodhull.

The Convention are of opinion that the enemy may be prevented from getting the stock and grain on Long-Island, if the regiments under the command of Colonel Smith and Colonel Remsen be sent to join General Woodhull. That this junction may be effected, and how, Major Lawrence (who is a member of this Convention and the bearer hereof) will inform your Excellency.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

By order: ABM. YATES, JUN., President.
To His Excellency General Washington.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of }
New-York, at Haerlem, August 28, 1776. }

SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of a letter which the Convention of this State have directed to several of the Committees of your State, requesting their assistance in removing the inhabitants and stock from Long-Island. The Convention are sensible that the first application should have been to your Excellency, but necessity has obliged them to dispense with form, which they doubt not you will consider a sufficient apology.

The Militia of Long-Island are for the most part shut up within the lines, so that nothing can be done for its defence without your assistance. The Convention therefore find themselves under a necessity of applying to your Excellency for one thousand men, or any greater force which can speedily be obtained, who they conceive may greatly contribute to the security of the Island, and at the same time, in some measure, coöperate with our Army in the lines, or at least greatly weaken the attack of the enemy.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

By order: ABM. YATES, JUN., President.
To His Excellency Governour Trumbull.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of }
New-York, at Haerlem, August 28, 1776. }

Instructions for Lieutenant WHITCOMB, going on a party of Observation into CANADA.

From the verbal instructions which you have received you know, sir, the design of the enterprise on which you are sent. It is to gain intelligence of the present situation and intended future movements of the enemy in Canada. This is the important errand on which you are sent. To effect this, you will immediately proceed, with the party committed to your care, to the posts occupied by the troops of the British King in that country. You will view with the utmost attention the posts which you may approach; and if it can be effected, you will take some prisoner, an officer if possible, and if of rank, the more valuable.

You are not restricted as to the particular posts which you may visit. As far as your courage will lead, as far as your conduct and prudence will permit you to follow, so far you may advance into the enemy's country—always keeping in view the design with which you are sent, and avoiding any conduct by which you may be exposed to be discovered by the outposts, the parties, or sentries of the camps which you may think proper to reconnoitre.

You are positively forbid to fire upon, to kill, to wound, to scalp, or in any way to injure the life or person of any one engaged in the service of the enemy, except in your own defence, and where the preservation of your own person or party may require it. 'Tis not by sacrificing a few unhappy victims who may fall into our hands that the important controversy which may fall into our hands that the important controversy between Great Britain and this country is to be settled. Regard particularly this part of your orders, and of all things avoid a conduct which can be of no service to us, and will only put us on a level with our enemies, who have not been content with permitting, but have even encouraged, this practice, so repugnant to humanity and sound policy. In this only you are restricted. For the rest, an entire confidence is reposed on your prudence and experience.

I expect that when you have accomplished the design on which you are sent, you will return as speedily as may be to Head-Quarters, and report the success of your enterprise. The Commissary has my orders to supply you with everything necessary for you on your expedition.

Wishing you success in your enterprise, and a safe return, and recommending you to the care of Heaven, I am your affectionate, &c.

HORATIO GATES, Major-General.

Tyonderoga, August 19, 1776.

Extract of a Letter from the Hon. Major-General SCHUYLER to the Hon. Brigadier-General WATERBURY, dated ALBANY, August 17, 1776.

Yesterday Mr. Trumbull informed me that he was advised, from good authority, that some of the Militia had caused themselves to be inoculated on their march to Skenesborough, as had also a number of Rhode-Island carpenters. A conduct so wicked, and so evidently destructive to the Army, merits the severest animadversions, and the utmost exertions to prevent the dangerous consequences. You will therefore please to despatch three or four trusty officers to the different roads which the Militia take in their way to Skenesborough, with positive orders to remove all officers and soldiers infected with the small-pox to a distance from the roads; no excuse is to be taken; no plea of danger to the infected is to be attended to. The life of individuals is not to be put into competition with that of the States. If any of the inhabitants are infected, the officers now may, and are to apply to the Committees or Selectmen of the town to have them removed to such places that the troops may not be endangered in their march. Those officers are also to take the name of every officer and soldier that has been inoculated on the march to or at Skenesborough, specifying to what corps they belong. They are also strictly to forbid any officer or soldier, or any other person whatsoever, that has lately had the small-pox, from joining the Army, unless such person can produce a certificate from some surgeon or physician, countersigned by the Committee or Magistracy of the town in which such surgeon or physician resides, and sworn to by the party himself, that there is no danger of communicating the infection.

This is a matter of so much importance, that if I was not indisposed I would hasten to the Eastern country and try to put away this worst of evils.

A true copy, per

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL HARTLEY.

Tyonderoga, August 28, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour by the bearer. I apprehend, by the extreme bad weather and contrary wind, that General Arnold has not got far from Crown-Point. I did not apprehend he would think it necessary to take any of your men with him down the Lake, as the vessels had all their full complement of men from hence. As he has done it, I suppose he will acquaint me by the first boat with his intention in so doing. In the mean time, if you think you are in want of a reinforcement, I will, as soon as the Continental regiments arrive, send a detachment from them. They are expected in a day or two. I recommend it to you to be exceedingly vigilant and alert during the absence of the fleet, and that you will constantly send an express boat with intelligence of every extraordinary circumstance that comes to your knowledge.

There is no news from New-York since I wrote to you last.

I am, dear sir, your affectionate humble servant,

HOR. GATES.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley.

P. S. A sloop and a gondola will be with you this evening or to-morrow morning.

COLONEL MAXWELL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 6, 1776.]

Ticonderoga, August 28, 1776.

SIR: The honourable station you fill at present gives me reason to believe you have ever been a lover of justice; and, if it is possible, I make no doubt you will now be more so. I therefore thought proper to enclose you the within Memorial, and beg you will present it to your honourable House for their perusal; and you will much oblige, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

WM. MAXWELL.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

To the Honourable the Continental Congress: the Memorial of Colonel WILLIAM MAXWELL humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist, in October last, was, by the unanimous vote of the Provincial Congress, chosen and recommended to your honourable House to be a Colonel in the Continental service, which you were pleased to approve of. He has, since that time, served his country to the utmost of his power, and hopes with some good effect, which he can make appear if requisite; notwithstanding, he finds himself much aggrieved by having a younger officer, viz: Colonel St. Clair, promoted over him. He presumes that Colonel St. Clair's friends will not pretend to say he has served his country with more zeal than your memorialist has done. But what will the Continent think, where a younger officer is preferred, but that the older is not fit for it? Your memorialist has served under five Generals this campaign in Canada, viz: Arnold, Wooster, Thomas, Thompson, and Sullivan, and hopes to their satisfaction; and does not doubt but he might have had, or could have still, as good recommendations as any officer there, but did not think he needed it, as he could not suspect a younger officer would be put over him without some fault; and he thought he had a tolerable right to be acquainted with his duty, from a constant service in the Army of fifteen years since the spring of 1758.

Gentlemen, he assures you he would have quitted the service immediately, but that the present alarming state of his country requires his presence in the field; therefore he takes this method to inform you wherein he thinks himself aggrieved, that your honourable House may redress it if you find his complaint well founded.

He is, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

THE MEMORIALIST.

COLONEL PHINNEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Rutland, August 28, 1776.

SIR: I this minute received yours, and shall make the best of my way to Ticonderoga the way you have directed. I was stopped in consequence of orders from General Schuyler, three miles this side the river, but took such steps to forward my regiment, without disobedience of orders, as I imagine you will approve of when I acquaint you with them, having my orders from Number Four in writing.

From your Honour's humble servant,

EM. PHINNEY.

To Major-General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, August 28, 1776.

SIR: Your agreeable favour of the 20th instant came duly to hand, and is before me. Your assiduous attention to the great concerns of the publick at this important period is, in the minds of the considerate, a most undissembled declaration of your hearty attachment to the interest of the United States of America. Whatever reports may have been spread by the disaffected, or opinions had by the mistaken or ill-informed, I hope neither your character nor the cause of our country will eventually suffer thereby. Your painful industry and substantial services to the publick, cannot fail to remove all jealousy from the well-affected. As to Tories, no very good offices to one in your place can be expected from them. I flatter myself that no misrepresentations of theirs will have credit enough in this State greatly to wound your character or prevent your usefulness. It requires the wisdom of a Solomon and the patience of a Job to endure traduction, or regard a slander with the contempt it deserves. I heartily wish the injury may not give too much anxiety to a mind possessed of a conscious rectitude of intention.

Your account of Indian affairs affords some pleasing hopes that the frontiers will remain without depredations from them, though little dependance ought to be had on Indian faith.

I have ordered Mr. Brown to find the place on his road from whence the most direct conveyance may be had to Albany, and from thence to send some trusty person to carry the letters directed there and return with the answers. The cash for axes, &c., as well as what was advanced to the troops, will be very acceptable. A suitable person will wait on the Paymaster with the accounts in order for the balance.

About ten thousand of the enemy's troops were landed on the west end of Long-Island on Thursday and Friday last. Several skirmishes have happened between parties from the different armies, and the event hitherto in our favour, but no general engagement had come on before Saturday, when the last intelligence came from thence. May the exertion of these injured States, under the apparent smiles and protection of Heaven, be sufficient to retort the blow on the heads of those who give it, and the justice of a Divine Providence be magnified in the sight of all nations.

I have great confidence that the utmost care will be taken to prevent the spreading of the small-pox; that the imprudence of such as have promoted inoculation will be duly noticed.

I am, with sentiments of esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient servant,

JONA. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

New-Haven, August 28, 1776.

Last Monday passed our harbour, standing to the westward, two frigates—the Niger, of thirty-two guns, Captain Talbot, the other is said to carry twenty-eight guns; also a large brig of sixteen or eighteen guns, who had in company two small vessels supposed to be prizes. They left the English fleet near New-York last Friday sevensnight, and it is probable will remain in the Sound to interrupt our communication with the Army at New-York.

COL. STICKNEY TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Concord, August 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Pursuant to orders received from Major-General Folsom, dated the 3d of July last, requiring me forthwith to raise and equip one hundred and sixteen men out of the regiment under my command, in order to reinforce the Army under General Sullivan, supposed to be at Crown-Point, and to make return of my doings thereon to you, I immediately issued my orders to the several Captains in my regiment to forthwith raise their respective quotas. And by the returns they have made me of their doings therein, it appears that the whole number of said men are raised, equipped, and marched to the place of their destination.

I am your most humble servant,

THOMAS STICKNEY,
Colonel of the 13th Regiment of the Colony of New-Hampshire.

To the Hon. the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-Hampshire.

MAJOR DANIEL ILSLEY'S COMPLAINT AGAINST COL. MITCHELL.

Falmouth, August 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am sorry to trouble you with an account of the disagreeable situation of our troops under the command of Colonel Mitchell. The Colonel has all along shown himself more unlike a soldier or a gentleman than anything else. The task is disagreeable to show to the publick the deserts of a superior. I am sensible of the disadvantage I am under when speaking of such. If it was only the personal ill treatment received myself, knowing my obligation to my superior, I might have borne with such usage. When the Colonel took the command, it was my greatest ambition (knowing him utterly unacquainted with the business he had engaged in) to inform him, as far as my small abilities would admit of. It was by the Colonel's desire I kept the Orderly Book in the same manner as whilst I commanded. He never, in the least, controlled me. All he had to do with the matter was, to sign his name to the orders. Yet I was often abused in other matters. As to his giving any instructions concerning the lines, forts, batteries, or preparing tools, timber, plank, wood, or iron, for gun-carriages, he did not choose to concern himself with. The reason, I suppose, is, there was a possibility of marking the latter, provided the General Court should disapprove such proceedings. By this time the new arrangement came to Falmouth for ranking the Captains; at which time I requested the Colonel to give general orders to the regiment in his own name, that they might know their alarm-post and their duty in case of an alarm, and the duty of guards, and to establish the rank of Captains. The Colonel refused giving any orders of the kind to anybody, except Captains Morton and Lowell; which the Colonel asked me to write. I declined, telling him I could not think it proper to give orders to two Captains only, when the whole regiment was neglected. I then desired the Colonel to call the regiment together, and let them know their ranks. The Colonel replied, he should not meddle with the matter. I told him I was informed the Council had ranked the regiment. He said it was the first he had heard of it. I told him I was well informed there was an order of Council in Falmouth for ranking the Captains. He replied, it was the first he had heard of it; the matter was entirely new to him. I replied the third time in these words: Colonel, I am well informed that an order of Council has been delivered into your hand for that purpose, and I am surprised to hear you say you never heard of it. The Colonel, in passion, said, if the Council had done any such thing, it was the most astonishing proceeding he ever heard of; the Council had taken that upon them that did not belong to them; that he did not believe the Council concerned with it, for he had no letters with it; and talked with Colonel Powell, and Colonel Powell said he had never heard a word of it, and did not believe the Council ever concerned with ranking the Captains; and if he (Colonel Mitchell) executed that order, Captains Hooper and Lithgow would leave the service; that the rank was only the Falmouth Representatives, without his desire; that he only asked them to get Captain Morton ranked. I told the Colonel that was not the case, for I was present; that he would be glad to have them ranked, and made no dissensions who should be put on last in rank; and the Colonel well knew that the regiment was at that time without rank, from the day that he first mentioned them, which was on the 19th of May. As to the two companies leaving the service, I am sorry such things should be mentioned. We have six companies: five of them are agreed to a man, if I am not deceived. I am sorry it should be said by the Colonel that Captain Lithgow would leave for such reasons. It is far from it. He is a gentleman well attached to the cause of his country, studies for the peace of the regiment, and is willing to continue in Falmouth, or march into any part of America, if called upon. Colonel Mitchell has not reviewed the regiment since the 19th of May, or ordered them together since the 29th. I have often plead with the Colonel, and urged the necessity of the regiment being well disciplined. I have attempted to call the regiment together for exercise and review, and the Colonel has forbade any such thing more than once or twice to myself; and he has forbade Captains Lithgow, Lord, and Lowell, of meeting together at the parade, or exercising together, and told them it was contrary to his orders for any regimental parade whatever, and he would allow of no such thing. If he would permit as many companies as have a desire of exercising together, they should take it as a favour. But the Colonel refused them, as they informed me, saying it might be considered as a regimental parade, which he did not allow of. The four Captains have been reprimanded for marching to the Meeting-House with four companies together on the Sabbath, though agreeable to his own orders of August 11th and 18th; yet so contrary to his mind, that he sent a new order for all the Captains to march separate, dated at twelve o'clock. The enclosed is a copy. Is it possible for officers and soldiers, who are well attached to the cause of their country, to bear this from a man who has not the least idea of a soldier or his duty? Neither will he be advised by his officers, but compels his regiment to live in the neglect of their duty. I see no part of his conduct as a soldier but what is arbitrary, and depending entirely upon his own will. That man who will be compelled to live in the neglect of his duty, is unworthy the name of a soldier. You will find by the Colonel's orders of August 11th and 18th, that I am ordered to see them complied with; that the regiment go to meeting in order; the drums give the time of day as they march. I know of no order but the drums and companies going together. The Colonel was so displeased to see four companies march agreeable to his own orders, though not to his mind, that he sent out the new order, dated August 18, twelve o'clock, which you have enclosed. The officers were surprised; some of whom appealed to me to know my mind concerning the orders. I told them it was the Sabbath; I was loth to advise; but as I had the Colonel's order for the duty of the day, I should be on the parade at the usual times; if the companies were there, I should lead them to the Meeting-House, which was accordingly done. The Colonel, it seems, was very angry to see that the regiment were like to be united. The officers were reprimanded for disobeying orders. The Colonel will not talk with me, on the subject, but a great deal about me. It is true the soldiers have done a great deal of work in fortifying, and with cheerfulness, which is not common amongst soldiers; and could we be permitted to qualify ourselves for their defence, it might be the means, under God, of saving part of the country from the ravages of our enemies. I would not be understood that I am clear of all blame. Neither do I contend on my own account. It cost me many a wearisome hour, when I might be at rest, could I be content to live in the neglect of my duty. The post we hold is of the greatest importance to this State; and should the enemy attack us, whilst Colonel Mitchell will not suffer the regiment to be reviewed, regulated, or exercised, or give any orders for that purpose, the consequence must be shocking. The Militia that would probably come to our assistance, might expect to see us in some order. I wish it might prove so.

I shall take it as a favour if you will lay my letter before the honourable Court, or before the honourable Council for this State, as soon as it conveniently can be done. I think it is a duty which has too long been neglected.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your dutiful servant at command,

DANIEL ILSLEY.

To the Gentlemen Representatives for the Town of Falmouth.

We, the subscribers, commissioned officers of five companies stationed at Falmouth, do hereby certify to all whom it may concern, that Major Daniel Ilsley, second in command at this place, has invariably discovered a disposition to support the order and promote the discipline of the corps in this regiment, a laudable zeal in planning and forwarding the fortifications carrying on here, and we believe always aimed at preserving union and establishing harmony among the troops, and it is our opinion deserves the approbation of the officers as a gentleman and a soldier.

DANIEL ILSLEY'S PETITION.

To the Honourable Council for the State of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY: the Petition of DANIEL ILSLEY humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner being appointed by your Honours' commission second in command at Falmouth, which office he has endeavoured to honour by a faithful discharge of the obligation I was under for the honour done me in my appointment; but being prevented by Colonel Mitchell, my superior in command, whose conduct, as an officer, has been laid before your Honours by a letter or petition from the Committees of the several towns for the County of Cumberland, who must be better acquainted with the Colonel's proceedings as a soldier than others who are only acquainted with the Colonel's character as a private gentleman. The principal officers in the regiment being present at the time the Colonel was with the County Committee, their proceedings must be impartial, and their account of the Colonel's neglect is undoubtedly true. But the Colonel, on his return from Watertown, shew myself and the Captains an order from your Honours, laying aside all regimental parade, and rank of the regiment unknown; which has alarmed the officers of the companies with a suspicion that we have been represented to your Honours as being disloyal—that our meeting together for exercise was attended with evils such as endangered the State. Your petitioner is of opinion, that should the enemy attack the sea-coast men whilst in such an unsettled state, many good soldiers must fall a sacrifice, or abandon their post with shame. Therefore pray your Honours would appoint a Committee from the honourable Board to examine the papers which have come to your Honours' knowledge concerning the neglect of Colonel Jonathan Mitchell.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

DANIEL ILSLEY.

In Council, October 11, 1776.

Read, and committed to John Whitcomb, Esq., to take the said Petition into consideration, and report.

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

FRANCIS SHAW, JUN., TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Machias, August 28, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: After removing many difficulties started by the crew of the Diligent, and laying wind-bound several days, we sailed from Piscataqua the 14th instant, and arrived here the 25th, after being confined in Gouldsbrough six days by the Viper man-of-war, who took sloops from this place within about five miles of us, as we run into Gouldsbrough, and lay off and on that harbour most of the time. As we had not more than half our complement of men, and them but very indifferent, Captain Lambert thought proper to let the ship remove before we should proceed. By persons that have been taken and released, we find that she has but ten carriage-guns, eighteen swivels, and about one hundred men—one half of them disaffected, and only want an opportunity of being properly engaged to rise on their officers. Her present station is between Grand Menan and Seguin. Should she fall in with two of your Honours' sloops-of-war, I dare say they would clear this coast of the greatest scourge they have had since the commencement of the present war. Should I succeed in getting a number of Indians, it would be impossible to get them to the westward unless the Viper is removed from her station; add to that the distress this country must be in, as they get no provision from the westward past her, and the advantage our enemy has by supplying the British West-India Islands with lumber and fish they take. I would further add, that one or more ships are loading at Annapolis; that the inhabitants of Nova-Scotia come to Passamaquoddy for lumber for them; and as several of them have been taken and afterwards cleared by your Honours, our armed vessels are entirely discouraged from taking them; and unless some stop is put to that trade, and the Viper removed, the acts of the honourable Continental Congress against the English Islands being supplied will be frustrated, and the country ruined.

Captain Smith informs me that the Indians that have been in lately are very desirous of going to Cumberland; that some have offered to bring the Field-Officers of that regiment away; and from letters lately received from there, the gentlemen agree in opinion that the conquest of that Fort may be easily effected by our friends there and a few Indians. However, as your Honours would not give me liberty to go there, I shall not presume to do it, unless the prospect be so clear that I should think it a neglect of duty not to attempt it.

August 30th. Since I wrote you the foregoing, Mr. Gardner and several others taken in the sloops from this place, have arrived here. As Mr. Gardner takes passage in the Diligent, he can inform you that they have received accounts of my coming down, and both ships being sent to St. John's after us. Concluding it would not be prudent for the Diligent to proceed to St. John's, we have thought best for her to return to your Honours.

I shall just mention that the schooner's people complained of not being paid for past services, and were afraid it might be the same for this trip; therefore I was obliged to promise them that this muster roll would be paid them immediately on their return; and they now expect that your Honours will make my promise good.

Several bales of goods broke open on board the schooner, and one piece of linen and several small articles are missing; no doubt the Captain is accountable, for I often cautioned him against leaving the cabin door open when absent.

If the Diligent should be sold, the Captain has expressed a desire to serve your Honours in any other vessel that may be sent this way. As I can't pretend to be a suitable judge of the qualifications necessary for a commander, I shan't pretend to say than that he has brought us thus far safe, and I suppose would have gone farther if I had thought it prudent.

I met Mr. Preble at Piscataqua, and engaged him as Interpreter, which was very lucky, as the person I expected to get here is absent.

The reason I did not let the Diligent lay here, it was so uncertain when I should return, and the expense would have been much greater than proceeding in two boats with our provisions.

I have been two days waiting a fair wind; I shall embrace the first, and make all possible despatch, informing you of my proceedings by every favourable opportunity.

I remain, with much esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

FRAS. SHAW, JUN.

To the Honourable the Council and the Honourable House of Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay.

P. S. If I don't meet any vessel to take the Indians, I shall be moving westward in boats and canoes as far as Gouldsborough; there and at this place they may hear from me.

Halifax, August 28, 1776.

To secure us from any attacks that might be made by the Provincials, ten block-houses have been built, which mount sixteen guns each, and the troops in garrison here amount to about fifteen hundred; they consist of Marines, part of the Fourteenth Regiment, the Royal Emigrants, Nova-Scotia Volunteers, and Goreham's corps; we have also our Militia, and that of the dock-yard.

Some time since the dock-yard was set on fire, but happily extinguished without much damage; a like accident has since happened, and the Governour offered a reward of five hundred Spanish dollars to find out the persons concerned in setting fire to the same, as it was supposed to be wilfully done. 'Tis believed that the Provincials, by their spies, were at the bottom of it; some suspected persons were taken up, but discharged after examination, as no proof could be produced.

We hear that the Rebels have forbid, on pain of death, any person or persons holding correspondence or trading with the people of this Colony.

The troops that went from hence under convoy of the Tamar sloop-of-war, up the Bay of Fundy, were landed at Fort St. John's, where they are to do duty in case of any attack on that side.

MEMORIAL OF THE CHEVALIER SAURALLE.

[Read August 29, 1776.]

To the Honourable the Delegates of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA in Congress assembled:

The Memorial of the Chevalier SAURALLE humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist is a young officer, who, after serving two years as a volunteer in the Artillery at St. Domingo, obtained the rank of Lieutenant of that corps; to which he has preferred offering his services to the honourable Congress, as a letter from Mr. De la Valletiere, Governour of St. Nicholas Mole, shows; which letter, intended for the honourable Congress or General Washington, is without a direction, owing to the Governour's being unacquainted with the proper form of address; which is humbly submitted to the honourable Congress.

LE CHEV. SAURALLE.

August 29, 1776.

MONSIEUR: Un jeune homme bien né, dont le frere est Officier Major dans ma Dépendance, désire de préférence a une place d'officier dans le quartier d'aller servir sous vos ordres. Son activité et son intelligence me font présumer que vous l'emploierez avec plaisir. J'espère que vous en serez satisfait. Je m'intéresse a ce qu'il réussisse.

Je suis, avec un respectueuse attachement, votre très humble et très obéissant serviteur,

ORDINANCE PROPOSED FOR CONSIDERATION, BY THE CONVENTION OF PENNSYLVANIA.

A proposed Ordinance of the State of PENNSYLVANIA, declaring what shall be Treason, and for punishing the same and other crimes and practices against the State.

Whereas it ought at all times to be the particular care of Government to take the most effectual measures for the safety and security of the State, Be it therefore Ordained and Declared, and it is hereby Ordained and Declared by the Representatives of the Freemen of the State of PENNSYLVANIA in General Convention met, That all and every person and persons (except prisoners of war) now inhabiting or residing within the limits of the State of Pennsylvania, or that shall voluntarily come into the same hereafter to inhabit or sojourn, do, and shall, owe and pay allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania.

And be it further Ordained, by the authority aforesaid, That all and every such person and persons so owing allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania, who, from and after the publication hereof, shall levy war against this State, or be adherent to the King of Great Britain, or others the enemies of this State, or to the enemies of the United States of America, by giving him or them aid or assistance within the limits of this State, or elsewhere, and shall be thereof duly convicted in any Court of Oyer and Terminer hereafter to be erected, according to law, shall be judged guilty of high treason, and suffer death, and forfeit one moiety or half part of his lands, tenements, goods, and chattels, to the use of the State.

And be it further Ordained and Declared by the authority aforesaid, That any person or persons (except as before excepted) residing, inhabiting, or sojourning in this State, who shall hereafter know of such treason and conceal the same, or that shall receive or assist such traitor, knowing him to be such, and shall be thereof duly convicted as aforesaid, shall be adjudged guilty of misprision of treason, and suffer the forfeiture of two-thirds of his goods, lands, chattels, and tenements, to the use of the State, and be imprisoned any term not exceeding one year.

JOHN MORRIS, JUN., Secretary.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON TO WILLIAM HOOPER.

Camp at Elizabethtown Point, August 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I received yours of yesterday's date just after I had got into my new habitation, which is a markee tent in our encampment here. You would really be astonished to see how grand I look, while at the same time I can assure you I was never more sensible (to use a New-England phrase) of my own nothingness in military affairs. I removed my quarters from the town hither, to be with the men, and to enure them to discipline, which, by my distance from the camp before, considering what scurvy subaltern officers we are like ever to have while they are in the appointment of the mobility, I found it impossible to introduce. And the worst men (was there a degree above the superlative) would be still pejorated, by having been fellow soldiers with that discipline-hating, good-living loving, "to eternal fame damned," coxcombical crew we lately had here from Philadelphia.

My ancient corporeal fabrick is almost tottering under the fatigue I have lately undergone: constantly rising at two o'clock in the morning to examine our lines, which are and very extensive, till daybreak, and from that time perpetually till eleven in giving orders, sending despatches, and doing the proper business of Quartermasters, Colonels, Commissaries, and I know not what.

I have not been able to learn the particulars of Colonel Zedtwitz's crime. The report here is, that he was bribed by Governour Tryon to poison the well in the fortress he commanded, and that the letters were intercepted, and the poison was actually found in his chest; but it is folly to depend upon reports. When I can learn the particulars in a manner authentick, I shall be happy in finding an excuse for troubling my friend with another letter from your most humble servant,

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

To William Hooper, in Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 30, 1776.]

Long-Island, August 29, 1776, half-after-four } o'clock, A. M. }

SIR: I was last night honoured with your favour of the 27th, accompanied by sundry resolutions of Congress. Those respecting the officers, &c., that may be wounded in the service of the States, are founded much in justice, and I should hope may be productive of many salutary consequences; as to the encouragement to the Hessian officers, I wish it may have the desired effect. Perhaps it might have been better had the offer been sooner made.

Before this, you will probably have received a letter from Mr. Harrison, of the 27th, advising of the engagement between a detachment of our men and the enemy on that day. I am sorry to inform Congress that I have not yet heard either of General Sullivan or Lord Stirling, who, they would observe, were amongst the missing after the engagement; nor can I ascertain our loss. I am hopeful part of our men will yet get in: several did yesterday morning. That of the enemy is also uncertain: the accounts are various. I incline to think they suffered a good deal; some deserters say five hundred men were killed and wounded. There was some skirmishing the greatest part of yesterday between parties from the enemy and our people. In the evening it was pretty smart. The event I have not yet learned.

The weather of late has been extremely wet. Yesterday it rained severely the whole afternoon, which distressed our people much, not having a sufficiency of tents to cover them; and what we have, not got over yet. I am in hopes they will all be got to-day, and that they will be more comfortably provided, though the great scarcity of these articles distresses us beyond measure, not having anything like a sufficient number to protect our people from the inclemency of the weather, and which has occasioned much sickness, and the men to be almost broke down.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO GENERAL HEATH.

Long-Island, August 29, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: We have many battalions from New-Jersey, which are coming over this evening to relieve others here. You will please, therefore, to order every flat-bottomed boat and other craft, at your ports, fit for transporting troops, down to New-York as soon as possible. They must be manned by some of Colonel Hutchinson's men, and sent without the least delay. I write by order of the General.

I am affectionately yours,

T. MIFFLIN.

To Major-General Heath.

COLONEL JOSIAH SMITH TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Camp at Brookland, August 29, 1776.

I just now received orders from the General to march my regiment over to New-York, and there to receive orders from the Convention of New-York, which I desire you to send me by the bearer, Colonel Phineas Fanning.

JOSIAH SMITH, Colonel.

To the President of the Convention.

GENERAL ERSKINE TO THE INHABITANTS OF THE COUNTY OF SUFFOLK.

Head-Quarters, in Queen's County, August 29, 1776.

His Excellency General Howe having appointed me commanding officer for the eastern part of this Island, I do hereby strictly order and enjoin all persons whatsoever in your County of Suffolk, upon their peril, to use their utmost efforts to preserve the peace of said County; that all Committee-men, and others acting under the authority of the Rebels, immediately to cease and remain at their respective homes; that every man in arms lay them down forthwith, and surrender themselves, on pain of being treated as Rebels. And I hereby exhort all persons to be aiding and assisting his Majesty's forces, by furnishing them with whatever lays in their power; in particular, that they bring in their cattle (excepting milch cows and calves) for their supply, and their wagons and horses for transporting their baggage, &c., for all which they shall be fully paid, his Majesty having sent his Army not for the oppression, but for the protection of the inhabitants. But I must also signify, that unless they show a dutiful submission in all respects, and an immediate compliance with these orders respecting the cattle and wagons, I shall be under the necessity of marching the forces under my command without delay into the country, and laying waste the property of the disobedient, as persons unworthy his Majesty's clemency.

WILLIAM ERSKINE, Brigadier-General.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN COLONEL ATLEE'S BATTALION, DATED NEW-YORK, AUGUST 29, 1776.

I have just now come over to this place about some business, and embrace the opportunity of letting you know that I wrote you on the 27th instant, giving you some particulars of our engagement. I now have to acquaint you that the enemy, endeavouring to force our lines, met with a warmer reception than they thought of; for the batteries began to play, and mowed them down like grass, when they retreated, and our Army cried out, the day is our own; but am sorry to inform you that Generals Sullivan and Stirling are taken prisoners, and that we have missing (which I apprehend are also taken) Colonel Atlee, Captain Howell, Captain Herbert, Captain Murray, and Captain Nice, Lieutenant Finney, Ensign Hustin, and Dr. Davis, with eighty privates; so you may judge what a miserable battalion we must have. There is also missing from the Rifle battalion Colonel Miles and Colonel Piper, with several other officers, whose names I have not as yet heard, and a number of privates. The enemy, by accounts which we have received, have lost (killed, wounded, and taken prisoners) about eight hundred men, among whom is General Grant killed. We expect every hour a second engagement, which I pray God may be more prosperous on our side than the last; for besides what I have mentioned, the Delaware and Maryland battalions suffered much.

New-York, Thursday, August 29, 1776.

On Monday, by express, and by several other messengers since, we hear an armed brig of the enemy, with two sloops and some smaller vessels, are in the Sound, near White-Stone, a little above Hell-Gate.

Wednesday, in the afternoon, a great hail and rain storm came on, attended with thunder and lightning; at which time the Ministerial Army attacked our lines on Long-Island, at three different places, with their utmost force; but the intrepidity of the soldiers of the United States, joined with that vigour becoming a free people, repulsed them; that they were obliged immediately to retreat precipitately, with great loss, the particulars of which we have not as yet been able to learn. At the same time, some of the British men-of-war made an attempt to come up to the city, as they also did the day before, but the wind at both times entirely obstructed them; all their attempts we hope Heaven will still continue to render abortive.

The great, the important day, big with the fate of America and liberty, seems to draw near. The British troops began to land on Long-Island last Thursday, nearly their whole force, supposed to be more than twenty thousand British and foreign troops. They marched through the small town of New-Utrecht, in their way to Flatbush, another town about five miles from this city, near which they encamped, but were much harassed by our Riflemen. Scouting parties were sent from our Army to the adjoining woods, but were rather scanty in their numbers, considering the extent of ground they had to guard. The British forces, in three divisions, taking three different roads, and the advantage of the night, almost surrounded the whole of our out-parties, who, though encircled with more than treble their number, bravely fought their way through the enemy, killing great numbers of them, and brought off some prisoners. The New-York First Battalion behaved with great bravery. Lord Stirling's brigade sustained the hottest of the enemy's fire; it consisted of Colonel Miles's two battalions, Colonel Atlee's, Colonel Smallwood's, and Colonel Hatch's regiments; they were all surrounded by the enemy, and had to fight their way through the blaze of their fire. They fought and fell like Romans. Lieutenant-Colonel Parry, of the Pennsylvania Musketry, was shot through the head as he was giving orders to and animating his men. The major part of Colonel Allee's and Colonel Piper's regiments are missing. Dr. Davis and his Mate were both taken prisoners as they were dressing a wounded person in the woods. Colonel Miles is missing, (a truly amiable character,) and supposed to be slain. Generals Stirling and Sullivan are thought to be killed. General Parsons, with seven men, came in yesterday morning, much fatigued, being for ten hours in the utmost danger of falling into the enemy's hands. Our killed, wounded, and missing, are imagined to be about one thousand; but, for our encouragement, the missing are hourly coming in. General Grant, of the British troops, from good intelligence, is among the killed; his hat, with his name on it, was found lying near the dead body; the bullet had gone through the hat, and carried some of his grey hairs with it. Thus fell the hero who boasted in the British House of Commons he would march through America with five thousand men, having only marched five miles on Long-Island, with an Army of more than four times the number. Our out-guards have retreated to the main body of the Army within the lines. The British Army have two encampments about a mile from our lines; and, by their manœuvres, 'tis plain they mean to attack us by surprise, and storm our intrenchments. Our men show the greatest bravery, and wish them to come to action. The firing continued yesterday all the day.

On Tuesday twenty-two prisoners of the Regulars, among whom is a Captain, a Lieutenant, and an Ensign, were brought over; yesterday another, and the same day thirty-seven prisoners more were taken by one of our detached parties. On Tuesday five or six ships stood almost within reach of our grand battery, but came to an anchor, and yesterday morning dropped down again to the fleet.

The alarm was so great last Tuesday, (occasioned by the attack of the British troops,) the day appointed for fasting, humiliation, and prayer, in this State, for imploring Divine assistance in forming the new Government, that the churches were not opened, nor publick worship performed.

New-York, August 29, 1776.

On Tuesday, August 20, a number of ships, with troops on board, sailed from the British fleet at Staten-Island, through the Narrows, and next day were followed by many more. Next morning, (the 22d,) a number of troops, supposed to be about ten thousand men, landed between New-Utrecht and Gravesend, on Long-Island. On Friday, an advanced party took possession of Flatbush, where our people, having possession of the surrounding heights, kept a continual, though irregular, fire upon them, but at too great a distance to do much execution; however, some were killed and wounded on both sides; the enemy keeping up an almost constant fire upon our people from their mortars and field-pieces, loaded with grape-shot, &c. On Sunday, some of their men-of-war and transports got under sail, and it was supposed, were coming up; but it soon appeared they only went to cover the landing of more of their men on Long-Island, when great numbers of our men went over to strengthen our posts, and oppose the enemy. On Monday, it was observed that a large body of them, supposed to be near four thousand, were marching from their main body to their advanced posts. That night our people began to throw up intrenchments on the highest hill near Flatbush, which would have commanded the town; but the enemy having the same night formed a design to gain possession of the hill, it is said, both parties met, and a smart engagement between them began about four in the morning, and continued, together with severe skirmishes between many detached parties, all Tuesday and Wednesday, during which many were killed, wounded, and taken prisoners on both sides, and several are missing. Who kept possession of the hill at Flatbush, where the flag is still flying, we have not heard, nor which party has upon the whole the advantage. Many of our wounded people have been brought over. On Tuesday, twenty-two prisoners of the Regulars, among whom is a Captain, a Lieutenant, and an Ensign, were brought over; yesterday another, and the same day fifty-seven prisoners more were taken by one of our detached parties. The enemy attempted several times to force our lines, but were always repulsed with considerable slaughter, notwithstanding their superiority in point of discipline, and an extended front. On Tuesday, five or six ships stood almost within reach of our grand battery, but came to an anchor, and yesterday morning dropped down again to the fleet.

From the best accounts, we learn that the force of the Ministerial Army at Staten and Long Islands is about twenty-three thousand five hundred men; marines unknown. The fleet consists of the following: Ships Asia and Eagle, of sixty-four guns, the Roebuck and Phoenix, of forty-four, one bomb, and about twenty frigates and sloop-of-war. They have also about three hundred sail of transports, store-ships, and prizes.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED NEW-YORK, AUGUST 29, 1776,
FIVE O'CLOCK, P. M.

I am told the Court-Martial divided about Zedtwitz, and have sentenced him to be broke, and rendered forever incapable of holding any military office; but I do not learn that the sentence has been confirmed by the General. It is a hard matter to get general intelligence from Long-Island. Every man's attention seems confined solely to his own regiment. I have a line from Head-Quarters this morning, informing me that nothing of moment has turned up. There was a constant firing all yesterday afternoon, and till I went to bed last night; it appeared to be platoon firing, and now and then a field-piece.

EBENEZER HAZARD TO ROBERT LIVINGSTON.

New-York, August 29, 1776.

SIR: If it is possible, do keep a corps de reserve of the Congress's order for us. Mr. Samuel Broome is to go to Connecticut this week for the purpose of procuring saltpetre; but if none can be had, we shall want your friendly assistance. Perhaps a letter from you to Congress mentioning the state of the case, would procure an order for the twelve hundred weight of powder, which would answer the same end. Nothing new this morning. Mr. Schenck carried a letter for you to Harlem.

In haste, your very humble servant,

EBEN. HAZARD.

To Robert Livingston, Esq., at Harlem.

COMFORT SANDS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-Rochelle, August 29, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mr. Daniel Redfield, was taken last Monday morning in the Sound by the ships of war, and has been detained on board till yesterday. He has just come to my house, and has given me such information as I thought proper for you to know. I have immediately despatched him to you, that you might take the information from his own mouth. As he wants much to get home, I beg you will take his examination as soon as possible, and discharge him. What information he gives you may be depended on, as I have known him a number of years, and know him to be a very honest man. You will please also to give him a permit, so that he can pass the bridge without being detained.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

COMFORT SANDS.

To Abraham Yates, Esq., President of the Convention of New-York, at Harlem.

JOSEPH DRAKE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-Rochelle, August 29, 1776.

SIR: The bearer hereof, Mr. Redfield, of Killingsworth, in the State of Connecticut, having, on the 26th instant, had the misfortune to fall into the hands of our cruel enemies, who burnt his sloop and made him prisoner, with one Stevens, his partner, until yesterday, when he was discharged and sent on shore by himself; the Committee for the district of New-Rochelle, where he came on shore, has had him in examination, who thought he might give some little information of the enemy's intercourse with the people in Queen's County, has sent him to you for his further examination. He is a man of good character.

By order of the Committee:

JOSEPH DRAKE, Chairman.

To the President of the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
August 29, 1776. }

Daniel Redfield, of Killingsworth, in Connecticut, being duly examined, says: That about four o'clock on Monday morning last, he was taken in a sloop going from New-York, by the brig Halifax, belonging to the King of Great Britain, mounting ten four-pounders, Quarme commander. That about twelve o'clock the same day they burnt the hull of his vessel, after having secured the rigging, cable, anchors, &c. That there were two frigates in company, viz: Le Brun and the Niger, both of thirty-six guns. That the pilot's name was Reed, a man who formerly lived at New-York, a notorious Tory. That from this man's conversation he understood that these vessels were to anchor in Flushing Bay, and that the enemy's design was to land part of their forces from Long-Island, and that some ships of war, &c., were to run up the North River, and to land another body of men at or near King's Bridge. That they intended to make a junction of their forces, and did not doubt by these means to cut off all communication with our Army both by land and water, and oblige them to surrender for want of provisions. That the said Reed said "he wished all the damn'd Rebels on the Continent were there, for that they would be taken in a net." And the said Redfield further says, that he understood they did not intend to make an attack upon the city. That those vessels had plundered Hart and City-Island, in the Sound, from whence he thinks they procured about twelve or fourteen head of cattle, besides sheep, &c. That whilst he was on board several persons came on board from Queen's County, Long-Island, who, as he understood, brought intelligence from General Howe's Army. That on Tuesday a man came on board who said that we had lost thirteen hundred men in an engagement, and that the English Army had gained the ground. That his partner, Stephens, they detained aboard as a hostage, but that they released him, being an old man, and that he might inquire for the mate of the Niger, who had been taken on board a prize by the sloop Beverly, and sent into Amboy. That they promised to exchange his partner for this man, whose name they gave him in writing. He says he was not used ill on board, but that the ship's crew were very inveterate against us.

The said Daniel Redfield produced to the Committee of Safety undoubted testimonials of his veracity and good character.

The above examination taken in the Committee of Safety, and transmitted by order.

WM. DUER.

GENERAL HEATH TO FAIRFIELD (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE.

King's Bridge, August 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I send to your care and safe keeping the following prisoners of war, taken on Long-Island on the 27th instant, viz: Lieutenant John Ragg, of the Marines, Sergeant David Wallace, Corporal Thomas Pike, and Edward Gibbon, William Smith, Isaac Hughes, Thomas Haraman, John Woodard, Edward Cavil, William Williams, William Coortney, Stephen Weber, John Smith, Samuel Morral, Thomas Sarral, Joseph Distant, Benjamin Jones, William Jones, William Pearce, John Hopkins, Henry Weston, Evan Evans, and John Morten, Privates.

You will please to secure them in such manner as to prevent their escape, observing the order of Congress in this respect.

I am, gentlemen, with esteem, your humble servant,
W. HEATH, Major-General.

To the Committee of the Town of Fairfield.

GENERAL HEATH TO LIEUTENANT UMSTEAD.

King's Bridge, August 29, 1776.

SIR: With the detachment under your command, taking into your custody and safe keeping the following prisoners of war, viz: Lieutenant John Ragg, of the Marines, Sergeant David Wallace, Corporal Thomas Pike, and Edward Gibbon, William Smith, Isaac Hughes, Thomas Haraman, John Woodard, Edward Cavil, William Williams, Wm. Coortney, Stephen Weber, John Smith, Samuel Morral, Thomas Sarral, Joseph Distant, Benjamin Jones, William Jones, William Pearce, John Hopkins, Henry Weston, Evan Evans, and John Mortan, Privates,—you are to escort them with all possible expedition to Fairfield, in the Colony of Connecticut, where you are to deliver them to the Committee of that place, and then without delay return to this post.

I am, sir, yours, &c., W. HEATH, Major-General.

To Lieutenant Nathan Umstead.

We, the subscribers, of the Committee of Inspection for the town of Fairfield, hereby certify that Lieutenant Nathan Umstead hath delivered to us the within named prisoners.

THAD. BURR, }
J. STURGES, } Committee.

Fairfield, September 1, 1776.

COLONEL GRAHAM TO GENERAL HEATH.

August 29, 1776.

SIR: This comes by a gentleman who has fled from Long-Island, where, he says, General Howe's Light-Horse are pillaging the inhabitants. He thinks that about one hundred men would be sufficient to repulse them.

My regiment has full employ, as the enemy's ships are this instant mooring the brig moved down to Hunt's Point about two hours ago; the rest are now under sail. If it should be thought expedient that any of my regiment should go on to Long-Island, I would think it highly necessary that some other force should be sent here, as there are many points to guard that we are now hardly able to defend without distributing our men too much. However, we are ready to obey.

I am, your very humble servant,

MORRIS GRAHAM, Colonel.

To Major-General Heath, at King's Bridge.

COUNCIL OF WAR.

King's Bridge, August 29, 1776.

Information being brought that the enemy's Light-Horse, to the number of about one hundred, are pillaging at Flushing, on Long-Island, and that there is a great probability that if one hundred men should be sent over this night, they may be surprised and taken: Upon which, Council being called: Present: Major-General Heath, Brigadier-General Clinton, Colonel Pawling, and Colonel Thomas:

The question being put, Whether the measure be advisable? Colonel Thomas, yea; Colonel Pawling, yea; General Clinton, yea.

ISRAEL KEITH, A. D. C.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL GRAHAM.

King's Bridge, August 29, 1776.

SIR: Information has just been given that a number of the enemy's Light-Horse are pillaging at Flushing, and that a party of about one hundred men would disperse them. If, therefore, upon receipt hereof, and conference with Messrs. Eagle and Penfold, two of the Committee of that place, you should be satisfied that the number of the enemy are not more than one hundred, and that you can convey that number of men over this night, and get them back by tomorrow morning, I would have you make the attempt, and surprise the enemy, if possible. You are strictly to forbid the party pursuing Tories, except in arms, or in any case to burn any buildings. I am, sir, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH, M. G.

To Colonel Morris Graham.

ABRAHAM KING TO PETER LIVINGSTON.

The Manor of Cortlandt, August 29, 1776.

I beg the favour of you, sir, that you will be so good as to send me an order to James Clinton, Brigadier-General at the Fort Montgomery for my ferry-boat belonging to me; want of this, a great damage to the country. A great calling for the ferry-boat; without this, great damage to our troops. We are detained very much for the want of the ferry-boat for to go across the ferry. There will be no fear; there is guard kept at my house.

ABRAHAM KING.

To Mr. Peter Livingston, President.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 6, 1776. November 6, 1776, referred to the Board of Treasury.]

Albany, August 29, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour to have your letter of the 16th instant, enclosing the resolutions of Congress of the 10th, delivered to me this morning by Mr. Price. The resolutions mention, "to pay all the specie General Gates or I may have in hands belonging to the American States." I have construed this to mean any specie that the Paymaster in this department might have in the military chest, and have accordingly given my warrant in favour of Mr. Price for twenty-four thousand dollars, leaving the remainder for exigencies here. Congress will see, by the enclosed account from Mr. Trumbull, that I have drawn seven thousand five hundred dollars in specie, which was to replace what I had borrowed and transmitted to Canada last fall and winter. There are about two thousand dollars which are still due to me on that account, but as paper money equally serves my purpose, I shall draw for no more specie. I believe there are about six thousand dollars more with the Army.

Captain Wynkoop, who has been sent down to me by General Gates, has this morning delivered me the enclosed memorial, with a request that I should transmit it to Congress. As I cannot refuse complying with his request, I have thought it incumbent on me to let it be accompanied with General Gates's and General Arnold's letters on the subject. Although I believed Wynkoop to be brave and industrious, and equal to the command of what vessels we had when I recommended him, yet I was so far from being sufficiently acquainted whether he was equal to the command of such a number of vessels as we have now there, that I learned General Arnold's appointment with great satisfaction, and very much approved of it.

From the resolution of Congress of the 30th ultimo, allowing one and one-third dollar per man to the officers who are to enlist men for three years, I am led to believe that recruiting officers are already appointed. As it is of the utmost importance that a body of troops should be engaged before the time of those now serving is expired, I beg leave to suggest to Congress if it would not be proper to appoint recruiting officers for every regiment in the Army, to recruit immediately out of the Army in general. Many that will now engage to serve three years longer, provided any bounty Congress may have ordered is immediately paid, will not do it when their time of service is expired, or nearly so, nor even about the middle of October, for then that terrible disorder the home-sickness begins to prevail, and, increasing as the winter season advances, becomes so stubborn and unconquerable, that every consideration must yield to its superior influence. The men thus engaged might be left with the corps they now belong to until towards the end of the campaign, and then formed into different corps.

In obedience to the orders of Congress, I directed Lieutenant-Colonel Brown to lay before me an account of his extra services, copy of which I do myself the honour to enclose you. It is impossible for me to ascertain what allowance ought to be made him.

Our carpenters sicken very fast. Captain Titcomb, of the Massachusetts-Bay, had only ten at work on the 25th, out of fifty, and many of the other companies were also down. We are, however, so much ahead of the enemy in our naval force, that I do not apprehend they will be able to equal our strength this campaign, notwithstanding the indisposition of our carpenters. I have ordered a physician to Skenesborough, to examine the sick carpenters, that such might be discharged as are not likely to be of future service, the expense being very high.

If the enemy should find themselves unable to make an attempt to penetrate into the Colonies this campaign, it is more than probable that they will assiduously employ themselves in the course of next winter to procure materials for building as large vessels as the Lake will bear, in order to get a superiority next campaign; and although I am under no apprehensions that they will ever be able to penetrate into the Colonies from the northward, as there is such a variety of difficulties to be surmounted before they can reach any part where they can be subsisted, yet, if they should obtain a superiority on the Lake, they might in another campaign possess themselves of Ticonderoga, and thus complete part of their plan by surrounding us with a chain of forts, and greatly harass our frontiers; would it not, therefore, be prudent to provide every material this fall and winter for the construction of as large vessels as any that can be borne on the Lake?

Mr. Taylor, whom I have employed to purchase clothing for the Army, has collected near if not quite to the value of fifty thousand dollars; very little of which has been expended, (except what was fit for shirts and what was given to the Indians,) the remainder, especially the woollens, I have ordered to be kept in this place, that we may have something for the winter service. Would it not be well to try to get them made up?

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient and most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

From General GATES to Major-General SCHUYLER.

Ticonderoga, August 18, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Thursday Gen. Arnold went to Crown-Point to take the command of the fleet collected there. Enclosed is a copy of my orders to him, which he read and much approved before his departure from hence. Late last night I received the within letter from the General, with an extract of what passed between him and Mr. Wynkoop, which you will also find in the packet, together with my letter. At daylight this morning, in consequence of General Arnold's letter to me, I shall send Mr. Wynkoop to Albany immediately on his arrival here, and I dare say you will without scruple forthwith dismiss him the service. He ought upon no account to be again employed. Many officers of rank in this department say he is totally unfit to command a single vessel at this important hour of business. I would not submit this affair to a General Court-Martial here, lest they should have doubts how to decide upon it, as the Continental Articles of War make no provision for so extraordinary a circumstance. The times will not admit of trifling; decision alone must govern on these occasions.

I expect General Waterbury by Saturday night with the row-galleys. As he is an able seaman and a brave officer, I intend he shall join General Arnold with the rest of the squadron the instant they can be armed and equipped. As General Arnold and he are upon the best terms, I am satisfied no dispute about command or want of confidence in each other will retard the publick service.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
HORATIO GATES.

From Lieutenant-Colonel BROWN to General SCHUYLER.

Albany, August 27, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your order, I send you a memorandum of extra service done by me during the last summer campaign in Canada.

Soon after my arrival at Crown-Point, I was despatched with Captain Cochran and a small scout, with orders to penetrate Canada, and, if possible, to search out the situation of that country, the disposition of the Canadians in case our Army should advance into that Province, the numbers of King's troops, the strength of St. John's and vessels then fitting out at that place, the disposition and designs of the Savages, &c. This tour was made in seventeen days, partly by water and partly land, with the loss of two men taken prisoners. I returned by land from some miles below Chamblée, by the Bay of Missisque, being pursued to that place by the Savages. I established a correspondence with Mr. Livingston, (who I found at Chamblée at this time,) of whom I obtained all necessary intelligence respecting the state of Canada. Mr. Livingston, in consequence of this, sent several messengers to our Army with further intelligence. The second scout was to the Isle-aux-Noix, at which time I had the command of the Lake; from thence I sent messengers to Mr. Livingston, and had return. The two next tours into Canada were made from the Isle-aux-Noix, the last of which was with one hundred men, half of which I left at Chamblée, and with the remainder cut off the communication between St. John's and the country, where I took several prisoners and a number of teams with stores, &c. The next week I surprised La Prairie, and took it, with a number of prisoners and a quantity of stores. Soon after I took Chamblée, passing by St. John's myself in a boat, with cannon, &c., for the purpose. I was then ordered to contract for beef and flour for the Army, which I did for a short time, and was then ordered down the river Sorel to meet Colonel McClin, &c. Indeed there was not a day during the whole campaign but I was on fatigue, and most of the time by night as well as day.

All which is humbly submitted by your most obedient, humble servant,

J. BROWN.

Officers' Certificate.

This certifies, that during the last year's campaign in Canada, Captain John Brown was the most active man in the Army, being employed in the beginning of the campaign in long tedious scouts from Ticonderoga into Canada, and the latter part before the Army with a detachment. Colonel Brown was scarcely off duty, day or night, during the campaign.

JAMES LIVINGSTON, Colonel.
GERSHOM MOTT, Captain.
ROBERT COCHRAN, Major.
WM. SATTERLEE, Captain.
TIM. BEDEL, Colonel.

Albany, October 11, 1776.

In Congress, July 30, 1776.

Resolved, That so much of Major Brown's Petition as prays an allowance for extraordinary services be referred to General Schuyler, who is desired to certify Congress whether any and what reward may with justice be demanded by him.

That Major Brown's Accounts be settled by the Commissioners appointed to adjust Accounts in the Northern Department.

Extract from the Minutes:

CHAS. THOMSON, Secretary.

Captain BROWN's Petition.

[Referred to the Committee appointed to inquire into the causes of the miscarriages in Canada.]

To the Honourable Continental Congress:

The Petition and Memorial of JOHN BROWN, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment where SAMUEL ELMER, Esq., is Colonel, humbly sheweth:

That whereas, by a proclamation made by General Montgomery at Montreal, at the commencement of the last winter campaign in Canada, it was promised and engaged that all the troops who should reëngage in service and go forward to Quebeck, should be entitled to one complete suit of clothes, as may fully appear by said proclamation: And whereas your petitioner, at time and place aforesaid, was appointed by General Montgomery to take the command of a regiment which should reëngage as aforesaid, which regiment did actually reëngage, and went forward to Quebeck, and then at the publick expense were clothed as well as might be agreeable to said proclamation: Your petitioner further sheweth, that long after the time for which the troops aforesaid engaged was expired, the Paymaster-General, or his Deputy for the Northern Department, being applied to for payment, informed your petitioner that he had strict orders to allow to each man engaged as aforesaid, officers excepted, the sum of four pounds, lawful money, and no more, which renders it absolutely impossible for the Captains or commanding officers of companies raised as aforesaid to settle with their men: Your petitioner therefore prays that an order may be immediately made out confirming the proclamation made as aforesaid, with such other instructions as may be thought proper, that the regiment may be immediately settled with; which your petitioner humbly conceives may greatly benefit the service. Your petitioner further sheweth, that he was appointed to take the command of the regiment aforesaid, with the rank of full Colonel, by the express order of General Montgomery, as he will fully demonstrate and prove from the best evidence and authority; yet after the death of General Montgomery he was denied his rank, and put to the necessity of serving in an inferior rank, or deserting the service at a time when nothing could justify such a measure, although the indignity was too great to be suffered by a man of spirit or an officer of the Continental Army, and that which nothing could justify in him but absolute and strict necessity, in point of keeping up the blockade at Quebeck. And many other abuses did your petitioner then and there suffer; all which he prays may be examined into, and justice done concerning the premises. Your petitioner further begs leave to observe, that he has been intrusted with the disposition of a considerable sum of publick moneys in Canada, for which he stands ready to account; but that he is informed that there is no proper Board established yet for that purpose; he therefore prays that he may be directed where and to whom he is to account, as his accounts are of such a nature as 'tis impossible (in his opinion) for any man except himself to settle and properly adjust the same. Your petitioner further sheweth, that, exclusive of the duty by him done during the last summer campaign as a Major and second in command in Colonel Easton's regiment, he was almost constantly employed by Generals Schuyler and Montgomery in long, tedious, hazardous scouts or marches from Ticonderoga into Canada, to discover the motions and intentions of the enemy, as also to engage the Canadians and Savages in the interest of the Colonies, which was effected during the last year's campaign, by which means only the Continental Army was able to penetrate into Canada. The returns made to Congress by Generals Schuyler and Montgomery will fully evince the truths of these facts. Your petitioner therefore humbly conceives, that for these and other extraordinary services done in Canada, he ought to be considered, and prays to be heard on the subject. Your petitioner, being this minute possessed of a report of a Committee of Congress of the 26th of April last, on a petition before that time to Congress, prepared by Colonel James Easton, in which, among other things, it is observed, that Brigadier-General Arnold, in his letter of the 1st of February last, alleged that your petitioner and Colonel James Easton had been publicly accused of plundering the officers' baggage taken at Sorel, contrary to the articles of capitulation; to which your petitioner answers, that he knows no man more the author of this charge than General Arnold and his adherents; and that it is false, scandalous, and malicious; and your petitioner desires men and angels, as well as the informer, to prove any part of it. Your petitioner, at the time of his first hearing of said accusation at Quebeck, challenged General Arnold to prove it, and demanded, which was his right, a Court of Inquiry, to be called immediately, which was peremptorily refused by General Arnold. He did the same of General Wooster, at his arrival at Quebeck, who likewise refused. He did the same of the honourable Committee sent to Canada from the Congress, who refused. He did the same of General Schuyler, at Fort George, but the General thought it inexpedient. He now appeals to Congress for satisfaction, with the highest assurance of obtaining the same, conceiving that he has been injured in the highest manner and in the nicest point of honour.

And as in duty bound shall pray.

JNO. BROWN.

June 26, 1776.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, August 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday I was honoured with your Excellency's favour of the 24th instant.

The articles mentioned in your letter to Captain Varick, are arrived and forwarded to Tyonderoga. Those sent by Phil. Sandford, are not yet arrived, detained I suppose by northerly winds, which have prevailed for some days.

Our carpenters at Skenesborough sicken very fast. Captain Titcomb's company from the Massachusetts-Bay, consisting of fifty, had only ten at work on the 25th instant, and many of the others were also incapable of duty. We have, however, got so far ahead of the enemy in our naval force, that I hope they will not be able to equal it this campaign, notwithstanding the indisposition of our carpenters.

The reasons your Excellency assigns for proceedings against the officers of Colonel Dayton's regiment by Court-Martial are incontrovertible.

I am happy to learn that our troops had the advantage in the skirmish on Long-Island. Indecisive as these little encounters are, they are, however, attended with good consequences. The express advises us that before he left New-York, and after he had received the letter for me, accounts arrived that we had killed and taken sixty of the enemy, with six field-pieces. I hope it may be confirmed.

Congress have ordered me to make inquiry of, and bring to trial the persons concerned in the plunder of General Prescott's and Captain Anstruther's baggage. I am informed by Lieutenant-Colonel Brown that Lieutenant Johnson, last year of Captain Lamb's artillery company, and now in some corps at New-York, was principally concerned in taking Anstruther's. As the evidences are in this quarter, your Excellency will judge of the propriety of sending Johnson up, or ordering the witnesses down.

Most of the Stockbridge Indians inclined to go to New-York. I ordered them provisions, and I believe they are now on their passage.

The Committee of this place did not choose to send the boards Mr. Hughes wrote for on their risk. They informed me of this, and I did not hesitate to assure them that they would be considered as shipped on the publick account. This day they informed me that not more than ten thousand boards were as yet gone, and that they could not prevail on any more masters of sloops to carry them farther than Peek's Kill. Apprehensive that you would be greatly distressed for shelter for the men, I have requested them, if they cannot do otherwise, to send them to Peek's Kill, and to advise Colonel Moylan of the number that will be landed there, by this express.

I perceive that Congress has resolved on inlisting men to serve three years. I fear very few recruits will be obtained in the country at this time, and very few out of the Army, if the inlistments are not attempted until the time of those now engaged is nearly expired. Would it not be well immediately to appoint recruiting officers in every corps, to inlist those for three years who are now engaged until the fall or winter only? In the course of three months an alert officer will have it in his power, with the bounty he may be authorized to give, to engage a good number. The homesickness begins to prevail about the middle of October, and when that unconquerable distemper once takes place every consideration gives way to it. I shall communicate my ideas on this subject to Congress in a letter I have occasion to write them to-day.

I am, dear sir, with every affectionate wish, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant, PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c., &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, August 29, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday I was honoured with a line from General Washington, of the 24th instant, of which the following is an extract: "On Wednesday and Thursday morning a considerable body of the enemy, said to be eight or nine thousand, landed at Gravesend-Bay on Long-Island. They have approached within about three miles of our lines, and yesterday there was some skirmishing between a detachment from them and a party from our troops. Their detachment were obliged to give ground, and were pursued as far as where they had a post at Judge Lefferts's. His house and outhouses served as quarters for them, and were burnt by our people. We sustained no loss in this affair that I have heard of, except having two men slightly wounded. Our people say the enemy met with more. They found one dead body in the habit of a soldier, with a good deal of money in his pockets, and got three hangers and a fusee. Our party threw a shell from a howitz, which fell on and burst in a house where several of them were. Whether they were injured by it, we have not learned. A firing has been heard this morning, but know nothing of the event." The express who brought me the General's letter reports, that after he had received it, intelligence was brought that in the rencounter on Saturday morning, our people killed and took sixty of the enemy, and six field-pieces. If so, it will be soon confirmed.

Lieutenant-Colonel Brown, who will deliver you this, is the officer alluded to in some of the resolutions of Congress of the 30th ultimo. He wishes for a Court of Inquiry on the charge against him of being concerned in the plundering of General Prescott's baggage. You will please to order one.

Captain Wynkoop has presented me a memorial to Congress, with a request to have it forwarded to them, copy of which I enclose. When I recommended him to the command of the vessels on Lake Champlain, they were few and the Army in Canada; and although I believe him brave, yet

I do not think him equal to the command of such a fleet as we now have there. His appointment by the New-York Congress you will perceive is only temporary, until another should be appointed; he could, therefore, have no reason to complain, even if an officer of inferior rank to General Arnold had been ordered to take the command.

General Washington has ordered up a few more military stores, as per enclosed list. They are not yet arrived here; shall be forwarded the moment they do, except part of the cartridge paper, which must go to Fort Stanwix.

The Stockbridge Indians inlisted in our service had it at their option, by General Washington's orders, to go to New-York or to the northward. They have chosen the former, and are gone down.

Mr. Schuyler, the Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General at Skenesborough, writes me that the carpenters sicken so fast that Captain Titcomb had but ten men out of fifty at work on the 25th, and that Captains Winslow and Easdorp had also a great many sick. I wish you could send a physician to report such as are not likely to be of any further service, that they may be discharged, and the expense of their wages saved to the publick.

General Lee was daily expected at Philadelphia on the 18th instant. The express from New-York advises that he arrived there on Saturday, after General Washington's letter to me was delivered.

Two Captains are now engaging two hundred seamen out of the Army at New-York, for the northern service.

I am, dear General, with every friendly wish, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

CAPTAIN FASSETT TO GENERAL GATES.

Jerico, Onion River, August 29, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: As I came here, expecting with my company to assist the inhabitants (what is left of them) in moving off; as I cannot think so small a party can be safe in guarding so remote a situation from our Army; as signs of the enemy have been frequently seen, and some of the scouting parties have seen the enemy on the river,—therefore desire that Deacon Reede may be assisted by your Honour with boats to carry off these families now on the river.

I have discoursed with a large number of the Committee and some of the officers of this detachment, and the whole I have discoursed with think best to make Head-Quarters about fifteen miles northeast from Crown Point, at a place called Middleborough Falls, on Otter Creek, under the present situation, and to keep scouting parties out to the north, as far as our strength shall permit. These from your obedient and very humble servant,

JONA. FASSETT, Captain.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates, Major-General.

P. S. I determine all that can be done in saving crops, shall be done. I pray your Honour to send by the bearer, Deacon Reede, for my company, seven guns, light and handy, if can be. I pray your Honour to send by Deacon Reede one barrel of flour.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Providence, August 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Naval Committee here some little time ago informed your Honours that they had appointed Mr. John Grannis Captain of Marines for the Continental ship Warren, fitting here; and as he has a commission under the authority of your State, we request that he may be dismissed from that service; also, that he may be permitted to inlist a complement of Marines out of the troops now in your pay. As we look on the sending out these ships of the greatest consequence to these United States, we doubt not but you will grant us the favour we ask.

I am, in behalf of the Committee, your Honours' most humble servant,

NICHs. COOKE,

Chairman of the Marine Committee, at Providence.

To the Honourable the Council of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay.

MESSAGES FROM THE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Message to the House, August 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: The important period has at length arrived. The honourable Congress have declared the United American Colonies free and independent States. This declaration we have ordered to be made publick, agreeable to the request of Congress, through every part of the Massachusetts-Bay, and we shall readily concur with you in expressing our approbation of the measure, and readiness to risk our lives and fortunes in defence and support of it.

Since the prorogation of the Court, the treaty of alliance with the St. John's and Mickmack Tribes of Indians, wherein they have engaged to take an active part in the present war against our unnatural enemies, has been duly ratified. Four of the Chiefs that were here have actually arrived at New-York, and the residue have sailed to the river St. John's, under the direction of Major Shaw, to procure a number of companies from those tribes to join the Continental Army under his Excellency General Washington, agreeable to his request; and we have reason to expect that a body of them will speedily arrive here on the service; and we are also persuaded, from their friendly professions while here, and the good temper they departed with, there will be no danger from them to our eastern settlements. We have likewise had a conference with two of the Sachems of the Penobscot Indians, in which they request a French priest to dwell among them, such a regulation of the French trade as to prevent its being exposed to abuses, and that a boundary line between such lands as are left for their use and other lands, may be fixed, and steps taken to prevent encroachment. We did not conceive ourselves authorized fully to adjust these matters without your aid; and we have promised to lay their requests before the General Court at this session.

General Washington having, by the direction of Congress, ordered the Continental Regiments in this State to join the Continental Army, which, though a necessary measure for the general service, has left the fortresses here in a manner defenceless, we have, for our common safety, given orders for every twenty-fifth man of the Alarm and Train Band Lists in the several Counties (except Berkshire, Lincoln, Nantucket, and Duke's County) to march to the Heights at Dorchester. This detachment, we conceive, will make between two and three regiments; and we have the assurance of Congress they are to be in the Continental pay and establishment. A great part of the men are already arrived, and do now receive rations from the Continental Commissary-General. They are to be retained in service till the first day of December next, unless sooner discharged. The mileage usual on such occasions, we expect, will be paid by the Continent, together with their wages.

The troops levied for the Northern and Southern Departments, it is probable, are by this time principally at their respective places of destination. Whether the regiments are so full as intended or expected, we cannot as yet determine, for want of proper returns being made, which we may soon expect, as orders for them have been given.

The moneys expended in these and other exigencies of the State, we are sorry to acquaint you, have quite or near exhausted the Treasury. You will therefore, gentlemen, take this matter early in the session into your consideration; and as we apprehend there may be upwards of £100,000 due to this State from the Continent, for services done and moneys advanced, if proper accounts thereof were forthwith transmitted to Congress, the Treasury might be supplied from thence as soon as in any other way. The complaint against the last emission of bills of credit, on account of the ungraceful appearance they make, and the danger and disgrace the Government suffers therefrom, induces the Council seriously to recommend the speedy redemption thereof; and although we are sensible it is exceeding the line of our proper department, yet we have taken some steps towards the cutting elegant copper plates, which, in case the honourable House should think proper, might be speedily executed for that purpose; or the plates might serve for a future emission, whenever the House should judge it necessary.

From a representation of the Treasurer, there will be £75,000, or thereabouts, besides the interest thereof, due from the State in June next, exclusive of £50,000, for which the moneys due from the Continent before the last session were mortgaged as a fund. You will doubtless be convinced that a tax for the whole, or the greater part of this will be necessary to be assessed during this session.

One of our Members of Congress has requested a dismission from that important service, and proposes the appointing a larger number of Delegates, who may attend alternately; the expediency of which you will doubtless pay due attention unto. The several papers referred to in this Message we shall direct the Secretary to lay before you.

Gentlemen, there are several other matters which will be laid before you during the session. You may depend upon our concurrence in every measure conducive to the safety, peace, and happiness of this State.

Message from the major part of the Council.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: The inhabitants of the town of Hull were, in July, A. D. 1775, removed by orders from General Ward, and a guard placed at the entrance of the beach leading to that town, to prevent the enemy being supplied and a correspondence kept up between them and the few disaffected people among us. Some of the Connecticut troops were on this command. The time for which they enlisted expired in December last, and they retired to their homes. Upon the passage way being left unguarded, and several persons seen to pass the town of Hull, but none observed to return, information thereof was given to Colonel Lincoln, who thereupon ordered a guard of the Militia to take that post, and continue on it till further orders, and immediately laid the matter before the Council, who sent a message to his Excellency General Washington, requesting that he would place a guard there and relieve the Militia. The General gave encouragement that he would order one; but such was the state of the Army soon after, as to put it out of his power to comply with the request of Council, of which they had notice, and advised to keep up the guard, and laid the whole matter before the honourable House, but no order was by them taken in the matter; and the Militia guard, consisting of one Subaltern, one Sergeant, one Corporal, and sixteen privates, were continued till the spring. We recommend that provision be made for their pay and billeting as the sea-coast men are paid and billeted. Their roll the Secretary will lay on your table.

Among the Continental troops lately ordered from this State by Congress were a number of the regiment of Artillery. Troops have been called in to supply the place of the battalion men, but the deficiency caused by the removal of the Train hath not been provided for. Six men to a cannon, aided by some of the battalion, are the number generally assigned. At present, we have not half that proportion; and such is the state of our fortifications that we cannot depend upon reinforcing any one of them by detachments of the Train from another. You will therefore, gentlemen, immediately take this into consideration, and adopt some measures for augmenting the regiment of Artillery in this State.

The three regiments in the pay of this State, when raised, were promised their wages at the end of July. Although no provision was made for this before the close of the last session, the men have been quieted, from an expectation that on the first meeting of the Court they should be relieved in that respect. This engagement to them demands your attention.

The Militia in the vicinity of Boston and elsewhere have, since March last, at different times, been called to do duty at the lines and as guards to the sea-coast. No provision hath been made for the payment of them. You will give this matter the attention it deserves.

We thought it necessary to appoint a General Officer to take the command of troops in the pay of this State doing duty at and about the Harbour of Boston, and to command them during the recess of the General Court. His authority is now expired. The expense attending this appointment, and the expediency of renewing it, you will determine upon.

During the recess a packet was transmitted hither by Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, containing a letter from Lord Howe, directed to Thomas Oliver, Esq., Lieutenant-Governour, or, in his absence, to the Chief Magistrate of the Massachusetts-Bay, enclosing a declaration made by his Lordship. Governour Cooke also sent a copy of his letter in answer to a similar letter and declaration which he had received. These several papers the Secretary will lay before you.

Answer to the Message of the Honourable a major part of the Council.

The Honourable the major part of the Council of the MASSACHUSETTS-BAY:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: The House of Representatives have given all due attention to the Message from your Honours of the 28th instant, and are desirous of expressing, with manly fortitude, their entire satisfaction in the Declaration of Independence made by the honourable Congress, and published by your Honours' order in this State. They with great cheerfulness congratulate the honourable Board on the very general approbation that measure has met with through all ranks of people in the United States of America, and are ready to pledge their fortunes, lives, and sacred honour, to support it.

This House cannot but rejoice that our brethren of the eastern frontiers have so much reason to expect security in the enjoyment of their possessions, and that the neighbouring Indians appear so friendly in this and all the United States; and the House highly approves of the treaty of alliance made with the St. John's and Mickmack Tribes. With respect to the Penobscot Indians, this House is very desirous of cultivating their friendship, and ready to afford all the aid in their power towards gratifying them in their reasonable requests. The House will endeavour to prevent any abuses in the truck trade, and apprehend a boundary line may be established and encroachments prevented, so as to give satisfaction to that tribe; and no steps shall be wanting on the part of the House for accomplishing those desirable purposes.

The honourable Board, we trust, will always be pleased when they find the House careful to preserve their own and their constituents' rights and liberties.

The House recognises the right of the honourable Board to raise, at their discretion, such part of the Militia as they shall judge necessary for the defence of this State, and are sensible, by the withdrawal of the Continental regiments by his Excellency General Washington's order, the State was left very defenceless, and some considerable force was necessary for its safety. But still, this House apprehends the draughting every twenty-fifth man of the Alarm and Train Band List, and forming them into detachments, appointing and commissioning officers for the same, separate and distinct from the common Militia of the State, is the exercise of a power in the Council without precedent, and unconstitutional. It is with regret, and merely from fidelity to their constituents, that this House have taken notice of that measure, and they assure the honourable Board that they will cheerfully establish those proceedings.

The state of the publick Treasury, and the furnishing of it at this juncture with supplies adequate to the publick exigencies, is a matter that this House is very sensible claims its earliest and most diligent attention. And the House will, to the utmost of its power, endeavour to support the credit of the State by a sufficient and respectable currency.

It would have given this House great satisfaction to have heard that our proportion of the levies for the Northern and Southern Departments had been complete and had arrived at their respective places of destination, and the House must be very anxious for the publick safety until that matter is properly ascertained to them.

This House with regret receives the information that one of the worthy and respectable members of Congress of this State finds himself under the necessity of asking a dismission from that important service. This House will consider of his request with a proper degree of tenderness for his person. And if any other mode of delegation in Congress can be devised for the ease and benefit of those respectable persons attending that duty, consistent with the publick service, the House will very readily adopt it.

All other matters that shall by your Honours' order be laid before the House during this session shall be fully considered.

Your Honours' constant and diligent application to the publick business, your unremitted exertions for the safety and preservation of this State, since the prorogation of the General Court, merits the grateful acknowledgments of this House and all their constituents.

Boston, August 29, 1776.

Yesterday the Honourable Samuel Adams, one of the Delegates from this State to the Continental Congress, arrived in town from Philadelphia.

Last Saturday afternoon was chased into Marblehead, by the Milford frigate, the prize ship Isaac, from Tortola, bound to London, three hundred and fifty tons burden, commanded by Captain Ashburn, laden with five hundred hogsheads of sugar, forty-four puncheons of rum, one hundred and fifty bags of cotton, a considerable quantity of old copper, and a number of turtle. She was taken by the privateer sloop Warren, commanded by Captain Phillips; and had it not been for the fort at Marblehead, which fired at the Milford several times, she would have been inevitably retaken. And on Sunday the above frigate took, off Cape Ann, a prize brigantine coming into port, said to be one of Captain Whit's, of Salem, laden with rum, from Grenada; also a large sloop, which our informant could not tell where from, nor who commanded her.

The privateer sloop Broome, Captain William Nott commander, belonging to New-Haven, arrived at Dartmouth on Monday last, from a cruise, and has taken the four following valuable prizes, viz: On the 3d of August, in latitude 32° 25' and longitude 59° 46', the ship Charming Sally, John Stell commander, bound to Europe from Dominica. She had on board four hundred and sixty-five hogsheads of sugar, thirty-one tierces ditto, thirty-five barrels ditto, and twenty-five tons of fustick. On the 4th of August, in latitude 32° 25' and longitude 59° 46', the snow Ann, John Bowes Captain, from Tobago, bound to Lancaster, and had on board one hundred and sixty-nine hogsheads of sugar, twenty tierces ditto, twenty-six barrels ditto, forty bags of ginger, and one hundred and eighteen bales of cotton. On the 5th of August, in latitude 33° 37' and longitude 60° 16', the brig Carolina Packet, Mark Towell Captain, bound from Antigua to London; had on board one hundred and fifty-one hogsheads of sugar, twelve tierces ditto, ten barrels ditto, two hogsheads of rum, and fourteen tons of lignum vitæ and fustick. On the 7th of August, in latitude 34° 25' and longitude 60° 18', the brig John, Captain Daniel McKay, bound from Grenada to Dublin; had on board ninety hogsheads and two tierces of rum.

Yesterday the General Assembly of this State convened at Watertown, agreeable to adjournment.

DR. BRACKETT TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Portsmouth, August 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The ship Prince George, commanded by Captain Emms, had her trial last week. The jury brought in their verdict and condemned three-quarters of ship and cargo to the use of the Colony, the other quarter to the Matross company stationed at Fort Washington, to be equally divided between officers and privates; though both the resolves of Congress and law of the Colony say the captors shall have one-third and the Colony two. There was also a trial of the masts, &c., which were claimed by Mr. Perry; the jury thought the claim was not good, and condemned them to the use of the Colony likewise. I shall, in a day or two, decree according to the jury's verdict, and issue a precept to the Sheriff to sell and make distribution according to said verdicts, and should be glad you would appoint Pierce Long, Esq., agent for the Colony, that there may be somebody here to take care of its interest, &c.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
J. BRACKETT.

To the Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety at Exeter.

GENERAL LEE TO THE GOVERNOUR OF CAPE FRANÇOIS.

Savannah, August 30, 1776.

SIR: It will be necessary, in addressing a letter of this nature so abruptly to your Excellency, that I should inform you who the writer is. I have served as Lieutenant-Colonel in the English service, Colonel in the Portuguese, afterwards as Aid-de-Camp to his Polish Majesty, with the rank of Major-General. Having purchased a small estate in America, I had determined to retire for the remainder of my days to a peaceful asylum. When the tyranny of the Ministry and Court of Great Britain forced this Continent to arms for the preservation of their liberties, I was called by the voice of the people to the rank of second in command.

I make no doubt of this letter's being kindly received by your Excellency, both in the character of a good Frenchman and friend to humanity. The present conjuncture of affairs renders the interest of France and of this Continent one and the same thing. Every observation drawn from history must evince that it was the exclusive commerce of these Colonies which enabled Great Britain to cope with France, gave to her a decided superiority in marine, and of course enabled her, in the frequent wars betwixt the two nations, to reduce her rival to the last extremity. This was the case so peculiarly in the last war, that had the British Ministry persevered, Heaven knows what would have been the fate of France. It follows, that if France can obtain the monopoly, or the greater part of this commerce, her opulence, strength, and prosperity, must grow to a prodigious height; and nothing can be more certain than that if America is enabled to preserve the independence she has now declared, the greater part of this commerce, if not the monopoly, must fall to the share of France.

The imaginary plans of conquest of Louis the Fourteenth, had they been realized, would not have established the power of that Monarchy on so solid and permanent a basis as the simple assistance, or rather friendly intercourse, with this Continent, will inevitably give. Without injustice, or the colour of injustice, but, on the contrary, only assuming the patronage of the rights of mankind, France has now in her power to become not only the greatest, but the most truly glorious Monarchy which has appeared on the stage of the world. In the first place, her possessions in the Islands will be secured against all possibility of attack, the royal revenues immensely increased, her people, eased of their present burdens, an eternal incitement be presented to their industry, and the means of increase, by the facility of providing sustenance for their families, multiplied. In short, there is no saying what degree of eminence, happiness, and glory, she may derive from the independence of this Continent. Some visionary writers have indeed asserted, that could this country once shake off her European trammels, it would soon become more formidable alone, from the virtue and energy natural to a young people, than Great Britain with her Colonies united in a state of dependency. But the men who have built such hypotheses must be utter strangers to the manners, genius, disposition, turn of mind, and circumstances, of the Continent. Their disposition is manifestly to agriculture and the simple life of shepherds. As long as vast tracts of land remain unoccupied, to which they can send colonies (if I may so express it) of their offspring, they will never entertain a thought of marine or manufactures. Their ideas are solely confined to labour and to planting, for those nations who can, on the cheapest terms, furnish them with the necessary utensils for labouring and planting and clothes for their families; and till the whole vast extent of continent is fully stocked with people, they will never entertain another idea. This cannot be effected for ages, and what then may happen it is out of the line of politicians to lay any stress upon; most probably they will be employed in wars amongst themselves before they aim at foreign conquests. In short, the apprehension is too remote to rouse the jealousy of any reasonable citizen of a foreign State.

On the other hand, it is worthy your Excellency's attention to consider what will be the consequences should Great Britain succeed in the present contest. America, it is true, will be wretched and enslaved; but a number of slaves may compose a formidable army and fleet. The proximity of situation, with so great a force, entirely at the disposal of Great Britain, will put it in her power to take possession of your Islands on the first rupture. Without pretending to the spirit of prophecy, such, I can assert, will be the event of the next war.

Upon the whole, I must repeat, that it is for the interest as well as glory of France, to furnish us with every means of supporting our liberties, to effect which we only demand a constant, systematick supply of the necessaries of war. We do not require any aid of men; we have numbers, and I believe courage, sufficient to carry us triumphantly through the struggle. We require small-arms, powder, field-pieces, woollen and linen to clothe our troops; also drugs, particularly bark. In return for which, every necessary provision for your Islands may be expected, as rice, corn, lumber, &c. If, indeed, you could spare us a few able Engineers and Artillery officers, they may depend upon an honourable reception and comfortable establishment.

The Sieur De la Plain, one of your countrymen, now engaged in the cause of the United States of America, will have the honour of delivering this letter to your Excellency. I have no doubt of his being received with that politeness and kindness to be expected from a gentleman of your rank and character.

I am, with the highest respect, your Excellency's most obedient servant,
CHARLES LEE.

To His Excellency the Governour of Cape François.

Williamsburgh, August 30, 1776.

By Mr. William Harrison, in nine days from Fort Pitt, we have advice that Captain John Hingston, with a number of settlers, arrived from Licking Creek, near the Kentucky, the very day he left home. Captain Hingston gave the following account: that one James Cooper and another person, a Dutchman, being on their way to a buffalo-lick, were fired upon by a couple of Indians, who shot down Cooper, and frightened the Dutchman's horse so that he flung him. His foot hanging in the stirrup, one of the Indians made up to him to tomahawk him; but, although in that disadvantageous situation, he found means to aim his gun so well (which he never quitted) as to shoot the Savage dead on the spot, and seeing the other Indian making up to him, he disengaged himself from his own horse, mounted Cooper's, and got clear off to the inhabitants. Upon his arrival, many of the Kentucky settlers immediately went about forcing themselves at Boonsborough and Harwood's Town, and numbers agreed to come into the neighbourhood of Fort Pitt with Captain Hingston.

Mr. Harrison likewise informs, that Mr. Jacob Hite, who lately removed from Berkeley County to the neighbourhood of the Cherokee country with his family and a large parcel of negroes, was murdered at his own house by those Savages, with most of his slaves, and his wife and children carried off prisoners; his son, who was in the Cherokee country, was likewise murdered. The Shawanese, Delawares, and Mingoes, had not met our Commissioners, although two expresses had been sent to them for that purpose, and returned without any answer. A third express was sent off, but had not returned.

THOMAS RODNEY TO CÉSAR RODNEY.

Dover, August 30, 1776.

SIR: I received your letters by last post, and the one preceding, and one mentioned in that. I am pleased with your resolution mentioned in your last, as I should be sorry to hear that the unsteady passions which govern the people should at any time give the least shock to that virtue which hath so long and necessarily supported American liberty. Though the people in a popular Government often put away good men for bad ones, and though such a change could not be more dangerous at any time than the present, yet I look on the present change with us as an example which favours liberty. If the people will not continually support those men who have served them faithfully at all hazards, it cannot be supposed that they will long support those men who, in opposition to the publick weal, have pursued their own private interest only. These men, by a violent exertion of the influence of the Magistracy, and descending to assert the most base, low, and infamous falsehoods, have succeeded for once, because the people were blinded that they could not see their true interest. But be assured they that set them up will pull them down again.

After devoting ten years to the service of your country and publick business, to the great prejudice of your own private interest, you certainly deserve to enjoy the sweets of retirement, which is the happiest life in this state; and you will have this reflection, that after the time you mention, that you have accomplished the establishment of American liberty, and that you could not do anything that would add to the honour already acquired: but I believe the people will not let you execute this design—they will soon be tired of those whom they have now set up—and will begin to call again upon those men whose virtue hath been proved to the utmost. When the great matters which you mention are completed, I shall be content, nor shall desire to have any hand in politicks, unless at any time liberty be encroached upon. Nothing but the great cause of liberty which we have been embarked in could have induced me (who have an increasing family and so little for them) to have spent so much of my time and money in publick services.

THOMAS RODNEY.

To the Hon. Cesar Rodney, in Congress.

ADMIRALTY COURT, PHILADELPHIA.

Port of PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, ss:

To all whom it may concern: Notice is hereby given, that a Court of Admiralty for taking cognizance of and trying the justice of captures of Vessels made pursuant to the resolves of the honourable Continental Congress, and brought into this Port of Philadelphia, will be held at the Court-House, in the City of Philadelphia, on Wednesday, the 18th day of September next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, then and there to try the truth of the facts alleged in the bill of James Campbell, commander of the schooner-of-war called the Enterprise, (who as well, &c.,) against the ship or vessel called Black River, burden about one hundred and eighty tons, with her tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo, lately commanded by George Corrie: to the end and intent that the owner or owners of the said ship and her cargo, or any person concerned therein, may appear and show cause, if any they have, why the same should not be condemned according to the prayer of the said bill.

By order of the Judge:

In Council of Safety for the State of Pennsylvania, }
Philadelphia, August 30, 1776. }

Whereas some designing, ill-disposed persons have spread false reports that the number of troops now in New-Jersey is too great, that many are in consequence discharged by the Generals, and that there is not any occasion to forward the troops who have not yet been at camp: the Council, therefore, to frustrate the designs of such persons, and to hasten the march of the Associators to the camp in Jersey, make known, that there is an immediate necessity for the Associators to hasten their march to the said camp with all expedition, and pay no regard to any reports which do not come from this Council or other proper authority.

By order of the Council:

SAMUEL MORRIS, Chairman.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Lancaster, August 30, 1776.

SIR: Your express, with the letters directed to the officers commanding the Virginia battalion of Continental troops on their march on the road between Philadelphia and Lancaster, arrived here yesterday evening. As those troops were not arrived among us, nor any officer or other troop from them, and the Committee had received no intelligence from them, (except some flying reports a few days past, that some troops were intended to march this way from Virginia,) we thought best to detain the express until the arrival of the Yorktown post this morning, in hopes by him to have some account of them. As we hear nothing of them by the York post, I have some reason to think, from expressions of gentlemen who met your express, that those troops have taken the lower road through Baltimore; have directed the express to return to Philadelphia with the letters, especially as there were no orders to him or the Committee for his proceeding farther westward. The Committee hope they have not acted improperly.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient humble servant. By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM ATLEE, Chairman.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

CAPTAIN LOWE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Trent Town, August 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We understand that there are two battalions of Regulars to be raised in Maryland for the Continental service; and as we are now in the Flying-Camp in said service, the whole of our people as well as ourselves have a desire of standing as Regulars in the aforesaid service. We therefore beg your Honours to have said company constituted Regulars, or give us an equal chance to raise a company for that purpose; which will much oblige your obedient, humble servants,

JOHN HAWKINS LOWE,
JOHN M. BURGESS.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

Horatio Clagett will thankfully accept a Lieutenant's commission, and no other.

WILLIAM DUVALL.

N. B. I should be glad Mr. Clagett could be continued in my company.

J. H. L.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, August 30, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of this date is just come to hand. Circumstanced as this Army was, in respect to situation, strength, &c., it was the unanimous advice of a council of General Officers to give up Long-Island, and not, by dividing our force, be unable to resist the enemy in any one point of attack. This reason, added to some others, particularly the fear of having our communication cut off from the main, (of which there seemed to be no small probability,) and the extreme fatigue our troops were laid under in guarding such extensive lines without proper shelter from the weather, induced the above resolution.

It is the most intricate thing in the world, sir, to know in what manner to conduct one's self with respect to the Militia: if you do not begin many days before they are wanted, to raise them, you cannot have them in time; if you do, they get tired and return, besides being under but very little order or government whilst in service. However, if the enemy have a design of serving us at this place as we apprehend they meant to do on Long-Island, it might not be improper to have a body in readiness to prevent or retard a landing of them, on the east of Harlem River, if need be.

In haste, and not a little fatigued, I remain, with great respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient humble servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abm. Yates, Jun., Esq., President, &c.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, August 30, 1776.

SIR: The General desires you will detain the powder you have received till further orders at King's Bridge, except one ton to be sent down—the remainder to be produced occasionally.

The report of the evacuation of Long-Island last night is true; it was a measure founded on the fullest necessity, after the surprise of our troops last Tuesday [27th,] by which the flower of our Army and some of our best officers were lost; add to this, that the constant rains upon troops without cover has so spoiled the ammunition and enfeebled the men, that had the enemy attempted to force our lines, they must have done it with great ease. The ships have also been trying to get up the whole week, which, if they could effect, our communication would have been cut off, and the whole Army must have surrendered at discretion. Under these circumstances the remaining General Officers were unanimously of opinion, that it was absolutely necessary to retreat, which was done so as to bring off all our ammunition and artillery, except the heavy pieces, and most of our provisions. Our situation is in all respects critical. Lord Stirling and General Sullivan are both prisoners; the latter was permitted to come out this morning on his parole with a message from Lord Howe. This is the substance of what has passed in this important week.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED.

To Major-General Heath.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

New-York, August 30, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Though I am much fatigued, not having had my clothes off since Monday evening, and no sleep for two nights, I sit down cheerfully to comply with your request. On General Greene's being sick, Sullivan took the command, who was wholly unacquainted with the ground or country. Some movements being made which the General did not approve entirely, and finding a great force going to Long-Island, he sent over Putnam, who had been over occasionally; this gave some disgust, so that Putnam was directed to soothe and soften as much as possible. In this condition things were, and growing more critical. Lord Stirling went over; some regiments were also sent; they were ordered to lay in a wood near Flatbush, but the road from Jamaica having been neglected, they were surprised on Tuesday morning. The picket of eight hundred men, I fear, mostly ran off at the first fire, but several regiments being ordered out, and ignorant of the Jamaica rout, as soon as they engaged they found themselves surrounded, so that they were obliged to cut their way through. Many of them behaved well, and have suffered accordingly. Our loss I compute at seven hundred men, two General Officers, (Sullivan and Stirling;) nine Colonels and Lieutenant-Colonels, two or three Majors, and several other officers. The two first are prisoners, and well used. We had a letter from Sullivan yesterday. Colonels killed and missing are Atlee, Miles, Piper, Parry, (killed;) Lieutenant-Colonel Johnson, Lutz, Kacklin, Clark, Major Burd, and one or two I don't

The principal loss has fallen on First Pennsylvania Battalion, Atlee, Smallwood, Huntington, and Haslett's; all of whom behaved so as to command the admiration of all those who beheld the engagement. My Lord, who loved discipline, made a mistake, which probably affected us a great deal; he would not suffer his regiments to break, but kept them in lines and on open ground. The enemy, on the other hand, possessed themselves of the woods, fences, &c., and having the advantage of numbers, perhaps ten to one, our troops lost everything but honour. His personal bravery was very conspicuous. As this wood made a capital part of the Long-Island defence, and Lord Howe was every day attempting, with the wind ahead, to get up to town, it became a serious consideration whether we ought to risk the fate of the Army, and perhaps America, on defending the circle of about three miles, fortified with a few strong redoubts, but chiefly open lines. When the heavy rains came on not half of the men had tents; they lay out in the lines, their arms, ammunition, &c., all got wet; they began to sink under the fatigues and hardships. The enemy at the same time possessed themselves of a piece of ground very advantageous, and of which they had . . . We were therefore reduced to the alternative of retiring to this place, or going out with . . . to drive them off; it was unanimously agreed to retire, and measures taken to execute it, which was done in the face of their Army, so effectually that between sunset and sunrise our men, ammunition, all our artillery, (except five pieces of heavy cannon,) the greatest part of our prisoners, were got off undiscovered and safely landed here. We shall now therefore have our whole strength collected together, and govern ourselves accordingly. We took thirty prisoners and one officer from the enemy, and have reason to think their loss also considerable. In General Sullivan's note, he says Lord Stirling will be exchanged for either of their Brigadiers, from which we suppose two are killed, as they are not in our hands. A Sergeant brought in a laced hat, shot through, and the name of Colonel Grant wrote in it, from which we suppose he is certainly killed, and may be General Grant since promoted.

I have given you the substance, and I believe it is pretty exact.

I am, with great truth and esteem, &c., your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A MARYLANDER, DATED NEW-YORK, AUGUST 30, 1776.

I have just time to give you a short account of our late engagement at Long-Island. On Tuesday we received intelligence that the enemy had landed their troops about five miles below our lines; in consequence of which, General Stirling was ordered to march to the right and General Parsons to the left, with the Brigades under their commands, to take possession of some rising grounds, in order to flank the enemy and retard their march, until a sufficient reinforcement should be sent from this place to man the lines.

We began our march to the right, at three o'clock in the morning, with about thirteen hundred men, and about sunrise, on our near approach to the ground, discovered the enemy making up to it, and in a few minutes our advanced parties began the attack; we immediately advanced, and took possession of the ground and formed the line of battle, when our parties retreated to the main body and formed in a line with us. In the mean time they began a warm fire with their Artillery and Light Infantry, from their left, while the main body was forming in columns to attack us in front. Our men behaved well, and maintained their ground until ten o'clock, when the enemy retreated about two hundred yards and halted, and the firing on each side ceased, at which time we heard Generals Sullivan and Parsons engaged on our left. About eleven an express came to his Lordship, on which one battalion of Riflemen was immediately despatched to their assistance, which left us with no more than nine hundred and fifty men. We soon heard the fire continue round on our left, and in a short time discovered part of the enemy in our rear, going on to our lines, in order to cut off the communication between us. Being thus surrounded, and no probability of a reinforcement, his Lordship ordered me to retreat with the remaining part of our men, and force our way through to our camp. We soon fell in with a party of the enemy, who clubbed their firelocks, and waved their hats to us, as if they meant to surrender as prisoners; but on our advancing within sixty yards, they presented their pieces and fired, which we returned with so much warmth that they soon quitted their post and retired to a large body that was lying in ambuscade. During this interval the main part of our force retreated from the left through a marsh, with twenty-three prisoners, and got in safe, with the loss of one man killed and three drowned crossing the creek. We were then left with only five companies of our battalion, when the enemy returned, and after a warm and close engagement for near ten minutes, our little line became so disordered we were under the necessity of retreating to a piece of woods on our right, where we formed and made a second attack, but being overpowered with numbers, and surrounded on all sides, by at least twenty thousand men, we were drove with much precipitation and confusion. General Stirling on this retreat was missing, whose brave example had encouraged and animated our young soldiers with almost invincible resolution.

The impracticability of forcing through such a formidable body of troops, rendered it the height of rashness and imprudence to risk the lives of our remaining party in a third attempt, and it became necessary for us to endeavour to effect our escape in the best manner we possibly could. A party immediately retreated to the right through the woods, and Captain Ford and myself, with twenty others, to the left, through a marsh; nine only of whom got safe in. The principal loss sustained in our battalion fell on Captains Veazey, Adams, Lucas, Ford, and Bowie's companies. The killed, wounded, and missing amount to two hundred and fifty-nine; our whole loss that day supposed to be near one thousand, chief part of whom are prisoners, among whom are Generals Sullivan and Stirling. The above is as circumstantial an account as the hurry and want of time will admit of.

A list of the killed and missing in the Maryland Battalion: Captain Veazey, killed; Lieutenant Butler, said to be killed; Ensign Fernandes, Lieutenant Dent, Captain Bowie, missing; Lieutenant Sterret, Coursey, and Wright, Ensign Ridge, thirteen Sergeants, and two hundred and thirty-five privates.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 30, 1776.

On Monday we were ordered here, and next morning were sent over to Long-Island, where our battalion occupied the lines opposite the left of the enemy; the works we had were very weak, and but few cannon to defend them. The General Officers held a Council yesterday afternoon, and thought it necessary to abandon the Island, for fear of the men-of-war getting into the East River, and cutting off the communication with this place, which they would have done the first fair wind that served. Our battalion, with the other Pennsylvania troops and the Maryland Regiment, were ordered to cover the retreat of our Army, which must have consisted of ten thousand men. Our Army began to embark in boats about ten o'clock, and continued till daylight. We received orders to quit our station about two o'clock this morning, and had made our retreat almost to the ferry, when General Washington ordered us back to that part of the lines we were first at, which was reckoned to be the most dangerous post. We got back undiscovered by the enemy, and continued there until daylight. Providentially for us, a great fog arose, which prevented the enemy from seeing our retreat from their works, which was not more than musket-shot from us. Had we been discovered, we must have been unavoidably cut off, as we were on a neck of land which could have been taken possession of by them before we could have got out. We have got all our regiment over safe, except our sentinels, which we were obliged to leave; but gave them notice to retreat in time; therefore expect they will all get safe over. The first fair wind, it is expected the men-of-war will come up and bombard the town, and from the heights on Long-Island it may easily be done. It is the general opinion we cannot be able to keep it; therefore expect we shall be obliged to retreat to Mount Washington and King's Bridge. Since I have been on Long-Island, I have had no sleep, nor anything to eat but what I plundered; therefore travelled very light when we were obliged to scamper off this morning. By a flag received yesterday from the enemy, we are informed Lord Stirling and General Sullivan were made prisoners.

JOHN SLOSS HOBART TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Huntington, August 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: To our unspeakable mortification, we found, when we arrived in Queen's County, that the Militia had dispersed, and General Woodhull had fallen into the hands of the enemy. We then proceeded with all despatch to this town, as the only place where we could have any prospect of making an effectual stand, as the enemy were in full possession of the western parts of that County as far as Jamaica, and the disaffected from east were gone in to them. Tho' we were not authorized for the purpose by Convention, we have taken upon ourselves to order out the Militia of the County, to rendezvous here, and have wrote to Colonel Mulford, at Easthampton, to come up and take the command, as he is now the senior officer in the brigade.

We shall direct the Commissary to furnish the Militia with provisions. If we should succeed in collecting a considerable body of men together, money for their subsistence will be wanting. We have borrowed, on the publick credit, from the County Treasurer of Queen's County, £320, which will answer for the present. We hope the Convention will order a further sum for the Commissary. We find the people determined to make a resolute stand; and should any marauders attempt to penetrate this County, we trust they will pay for their temerity.

Nothing but the necessity of the case can be urged as an excuse for the power we have assumed; and being sensible that our conduct cannot be strictly justified, we humbly submit whether it will not be proper for the Convention to send us an indemnification, and such further powers as may be sufficient to enable us to exert the whole force of this brigade to oppose the enemy. As General Woodhull's papers have very probably been taken by the enemy, we beg we may have copies from the minutes of such resolves as are necessary for carrying on the operations in this part. We are informed that there are one hundred stand of arms in a prize lately brought in by Captain Rogers. We purpose to take and distribute them among the Militia. We must urge to the Convention the necessity of sending reinforcement, or we may not perhaps be able to make an effectual stand. We beg leave to submit to Convention the propriety of appointing an officer of activity and discretion to command in the room of General Woodhull; and are, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servants,

JOHN SLOSS HOBART,
JAMES TOWNSEND.

EBENEZER DAYTON'S NARRATIVE.

A Narrative of the Proceedings of the Officers and Men of part of the First Regiment in Suffolk County, required of Ebenezer Dayton, Quartermaster of the Minute Regiment, by Mr. John Sloss Hobart, Esq., of their Proceeding of the 30th August, 1776, at Brookhaven and Smithtown.

On the 29th August, Major Jeffrey Smith sent an order to Philip Roe, Adjutant, to order the four companies in Brookhaven to march immediately to Platt Carls, in Huntington, and there wait further orders. The said Adjutant gave orders to the four Captains of said companies without loss of time, and there appeared a very high spirit among the men in general, insomuch that, about the middle of the day following, (August 30,) three of those companies arrived to the house of Epenetus Smith, at Smithtown, and the other (being Captain Nicholas Rose's company) was coming up. It was reported at said Smith's that the Major was gone to Huntington, to see Messrs. Hubbard and Townsend, and desired these companies to wait there until his return, which was not until in the dusk of the evening, during which time there was great uneasiness among the men that they should be prevented from marching westward, and were very eager to march to Hempstead Plains to bring off the stock, and make a stand in the woods to the east of said Plains; but at evening Major Jeffrey Smith came to them from Huntington, and called the officers into a room, and told them that he thought it dangerous to march farther west, as their forces would not be sufficient to oppose the enemy, and that, for his part, he very much gave up the Island, and that he saw no way but that we must fall into the enemy's hands, and that it would not be good policy to incense a cruel enemy by being taken under arms, and that he supposed, if remained quiet at home, we should fare the better, and that he was so discouraged that he intended to resign his commission. He said Col. Potter was gone off, and left him alone, and that Major Brush had judged it unsafe to proceed with what forces we could raise in this County against the enemy, unless a large reinforcement should arrive very speedily, which he judged improbable; and Captain Thompson appeared in a panick, and was for rushing out of the room, saying he would give orders for his company to return home immediately, and would go himself also, and would not be prevailed upon to let his men stay until the morning, and also refused to be prevailed upon to conceal the motives for dismissing them. Major Smith said he would not give any orders, as he designed to decline his commission; but, as an individual, he would advise them to continue there until they could have orders from Messrs. Hubbard and Townsend, and did advise the officers to send off immediately to them for orders; but Captain Thompson rushed out of the room amongst the men, and expressed his fears, and dismissed his company, and hurried homewards; upon which the men, who before were in high spirits and eager to press forward, were in a panick of fear, and saw that if their officers ran away, and declined their offices, and feared to command them, they thought proper also to return home, but not without a clamour against their officers, &c., &c. The men returned home accordingly. In the whole affair, Adjutant Roe discovered firmness, and urged the officers to exert themselves, and so did a number of subalterns. Ebenezer Dayton was much censured for urging a speedy march, accusing him of wanting to sacrifice the troops without a chance of doing good, or even a probability of success.

EBENEZER DAYTON.

Sworn this 31st August, before us:

JNO. SLOSS HOBART,
JAMES TOWNSEND.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sag-Harbour, August 30, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: On Thursday last I received an express from Captain Davis, stationed at Montauk-Point, notifying me that he had discovered three sail of the enemy making for the Point; that they had hoisted out their boats to the number of ten or twelve, he supposed with design to land and carry off stock. After giving the orders I thought necessary to Captains Roe and Griffin, I set out for the Point. On my arrival in the evening at Captain Davis's station, I found three vessels, which I took to be frigates from twenty to thirty guns, a brig we imagined to be a prize, and a small sloop, close in with the land. At seven o'clock in the evening, one of the frigates, the brig, and the sloop, made for the continent southwest of New-London, where they anchored under the shore; the other two ships bore away for Block-Island. On Saturday morning the three vessels under the eastern shore, taking advantage of the tide of flood and a fair wind, sailed up the Sound as far as Huntington, about sixty miles from hence. The tide and wind making against them, they were obliged to come to an anchor; how far they have since proceeded is uncertain, but suppose the communication by water between this and New-York is now cut off. The ships off Block-Island still continue to cruise there. We imagine by their movements that they wait the arrival of a fleet.

I have just received an account of my Colonel's promotion to the rank of Brigadier-General. As next in rank to him in the regiment, I should have transmitted your Excellency a general return of the whole; but my remote distance from the major part of the regiment, together with the uncertainty whether it is your Excellency's intention I should succeed him, has prevented me.

The enclosed is a true state of the detachment your Excellency was pleased to honour me with the command of.

My respects wait on Mrs. Washington. I remain, sir, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. Any command your Excellency pleases to honour me with will be forwarded by the bearer, Lieutenant Smith, of Captain Roe's company.

My dear General, I have just received an account, by express, that the communication between us and New-York is cut off, and that your Excellency's attempts to dislodge the enemy have hitherto been successful. I have despatched an account of this matter to his Excellency Governor Trumbull, of Connecticut. If it meets with your Excellency's approbation, I should think, notwithstanding the ships in the Sound, we shall be able in a few days to get a body of men from Connecticut, whose attack on the back of our enemies from this way may be a means of distressing them much. They have now possession of Jamaica and Hempstead Plains, consequently this country is exposed to their ravages. The communication at Hell-Gate is not yet cut off. I wait with impatience for your Excellency's commands. The publick spirit of this County has reduced its Militia to nothing.

Yours, affectionately,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington, commanding in the United States of America, New-York.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Sag-Harbour, August 30, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have just received an account of our cruel and unnatural enemy, the English, having possessed themselves of so much of Long-Island as to destroy the communication between this end of it and the city of New-York. I am honoured by General Washington with the command of a detachment of two hundred men, for the protection of the inhabitants, stocks, &c. This detachment I think in danger, also insufficient for the purposes mentioned; but am resolved, notwithstanding, to keep our reputations clear and unsullied, and with our feeble force to endeavour to distress our enemies all in our power.

I have prevailed upon the Rev. Mr. Buell to transcribe the account he received from the express relative to the communication being cut off, and to direct it to your Excellency, that, if you should think it advisable, you might order a number of men to cross the Sound at night, which I conceive they might do without danger from the shipping stationed there. I have endeavoured to transmit his Excellency General Washington an account of my having wrote to your Honour concerning this matter, and sent him my returns, a duplicate of which I transmit to your Honour, that if mine should miscarry, this should not.

I am, with all imaginable respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON, Lt. Col. and Com. Officer.

To His Excellency Governor Trumbull.

REV. S. BUELL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Sag-Harbour, August 30, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have this hour direct intelligence from the west end of this Island, by a post, that the Ministerial Army (supposed to be about sixteen thousand) are on this side our Army upon the Island; have lined across the Island, from the Sound to the south side, so that we on the east end can have no access to our Army. Upon Tuesday last General Washington came over from New-York upon this Island with six thousand men. There have been several engagements; four or five thousand, it is supposed, have fallen, inclusive of both armies. The armies are within half a mile of each other. A constant fire is kept up; 'tis supposed the grand battle will be tomorrow or next day. We have lost, killed and taken, as the post says, near three hundred Riflemen. The enemy have two hundred Horse; their riders were to dine the day before yesterday at Hempstead. They have command of the west end of the Island entirely. The post relates, that upon Tuesday about five thousand Regulars attempted to land a little below York ferry. Our people met them, and the post says killed about two thousand, and drove the residue back. We learn by the post the Hessians fight terribly. I am now, sir, present with Colonel Livingston, who advises to write, in conjunction with himself, to your Honour, as proposing and submitting of it to your Honour's wisdom to determine whether it will not be conducive to the general good and for the preservation of this end of the Island, to throw a number of troops over to our assistance at the present time.

Confiding in your Excellency's patriotick spirit and superior wisdom, in all possible haste, I am, with great esteem, your Excellency's most humble, most obedient, friend and servant,

SOL. BUELL.

To Governor Trumbull.

WILLIAM DUER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Convention of Safety, Harlem, August 30, 1776.

SIR: By order of the Committee of Safety of this State, I transmit to your Excellency the examination of Daniel Redfield, in order that such measures may be pursued for baffling the enemy's operations as your prudence shall dictate. I have likewise to inform your Excellency, that on yesterday morning one Lounsbery, in Westchester County, who had headed a body of about fourteen Tories, was killed by an officer named Flood, on his refusal to surrender himself prisoner; that in his pocket-book was found a commission signed by General Howe to Major Rogers, empowering him to raise a battalion of Rangers, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel commandant; that annexed to this was a warrant to this Lounsberry, signed by Major Rogers, appointing him a Captain of one of these companies, as likewise a muster-roll of the men already enlisted. The Committee of Safety will transmit to your Excellency certified copies of all these papers as early as possible.

I am, sir, by order, your most obedient humble servant,
WM. DUER.
To His Excellency General Washington.

ABRAHAM YATES, JUN., TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
In Committee of Safety, at King's Bridge, }
August 30, 1776. }

SIR: In our way to Fishkill, agreeable to an adjournment of the Convention, we are informed that the Army is removed from Long-Island to the city of New-York. An anxiety to know the fact, as well as to be informed whether you think any measures necessary for us to take, induces us to trouble your Excellency at this time for an answer hereto. We have ordered last night all the Militia of the Counties of Ulster, Dutchess, Orange, and Westchester, to be ready at a minute's warning, with five days' provisions.

We shall wait the return of our messenger at this place; and are, sir, your most obedient and very humble servants,
ABM. YATES, JUN., President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

PETITION OF JONATHAN PURDY, JUN.

To the Honourable the President and Members of the Provincial Congress of NEW-YORK:

The Petition of JONATHAN PURDY, JUN., of WESTCHESTER County, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner hath been confined in this place for a considerable time merely on suspicion of being an enemy to the country, when your petitioner was inlisted into his Majesty's service, and received his bounty, upwards of six months ago, before there was any thought or even the least suspicion of an alteration of Government. And as your petitioner humbly conceives that he acted agreeable to the dictates of conscience in the affair, as he can see no reason offered that can invalidate his oath of allegiance, he humbly begs of your Honours to consider his case, and to allow him the same privileges as other prisoners of war in the service of his Majesty, by being allowed his liberty on parole to any certain boundary your Honours may think proper; and your petitioner hereby promises and engages never to interfere on one part or the other during the present unhappy troubles, but will behave himself as becomes a faithful subject and prisoner belonging to his Majesty, till such time as there may be an exchange of prisoners or that matters may be otherwise settled. Your petitioner humbly submits his case to this honourable House, and begs that they would consider your petitioner's unhappy case, and order him such relief as to this honourable House shall seem meet; and your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

JONATHAN PURDY, JUN.

White Plains Jail, August 30, 1776.

GENERAL HEATH TO THE COMMISSARY OF PROVISIONS.
King's Bridge, August 30, 1776.

SIR: Lieutenant Umstead, with twenty-two men besides himself, are ordered as a guard to conduct to Fairfield, in Connecticut, Lieutenant John Ragg, and twenty-two other prisoners of war, taken the 27th instant on Long-Island. You will immediately furnish the Lieutenant of the guard with provisions sufficient for the journey and return, or the value thereof in money agreeable to the establishment of the Continental rations.

I am, sir, yours, &c., WM. HEATH.
To the Commissary of Provisions.

P. S. You will also deliver for the guard the daily allowance of rum as when fatiguing.

GENERAL HEATH TO CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD.
King's Bridge, August 30, 1776, almost } ten o'clock at night. }

SIR: In consequence of orders this moment received from his Excellency General Washington, you are to stop all soldiers coming from the city, except such as have proper discharges; you are to post two sentries on the bridge, that none may escape.

I am, sir, yours, &c., W. HEATH, M. G.
To the Captain of the main Guard.

JAMES W. PAYNE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Frog Point, August 30, 1776.

SIR: In obedience to your Honour's request, I herewith send you an account of the enemy's Light-Horse, who are pillaging the country in parties of eight and ten all along on the opposite shore. As it was impossible to convey the troops over last night in the rain, they have found no opposition, which may induce them to continue their route. Had there been one hundred good men on Long-Island last night, I am of opinion we could have taken them all. I am this instant going over; if they are yet there, I shall immediately inform your Honour of every particular.

From your Honour's most obedient humble servant,
JAMES WM. PAYNE.

To the Hon. General Heath, at King's Bridge.

P. S. I have just heard that Major Bowne was seen bound in the possession of the Light-Horse.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 30, 1776.

SIR: I find there are a few carpenters in Colonel Whitcomb's regiment, and I thought it best to stop a few of them, in order to get off the galleys as soon as possible. I never saw so much fever and ague in my life as there is at this post. There are but very few carpenters at this place fit for duty, and it makes me very uneasy. I cannot get the galleys off according to your Honour's expectation; there is one to be launched to-morrow, and I hope the others will soon be in the water. I hope I shall soon be on the lake with the galleys, as it would be very agreeable to me. If it should not be disagreeable to your Honour my stopping the carpenters out of the above regiment, I should be glad to do it, as I may send them forward; and am, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL FRASER TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 30, 1776.

SIR: I arrived at this place last evening with Colonel Whitcomb's regiment from Boston, and expect to embark this afternoon or to-morrow morning early for Ticonderoga. The roads, or rather woods, that we marched through were so exceeding bad, occasioned by the vast quantity of rain that we have had lately, retarded our march much. We had rafts to build to cross the rivers with our baggage, &c., and swam across several creeks. This, with the worst ground I ever travelled over, detained us a little. I have lost not one minute of time, or staid at anything. Our baggage was a little in the rear, but will be all up to-day. Colonel Phinney with his regiment will be here to-morrow.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

JNO. G. FRASER.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, August 30, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I received your obliging letter of the 28th instant, and am glad to understand that it is your design rather to increase than diminish the number of troops at this post. Were the detachment under General Arnold returned to the regiment, I could then conduct my operations here agreeable to a plan which I have laid down to myself. I think my party would be secure against the Savages or light troops of the enemy, or perhaps I might say more; and I could always afford to have some parties in the woods, and a boat on the Lake, so that the main Army might be informed of the approach of an enemy. You will see by my return of this day, that we are but weak at present; but if you were pleased to order a subaltern and thirty eastern men to Raymond's Mill, as a covering party to the oar-makers there, I could perhaps make out till the return of my men who went with General Arnold. I propose, if you would send the covering party to the Mill to-morrow, to despatch to-morrow afternoon two boats down the Lake—one to Gilliland's, the other to the fleet—with some military stores that were sent here since the General sailed. At Raymond's Mill I would keep a corporal and four woodsmen; two of them should still be out to discover if any Indians should come up on the west side of the Lake near that place.

If, from any intelligence I may receive, I should stand in need of a further reinforcement, I shall make application to you immediately. I have collected three rusty cannon from the ruins of the works near here. I have prepared a place to mount them. I would be glad of a couple of Artillerymen for a few days, to teach some of my men who have had a little experience.

I am really convinced that this is a place of the last consequence. Should the enemy, by any accident, get possession of it this fall or next spring, they could effectually destroy our navigation, or render it useless. It is too late to think of repairing the old works this fall, perhaps; but as nature seems to have intended this spot to command the pass of this country, I presume it will not be neglected in the spring, as there will be no scarcity of men. The fortifications could be much sooner repaired, I think, than is generally imagined. If the occupying all the redoubts would require many men, only such of them should be repaired as were absolutely necessary, and the rest be entirely destroyed. You will, perhaps, think it necessary to keep troops here during the winter; if so, some of the barracks in the fort might be handily repaired, if a dozen or two carpenters were set to work at any time. If I survive this campaign, it is probable I may not come into this quarter again; yet it would give me great pleasure to hear it was determined to fortify and maintain this point, even distinct from the protection of the fleet.

I have so little experience that you may consider me impertinent in these observations. I hope you will not, as they really proceed from the best of motives.

The increase of your Army effectually secures Ticonderoga against any attempts from our enemy; nay, even tho' the American arms were unsuccessful at New-York.

The fleet got down on Saturday evening, opposite Gilliland's. How far they afterwards proceeded, I have not learnt, but apprehend it could have been no great distance, as the storm came on so soon. The party from this regiment preceded the fleet. They must have had a hard time of it.

I shall carefully attend to your instructions, and shall always consider it as a great reward when my small services receive your approbation.

I am, honoured sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
THOS. HARTLEY.

To Major-General Gates.

STEPHEN BADGER TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Natick, August 30, 1776.

SIR: When I waited upon you at Boston last week, I had some conversation with your Honour relating to Colonel Jones, of Dedham, who was in the list of Justices under the late establishment, but has hitherto been taken no notice of under the present. This he is at a loss rationally to account for, not being conscious of having done anything to forfeit the confidence of the publick, or to disqualify himself for any employment which his talents and abilities may be equal to. From a particular acquaintance with him, I know him to be a worthy man, of a fair character, and of good understanding, and have reason to believe he has taken as much pains and been at as much expense to inform and furnish himself, with respect to the nature and duties of a Magistrate's office, as most of those that were upon the bench with him. He is also a man of so much firmness and resolution, as well as capacity and integrity, that when difficulties have arisen in some of the remote parts of the county to which he belongs, he has divers times been called to officiate as a Justice, and has terminated matters in such a manner as derived credit to himself, dignity to his office, and at the same time produced beneficial effects to society; and, I am well informed, has been applied to for advice by some that have lately been appointed to office, who know him to be well versed in the nature and business of it. But it seems not a little hard that the result of that pains and expense he has been at, should be only made use of as a medium by others, and he be entirely excluded from improving them in an immediate way himself. As to politics, from the beginning he has not merely disapproved of, but condemned the measures of the British Administration relative to these Colonies; but he has uniformly and strenuously bore testimony against mobs and riot, and been a warm and zealous friend to order and a due subordination in the community, and when in office exerted himself to promote them as occasion required, by which he incurred the censure and ill will of some of the baser sort, especially of those of them that felt the effects of his spirited but prudent decisions. Men of this cast, taking advantage of the temper and the enthusiasm of the times, and the relaxation, if not dormancy, of the laws, loaded him with insult and abuse without measure, which might draw from him some expressions that had a personal reference only, but which might look unfavourable to the cause of freedom, although they were far from being intended to injure what is properly such. He entirely concurs with the Declaration of Independency, and will exert himself in defence of it upon every proper occasion. As the temper of the people is now in a great measure subsided, I doubt not there would be a general concurrence with his appointment to office, and a universal acquiescence, especially as it is known that he has not been wanting in donations to the distressed poor of Boston, or in contributing more than his proportion to raising men for the Continental service, besides having a son of great hopes, who was a worthy officer in it, who was at Charlestown, and acquitted himself well in the engagement there, but who lately died of the small-pox in the Northern Army, to the great grief of his parents and friends, as well as to the loss of his country.

These things being considered, with others that might be mentioned, I cannot but presume the honourable Board will think it expedient and proper to enable him to be further useful to the community, and to support his rank in life, by reappointing him to that department which he but lately filled up, with reputation to himself and advantage to the publick; which is humbly submitted to your Honour, with the rest of the honourable Board, by your and their very humble servant,

STEPHEN BADGER.

To the Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO THE COMMITTEE OF POPLIN, RESPECTING ZACHEUS CLOUGH.

State of New-Hampshire, in Committee of Safety, }
August 30, 1776. }

Whereas this Committee did, on the 20th July, recommend to the Committee of Poplin to call in to their aid the Committees of two of the nearest towns or parishes to them, jointly to sit and hear all accusations against Zacheus Clough, Esq., of said Poplin, relative to a donation he was intrusted with for the poor of Boston, it being represented to this Committee that the Committees were not called agreeable to the said recommendation, it is now further recommended that all proceedings be stayed thereon, respecting those matters, until Thursday, the 5th September next, at which time the parties, if they see cause, may have an opportunity of being heard thereon before the General Assembly.

GUY CARLETON, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief of the Province of QUEBECK, Vice-Admiral of the same, General and Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces in the said Province, and the Frontiers, &c., &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas there remains on hand a great quantity of the last year's Wheat, and the crops of this year are very abundant, a considerable part of which is already got in, and it is conceived that it will not be detrimental to the Province, nor to his Majesty's troops therein, to suffer an exportation thereof, I hereby make known to all his Majesty's subjects in this Province, that I do allow a general exportation of Wheat. But inasmuch as the exportation of any Cattle or Live Stock out of the Province, or of Flour and Biscuit, elsewhere than to the Fisheries, Nova-Scotia, and the West-Indies, may at this time be greatly prejudicial to the Province and his Majesty's troops therein, I have thought proper to order, and I do hereby strictly order, that no person or persons whatsoever, at any time after the publication hereof, and before the first day of December next, shall, directly or indirectly, export or cause to be exported out of this Province any Cattle or Live Stock to any place whatsoever, or any Flour or Biscuit, elsewhere than to the Fisheries, Nova-Scotia, or the West-Indies.

And I do hereby forbid all the officers of his Majesty's Customs, within this Province, to make any entries or clearances of any vessel or vessels which shall have on board any Cattle or Live Stock, or any Flour and Biscuit, other than for the Fisheries, Nova-Scotia, or the West-Indies; excepting only such and so much of the said commodities as shall be necessary to be carried for the sustenance, diet, and support of the commanders, masters, mariners, passengers, or others, in the same vessels, for their respective voyages.

Given under my hand and seal of arms, at Montreal, the 30th day of August, 1776, in the sixteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth.

GUY CARLETON.

By His Excellency's command :

E. FOY.

God save the King.

ADDRESS OF THE CITY OF MONTREAL TO GENERAL CARLETON.

To His Excellency GUY CARLETON, Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief of the Province of QUEBECK, and the Territories thereon depending, General and Commander-in-Chief of His Majesty's Forces in the said Province, and the Frontiers thereof, &c., &c.

We, his Majesty's faithful subjects of the City of Montreal, most respectfully congratulate your Excellency on the victory which, with a handful of his Majesty's troops and seamen, aided by the brave and loyal citizens of Quebeck, you have so gloriously obtained over the rebellious invaders of this Province. How pleasing to your Excellency, how happy for us, to see you thus victorious, and now at the head of an Army arduous to distinguish themselves, not less by their humanity than by their valour.

Before rebellion (the source of crimes and misery) made us feel its fatal effects, we were fully convinced that our happiness entirely depended on our deference to the authority of our King in Parliament, and we needed not the scourge of invading tyrants to persuade us that the welfare of a nation is inseparably connected with loyalty and attachment to the Sovereign.

To relate the acts of injustice and cruelty committed under the sacred name of liberty, would be changing our congratulations and joy into lamentations and complaints: happy in our deliverance, and in the prospect of again flourishing under your Excellency's Administration, we ardently pray the Divine Providence to prosper his Majesty's arms under your command, and to make you the happy instrument for restoring peace and tranquillity between Great Britain and her distracted Colonies.

We humbly pray your Excellency to make known to our most gracious Monarch the satisfaction we feel on being restored to peace and good Government, and to assure the best of Kings of our unshaken fidelity to his royal person, his family, and his Government.

GENERAL CARLETON'S ANSWER.

GENTLEMEN: I thank you for this very loyal Address, which shall be transmitted home in order to be laid before the Throne.

It is with the greatest satisfaction I see you delivered from the tyranny of lawless men, and again under the protection of the laws and government of your Sovereign, whose strength is the security of his subjects, his power destined to promote their happiness, and guard their rights and liberties: those who assail it, though, under the varnish of a flattering and perverted use of words, they may deceive the thoughtless multitude, are in truth the people's greatest enemies, would strip them of their sole defence upon earth, and expose them a prey to violence and wrong, perhaps to their own unbounded and unjust ambition.

It would complete my satisfaction should I be fortunate enough to assist in restoring to the same peace and tranquillity you now enjoy, the distracted Provinces in our neighbourhood, and to convince them without severity how strangely they have been led aside from their true interests. The manly conduct of the citizens of Quebeck will prove a lasting monument to their honour, and it is to be hoped, the example of their courage and resolution will inspire the unhappy sufferers in the other Colonies with similar virtue now to rescue themselves from the miseries which their credulity prevented them from guarding against at the first.

GUY CARLETON.

RALPH IZARD TO CLAUDE CRESPIGNY.

Richmond, (England,) August 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We are very happy to hear of the favourable change in Mrs. Crespigny.

They laugh, you say, at St. James's at the Declaration of Independence. I do not know that they have much cause to do so. When the Duke of Braganza declared Portugal independent of Spain, and himself King of it, the Count-Duke Olivarez affected likewise to laugh. Philip the Fourth was persuaded to think it a very pleasant and comical circumstance. This Minister made him believe that there would be such confiscations as would abundantly recompense him for the trouble these few factious people would give him. The King, however, was deceived, and the Spanish Monarchy dismembered. Perhaps some historian may find a parallel to this Spanish story.

I believe the history of Europe does not furnish so extraordinary an affair as the late defeat at Charlestown. Last year's Algerine expedition is not to be compared to it. The Ministry must have great confidence in the passive tempers of the nation to impose such an account on them as appeared in last Saturday's Gazette. There must certainly have been a misunderstanding between the two departments, which, however pleasing it may be to those who are enemies to the doctrine of passive obedience and unconditional submission, much behooves the supporters of the measures to inquire into.

Clinton has always borne the character of a brave and good officer; it is therefore the more extraordinary that he should have been landed on a sand bank, (Long-Island and Sullivan's Island are nothing else,) from the 9th to the 28th, without sounding the water, and knowing that it was too deep to walk across.

Sir Peter Parker tells us that he drove large parties several times out of the fort, which were replaced by others from the main. This fort was a temporary thing, built to annoy the shipping in their passage to the town. It was not expected that it would have been necessary to defend it for upwards of ten hours against a homb vessel and eight or nine men-of-war. The powder, I dare say, was very near exhausted, and the men whom Sir Peter supposes he had driven out might probably have been messengers for a fresh supply. The large parties might have been small ones. We know that the Provincial numbers at Bunker's Hill were, by the Gazette, multiplied at least by five. Objects seen through the medium of smoke and fire are always considerably magnified. If the fort was evacuated for an hour and a half, as he writes, why did he not take possession of it? He would, I believe, have found himself mistaken if he had attempted it. But the fort was totally silenced: very likely, and for the reason just assigned. It requires a great quantity of powder to fire cannon. While this was bringing, I cannot help thinking that my countrymen had sagacity enough to lie perdu behind the parapet—to defend themselves against the boasted coup de main with their small-arms.

The Gazette does not announce the actual departure of any of the ships from Charlestown harbour. The want of water will oblige them to be as expeditious as possible. They may accommodate themselves with that article at Staten-Island, and nowhere else with safety, that I know of, to the southward of that. If Mrs. Crespigny will lend you her plan, you will see that they must pass within the reach of two batteries, which may give them a pretty warm salute at taking leave.

Very important news may be expected every day from New-York. The Ministry, I hear, are fully persuaded that Mr. Howe will winter in Philadelphia. This is possible, but I have not the least idea that it will happen.

You know my opinion on the probable event of this cruel and unfortunate business. I have had no reason to change it since I saw you.

Pray give my compliments to Mr. Townshend and Mr. Ley.

VIRGINIA COUNCIL TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Williamsburgh, August 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We received your letter, requiring a return of the prisoners of war in this Commonwealth and a list of the officers on the Continental establishment, so late that it is not in our power to be so accurate as we could wish. At present we can only transmit a list of the prisoners, and shall send an accurate list of the officers by the next post; referring you in the mean time, however, to a list which we very lately sent to the Virginia Delegates at Congress.

By order of Council:

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOHN PAGE, President.To Richard Peters, Esquire, Secretary to the War Office, Philadelphia.

GENERAL LEWIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 16, 1776.]

Williamsburgh, August 31, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty of enclosing you a letter to me directed by John Rickman, Esq., Director-General of the Hospital. The different articles mentioned in his list are much wanted, and not to be had in this State. The number of sick are great, as will appear by a general return made to the War Office.

I have heard nothing from General Lee since the 3d of this month. The letter from Congress to him I sent off with all possible despatch.

By a resolve of Congress, I observe that the Continental troops who enlist to serve three years, are to receive ten dollars each. The most of the troops raised in this State are to serve two years, commencing last April. I wish for the particular direction of Congress in this case, that I may know with certainty whether they would have them reenlisted to serve three years after the expiration of their present enlistment, or whether the reenlistment of them is to be deferred until the time for which they were engaged is nearly expired. By another resolve of Congress, I observe that a Paymaster is allowed to each regiment: by whom, and in what manner, are those Paymasters to be appointed?

I am, with great respect, honourable sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General.To John Hancock, Esq.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM PHILADELPHIA, DATED AUGUST 31, 1776, SATURDAY, TWO O'CLOCK, P. M.

You will no doubt be very anxious to receive a particular account of the late engagement between our troops and the enemy on Long-Island. I wish our information enabled me to relieve you, but at present we are in the most painful state of suspense, the post not having yet arrived, by which we expect full intelligence. From the letters we have received, with what I can collect of others sent to inhabitants of this city, it appears that the enemy, having landed a number of troops on the night of the 26th, and posted them advantageously, without being discovered by our people, and having also posted a part of their Army in a wood, some distance from the main body, proceeded in a heavy column towards our intrenchments. Early on the morning of the 27th, a firing began between our advanced guard and theirs; the enemy, with their middle column, made a feint at our works, and having received a fire, retreated. A brigade of our troops, consisting of the First New-York Battalion, two Pennsylvania, one Delaware, and the Maryland Battalion, under the command of Generals Sullivan and Stirling, followed the enemy. A very hot fire was kept up. When the enemy had retreated, our troops advanced upon them some distance. The troops of the enemy, posted for that purpose, surrounded our friends, and a most savage engagement ensued; no relief could be given from the fort to our troops, without hazarding the post at Long-Island. Thus surrounded with thrice their numbers, galled on one side by Light-Horse, and torn with artillery in front, they bravely fought for several hours; however, after having given the most convincing proofs of their bravery and skill, and having sustained considerable loss, they were obliged to yield to superior numbers; they were broken, and retreated as well as they could. Many fell by the bayonet, which was pushed with equal obstinacy by the two adverse parties. Our loss is not ascertained—some say five hundred, some say three. By deserters, the enemy had killed and wounded five hundred. Generals Stirling and Sullivan were both missing when we last heard from General Washington. Thursday morning, four o'clock, Colonels Miles and Ailee were also missing, when our last intelligence was sent. A Colonel Grant, of the enemy, was killed; who else of distinction, we have not heard. The enemy, upon the retreat of our brigade, took possession of a very advantageous wood, near our out intrenchment. Smallwood's Battalion of Marylanders were distinguished in the field by the most intrepid courage, the most regular use of the musket, and judicious movements of the body. All the other battalions behaved as became Americans and men of honour, fighting for their rights of freemen. When our party was overcome and broken, by superior numbers surrounding them on all sides, three companies of the Maryland broke the enemy's lines, and fought their way through; the others attempted to cross a small creek, which proved fatal to several of them. I have not heard their loss, but presume it is very heavy, they being in a situation very much exposed, facing the enemy's cannon, in the open field for a considerable time. Captain Veazey and Lieutenant Butler are among the honourable slain. I don't hear of any other officers of that battalion being killed or taken. There is a report in town that Lord Stirling got into the camp safe, but I fear it is not true. Since this engagement, there have been frequent skirmishes between our troops and the enemy, the result of which we have not heard. Our posts are now very near to each other, and we expect hourly to hear of a very general engagement.

SATURDAY, three o'clock, P. M.—By the post arrived just now, we are certainly informed, that our whole Army, the night before last, retreated from Long-Island to New-York, bringing away the most of their cannon, and spiking what was left. The enemy were taking measures to cut off the communication between the island and the main, and had also got possession of a post from which they could distress our camp at Long-Island. Lord Stirling and General Sullivan are both prisoners. The enemy it is said have lost one thousand men; two Generals of theirs are also killed; they sent a flag to exchange Sullivan and Stirling for two missing Generals of theirs, but we had them not, so that they must have fell. The Maryland Battalion lost two hundred men and twelve officers. Severe fate! It is said our whole loss is five or six hundred.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 2, 1776.]

New-York, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Inclination as well as duty would have induced me to give Congress the earliest information of my removal, and that of the troops, from Long-Island and its dependencies to this city the night before last; but the extreme fatigue which myself and family have undergone, as much from the weather since as the engagement on the 27th, rendered me and them entirely unfit to take pen in hand. Since Monday, scarce any of us have been out of the lines till our passage across the East River was effected yesterday morning; and for forty-eight hours preceding that, I had hardly been off my horse, and never closed my eyes, so that I was quite unfit to write or dictate till this morning.

Our retreat was made without any loss of men or ammunition, and in better order than I expected from the troops in the situation ours were. We brought off our cannon and stores, except a few heavy pieces, which, in the condition the earth was, by a long-continued rain, we found, upon trial, impracticable; the wheels of the carriages sinking up to the hubs, rendered it impossible for our whole force to drag them. We left but little provisions on the Island, except some cattle, which had been driven within our lines, and which, after many attempts to force across the water, we found impossible to effect, circumstanced as we were.

I have enclosed a copy of the Council of War, held previous to the retreat, to which I beg leave to refer Congress for the reasons, or many of them, that led to the adoption of that measure.

Yesterday evening and last night a party of our men were employed in bringing our horses, cannon, tents, &c., from Governour's Island, which they nearly completed. Some of the heavy cannon remain there still, but I expect will be got away to-day.

In the engagement on the 27th Generals Sullivan and Stirling were made prisoners; the former has been permitted, on his parole, to return for a little time. From my Lord Stirling I had a letter by General Sullivan, a copy of which I have the honour to transmit. That contains his information of the engagement with his brigade. It is not so full and certain as I could wish; he was hurried most probably, as his letter was unfinished. Nor have I been yet able to obtain an exact account of our loss; we suppose it from seven hundred to one thousand killed and taken.

General Sullivan says Lord Howe is extremely desirous of seeing some of the members of Congress; for which purpose he was allowed to come out, and to communicate to them what has passed between him and his Lordship. I have consented to his going to Philadelphia, as I did not mean, or conceive it right, to withhold or prevent him from giving such information as he possesses in this instance.

I am much hurried, and engaged in arranging and making new dispositions of our forces; the movement of the enemy requiring them to be immediately had; and therefore have only time to add, that I am, with my best regards to Congress, their and your most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

LORD STIRLING TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Eagle, August 29, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I have now an opportunity of informing you of what has happened to me since I had last the pleasure of seeing you. About three o'clock in the morning of the 27th I was called up, and informed by General Putnam that the enemy were advancing by the road from Flatbush to the Red Lion, and ordered me to march with the two regiments nearest at hand to meet them; these happened to be Haslet's and Smallwood's, with which I accordingly marched, and was on the road to the Narrows just as the daylight began to appear. We proceeded to within about half a mile of the Red Lion, and there met Colonel Atlee with his regiment, who informed me that the enemy were in sight; indeed I then saw their front between us and the Red Lion. I desired Colonel Atlee to place his regiment on the left of the road, and to wait their coming up, while I went to form the two regiments I had brought with me, along a ridge from the road up to a piece of wood on the top of the hill; this was done instantly on very advantageous ground. Our opponents advanced, and were fired upon in the road by Atlee's, who, after two or three rounds, retreated to the wood on my left, and there formed. By this time Kichline's Riflemen arrived; part of them I placed along a hedge under the front of the hill, and the rest in the front of the wood. The troops opposed to me were two brigades, of four regiments each, under the command of General Grant, who advanced their light troops to within one hundred and fifty yards of our right front, and took possession of an orchard there, and some hedges which extended towards our left; this brought on an exchange of fire between those troops and our Riflemen, which continued for about two hours, and then ceased by those light troops retiring to their main body. In the mean time Captain Carpenter brought up two field-pieces, which were placed on the side of the hill so as to command the road, and the only approach for some hundred yards. On the part of General Grant there were two field-pieces; one howitz advanced to within three hundred yards of the front of our right, and a like detachment of artillery to the front of our left, on a rising ground, at about six hundred yards distance. One of their brigades formed in two lines opposite to our right, and the others extended in one line to top of the hills in the front of our left; in this position we stood cannonading each other till near eleven o'clock, when I found that General Howe, with the main body of the Army, was between me and our lines, and saw that the only chance of escaping being all made prisoners was to pass the creek near the Yellow Mills; and, in order to render this the more practicable, I found it absolutely necessary to attack a body of troops commanded by Lord Cornwallis, posted at the house near the Upper Mills; this I instantly did, with about half of Smallwood's, first ordering all the other troops to make the best of their way through the creek. We continued the attack a considerable time, the men having been rallied and the attack renewed five or six several times, and were on the point of driving Lord Cornwallis from his station, but large succours arriving rendered it impossible to do more than to provide for safety. I endeavoured to get in between that house and Fort Box, but on attempting it I found a considerable body of troops in my front, and several in pursuit of me on the right and left, and a constant firing on me. I immediately turned the point of a hill which covered me from their fire, and I was soon out of the reach of my pursuers. I soon found it would be in vain to attempt to make my escape, and therefore went to surrender myself to General De Heister, commander-in-chief of the Hessians.

PROCEEDINGS OF A COUNCIL OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

At a Council of War, held at Long-Island, August 29, 1776:

Present: His Excellency General Washington; Major-Generals: Putnam, Spencer; Brigadier-Generals: Mifflin, McDougall, Parsons, Scott, Wadsworth, Fellows.

It was submitted to the consideration of the Council, whether, under all circumstances, it would not be eligible to leave Long-Island and its dependencies, and remove the Army to New-York. Unanimously agreed in the affirmative, for the following reasons:

1st. Because our advanced party had met with a defeat, and the wood was lost where we expected to make a principal stand.

2d. The great loss sustained in the death or captivity of several valuable officers and their battalions, or a large part of them, had occasioned great confusion and discouragement among the troops.

3d. The heavy rains, which fell two days and nights with but little intermission, had injured the arms and spoiled a great part of the ammunition, and the soldiery being without cover and obliged to lay in the lines, were worn out, and, it was to be feared, would not be retained in them by any order.

4th. From the time the enemy moved from Flatbush, several large ships had attempted to get up, as supposed, in the East River, to cut off our communication, by which the whole Army would have been destroyed, but the wind being northeast could not effect it.

5th. Upon consulting with persons of knowledge of the harbour, they were of opinion that small ships might come between Long-Island and Governour's Island, where there are no obstructions, and which would cut off the communication effectually; and who were also of opinion, the hulks sunk between Governour's Island and the city of New-York were no sufficient security for obstructing that passage.

6th. Though our lines were fortified with some strong redoubts, yet a great part of them were weak, being abattied with brush, and affording no strong cover, so that there was reason to apprehend they might be forced, which would have put our troops in confusion, and having no retreat, they must have been cut to pieces or made prisoners.

7th. The divided state of the troops render our defence very precarious, and the duty of defending long and extensive lines at so many different places, without proper conveniencies and cover, so very fatiguing, that the troops had become dispirited by their incessant duty and watching.

8th. Because the enemy had sent several ships-of-war into the Sound, to a place called Flushing Bay; and from the information received that a part of their troops were moving across Long-Island that way, there was reason to apprehend they meant to pass over land, and form an encampment above King's Bridge, in order to cut off and prevent all communication between our Army and the country beyond them, to get in our rear.

DETERMINATION OF A COUNCIL OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

At a Council of War, held at Long-Island, August 29, 1776:

Present: His Excellency General Washington; Major-Generals: Putnam, Spencer; Brigadier-Generals: Mifflin, McDougall, Parsons, Scott, Wadsworth, Fellows.

It was submitted to the consideration of the Council, whether, under all circumstances, it is not eligible to leave Long-Island and its dependencies, and remove to New-York. Unanimously agreed in the affirmative.

THOS. SPENCER,	JNO. MORIN SCOTT,
THOS. MIFFLIN,	JAMES WADSWORTH,
ALEXR. MCDUGALL,

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 25, 1776.

(Parole, Marlborough.)

(Countersign, Newtown.)

A special Court-Martial to sit this day, at twelve o'clock, at Mrs. Montagnie's, for the trial of Lieutenant-Colonel Zedtwitz, charged with "carrying on a treasonable correspondence with the enemy;" to be composed of a Brigadier-General and twelve Field-Officers: General Wadsworth to preside.

The General Order against working on Sunday is revoked, the time not admitting of any delay. The same number of fatigue-men to turn out, as yesterday, this afternoon, at three o'clock, as well Militia as other troops.

Colonel Smallwood to command Lord Stirling's Brigade during his absence on Long-Island.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 26, 1776.

(Parole, Newcastle.)

(Countersign, Paris.)

Six hundred men, properly officered, from General Wolcott's Brigade, to parade to-morrow morning, at six o'clock, on the grand parade, without arms, for fatigue: four hundred to take directions from General McDougall, and two hundred from Lieutenant Fish; and the same number to be continued till the works are completed. To leave work at young flood, and go on again at the ebb.

The General is very anxious for the state of the arms and ammunition—the frequent rains giving too much reason to fear they may suffer. He therefore earnestly enjoins officers and men to be particularly attentive to it, and have them in the best order.

One Orderly Sergeant from each regiment in General Wadsworth's, General Wolcott's, and General Fellows's Brigades, and one from Colonel Knox's command, to attend daily at Head-Quarters until further orders.

The commanding officers of each company in the several regiments in this post are strictly required to attend to the orders that have been given by the Commander-in-Chief from time to time, to see that their respective rolls are looked over, and the orders of the day published to their whole company. And as it is the pleasure of the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Forces that all soldiers that pass from Long-Island here without passes should immediately be sent back, all the guards especially, and all others belonging to the Army in this post, are required to take up all soldiers coming from Long-Island without passes signed by a proper officer, and send them immediately back to Long-Island.

The Colonels, or commanding officers of each regiment, must take care that the arms and ammunition of each soldier be in good order, that they be equipped and constantly ready for action. They must be particularly attentive to see that the cartridges suit their pieces.

All the guards, and also all others belonging to the Army, are to be vigilant in taking up and confining all persons guilty of disorderly firing, or firing without leave. All the guards supplied by general detail are to be punctually on the grand parade by eight o'clock in the morning; and in case any Brigade-Major does not punctually bring on, the men he is to furnish, the Brigadier of the day is to report him immediately; and if such Brigade-Major is delayed by the negligence of an Adjutant, he is to put such Adjutant immediately under an arrest.

It is hoped that every officer and soldier in this post will exert himself for the good of the service to the utmost; and as there are many intrenchments now begun that are unfinished that necessity requires should be immediately completed, it is justly expected that every brave man will exert himself to complete every needful fortification.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 30, 1776.

(Parole, Liberty.)

(Countersign, Hancock.)

All commanding officers of regiments are to parade on their regimental parade this evening at five o'clock, examine the state of their men's ammunition and arms, and get them in the best order. All damaged cartridges are to be returned, and in this case fresh ones drawn without further orders. The returns of the regiments are to be made as soon and as exact as possible. No arguments can be necessary, at such a time as this, to induce all officers to a strict attention to this duty.

The constant firing in the camp, notwithstanding repeated orders to the contrary, is very scandalous, and seldom a day passes but some persons are shot by their friends. Once more, therefore, the General entreats the officers to prevent it, and calls upon the soldiers to forbear this practice. Pieces that cannot be drawn are to be discharged in a volley at retreat beating, and not otherwise, and then by command of the officer.

The loss of two General Officers by the late action having occasioned a necessary change in the brigades, the Brigade-Majors are to attend at ten o'clock to-morrow, to receive a new arrangement.

As the tents are wet, and weather unfavourable, the troops are to remain in the city till further orders; those not supplied with barracks to apply to Mr. Roorback, Barrack-Master. Officers and men are charged to see as little damage as possible done to houses where they are quartered.

General Wadsworth to send two regiments from his brigade, to reinforce Colonel Sergeant, at Horn's Hook, as soon as possible.

In case of an alarm this evening, which may be expected, from the nearness of the enemy, and their expectation of taking advantage of the late rains and last night's fatigue, the following disposition is to take place, and the regiments are to parade accordingly: General Mifflin's to parade on the grand parade; they are then to join the regiments lately composing Lord Stirling's Brigade, and the whole to parade on the parade lately assigned by him to them: these are to act under General Mifflin as a reserve corps. The regiments of General Nixon's Brigade are to join General Spencer's division, who will assign them their alarm posts. The Jersey troops to join General McDougall's Brigade, and parade at or near said ground.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 31, 1776.

(Parole, Harlem.)

(Countersign, Flushing.)

Major Livingston, charged with having ordered a negro to fire on a soldier of Captain Newcomb's Regiment, is ordered to be confined and brought to trial. But the General is sorry to see soldiers, defending their country, in time of imminent danger, rioting and attempting to do themselves justice.

The plunderers of Lord Stirling's house are ordered to restore to the Quartermaster-General what they have taken; in failure whereof, they will certainly be hanged.

It is the General's orders that the remainder of Lutz's and Kachlein's Battalions be joined to Hand's Battalion; that Major Hays be also under the special command of Colonel Hand; that then those battalions, with Shee's, Colonel Magaw's, Colonel Hutchinson's, Colonel Atlee's, Colonel Miles's, and Colonel Ward's Regiments, be brigaded under General Mifflin, and those now here march as soon as possible to King's Bridge. The Quartermaster will supply wagons, if to be spared; if not, to apply to Lieutenant Acholt, on the North River boat station, or Ensign Allen on the East, who will supply boats. A careful officer, with a small guard, to attend them. Major Lord will supply, from General Wolcott's Brigade, an officer and six men to each boat, to bring boats back, except those that are ordered to stay.

Both officers and soldiers are informed that the retreat from Long-Island was made by the unanimous advice of all the General Officers, not from any doubts of the spirit of the troops, but because they found the troops very much fatigued with hard duty, and divided into many detachments, while the enemy had their main body on the Island, and capable of receiving assistance from the shipping. In these circumstances it was thought unsafe to transport the whole of an Army on an Island, or to engage them with a part, and therefore unequal numbers; whereas now one whole Army is collected together, without water intervening, while the enemy can receive little assistance from their ships. Their Army is, and must be, divided into many bodies, and fatigued with keeping up a communication with their ships; whereas ours is connected, and can act together. They must effect a landing under so many disadvantages, that if officers and soldiers are vigilant, and alert to prevent surprise, and add spirit when they approach, there is no doubt of our success.

Ebenezer Gray is appointed Brigade-Major to General Parsons.

The following disposition is made of the several Regiments, so as to form Brigades under the commanding officers respectively mentioned:

Gen. Parsons.....	Huntington, Prescott, Ward, Durkee, Tyler.	Gen. Heard.....	Cortlandt, Johnson, Newcomb, Freeman, Martin.
Gen. McDougall.....	McDougall, Ritzema, Smallwood, Webb, Artificers.	Gen. Fellows.....	Holman, Cary, Smith.
Gen. Scott.....	Lasher, Malcolm, Drake, Humphrey.	Com'dr. Silliman	Silliman, Thompson, Lewis, Mead, Hinman.
Gen. Wadsworth.....	Chapman, Sage, Selden, Gay, Bradley.	Com'dr. Sergeant	Sergeant, Sheldon, Talcot.
Gen. Nixon.....	Varnum, Little, Hitchcock, Nixon, Bailey.	Com'dr. Douglass	Douglass, Petubone, Cook, Talcott, Chapman.
Gen. Clinton.....	Glover, Read, Baldwin, Learned.	Com'dr. Chester..	Chester, Pitkin, Baldwin, Strong, Newbury.

They are to choose out capable, active, and spirited persons to act as Brigade-Majors, who will be allowed for their service.

The General hopes the several officers, both superior and inferior, will now exert themselves, and gloriously determine to conquer or die. From the justice of our cause, the situation of the harbour, and the bravery of her sons, America can only expect success. Now is the time for every man to exert himself, and make our country glorious, or it will become contemptible.

Commanding Officers of Regiments are to take care to have hard bread and pork for two days kept by them constantly. The neglect of former orders in this respect has occasioned some of the hardships the troops have lately sustained. If there is any delay at the Commissary's, good officers will compose and quiet their men, and mention it by way of letter to the General.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 31, 1776.

You are no doubt surprised to hear of our sudden retreat from Long-Island, but it was thought absolutely essential from our situation. We were under a necessity of marching out and attacking them upon their own ground, or suffering ourselves to have been starved into a surrender: first, because they were intrenching within five hundred yards of our lines, which were very weak, and incapable of withstanding their heavy cannon, and our men, from their situation, began to grow very uneasy; and, secondly, because their shipping might have run up the East River, and cut off our resources of provision and every other necessary. The retreat was conducted with the greatest secrecy, and by six o'clock in the morning we had everything embarked. There never was a man that behaved better upon the occasion than General Washington; he was on horseback the whole night, and never left the ferry stairs till he had seen the whole of his troops embarked.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED AUGUST 31, 1776.

General Sullivan came here yesterday upon his parole, and informs us that Lord Stirling, himself, Colonels Miles and Atlee, were all taken by the enemy. Immediately after the engagement, the enemy began to throw up works within musket-shot of Fort Putnam; and as we had no heavy cannon to prevent them, we were obliged, the night before last, to retreat, and leave the Island. In retreating, we have not lost ten men at most.

Captain Veazey, Ensign Fernandez, Sergeant Sands, killed. Captain Bowie, Lieutenants Butler, Storret, Ridgely, Dent, Ensign Coats, missing. Mr. Coursey taken prisoner.

Adjutant Brice was taken prisoner by two officers of Light-Horse, and was delivered to a private, who told him he was his prisoner, which Brice denied, and immediately shot him and got clear.

NEW-YORK, September 5, 1776.

Philadelphia, September 11, 1776.

We hear that in the late action on Long-Island, Colonel Philip Johnston, of New-Jersey, behaved with remarkable intrepidity and fortitude. By the well-directed fire from his battalion the enemy were several times repulsed, and lanes were made through them, until he received a ball in his breast, which put an end to the life of as brave an officer as ever commanded a battalion. General Sullivan, who was close to him when he fell, says, that no man could behave with more firmness during the whole action. As he sacrificed his life in defence of the invaded rights and liberties of his country, his memory must be dear to every American who is not insensible to the sufferings of his injured country, and as long as the same uncorrupted spirit of liberty which led him to the field shall continue to actuate the sons of freedom in America.

JOURNAL OF THE TRANSACTIONS OF AUGUST 27, 1776, UPON LONG-ISLAND; BY COLONEL SAMUEL J. ATLEE.

August 27, 1776.

This morning, before day, the camp was alarmed by an attack made upon that part of our picket guard upon the lower road leading to the Narrows, commanded by Major Burd, of the Pennsylvania Flying-Camp. About daylight a part of General Lord Stirling's Brigade then in camp, viz: the Battalion of Maryland, Colonel Smallwood; the Delaware, Colonel Haslett; about one hundred and twenty of my battalion, Pennsylvania Musketry; and part of Lutz and Kiechlein's Battalions, Pennsylvania Militia; containing in the whole about two thousand three hundred men, under the command of Major-General Sullivan, and the Brigadiers Stirling and Parsons, were ordered to march out and support the picket attacked by the enemy.

About half after seven the enemy, consisting of the Fourth and Sixth Brigades of the British Army, composed of the Seventeenth, Fortieth, Forty-Sixth, Fifty-Fifth, Twenty-Third, Forty-Fourth, Fifty-Seventh, Sixty-Fourth, and Forty-Second Regiments, were observed advancing about two and a half miles from our lines at Brookline in regular order, their field artillery in front.

I then received orders from Lord Stirling to advance with my battalion, and oppose the enemy's passing a morass or swamp, at the foot of a fine rising ground, upon which they were first discovered, and thereby give time to our brigade to form upon the height. This order I immediately obeyed, notwithstanding we must be exposed, without any kind of cover, to the great fire of the enemy's musketry and field-pieces, charged with round and grape shot, and finely situated upon the eminence above mentioned, having the entire command of the ground I was ordered to occupy. My battalion, although new and never before having the opportunity of facing an enemy, sustained their fire until the brigade had formed; but finding we could not possibly prevent their crossing the swamp, I ordered my detachment to file off to the left, and take post in a wood upon the left of the brigade. Here I looked upon myself advantageously situated, and might be enabled, upon the advance of the enemy, to give him a warm reception. In this affair I lost but one soldier, shot with a grape shot through his throat. I had not taken post in the above mentioned wood but a few minutes, when I received a reinforcement of two companies of the Delawares, under Captain Stedman, with orders from Lord Stirling to file off farther to the left, and prevent, if possible, a body of the enemy observed advancing to flank the brigade.

The enemy's troops by this time had passed the swamp, and formed in line of battle opposite ours. A heavy fire, as well from small-arms as artillery, ensued, with very little damage on our side; what the enemy sustained we could not judge. Upon filing off to the left, according to the orders I had received, I espied at the distance of about three hundred yards a hill of clear ground, which I judged to be a proper situation to oppose the troops ordered to flank us, and which I determined, if possible, to gain before them. At the foot of this hill a few of Huntington's Connecticut Regiment, that had been upon the picket, joined me. In order to gain and secure the hill, I ordered the troops to wheel to the right and march up the hill abreast. When within about forty yards of the summit, we very unexpectedly received a very heavy fire from the enemy taken post there before us, notwithstanding the forced march I made. The enemy's situation was so very advantageous, the back of the hill where they had taken post being formed by nature into a breastwork, that had they directed their fire properly or been marksmen, they must have cut off the greatest part of my detachment. I having, before I advanced the hill, posted a part of my small number along the skirt of a wood upon my right, and left a guard at the foot of the hill, to prevent my being surrounded, and my retreat to the brigade in case of necessity, being cut off, the enemy being vastly superior in numbers, their detachment consisting of the Twenty-Third and Forty-Fourth Regiments, and part of the Seventeenth. Upon receiving the above heavy fire, which continued very warm and they secure behind the hill, a small halt was made, and the detachment fell back a few paces. Here Captain Stedman, with all the Delawares, except the Lieutenants Stewart and Harney, with about sixteen privates, left me, and drew after them some of my own. The remainder, after recovering a little from this, their first shock, I ordered to advance, at the same time desiring them to preserve their fire and aim aright. They immediately, with the resolution of veteran soldiers, obeyed the order. The enemy, finding their opponents fast advancing, and determined to dispute the ground with them, fled with precipitation, leaving behind them twelve killed upon the spot, and a Lieutenant and four privates wounded. In this engagement I lost my worthy friend and Lieutenant-Colonel (Parry) shot through the head, who fell without a groan, fighting in defence of his much injured country. In the midst of the action I ordered four soldiers to carry him as speedily as possible within the lines at Brookline.

My brave fellows, flushed with this advantage, were for pushing forward after the flying enemy; but perceiving at about sixty yards from the hill we had gained, across a hollow way, a stone fence lined with wood, from behind which we might be greatly annoyed, and fearing an ambushade might be there placed, I ordered not to advance farther, but to maintain the possession of the hill, where kind nature had formed a breastwork nearly semicircular. They halted, and found, by a heavy fire from the fence, it was lined as I suspected. The fire was as briskly returned; but the enemy finding it too hot, and losing a number of men, retreated to and joined the right of this wing of their Army.

After this first attack, which continued from the first fire about half an hour, we brought from the field six wounded soldiers and about twenty muskets. The wounded I placed in my rear, under the shade of some bushes; the arms I distributed to such of the soldiers as were most indifferently armed. The wounded Lieutenant I sent, with two soldiers, to Lord Stirling.

After placing some sentinels to observe the further movements of the enemy, if any should be made, I ordered my men, greatly fatigued, to rest themselves. In about twenty minutes the enemy was observed marching down to make a second attempt for the hill. The sentinels gave the alarm. Officers and men immediately flew to arms, and with remarkable coolness and resolution sustained and returned their fire for about fifteen minutes, when the enemy were obliged once more to a precipitate flight, leaving behind them killed Lieutenant-Colonel Grant, (a person, as I afterwards understood, much valued in the British Army,) besides a number of privates, and some wounded. Such of the wounded as I thought might be assisted I had brought in and placed with the rest in my rear; one slightly through the leg I sent with a soldier to Lord Stirling. I had in this attack but one private wounded, with two balls through his body.

I now sent my Adjutant, Mr. Mentgis, to his Lordship, with an account of the successive advantages I had gained, and to request a reinforcement, and such further orders as his Lordship should judge necessary. Two companies of Riflemen, from Keichlien's Flying-Camp, soon after joined me, but were very soon ordered to rejoin their regiment, the reason for which I could not imagine, as I stood in such need of them. Very luckily, after our second engagement our ammunition cart, belonging to Colonel Huntington's regiment, arrived at my post, of which we stood in great need, having entirely emptied our cartridge-boxes, and had used several rounds of the enemy's ammunition, of which I stripped the dead and wounded every time we had the good fortune to beat them off the field. The officers were extremely alert, and from the ammunition so opportunely arrived, soon supplied their men with a sufficient stock to sustain another attack, if the enemy should think proper to make it.

They did not suffer us to wait long, for in about half an hour we were alarmed by our sentinels of their approach the third time. The eagerness of the officers and soldiers to receive them deserve my warmest acknowledgments. They were received as usual, and as usual fled, after another conflict of about a quarter of an hour. I then was determined to pursue; but observing a regiment making down to sustain them, which proved to be the Forty-Second, or Royal Highlanders, I thought best to halt and prepare to receive them, should they advance upon me; but the drubbing their friends had so repeatedly received, I believe, prevented them, and they seemed fully satisfied to have protected the fugitives, and of conducting what was left, with such of the wounded as could crawl to them, to the Army. In these three attacks Major Burd, who was then a prisoner at General Grant's quarters, informed me at New-York a great number, both officers and privates, were brought to the Hospital wounded.

I fully expected, as did most of my officers, that the strength of the British Army was advancing in this quarter to our lines. But how greatly were we deceived when intelligence was received by some scattering soldiers that the right wing and centre of the Army, amongst whom were the Hessians, were advancing to surround us. This we were soon convinced of by an exceeding heavy fire in our rear. No troops having been posted to oppose the march of this grand body of the enemy's Army but Colonel Miles's two battalions of Rifles, Colonel Willis's battalion of Connecticut, and a part of Lutz and Keichlien's battalions of the Pennsylvania Flying-Camp, I once more sent my Adjutant to Lord Stirling, to acquaint him with the last success obtained by my party, and to request his further orders; but receiving no answer, the Adjutant not returning, and waiting near three-quarters of an hour for the enemy, they not approaching in front, but those in the rear drawing near, I thought it most prudent to join the Brigade, where I might be of more advantage than in my present situation. I therefore ordered a march, leaving upon the field killed Lieutenant-Colonel Grant and about fifty others, and a number wounded, and ten privates wounded which I had brought at sundry times into my rear, who I suppose were soon after found by their friends. What other officers were killed or wounded here I know not, except a Captain Kennedy, of the Forty-Fourth, and the Lieutenant sent to Lord Stirling.

How great was my surprise I leave any one to judge, when, upon coming to the ground occupied by our troops, to find it evacuated and the troops gone off, without my receiving the least intelligence of the movement, or order what to do, although I had so shortly before sent my Adjutant to the General for that purpose. The General must have known, that by my continuing in my post at the hill, I must, with all my party, inevitably fall a sacrifice to the enemy. An opportunity yet afforded, with risking the lives of some of us, of getting off. But perceiving a body of the enemy advancing, which proved to be the English Grenadiers, under Lieutenant-Colonel Monckton, to fall upon the rear of our brigade, which I could see at a distance, I ordered my party once more to advance and support a few brave fellows, endeavouring to prevent, but without success, the destruction of their countrymen. The timely assistance of a number often tried, and as often victorious, encouraged those already engaged, and obliged the enemy to quit the ground they had gained and retire to a fence lined with trees. Here we kept up a close fire, until the brigade had retreated out of our sight, when, not being able, through the weakness of my party, already greatly fatigued, and once more destitute of ammunition, to break through the enemy, and finding my retreat after the brigade cut off, I filed off to the right, to endeavour, if possible, to escape through that quarter. Lieutenant Caldwell, in this last attack, received a slight wound in the hand; Lieutenant-Colonel Monckton, of the Grenadiers, received a wound through the body.

After marching about half a mile to the right, fell in with General Parsons and a small number by him collected. In consultation with the General it was determined to break through the enemy, who were here within a little way of us, and endeavour to make up the Island. I then pushed off, with such of the officers and soldiers that were willing to run this hazard. What became of General Parsons I know not, never having seen him since. I had not gone above two hundred yards when a Highlander made his appearance in the edge of a wood. I instantly presented, as did some of those with me. The fellow clubbed his firelock and begged for quarter. I had hardly time to assure him of it, when I found him to be a decoy sent from a party of Highlanders within fifty yards of our right. I immediately jumped forward, ordering the party to follow, taking with me the Highlander's musket, which I had, fortunately for me, deprived him of. We received in our flight the fire of this party, and sundry others through which we were obliged to run for near two miles. What of my party, or if any, in this flight were killed, wounded, or taken, I cannot tell, as it is uncertain how many, or who they were, that followed me. I imagined that if I could cross the Flatbush road, I could then make my escape by Hell-Gate, but coming to the road found it everywhere strictly guarded. After trying the road in several places, both to the right and left, and finding no passage, we retired to an eminence about sixty perches from the road, to consult whether best to conceal ourselves in the adjacent swamps or divide into small parties, when we espied a party of Hessians, who had discovered and were endeavouring to surround us. The opinion we had formed of these troops determined us to run any risk rather than fall into their hands; and finding after all our struggles no prospect of escaping, we determined to throw ourselves into the mercy of a battalion of Highlanders posted upon an eminence near the Flatbush road, not far from where we had last sat. This we did about five o'clock in the afternoon to the number of twenty-three, thereby escaping the pursuit of a party of Hessians, who came to the Highlanders immediately after our surrender. We had remained with this regiment above twenty minutes, during which time the officers and men behaved very civil, when we were conducted, under a strong guard, through the right wing of the enemy's Army to the Head-Quarters of General Howe at Bedford; receiving, as we passed, the most scurrilous and abusive language, both from the officers, soldiers, and camp ladies, every one at that time turning hangman, and demanding of the guard why we were taken, why we were not put to the bayonet, and hanged, &c., &c., &c., &c.

Serenaded thus by the musical tongues of Britons, we arrived at Bedford, where, for sixteen beside myself, we were favoured with a soldier's tent, in which we had not room to lie down, and nothing allowed us for covering. To sum up the whole, we were consigned to the care of the most infamous of mankind, the Provost-Marshal, one Cunningham.

Thus ended this most unfortunate 27th of August, 1776, during which myself and my detachment underwent great fatigue, and escaped death in a variety of instances. And I am happy to reflect that during the whole of this perilous day, one and all, to the utmost of their powers and abilities, exerted themselves in performing their several duties, for which I shall ever retain a grateful sense, and do, for and in behalf of my country, return them my sincere acknowledgments, as I flatter myself, under God, they were the means of twice preserving the brigade from being cut to pieces: first, in preventing the troops in which Grant bore a command from falling upon the left flank; and lastly, in so truly bravely attacking the Grenadiers, where Monckton commanded, and thereby preventing the destruction of the rear. In the first Grant fell, in the latter was Monckton wounded. What followed since the 27th, I have not now time to insert; shall leave it till I have the pleasure of seeing you.

S. J. ATLEE.

Of the Grenadiers, I hear there were, besides officers, near sixty killed and wounded.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE, October 10, 1776.

Extract of a Letter from Lord Viscount Howe, Vice-Admiral of the White, and Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in North-America, to Mr. Stephens, dated on board the Eagle, off Bedlow's Island, New-York, the 31st of August, 1776.

On the 19th instant, Captain Parker, in the Phoenix, with the Rose, Captain Wallace, and Tryal armed schooner, Lieutenant Brown, taking advantage of a fresh easterly wind, returned from the North River, through the fire of the enemy's several batteries, and joined the fleet off Staten-Island, without any loss. The spirit and perseverance of this small squadron will be explained to their Lordships by Captain Parker's Journal.

General Howe giving me notice of his intention to make a descent in Gravesend-Bay, on Long-Island, on the morning of the 22d, the necessary disposition was made, and seventy-five flat-boats, with eleven batteaus and two galleys, built for the occasion, were prepared for that service. The command of the whole remained with Commodore Hotham. The Captains Walker, Wallace, and Dickson, in the Phoenix, Rose, and Greyhound, with the Thunder and Carcass bombs, under the direction of Colonel James, were appointed to cover the landing. The flat-boats, galleys, and three batteaus manned from the ships-of-war, were formed into divisions, commanded respectively by the Captains Vandeput, Mason, Curtis, Caldwell, Phipps, Caulfield, Uppleby, and Duncan, and Lieutenant Reeve, of the Eagle. The rest of the batteaus, making a tenth division, manned from the transports, were under the conduct of Lieutenant Bristow, an assistant agent.

Early in the morning of the 22d, the covering ships took their stations in Gravesend-Bay. The Light-Infantry, with the reserve, to be first landed, forming a corps together of four thousand men, entered the boats at Staten-Island the same time. The transports in which the several brigades composing the second debarkation (about five thousand men) had been before embarked, were moved down and suitably arranged without the covering ships by eight o'clock. The first debarkation not meeting with any opposition, the second succeeded immediately after; and the other transports, carrying the rest of the troops, following the former in proper succession. The whole force then destined for this service, consisting of about fifteen thousand men, was landed before noon. On the diligence and utility of Captain Bourmaster, and the other agents of the transports, on that occasion, too much commendation cannot be bestowed.

On the 25th, an additional corps of Hessian troops under General Heister, with their field artillery and baggage, were conveyed to Gravesend-Bay.

Being informed the next day, by General Howe, of his intentions to advance with the Army that night to the enemy's lines, and of his wishes that some diversion might be attempted by the ships on this side, I gave direction to Sir Peter Parker for proceeding higher up in the channel towards the town of New-York next morning, with the Asia, Renown, Preston, (Commodore Hotham embarked in the Phoenix, having been left to carry on the service in Gravesend-Bay), Roebuck, and Repulse, and to keep those ships in readiness for being employed as occasion might require; but the wind veering to the northward soon after the break of day, the ships could not be moved up to the distance proposed; therefore, when the troops under General Grant, forming the left column of the Army, were seen to be engaged with the enemy in the morning, the Roebuck, Captain Hammond, leading the detached squadron, was the only ship that could fetch high enough to the northward to exchange a few random shot with the battery on Red-Hook; and the ebb making strongly down the river soon after, I ordered the signal to be shown for the squadron to anchor.

It was observed, that as soon as the centre column of the Army was seen to have turned the flank of the enemy's line opposed to General Grant, they immediately attempted to make their retreat within their works, but that they suffered great loss both in the number killed and made prisoners.

On the night of the 29th the Rebels abandoned all their posts and works on Long-Island, and retired with great precipitation across the East-River to the town of New-York.

GENERAL HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Camp at Newtown, Long-Island, September 3, 1776.

MY LORD: On the 22d of last month, in the morning, the British, with Colonel Donop's corps of Chasseurs and Hessian Grenadiers, disembarked near Utrecht, on Long-Island, without opposition, the whole being landed, with forty pieces of cannon, in two hours and a half, under the direction of Commodore Hotham—Lieutenant-General Clinton commanding the first division of the troops.

The enemy had only small parties on the coast, who, upon the approach of the boats, retired to the woody heights, commanding a principal pass on the road from Flatbush to their works at Brooklyn. Lord Cornwallis was immediately detached to Flatbush with the reserve, (two battalions of Light-Infantry, and Colonel Donop's corps, with six field-pieces,) having orders not to risk an attack upon the pass if he should find it occupied; which proving to be the case, his Lordship took post in the village, and the Army extended from the ferry at the Narrows, through Utrecht and Gravesend, to the village of Flatland.

On the 25th, Lieutenant-General De Heister, with two brigades of Hessians from Staten-Island, joined the Army, leaving one brigade of his troops, a detachment of the Fourteenth Regiment from Virginia, some convalescents and recruits, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Dalrymple, for the security of that Island.

On the 26th, Lieutenant-General De Heister took post at Flatbush, and in the evening Lord Cornwallis with the British drew off to Flatland. About nine o'clock the same night, the van of the Army, commanded by Lieutenant-General Clinton, consisting of the Light-Dragoons and brigade of Light-Infantry, the reserve under the command of Lord Cornwallis, excepting the Forty-Second Regiment, which was posted to the left of the Hessians, the First Brigade, and the Seventy-First Regiment, with fourteen field-pieces, began to move from Flatland across the country through the new lots, to seize a path in the heights, extending from east to west, along the middle of the Island, and about three miles from Bedford, on the road to Jamaica, in order to turn the enemy's left posted at Flatbush.

August 27.—General Clinton being arrived within half a mile of the pass about two hours before daybreak, halted, and settled his disposition for the attack. One of his patrols falling in with a patrol of the enemy's officers, took them; and the General, learning from their information that the Rebels had not occupied the pass, detached a battalion of Light-Infantry to secure it; and advancing with his corps upon the first appearance of day, possessed himself of the heights with such a disposition as must have insured success, had he found the enemy in force to oppose him.

The main body of the Army, consisting of the Guards, Second, Third, and Fifth Brigades, with ten field-pieces, led by Lord Percy, marched soon after General Clinton, and halted an hour before day in his rear. This column (the country not admitting of two columns of march) was followed by the Forty-Ninth Regiment, with four medium twelve-pounders, and the baggage closed the rear with separate guard.

As soon as these corps had passed the heights, they halted for the soldiers to take a little refreshment, after which the march was continued, and about half an hour past eight o'clock, having got to Bedford, in the rear of the enemy's left, the attack was commenced by the Light-Infantry and Light-Dragoons upon large bodies of the Rebels, having cannon, who were quitting the woody heights before mentioned to return to their lines, upon discovering the march of the Army; instead of which they were drove back, and the Army still moving on to gain the enemy's rear, the Grenadiers and Thirty-Third Regiment, being in front of the column, soon approached within musket-shot of the enemy's lines at Brooklyn, from whence these battalions, without regarding the fire of cannon and small-arms upon them, pursued numbers of the Rebels that were retiring from the heights so close to their principal redoubt, and with such eagerness to attack it by storm, that it required repeated orders to prevail upon them to desist from the attempt. Had they been permitted to go on, it is my opinion they would have carried the redoubt; but as it was apparent the lines must have been ours at a very cheap rate by regular approaches, I would not risk the loss that might have been sustained in the assault, and ordered them back to a hollow way in the front of the works, out of the reach of musketry.

Lieutenant-General De Heister began soon after daybreak to cannonade the enemy in the front, and, upon the approach of our right, ordered Colonel Donop's corps to advance to the attack of the hill, following himself at the head of the brigades. The Light-Infantry, about that time having been reinforced by the light company, the Grenadier company, and two other companies of the Guards, who joined them with the greatest activity and spirit, had taken three pieces of cannon, and were warmly engaged with very superior numbers in the woods, when, on the Hessians advancing, the enemy gave way, and was entirely routed in that quarter. On the left, Major-General Grant, having the Fourth and Sixth Brigades, the Forty-Second Regiment, and two companies of New-York Provincials, raised by Governour Tryon in the spring, advanced along the coast with ten pieces of cannon, to divert the enemy's attention from their left. About midnight, he fell in with their advanced parties, and at daybreak, with a large corps, having cannon, and advantageously posted, with whom there was skirmishing and a cannonade for some hours, until, by the firing at Brooklyn, the Rebels, suspecting their retreat would be cut off, made a movement to the right, in order to secure it across a swamp and creek that covered the right of their works; but being met in their way by a part of the Second Grenadiers, who were soon after supported by the Seventy-First Regiment, and General Grant's left coming up, they suffered considerably: numbers of them, however, did get into the morass, where many were suffocated or drowned.

The force of the enemy detached from the lines where General Putnam commanded was not less, from the best accounts I have had, than ten thousand men, who were under the orders of Major-General Sullivan, Brigadier-Generals Lord Stirling and Udell. Their loss is computed to be about three thousand three hundred killed, wounded, prisoners, and drowned, with five field-pieces and one howitzer taken. A return of the prisoners is enclosed.

On the part of the King's troops, five officers and fifty-six non-commissioned officers and rank and file killed; twelve officers and two hundred and forty-five non-commissioned officers and rank and file wounded; one officer and twenty Grenadiers of the Marines taken by mistaking the enemy for the Hessians.

The Hessians had two privates killed, three officers and twenty-three rank and file wounded. The wounds are in general very slight. Lieutenant-Colonel Monckton is shot through the body, but there are the greatest hopes of his recovery.

The behaviour of both officers and soldiers, British and Hessians, was highly to their honour. More determined courage and steadiness in troops have never been experienced, or a greater ardour to distinguish themselves, as all those who had an opportunity have amply evinced by their actions.

In the evening of the 27th, the Army encamped in front of the enemy's works. On the 28th, at night, broke ground six hundred yards distant from a redoubt upon their left, and on the 29th, at night, the Rebels evacuated their intrenchments and Red-Hook, with the utmost silence, and quitted Governour's Island the following evening, leaving their cannon and a quantity of stores in all their works. At daybreak on the 30th, their flight was discovered, the piquets of the line took possession, and those most advanced reached the shore opposite to New-York as their rear guard was going over, and fired some shot among them.

The enemy is still in possession of the town and island of New-York, in force, and making demonstration of opposing us in their works on both sides of King's Bridge. The inhabitants of this Island, many of whom had been forced into rebellion, have all submitted, and are ready to take the oaths of allegiance.

This despatch will be delivered to your Lordship by Major Cuyler, my first Aid-de-camp, who, I trust, will be able to give your Lordship such further information as may be required.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

WILL. HOWE.

P. S. I have omitted to take notice, in its proper place, of a movement made by the King's ships towards the town on the 27th, at daybreak, with a view of drawing off the attention of the enemy from our real design, which, I believe, effectually answered the intended purpose.

W. HOWE, Commander-in-Chief.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN GENERAL FRAZIER'S BATTALION, DATED SEPTEMBER 3, 1776.

Rejoice, my friend, that we have given the Rebels a d—d crush. We landed on Long-Island the 22d ult., without opposition. On the 27th we had a very warm action, in which the Scots regiments behaved with the greatest bravery, and carried the day after an obstinate resistance on the Rebel side. But we flanked and overpowered them with numbers. The Hessians and our brave Highlanders gave no quarters; and it was a fine sight to see with what alacrity they despatched the Rebels with their bayonets after we had surrounded them so that they could not resist. Multitudes were drowned and suffocated in morasses—a proper punishment for all Rebels. Our battalion outmarched all the rest, and was always first up with the Rebel fugitives. A fellow they call Lord Stirling, one of their Generals, with two others, is prisoner, and a great many of their officers, men, artillery, and stores. It was a glorious achievement, my friend, and will immortalize us and crush the Rebel Colonies. Our loss was nothing. We took care to tell the Hessians that the Rebels had resolved to give no quarters to them in particular, which made them fight desperately, and put all to death that fell into their hands. You know all stratagems are lawful in war, especially against such vile enemies to their King and country. The Island is all ours, and we shall soon take New-York, for the Rebels dare not look us in the face. I expect the affair will be over this campaign, and we shall all return covered with American laurels, and have the cream of American lands allotted us for our services.

[Lest any of those persons who affect not to believe anything against the British soldiers, and will pretend to say that the above letter, which exactly tallies with their conduct as heretofore represented, is an American forgery, we would inform them that the English paper from whence the above is taken may be seen in the hands of the printers in Hartford.
 —Mass. Spy.]

JOHN SLOSS HOBART TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Huntington, August 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Our express of yesterday not being able to cross the Sound at Sand's Ferry, has returned to us, which gives us an opportunity to acquaint you with the present situation of our affairs. We have this morning received a letter from Major Smith, declining the office of Major, in which he has "heretofore acted with faithfulness," a copy of which we have the honour to enclose, together with a copy of Ebenezer Dayton's narrative of the transactions yesterday at Smith-Town.

A number of the Militia of this town are now under arms, and we are in hopes that most of them will turn out; but a general complaint among them is, that their officers have deserted them, and if the enemy should find them in arms, they will meet with worse treatment than if they peaceably wait their fate. We have exerted ourselves to recover the people from the consternation into which they were thrown by the precipitate retreat of General Woodhull's party. We have in some measure succeeded; and could we assure them of being supported, and that the Island was not abandoned to the enemy, we doubt not but the people might be brought to act with vigour; but such a total depression prevailed upon our arrival, that twenty horsemen would have ravaged the whole country. A number of the King's County Horsemen have crossed the Sound from this place, leaving their horses to follow them in another boat. We have taken the liberty to stop the horses, and shall send for the men back. We purpose, after the party who were with General Woodhull are rallied, to form the rest into companies and appoint the officers. As to field-officers, we shall be at a loss, as Colonel Floyd, who commands the regiment, is at Congress; Lieutenant-Colonel Potter is gone off with himself, and First Major Smith has resigned; Second Major Brush is with us, and begins to be in spirits. Should we be able to rouse a considerable number of this regiment, more Field-Officers will be necessary. We wish the direction of Convention on the subject. We beg the favour of copies of the late resolves respecting officers and men who refuse to do duty in time of an invasion. You will see that we could do nothing without assuming power not given us by Convention, and hope the necessity of the case will plead our excuse. We propose, as soon as matters are regulated here, to proceed eastward, and endeavour to prevent the evils that are to be apprehended from the indiscreet conduct of Major Smith and Captain Thompson.

We have the honour to be your most obedient servants,
 JNO. SLOSS HOBART,
 JAMES TOWNSEND.

To the Honourable Convention of New-York.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Southold, August 31, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have, since I wrote to you yesterday, received by express an account, which may be depended upon, that General Woodhull was taken a prisoner by our enemies on Wednesday last. Their Troop of Horse is considered by the inhabitants to the westward of Huntington as an insurmountable obstacle to their ever obtaining their freedom, independent of Great Britain. Many have been prevailed with by the disaffected to us to solicit pardons from Lord Howe, and they are circulating at a great rate. Our communication is cut off from New-York by land, and there are three ships, a brig, and a sloop, that endeavour to intercept it by water. So many reports daily circulate here with respect to the strength and advantageous situation of our enemies, that it is very difficult to give your Excellency a distinct account. They are now possessed of Hempstead Plains; their Horse are continually employed in disarming the inhabitants, but do them no other injury. General Woodhull was taken a prisoner and treated cruelly by them. After he was taken he received a wound in his head, and much uncivil language, and finally committed close prisoner to Jamaica jail.

Our enemies are plentifully supplied with fresh provisions, which, together with the precarious situation I am in, has induced me to march my detachment to the westward, in order to harass their foraging parties. I have endeavoured to prevail upon the Committees of the different towns to raise their Militia, and have also sent an express to Governour Trumbull, requesting his aid; for if some encouragement is not given to the country people, they will be entirely passive.

I am your Excellency's most obedient servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

P. S. I expect to be at Huntington in about three days. We begin our march to-morrow morning. I hope for your Excellency's approbation.

SUFFOLK COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Suffolk County, Southold, August 31, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: We are sorry to acquaint you that we have received several expresses from the middle of this Island, acquainting us of the Regular troops having surrounded our lines at the west end, and stopped our communications to the Army and Provincial Congress. Their scouting party consists of about three hundred Light-Horse and four hundred Foot, together with a number of Tory recruits, and to all appearances are about penetrating into this County, as they have already marched as far as the western part of Hempstead Plains, where they took prisoner Brigadier-General Nathaniel Woodhull, Commander-in-Chief of the Militia of this Island. We must beg the favour of you to aid and assist us with men and ammunition, as our men are chiefly drawn off and are now in the Army, so that we are not able to raise more than seven hundred and fifty men in the whole County that are capable to bear arms. If you think proper to send us men, which we think we really need, we must beg you would send what provisions you think they will want, all but fresh, which we can make out to supply them with. By the best accounts we can learn of the strength of the Regular Army now landed on this Island, they consist of about fifteen or twenty thousand men.

At a Committee meeting, signed per order.

ROBERT HEMPSTEAD, Chairman.

REV. S. BUELL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Sag-Harbour, August 31, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you yesterday from this place, since which we hear per express General Woodhull is fallen into the hands of the King's troops; that two days since they drove fifteen hundred head of cattle from Hempstead Plain to their Army. The western Counties upon this Isle are already in their possession. With about three hundred Horse and a Foot company, they are about to penetrate into this County. I this hour came from our Committee, who have desired me to second their request to your Honour, that if possible you throw a number of troops upon this Island as soon as possible. We are rather encouraged to hope for this favour, in our present extreme exigency and peril, in that your Honour sent Messrs. Huntington and Ely to us yesterday relative to the important design. We have three companies stationed here, consisting of ninety men each, together with a third part of our Militia, who are ordered to march immediately up the Island. About fifteen miles from hence our people are erecting a strong breastwork, where that part of the Island is but about fifty rods wide, which, well effected, two hundred men may oppose two thousand. As one-half of our Militia is already in the Army, we extremely need some assistance. Without any hyperbole, there are ten thousand people, with all the stock in this County, which will probably fall into the hands of the King's troops, unless we have some assistance. Your Honour will take a full view of such shocking consequences, and doubtless be assured it will greatly tend to intimidate the enemy to hear there is an Army marching against them from the eastward, and much befriend your Honour's great confidant, the excellent General Washington. But I need not multiply words. Your Honour well knows all possible expedition is necessary in the present case.

In utmost haste, with great esteem, I am your Honour's much obliged humble friend and servant,

SOL. BUELL.

To His Excellency Governour Trumbull.

CORNELIUS C. ROOSEVELT TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

August 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The twenty-six muskets of Mr. Noble have received, with the contract and order; agreeable to which, I applied to four Gunsmiths, in order to view them, and advised them of the contract; upon which they examined said muskets, and gave the enclosed certificate.

I am, gentlemen, in behalf of Mr. Peter T. Curtenius, your most obedient and very humble servant,

CORNS. C. ROOSEVELT.

To the Hon. Representatives of the State of New-York.

COLONEL HOPKINS TO GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

Frog's Neck, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to orders this day received from Colonel Graham, I herewith send you, to the care of the main guard, one John Wooly, who was taken by Captain Paine on Long-Island shore, with his boat, for having been two or three times on board the men-of-war in the Sound, and supplying them with provisions. He denies supplying them, but confesses he hath been on board.

The brig of war and her tender are come back just now, and lay close to Francis Lewis, Esquire's, house, and the people are gone ashore and driving up the cattle, &c.

There was one Hewlet taken with Wooly, but in the hurry of affairs when the brig was going by, he hath escaped, but I know of no crime he is guilty of. The people here pray for a reinforcement, fearing the enemy will land here from the Island with a large number of troops.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

ROSWELL HOPKINS, Lieutenant-Colonel.

To General Clinton, King's Bridge.

GENERAL HEATH TO LIEUTENANT LANGDON.

Mount Washington, August 31, 1776.

SIR: You are immediately to proceed to the town of Harlem, with the detachment under your command, and take post near the landing place. You are to post sentinels in the daytime, so as to prevent the soldiers of the Army who have not proper passes going over the ferry; and, also, both day and night to be very alert in discovering any movement or advance of the enemy, of which you are to give immediate notice to the commanding officer at this post.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH, Major-General.

To Lieutenant Langdon.

GEN. HEATH TO OFFICER COMMANDING AT MOUNT WASHINGTON.

King's Bridge, August 31, 1776, half past seven } o'clock in the evening. }

DEAR SIR: I have just received information that a large party of the enemy just before sunset appeared nearly opposite to Morisania, or Hunt's Point, where they pitched their tents, and it is apprehended intended to pass. I have ordered the regiments here to lie on their arms this night. If the troops have returned from New-York, I would have Colonel Nicolls return with his detachment to his post, and some other troops held in readiness, should they be wanted—a detachment of the Artillery, with two brass three-pounders, which are to be well found with ammunition, &c.; one to be sent to this post immediately.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

WM. HEATH.

To the Commanding Officer at Mount Washington.

BENJAMIN TUPPER, Lieutenant-Colonel and Commander.

To the Honourable GEORGE CLINTON, Esq., Brigadier-General in the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

The Petition of Colonel MORRIS GRAHAM and the Officers of the Regiment under his command, in your Honour's Brigade, humbly sheweth:

That William Forman hath been appointed a Surgeon in this regiment without the knowledge or recommendation of the Colonel of said regiment or any of the other officers; in which appointment your petitioners think themselves much imposed upon by an unskilful Physician; neither are they willing to trust their lives in his hands or employ him in any case whatever. Your petitioners would also observe to your Honour, that even the privates will not employ him, but several of them have been at considerable expense out of their own pockets in applying to other physicians. We would beg leave to recommend Doctor Abraham Teller as a suitable person for a Surgeon, &c., to the said regiment, who would be very agreeable to it, should he be appointed as such. Therefore your petitioners most humbly pray your Honour to take our case into consideration, and order the said William Forman to be discharged from the service, and appoint the said Abraham Teller, or some other skilful Surgeon, for our regiment; and your Honour's petitioners, in duty bound, shall ever pray.

JOSEPH HATCH, Captain.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, August 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am this moment favoured with a letter from General Gates, copy of which I do myself the honour to enclose you, together with copy of a return and sundry original letters from officers of our Army prisoners in Canada.

The musket cartridge-paper, mentioned in your Excellency's last, is not yet arrived. Everything that can be procured here, or anywhere in the country, is instantly sent.

I am so accustomed to ill usage, that I am not surprised that General Gates should be informed that I had ordered the regiments he mentions, to be stopped on their march. This report is only a perversion of an order of mine of the 17th instant, sent to General Waterbury, copy of which now enclose. The information on which it was founded is corroborated by a letter of the 22d August, with which Governour Trumbull has honoured me, and which was delivered me after I had begun this letter, in which he says: "Inoculation for the small-pox, I find, has been practised by troops on the march to join your Army. I hope a practice so pernicious in every respect will be discouraged. I have taken the liberty to suggest my fears and sentiments to General Gates on this subject. Indeed, sir, if it is not timely restrained, it appears to me it must prove fatal to all our operations, and may ruin the country."

I never neglect laying all letters and papers which I receive from General Gates, or from any other quarter, that ought to be transmitted, before your Excellency or Congress.

The two persons mentioned in General Gates's letter to have come from Dartmouth College, have not yet informed me of their business.

As I could not procure any regular returns of what provision was with the Army and on the communication, and as it was necessary that I should be informed of it, on the 20th instant I wrote to General Gates on the subject. Extract of my letter your Excellency will see in the enclosed to Mr. Trumbull, as well as what answer has been given to it by Mr. Avery, and my resolutions thereon, which I trust will meet with your approbation. Your Excellency will please, after perusal, to order the letter to be sealed and delivered.

In my last, I informed your Excellency that the Stockbridge Indians had determined to go to New-York. Many of them have changed their resolutions, and arrived here yesterday on their way to Ticonderoga.

I am, dear sir, most respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Woodbridge and his Major have been detained in this neighbourhood fourteen days, in consequence their having lately been inoculated and not bringing certificates that they were properly cleansed; and they grow uneasy that they are kept back; and I should be glad to know whether your Honour intends I shall let them go forward to Ticonderoga; if not, I should be glad to have some instructions how to act concerning them.

I am, dear General, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jun.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL HARTLEY.

Tyonderoga, August 31, 1776.

SIR: I received your letter of yesterday by Lieutenant John Brooks, and have only a moment to acquaint you that I shall select a party of fifty men and officers to go to-morrow morning to cover the oar-cutters, and to perform another piece of service in that neighbourhood. The officer will bring you a letter from me, and show you his orders. I must desire you will not fail to be very alert in acquainting me with even the most minute circumstance relative to the fleet that comes to your knowledge. A galley and a gondola will be with you to-day. The commanding officer has my directions to show his orders. I would not have them delay an hour at your post.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley.

P. S. The artillery stores, &c., which you have wrote for shall be sent you immediately.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. I.

DR. KENNEDY AND OTHERS TO GENERAL GATES.

Ticonderoga, August 31, 1776.

In conformity to certain orders, given by the Honourable General Gates, the following Surgeons met at Head-Quarters, viz: Messrs. Barnet, Holmes, Waterman, Metcalf, Parker, Chase, Emmerson, Child, Swift, Kennedy, Wingate, Allison, Watson, Green, Holbrook. And having taken into their most serious consideration the sundry matters given in charge, do report: That the diseases most prevalent in camp at present are bilious, remitting, and intermitting fevers, with some of the putrid kind; dysenteries, diarrhoeas, with rheumatick complaints; and, on examination, find the medical chests destitute of a number of very necessary medicines, a catalogue of which is enclosed, to which they have subjoined a list* of the necessary comforts, &c. They also beg leave to recommend to his Honour that the commanding officers be enjoined to keep their several regiments clean; that the necessary vaults be covered twice a day; that every infectious material which tends to putrefy the air be immediately removed from camp.

Signed by order of the faculty.

SAM. KENNEDY,
WM. BARNET,
AMOS HOLBROOK.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

COLONEL GANSEVOORT TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to General Schuyler's orders, I apply to your Honour for a reinforcement. The following is a copy taken from an original letter of General Schuyler:

"Immediately on receipt of this, you are to order Captains McCracken and Hicks, with their respective companies, to march to this place with all possible expedition; and as your garrison will be too weak unless these are replaced by others, you will apply to General Gates for a reinforcement."

I beg, if your Honour thinks proper, that we may be reinforced as soon as possible.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

P. GANSEVOORT, Lieutenant-Colonel.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

N. B. One Captain, one Sub, and one Ensign, arrested at the garrison, who are very anxious to have their trial. I beg your Honour will send me orders that a General Court-Martial may be called for their trial.

P. G.

COLONEL TRUMBULL TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, August 31, 1776.

SIR: I am ordered to acquaint you that Lieutenant-Colonel Reed, of Colonel Patterson's, has left this Army without proper leave of absence. As he had appeared delirious some time before he went into the country, the General would willingly impute an action unjustifiable on any other grounds to the continuance of his disorder. You will please to cause inquiry to be made into the cause of his stay in the country, and likewise to inform Colonel Reed that the General expects he will either immediately return to his duty with the Army, where his character suffers daily, or resign his commission, that the service may not suffer for the want of an officer in the post which he has been pleased to desert.

I am, sir, with the highest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN TRUMBULL, Dep. Adj. Gen.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Button-Mould Bay, August 31, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The 24th instant I left Crown-Point; the 25th at night anchored at Willsborough; the same night came on a violent storm at northeast; the next day, at two P. M., was obliged to weigh anchor and return to this place, where the whole fleet arrived the same evening, except the Spitfire, Captain Ulmer, who could not clear the shore, and was obliged to come to an anchor again, and rode out the storm, though exposed to the rake of Cumberland Bay, fifty miles long. The hard gale made an amazing sea, and when I expected to hear the gondola was foundered or drove on shore, she joined us, having received no damage, though a light batteau veered astern of her was sunk with the sea breaking over her. The severe weather prevented my despatching Lieutenant Whitcomb before yesterday morning. The first fair wind I will follow him. I should have gone this evening, but the breeze is so light night would have come on before we could have reached a safe place of anchorage.

I have had no advice from the St. John's or Isle-aux-Noix. The earliest intelligence I receive shall be communicated to you immediately. I am very anxious to hear from New-York, and make no doubt when you receive any material advices I shall soon be acquainted with it.

Enclosed is a return of the strength of the fleet, by which you will observe that seventy-four men are wanting to complete the numbers proposed for the vessels, which are barely sufficient when complete. I should be extremely glad they were sent to us soon. If you think proper to send them, the bearer, Lieutenant Calderwood, will take charge of them.

Mr. Gilliland has the only good draught I know of Lake Champlain, which, he says, was delivered Captain Bush for you. It will be of great service to me, as I have no draught of the Lake.

If a good officer can be procured to act as Captain of the Royal Savage, I think he might be of service in case any accident should happen to me. The present Master is not fit for the command in chief, though a good man in his present station.

I suppose by this time General Schuyler has paid you a visit. Please to make my respectful compliments to him if arrived, and let him know I will write him very particularly as soon as I arrive at the other end of the Lake.

I am, with real affection and esteem, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

Willsborough, September 2, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I intended sending the foregoing from Button-Mould Bay, but waited for a boat that I had sent to this place for a barrel of fresh salmon, which I had designed for you. The late freshets have broke the dam so that none can be caught till it is mended. Mr. Gilliland sent you a few salted ones, very indifferent, which we have eat, expecting to send you some fresh ones.

Yesterday at noon we left Button-Mould Bay, and arrived here last night. Before we passed the Split-Rock we saw two sail astern, which we supposed were the Lee and a gondola. They have not yet joined us. We are now under way with a fresh southerly breeze, and expect to be at the Isle Têtes before night. I hope soon to have it in my power to send you a very full account of the strength of the enemy, by sea and land. I hope no time will be lost in forwarding the three galleys. When they have joined us, I am very confident the enemy will not dare attempt crossing the Lake.

I beg my congratulatory compliments to General St. Clair on his promotion. When the enemy drive us back to Ticonderoga, I have some thoughts of going to Congress and begging leave to resign. Do you think they will make me a Major-General?

Entre nous, I have received a letter from Samuel Chase, Esq., in which he mentions your letter to John Adams, Esq., and desires an explanation. I will send it you when I have time to answer it.

I am, with every friendly wish, very respectfully, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

GENERAL GATES TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 16, 1776.]

Ticonderoga, September 2, 1776.

SIR: As I conclude my letter to Major-General Schuyler of the 27th, and that to his Excellency General Washington of the 28th of last month, have been transmitted to the most honourable Congress, I shall not repeat any of the contents of those letters to your Excellency.

General Arnold sailed Saturday, the 24th of August, with ten sail of the fleet of the United States under his command. Two gondolas, one of which is fitted as a galley, sailed from here yesterday to join the General. An exact return of the whole is enclosed. One row-galley was launched Saturday at Skenesborough, and the two others will, I am told, be launched this week. The excessive sickness of that place has greatly retarded the finishing of the galleys. Very few of the ship-carpenters your Excellency sent thither by order of Congress are able to work. The constant rain in that district has raised the waters of the Wood Creek so much, and so deluged the surrounding country, that the fever and ague rages there with unremitted violence.

Your Excellency will find in the packet my reasons for removing Captain Wynkoop from the command he assumed over all the armed vessels employed upon this Lake. A little of the dictatorial power was exerted, but perhaps it never was more necessary than on that occasion. My letters to Generals Schuyler and Arnold, with that of Captain Wynkoop, will, upon perusal, convince your Excellency of the propriety thereof.

By this conveyance your Excellency will receive a large packet, containing the proceedings of a General Court-Martial held by my order, upon Colonel Hazen, on a complaint exhibited by Brig. General Arnold. The warmth of General Arnold's temper might possibly lead him a little farther than is marked by the precise line of decorum to be observed before and towards a Court-Martial. Seeing and knowing all circumstances, I am convinced, if there was a fault on one side, there was too much acrimony on the other. Here again I was obliged to act dictatorially, and dissolve the Court-Martial the instant they demanded General Arnold to be put in arrest. The United States must not be deprived of that excellent officer's service at this important moment. I wish your Excellency would represent this affair in the most favourable light to Congress. Upon such occasions there is a way to satisfy complainants without publickly disgracing those complained of, especially when a General Officer of acknowledged merit is a party concerned.

Enclosed is a general return of the Army of the most honourable the United States of America immediately under my command. General Schuyler will, I take for granted, transmit to your Excellency a return of the corps on the Mohawk River, and the posts and communication in that district, as likewise those immediately under his own eye. Thank Heaven, the small-pox is totally eradicated from amongst us, not, I can assure you, without much vigilance and authority being previously exerted.

I did not receive the resolve of Congress relative to Colonel Hazen's behaviour to the Captains Cuillet, De la Rosse, and De la Fontaine, until a fortnight after I had sent him, with his Canadians, to Albany. I suppose General Schuyler will see them obeyed. Mr. Bedel had also left the camp when I received, in the same resolve, what related to General Prescott's baggage.

Colonel William Bond, of the Twenty-Fifth Regiment, in the service of the United States, died the day before yesterday of a putrid fever. Brigadier-General James Reed remains so very ill at Fort George that he will not, I imagine, be again fit for service this campaign.

As I have received only one short letter from your Excellency since I left New-York, I am anxious to know whether my endeavours to serve the United States merit the approbation or blame of Congress. Your Excellency may believe me when I assure you, sir, that their applause will ever be esteemed by me as the highest honour I can possibly receive in this world.

With every sentiment of esteem and respect, I am, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To His Excellency John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, August 23, 1776.

(Parole, Hartley.)

(Countersign, Adams.)

The Regiments to be very exact in sending in their returns at Orderly time to-morrow. The Adjutants will take care that there are no more returned sick present than are really sick. 'Tis suspected that many lazy, idle fellows, feign themselves sick with design to avoid duty. Blank returns will be delivered. The Adjutants will rule those which are delivered incomplete.

After Orders.—The Commanding Officer of each Regiment is to send a subaltern officer to-morrow morning, at sunrise, to Fort George, to bring the arms of their dead and discharged of their respective Regiments to this place. These officers will give receipts to the Director of the Hospital at Fort George for the arms they receive, and on their arrival at this place deliver them to the commanding officer of their respective corps.

The Court-Martial in the Second Brigade, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Gilman was President, is dissolved.

A General Court-Martial, taken from the two Brigades commanded by General Bricket and Colonel St. Clair, composed of a Field-Officer, (President,) four Captains, and eight Subalterns, to sit to-morrow morning, at the President's tent, at nine o'clock, for the trial of such prisoners as may be brought before them.

Four hundred and eighty-nine shirts have been received in store. The General orders them to be delivered to-morrow, in proportion to the number of men fit for duty in each Regiment, except the late arrived recruits.

Head-Quarters, August 24, 1776.

(Parole, Gordon.)

(Countersign, Harrington.)

The Chief Engineer, with Colonel St. Clair and Colonel Wayne, will, to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, take a review of the ground near the Saw-Mill, fix upon the proper spot for the encampment of two Continental Regiments, and the best situation for throwing up a redoubt to command the pass. The Deputy-Adjutant and Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General will also attend Colonel Baldwin.

Nicholas Nock, of Colonel Reed's Regiment, tried by the late General Court-Martial for desertion and inlisting into another Regiment, and receiving £9 18s. bounty. The prisoner plead guilty. The Court sentence him to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back for the first offence, and thirty-nine for the second, then to return to his duty in Colonel Reed's Regiment. The money to be stopped out of his wages and repaid to the Committee.

Jonathan Wright, of Captain Sullivan's Company, in Colonel Patterson's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for desertion. The prisoner pleading guilty, is sentenced by the Court to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, and then to return to his duty.

Ensign Lee, of Captain Spalding's Company, in Colonel Reed's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial, for buying a gun belonging to Colonel Maxwell's Regiment, and defacing the name, New-Jersey, and the number which was marked on her, plead guilty. The Court sentence him to return the gun to Colonel Maxwell, and to be reprimanded by the commanding officer of his Regiment, at the head of his Regiment.

Richard Roach, of Colonel Patterson's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial, for refusing his duty and striking his officer. The Court find him guilty, and sentence him to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back for each several crime.

Jonathan Small, of Colonel Reed's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial, for breach of orders, in selling spirituous liquors, when repeatedly forbid by the commanding officer of the Regiment, is found guilty, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, and return to his duty.

James Carncey, of Captain Osgood's Company, in the Regiment commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Wait, tried by the same General Court-Martial, for desertion; plead guilty, and is sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, and to wear a withe round his neck for fourteen days, as a mark of ignominy, and if he is found without it he is to receive one hundred lashes. He is to return to his duty in his Battalion.

The General approves all the above sentences, and orders the execution of them to-morrow morning, at guard mounting, at the head of the Regiments to which the prisoners severally belong.

Mr. Samuel Shute is appointed an Ensign in Colonel Maxwell's Regiment, in place of an Ensign preferred.

Head-Quarters, August 25, 1776.

(Parole, Lisbon.)

(Countersign, Cádiz.)

The honourable the Continental Congress have been pleased to appoint Colonel James Reed and Colonel Arthur

St. Clair to the rank of Brigadier-Generals in the Army of the United States of America. They are to be considered and obeyed as such.

Colonel Morgan Lewis is appointed Deputy Quartermaster-General of the Northern Army, and is to be obeyed as such.

Head-Quarters, August 26, 1776.

(Countersign, Spain.)

(Parole, Madrid.)

Benjamin Willy, of Captain Tilton's Company, Colonel Poor's Regiment; Josiah Burnham, of Captain Adams's Company; William Adams, of the same Company; William Crown, of the same; John Powell, of the same; James Morton, of Captain Tilton's Company, and all of Colonel Poor's Regiment, and all tried by a General Court-Martial of the Third Brigade, of which Lieutenant-Colonel McDuffie is President, for desertion, plead guilty, and are sentenced to be whipped, each thirty-nine lashes on the bare back.

David Rand, from Captain Adams's Company, Colonel Poor's Regiment, for deserting from said Company, then inlisting with the Militia, and afterwards deserting again. Plead guilty, and is sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes.

Benjamin Holt, of late Captain Wentworth's Company, Colonel Poor's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial, for desertion, plead guilty. The Court, on account of several circumstances which appeared in his favour, sentence him only to be stripped at the post, as if to be whipped, and then severely reprimanded by the Colonel of the Regiment.

Josiah Henderson, Corporal in Captain Bill's Company, Colonel Poor's Regiment, tried for neglect of duty when Corporal of a guard, in suffering the prisoners confined in his guard to go at large, and permitting one Samuel Rowell, confined for desertion, to make his escape. The Court, having examined the evidences, find him guilty, and sentence him to be severely reprimanded by his Colonel, at the head of the Regiment, and reduced to a private.

John Kelly, of Captain Walker's Company, Colonel Stark's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for mutinous conduct and threatening to shoot Captain Richards, pleads guilty. The Court sentence him to receive thirty-nine lashes, and be reprimanded by the Colonel at the head of the Regiment.

Daniel Coss, of Captain Reed's Company, Colonel Stark's Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial, for leaving his post, when placed as sentinel, before he was relieved, is found guilty; but, from many circumstances which appear in his favour, the Court only sentence him to be severely reprimanded by the Colonel at the head of the Regiment.

As the weather is so very wet, the Commissary is directed to deliver an half gill of rum to every non-commissioned officer and soldier now fit for duty in camp.

After Orders.—All the sentences of the Court inserted in the Orders of this day are approved by the General, and are to be put in execution at such time and place as the commanding officers of the respective Regiments shall direct.

Head-Quarters, August 27, 1776.

(Parole, Philadelphia.)

(Countersign, York.)

The weather continuing extremely cold and stormy, the General orders the Commissary to issue one half gill of rum to every non-commissioned officer and soldier now in camp.

The Commissary has received four hundred pairs of leather breeches. They are ready to be delivered to the different established Regiments, according to their number returned for duty.

The General is determined not to grant discharges or furloughs, unless the commanding officers of Regiments send their desire in writing, setting forth the reasons why such furlough or discharge is requested.

Head-Quarters, August 28, 1776.

(Parole, Annapolis.)

(Countersign, Baltimore.)

The bad weather still continuing, the Commissary to issue one-half gill of rum to each non-commissioned officer and soldier, as before.

During this recess from work, occasioned by the rain, the Chief Engineer will order as many axes to be ground as possible. As soon as the weather clears up, the commanding officer of each Regiment may receive from Colonel Baldwin twenty-four axes, giving his receipt for the same. These axes are to be distributed to three of the most expert axe-men in each company, who are to keep them constantly in good order, and to be ready to turn out when called upon.

One Captain, two Subalterns, two Sergeants, two Drummers, and fifty rank and file, from General Bricket's Brigade, to parade as soon as possible, to take twelve batteaus to Skenesborough. The Captain to wait on the Adjutant-General for orders before he sets out. The Batteau-Master will provide the batteaus immediately.

Lieutenant Nahum Powers, of Colonel Woodbridge's Regiment, tried by a General Court-Martial, of which Lieut. Colonel Irvine is President, for stealing a blanket, is found not guilty; therefore acquitted. The General approves the sentence, and orders Lieutenant Powers to be released from his arrest.

The Batteau-Master is ordered to take a fatigue party, and proceed immediately to collect all the oars from the different encampments and places where they are scattered.

Head-Quarters, August 29, 1776.

(Parole, Frédéricks.)

(Countersign, Berkeley.)

The Field Officers who command the guard upon the isthmus of Mount Independence, and the Captains who command the guard upon the redoubt above the lines, are to see that those under them are vigilant in finishing the two guard-rooms directed by former orders to be built by those guards.

The Chief Engineer will order the broken handbarrows to be repaired, and as many new ones made as are immediately wanted.

The Commanding Officers of the Old Corps will, at Orderly time, next Saturday, give in to the Deputy Adjutant-General, a signed return of the names, rank, and dates of commissions, of the Field, Commissioned, and Staff Officers, in their respective corps. The Majors of Brigade will receive the form in which these returns are to be made.

As the weather promises to be fair, the fatigue parties are to make an early dinner, and parade at one o'clock for work.

Head-Quarters, August 30, 1776.

(Parole, Weathersfield.)

(Countersign, Springfield.)

Zerah Beach, Quartermaster of Colonel Burrell's Regiment, is appointed an Ensign in the same Regiment, in place of Ensign Wright, discharged.

The Majors of Brigade will be particularly careful that the weekly returns are correct and complete this week, as they are to be sent to Congress. The absencies and vacancies, &c., are to be carefully noted. Every officer in camp, whether sick or well, is to be returned present. This would not be ordered, but that some Regiments are particularly fond of making mistakes of this kind.

Ensign Frothingham, of Colonel Wheelock's Regiment, is appointed Adjutant of the same Regiment, in place of Adjutant Allen, promoted.

After Orders.—The Surgeons of the different Regiments of this Army are to meet at Head-Quarters to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Head-Quarters, August 31, 1776.

(Parole, America.)

(Countersign, Liberty.)

The officers and soldiers may be satisfied that the General has left no means in his power unattempted to procure medicine and every comfort for the sick.

The Director of the General Hospital in this department, Doctor Stringer, was sent to New-York three and thirty days ago, with positive orders to return the instant he had provided the drugs and medicines so much wanted. Since then, repeated letters have been wrote to New-York and Philadelphia, setting forth, in the strongest terms, the pressing necessity of an immediate supply of these articles.

The General is credibly informed that a Principal Surgeon from the General Hospital at New-York, has been despatched from thence above a fortnight ago, with a supply of medicines, and apprehends that the badness of the weather and roads has alone prevented his arrival.

It is the soldier's duty to maintain the post he is ordered to defend. The same climate and season that affects us affects our enemies; and the favour of the Almighty, to whom we have appealed, will, if we trust in Him, preserve us from slavery and death.

The General recommends it to the Surgeons of the different Regiments to communicate to each other the state of the sick in their respective corps, the various diseases, the remedies principally wanted, and the comforts most in request; for he will leave nothing unattempted in his power to provide whatever he can command for their recovery.

The General also desires the Medical Gentlemen will consult upon and adopt the most proper measures for obtaining those salutary purposes.

Head-Quarters, September 1, 1776.

(Countersign, Georgia.)

A General Court-Martial to sit to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, at the President's tent, upon Mount Independence, for the trial of Colonel Wyman and such prisoners as shall be brought before them; all evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court.

When there is no beef, the Commissary is to issue one-half pound of pork and one pound and a half of flour per day to each man, until further orders.

Philip Morrell, of Captain Stow's Company, Colonel Wheelock's Regiment, tried at a General Court-Martial, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Irvine is President, for refusing to do duty, and threatening the life of a Sergeant, plead guilty, and is sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back for refusing his duty, and thirty-nine lashes for threatening the life of the Sergeant.

Allen Kissaday, of Captain Moore's Company, in the Second Pennsylvania Regiment, and John Purdy, of Captain Harman's Company, of the First Pennsylvania Regiment, tried for getting drunk on their post, plead guilty. The Court sentence them to receive each twenty lashes on his bare back.

Benjamin Butterbee, of Captain Polhemus's Company, in Colonel Winds's Regiment, tried for desertion, and inlisting into another Regiment, plead guilty. Is sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes for desertion, and thirty-nine lashes for inlisting into another Regiment, to forfeit his pay due in each Regiment to be appropriated to the payment of the bounty received at his inlisting, to be drummed out of the Army with a halter round his neck, and sent over Lake George.

The General approves all the above sentences, except that part of the last of B. Butterbee's relating to his being drummed out of the Army, and orders the execution of them at such time and place as the respective commanding officers shall think proper.

The General Court-Martial, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Irvine was President, is dissolved.

Head-Quarters, September 2, 1776.

(Parole, Flatbush.)

(Countersign, Hand.)

The Commissary will deliver one sheep to the order of the commanding officer of each Brigade, to make broth for the sick.

Colonel Whitcomb's Regiment to encamp as soon as possible in the vacant space in the Pennsylvania Brigade that was left for the Sixth Battalion, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley.

The General Court-Martial in the Third Brigade, of which Lieutenant-Colonel McDuffee was President, is dissolved.

All the spades, pickaxes, and bill-hooks now in possession of the respective Regiments, except four spades and four pickaxes to each Regiment, are to be immediately brought in to the Chief Engineer: those on Mount Independence to be brought to the Landing; those on the west side to be brought to Head-Quarters.

General ARNOLD's Protest.

As the Court have refused accepting my principal evidence, Major Scott, after my having declared to them, on honour, that he had punctually obeyed my orders respecting the goods he had in charge from Montreal to Chamblée, and of course is not in the least interested in the event of Colonel Hazen's trial, I do solemnly protest against their proceedings and refusal as unprecedented, and I think unjust.

B. ARNOLD, Brig. Gen.

Minute of the Court.

General Arnold having offered a Protest to the Court, for the entry of it on their Minutes, which appears to them illegal, illiberal, and ungentlemanlike, for these reasons they have objected to its entry and refuse the same.

The Court likewise directed the President to demand satisfaction of the General; which he accordingly did, in the following words:

"SIR: As you have evidently called in question, not only the honour, but the justice likewise, of this Court, by the illiberal Protest you exhibited, the Court have directed me, and as President of this Court I esteem it my duty, to inform you that you have drawn upon yourself their just resentment, and that nothing but an open acknowledgment of your error will be conceived as satisfactory."

To which General Arnold returned the following Letter:

"Ticonderoga, August 1, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: The very extraordinary vote of the Court, and directions given to the President, and his still more extraordinary demand, are, in my opinion, ungentle and indecent reflections on a superior officer, which the nature and words of my protest will by no means justify; nor was it designed as you have construed it. I am not very conversant with Courts-Martial, but this I may venture to say, they are composed of men not infallible. Even you may have erred. Congress will judge between us; to whom I will desire the General to transmit the proceedings of this Court. This I can assure you, I shall ever, in publick or private, be ready to support the character of a man of honour; and, as your very nice and delicate honour, in your apprehension, is injured, you may depend, as soon as this disagreeable service is at an end, (which God grant may soon be the case,) I will by no means withhold from any gentleman of the Court the satisfaction his nice honour may require.

"Your demand I shall not comply with.

"B. ARNOLD.

"To the Court-Martial."

Ticonderoga, August 6, 1776.

SIR: The Court-Martial, ever desirous of rendering their proceedings clear and intelligible, have thought proper to mention to your Honour the principles on which their determination was grounded, in regard to the testimony of Major Scott, which, if your Honour should esteem necessary, may be transmitted to Congress.

From Major Scott's overstrained zeal to serve as Judge Advocate during the course of the trial; from his own acknowledgment in the face of the Court that he had never furnished Colonel Hazen with any written orders from General Arnold; from his appearing extremely solicitous to give evidence in the cause; from his application to the Court to cross-examine a witness; and lastly, from the purport of the testimony of divers witnesses, proving that the goods were delivered to Major Scott, and, while under his care, conducted in such a disorderly manner that part of them must unavoidably have been damaged or lost previous to their arrival at Chamblée; that Colonel Hazen never had the possession of the goods, and that he could not possibly have taken them, (granting he had been authorized so to do,) not having sufficient store room; from these concurring circumstances, we beg leave to assure your Honour that we were constrained to believe Major Scott so far interested in the event of Colonel Hazen's trial, as to render his testimony inadmissible.

We are your Honour's most obedient humble servants.

By order of Court:

ENOCH POOR, President.

To Major-General Gates.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

August 6, 1776.

SIR: We do not make a doubt of your having heard that this Court has taken umbrage at some part of General Arnold's behaviour in the course of his prosecution of Colonel Hazen. We are sensible men of rank should be treated with delicacy. We are also sensible that it is our duty to maintain the dignity and authority of the Court-Martial, and that an attempt to lessen the one, or render the other contemptible, is proportionably a greater offence, as the person who makes the attempt is in a station more elevated; and that the passing over such attempts must have the worst effects in the discipline of the Army. We know we have power to compel parties before us to decent behaviour, and to punish insults offered to us. 'Tis a power incident to Courts, and without which they would be ridiculous and nugatory. 'Tis a power, however, we wish not to exercise in the case of General Arnold especially; a power, however, we must use in his case unless he gives this Court the satisfaction they have demanded; justice to the Army and to our country requires it of us.

The case is shortly this: A witness was offered to the Court to support the charge brought by General Arnold against Colonel Hazen, to whom exception was taken, that he was interested in the event of the trial, and therefore not admissible. The Court, after hearing the allegations of both parties, adjudged that he was interested, and rejected him. Other witnesses were called, and the trial went on. After some time General Arnold again pressed for the admission of the above witness, at the same time observing to the Court, that he would enter a protest on their Minutes unless his request should be granted. He was refused; he then offered his protest against our proceedings, couched, as we think, in indecent terms, and directly impeaching the justice of the Court. If he thought by his protest to stop the proceedings, he certainly has not considered how far that practice would lead. If either party has a right to stop the proceedings by protest, both parties must have the right, and then there needs nothing more to screen every offender from punishment; and, on the other hand, it would expose a person who might have the misfortune to be obnoxious to his superior officer to perpetual persecution; however conscious of his innocence, in vain would he expect redress from a General Court-Martial, for in the very moment when he has a well-grounded expectation of an honourable acquittal, a protest appears and blasts it all, and sends him back to his room a melancholy prisoner. But, on the contrary, if his design was no more than, by an entry of his protest upon our Minutes, to operate against the justice and equity of our proceedings, we must and do consider ourselves as an improper conveyance to our superiors of that protest which was so replete with crimination and abuse. We would add, that the illiberal sentiments of the protest was not the only injury offered us; the whole of the General's conduct during the course of the trial was marked with contempt and disrespect towards the Court, and by his extraordinary answer he has added insult to injury.

We mention these things that you may know what were our motives in this matter; and our principal design in this is, that through you General Arnold may know the light in which we have seen the matter, which, we flatter ourselves, you will readily see the propriety of; and, from the regard you have for the honour, the discipline, and the subordination of the Army, you will not, by a sudden dissolution, put it out of our power to obtain that satisfaction we are entitled to.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Ticonderoga, August 7, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have now before me Colonel Poor's letter of the 6th instant, signed by order, and as President of the Court-Martial, couched in the most artful terms, to deceive and gloss over their private resentment, under an appearance of the greatest concern to keep up discipline, &c. In regard to the power of the Court-Martial, I know of none they have to vilify and abuse any officer, as a Court, much less as private men, under the idea of being a Court, which in fact has been the case. And I appeal to every private gentleman present at the Court, whether there was not the grossest abuse offered me by Colonel Hazen, who claimed the protection of the Court, and was by them countenanced. The gentlemen say that the illiberal sentiments of the protest was not the only injury offered, for that my whole conduct during the course of the trial was marked with contempt and disrespect toward the Court. Had that been the case, those gentlemen, who are so very quick of apprehension, would have pointed out at least one instance of it, which they have not done, and I defy them to do it. I wish not to have the Court dissolved, but that they may have every satisfaction they are entitled to as a Court or gentlemen. I beg the whole proceedings may be laid before Congress. Their decision will ever be a law to me.

I am, with the greatest respect and esteem, dear sir, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. Enclosed is Major Scott's evidence, which I beg may be transmitted with the other papers.

From General ARNOLD to General GATES.—Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Crown-Point, August 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: About two o'clock this afternoon, Colonel Hartley acquainted me that a party of his men, who were posted seven miles down the Lake, as a covering party to the oar-makers, had made a large fire as a signal that the enemy were approaching. I sent Colonel Hartley with one hundred men in batteaus to secure the retreat of the party, if attacked, and ordered the two light schooners down the Lake to cover them. They were no soon under way than Commodore Wynkoop fired a shot and brought them to, and soon after sent me a note, (copy of which I enclose, with my order to the Captains of the schooners, and answer to the Commodore's note.) I waited some time expecting the vessels to sail, but finding they did not, I went on board the Commodore, when he ordered them under sail. He refuses to be commanded by any one, and imagines his appointment, which is by General Schuyler, cannot be superseded. I have shown him such parts of your instructions as I thought necessary, which has brought him so far to reason. He says if you think proper to turn him out, he will quit the vessel. I have given him to understand that I shall at all events pursue your orders, and that if he did not incline to remain in the service, he would not be compelled to it. Colonel Hartley is not yet returned.

I am, with sentiments of respect and esteem, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

Saturday night, eight o'clock.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

Sunday noon.—I am this moment acquainted by a messenger from Crown-Point that the oar-makers made a false alarm.

H. GATES.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Crown-Point, August 17, 1776.

SIR: You will immediately get your vessels under sail, and proceed down the Lake seven or eight miles. If you make any discovery of the enemy, you will immediately give me notice; if none, return as soon as possible.

B. ARNOLD, Brig. General.

To Captains Seaman and Premier.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

On board the Royal Savage, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I find, by an order you have given out, that the schooners are to go down the Lake. I know no orders but what shall be given out by me, except sailing orders from the Commander-in-Chief. If an enemy is approaching, I am to be acquainted with it, and know how to act in my station.

I am, sir, yours,

JACOBUS WYNKOOP,
Commander of Lake Champlain.

To B. Arnold, Brigadier-General.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

SIR: I am surprised you should pretend to contradict my orders to the Captains of the schooners, at this time, when we are alarmed by a signal of the approach of the enemy; and much more so, as I acquainted you some time since that the Commander-in-Chief had appointed me to take command of the Navy on the Lake. Had I not received this appointment, from my rank in the Army, and as Commander-in-Chief of this post, it is your duty to obey my orders, which you have received and executed for some time past. You surely must be out of your senses to say no orders shall be obeyed but yours. Do you imagine that Congress have given you a superior command over the Commander-in-Chief, or that you are not to be under his direction? If you do, give me leave to say you are much mistaken; and if you do not suffer my orders to be immediately complied with, by sending to the Captains of the schooners to obey them, I shall be under the disagreeable necessity of convincing you of your error by immediately arresting you.

B. ARNOLD,

Brigadier-General and Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet on Lake Champlain.

To Commodore J. Wynkoop.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Crown-Point, August 17, 1776.

SIR: I have understood that General Arnold is to have the command of the Navy; and if that be so, he ought to have shown me his power to it; but instead of that, he sent an order for two of the schooners to get under way and go down the Lake, upon some information, he says, he had of the approach of the enemy. Was it not his duty to have communicated it to me, and my orders to have been given to the vessels? I have contradicted them till he acquainted me with some accounts of the enemy, and then I immediately issued out my orders for them to go down. Sir, if that be the case, I would be glad of my dismissal from the service, for I accepted of this command upon these conditions. Major-General Schuyler has a letter, which I brought up to him from Congress, that no man was to take the command from me; and when he had read the letter, he told me that I need not to fear, that no one should have it but me; and the Congress of New-York promised me that if any one should arrive here authorized to take the command by the honourable Continental Congress, I was to be dismissed the service, and have the command of one of the frigates building up the North River; for I am resolved to go under command of no man. I will receive general orders to sail, and how far, and will obey the Commander-in-Chief's orders; but if I have the command, I expect to give the orders to the Captains of the fleet, when I receive them from the Commander-in-Chief. I refer your Honour to a copy of my warrant, a copy of Major-General Schuyler's letter, and his orders, here enclosed. Sir, if you find my grievance well founded, I hope your Honour will be pleased to redress it.

I am, sir, with all due respect your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

JACOBUS WYNKOOP, Comd.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates, Ticonderoga.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

In Committee of Safety, New-York, April 13, 1776.

Ordered, That Captain Jacobus Wynkoop do enlist the number of Mariners desired by Major-General Schuyler for the service of the Lakes, with all possible despatch. That Captain Wynkoop proceed to Albany with said Mariners to General Schuyler, and take his directions as to the vessels on the Lakes, until the honourable the Continental Congress shall have appointed him to that command, or some other gentleman shall arrive at the Lakes authorized to take the command.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Albany, March 8, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with yours of the 4th instant. The Continental Congress have resolved that Captain Wynkoop should be employed upon the Lakes under Commodore Douglass. Whether the latter gentleman means to engage in that service, I do not know. Of this Congress can very speedily inform itself, as he resides near New-York. Should he not engage, there is no person I would more willingly have to command the vessels than Captain Wynkoop. At any rate, I wish you to send him up the soonest possible, with a sufficient number of sailors for the two schooners and sloop.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., &c., &c.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Fort George, May 7, 1776.

SIR: You are immediately to repair to Ticonderoga, and take the command of all the vessels on Lake Champlain, which you will, with the greatest expedition, put into the best condition possible for immediate service.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Captain Wynkoop.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Ticonderoga, August 18, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment received your letter from Crown-Point, of yesterday evening. It is my orders you instantly put Commodore Wynkoop in arrest, and send him prisoner to Head-Quarters, at Ticonderoga. You will, at the same time, acquaint the officers of the fleet that such of them as do not pay an implicit obedience to your commands are instantly to be confined and sent to me for trial.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Crown-Point, August 19, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of yesterday, and have ordered Commodore Wynkoop to Head-Quarters. No other person in the fleet has disputed my orders. I believe the Commodore was really of opinion that neither of us had authority to command him. He now seems convinced to the contrary, and sorry for his disobedience of orders. If it can be done with propriety, I wish he may be permitted to return home without being cashiered.

I am, very respectfully, &c., &c.,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

Extract of a Letter from Major-General GATES to Major-General SCHUYLER, dated AUGUST 20, 1776, at TICONDEROGA. Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Captain Wynkoop's letter to me of the 17th instant you will find in the packet. I am happy in having discovered so early, and upon so unimportant an occasion, the refractory disposition of Mr. Wynkoop. It might have operated, in some serious moment, to the entire ruin of our maritime affairs. As General Arnold has requested I would not send him off in arrest, he has my pass to go at liberty to Albany; but he must, on no account, be sent back here.

Another extract from Major-General SCHUYLER to Major-General GATES, dated at ALBANY, AUGUST 25, 1776. Enclosed in General GATES's Letter of SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

Your favour of the 20th instant was yesterday delivered me by Captain Wynkoop. He is to remain at this place. The want of subordination and discipline in an army cannot be too much lamented. It is the source whence all disorder and misfortune arise.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Adjutant-General Reed's letter of the 24th instant came to hand Tuesday morning, the 27th; yours of the same date, yesterday. On receiving the former, I advised with my Council. We concluded to send Benjamin Huntington, Esq., one of my Council, with direction to take with him Major Ely, at New-London, or officer there well acquainted with the people on Long-Island, to proceed there, and to consult and agree with some of the sure friends of our cause, with secrecy as far as the circumstances would admit, for a number of their men, assured friends and well acquainted on the Island, to join with a body from this State, if possible to accomplish your wishes, to cause a diversion to the enemy, to harass them on their rear, and to prevent their excursions in pursuit of the provisions the Island affords. I hear they sailed for the Island yesterday. His return is expected the beginning of next week. If he succeeds according to our hopes, no exertions of this State, I trust, will be wanting at this critical conjuncture to harass and to keep the enemy at bay, to gain time and every advantage the case may admit.

Shall give the earliest intelligence of our proceedings, that you may coöperate with our designs. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. It is nothing with God to help, whether many, or with those that have no power. He hath so ordered things, in the administration of the affairs of this world, as to encourage the use of means, and yet so as to keep men in continual dependance upon him for the efficacy and success of them; to make Kings and all men to know the reins of the world are not in their hands, but that there is One above who sways and governs all things here below.

I am closing. A post comes in, and brings the letters, copies of which are enclosed. Now expect Mr. Huntington's speedy return. Have sent for my Council. My own thoughts, and such as come to me, are, to send forward four or five of the companies now stationed at New-London, with four field-pieces, I hope six pieces, to join those men which may be ready for the service on Long-Island; four or five companies to follow from New-London as soon as they can be marched down; and also to order on other companies to take the places of such as are removed from thence.

I am inclined to think we shall fall upon some measure similar to what is mentioned. No delay can be admitted at this critical moment. Please to give me the earliest intelligence how we may best serve agreeable to your desires. Shall send in the morning this intelligence to Governour Cooke, of Providence, and ask his assistance in the best way he shall think the circumstances of that State will admit.

September 1st.—Enclosed is copy of another letter, dated yesterday, from Southold, that you may observe the contents. I hope to pursue our measures so as to stop the enemy getting into Suffolk County.

I am, with esteem and regard, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Sag Harbour, August 30, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have just received an account of our cruel and unnatural enemy, the English, having possessed themselves of so much of Long-Island as to destroy the communication between this end of it and the city of New-York.

I am honoured by General Washington with the command of a detachment of two hundred men, for the protection of the inhabitants, stock, &c. This detachment I think is in danger; also insufficient for the purposes mentioned; but am resolved, notwithstanding, to keep our reputations clear and unsullied, and, with our feeble force, to endeavour to distress our enemies all in our power.

I have prevailed upon the Rev. Mr. Buell to transcribe the account he received from the express relative to the communications being cut off, and to direct it to your Excellency, that, if you should think it advisable, you might order a number of men to cross the Sound at night, which I conceive they might do without danger from the shipping stationed there.

I have endeavoured to transmit his Excellency General Washington an account of my having wrote to your Honour concerning this matter, and sent him my returns, a duplicate of which I transmit to your Honour, that if mine should miscarry, this not.

I am, with all imaginable respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON,

Lieut. Col. and Commanding Officer.

To His Excellency Governour Trumbull.

Sag Harbour, August 30, A. D. 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY—SIR: I have this hour direct intelligence from the west end of this Island per a post, that the Ministerial Army (supposed to be about sixteen thousand) are on this side our Army upon the Island; have lined across the Island from the Sound to the south side, so that we on the east end can have no access to our Army. Upon Tuesday last General Washington came over from New-York, upon this Island, with six thousand men.

There have been several engagements. Four or five thousand 'tis supposed have fallen, inclusive of both armies. The armies are within half a mile of each other. A constant fire is kept up. It's supposed the grand battle will be upon the morrow or next day. We have lost, killed and taken, (as the post says,) near three hundred Riflemen; the enemy have two hundred Horse. Their riders were to dine the day before yesterday at Hempstead. They have the command of the west end of the Island entirely.

The post relates, that upon Tuesday about five thousand Regulars attempted to land a little below York Ferry; our people met them, and the post says killed about two thousand, and drove the residue back. We learn by the post the Hessians fight terribly.

I am now, sir, present with Colonel Livingston, who advises to write, in conjunction with himself, to your Honour, as proposing and submitting of it to your Honour's wisdom to determine whether it will not be conducive to the general good, and for the preservation of this end of the Island, to throw a number of troops over to our assistance at the present time.

Confiding in your Excellency's patriotick spirit and superior wisdom, in all possible haste, I am, with great esteem, your Excellency's most humble, most obedient friend and servant,

SOL. BUELL.

Suffolk County, Southold, August 31, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: We are sorry to acquaint you that we have received several expresses from the middle of this Island, acquainting us of the Regular troops having surrounded our lines at the west end, and stopped our communication to the Army and Provincial Congress. Their scouting party consists of about three hundred Light-Horse and four hundred Foot, together with a number of Tory recruits, and to all appearance are about penetrating into this County, as they have already marched as far as the western post, or Hempstead Plains, where they took prisoner Brigadier-General Nathaniel Woodhull, Commander-in-Chief of the Militia of this Island. We must beg the favour of you to aid and assist us with men and ammunition, as our men are chiefly drawn off, and are now in the Army, so that we are not able to raise more than seven hundred and fifty men in the whole County that are capable to bear arms. If you think proper to send us men, which we think we really need, we must beg you would send what provisions you think they will want, all but fresh, which we can make out to supply them with. By the best account we can learn of the strength of the regular Army now landed on this Island, they consist of about fifteen thousand or twenty thousand men.

GUILFORD (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE.

In Committee Meeting of Inspection, }
Guilford, August 31, 1776. }

This meeting being called on account of a letter received from the Congress of New-York, dated Harlem, August 28, 1776, desiring the Committee of Guilford would assist in removing the stock from Long-Island, and also the people that were desirous of removing; whereupon it is considered and voted, that this Committee will comply with the above request, and that Nathaniel Ruggles, Esq., Samuel Brown, Esq., Solomon Leek, Nathaniel Stone, and Samuel Lee, Jun., be a Committee to carry the same into execution.

MALTBY GELSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Bridgehampton, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Having received intelligence by Benjamin Huntington, Esq., and Major Ely, that your Honour has proposed sending a number of troops to our assistance on the east end of Long-Island; pursuant thereto the Joint Committee of South and East-Hampton request that your Honour will immediately put your purpose in execution, as our danger is extremely great, having just received information that a large number of Horse and Foot of the Ministerial Army are probably marching into this County, and are now in possession of the two western Counties on this Island. Sir, should your Honour comply with the above request, it is probable we can save the inhabitants and stock from falling into the hands of our enemies; and unless we have some speedy relief, we must fall a sacrifice to our cruel enemies. With regard to provision for your troops, we can supply them with plenty of fresh meat. For further intelligence, the express will inform your Honour.

Signed by order of the Committee:

MALTBY GELSTON, Chairman.

To His Excellency Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

COLONEL REED TO COLONEL SEYMOUR.

Camp at Cambridge, August 31, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by his Excellency General Washington to inform you that he has given orders that Major French, and some other prisoners at Philadelphia, should remain at Hartford, instead of proceeding to this camp, as was proposed. Should there be any doubt of their parole of honour given at Philadelphia being vacated by this change of their destination, you will require them to renew it before they are allowed the same indulgences with the other gentlemen now under the care of the Committee over which you preside. Should they have advanced beyond Hartford before this letter reaches you, his Excellency requests you will immediately despatch an express for their return, as their coming to this place will be attended with many inconveniences both to the service and themselves.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED.

To Col. Seymour, Chairman of the Committee, Hartford.

Boston, September 26, 1776.

On the 31st of August last was taken by the schooner Hannah and Molly and the Dolphin privateers, and carried into Frenchman's Bay, the brigantine Royal George, commanded by Dennis Doyle, having on board the following articles, viz: two hundred tierces of pork, two hundred and thirty-one barrels of beef, two hundred and seventy firkins of butter, one hundred and sixty-nine barrels of oatmeal, eleven tierces of beef, one crock of butter, twenty-five sacks of split peas, twenty-five boxes of candles, thirty boxes of soap, twenty barrels of pork. She was bound from Waterford, in Ireland, to Halifax; out ten weeks; brings no news, excepting that they had an account in Ireland that the British troops had taken possession of the greatest part of Philadelphia, and had taken the Continental Congress prisoners.

Yesterday Captain Odiorne, in the Washington privateer, carried into Newburyport a barque from New-York bound to St. Vincent's, with provisions for one hundred and twenty men for six months. She sailed in company with five or six transports, under convoy of the Solebay frigate, in order to fetch troops from thence.

A French schooner, which sailed from Newburyport about a month ago, was taken by one of the Ministerial pirates, retaken by the Washington privateer from hence, and is now safe arrived there.

A letter from Providence of 23d instant, says: "The Columbus vessel of war has sent a prize brig into Newport, loaded with lumber, bound for Europe."

JAMES LYON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Machias, August 28, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: I have often troubled the Court with my scribbling, and once with my presence, but neither known nor regarded, because I did not approach in a parliamentary way, though supported, or rather sent, by the most respectable men in this place. Do your Honours expect all the formalities of a Court from loggers and mill-men? I once more beg leave to approach, with due respect, and to speak with freedom, without offence. My subject is the country which lies between Penobscot and Nova-Scotia; and should I appear to express myself with too much energy and pathos, I hope it will be imputed to my exquisite sensibility of my subject; I feel what I say, and mean, if possible, that your Honours should feel it likewise.

It has often been asserted, if we may credit human testimony, by members of this honourable Court, that the eastern country is a moth; that it has cost more than it is worth; and that it would be wisdom in the Government to neglect it utterly, and suffer it to sink. I suppose that part of the country east of the Penobscot is meant, for the other part is in some measure represented, better known, and surely worth saving. I shall, therefore, take it for granted that the part only where I live is the moth to Government. I readily grant that your Honours are competent judges of the qualifications of your own members; but since you never yet pretended to infallibility, it is not impossible that ignorant and illiterate men have, by some means or other, crept in among you. But whenever this happens, I blame not this honourable Court, but those who sent them. Were I permitted even to name what I think the necessary qualifications in a good statesman, I should say, he ought to be a gentleman of enlarged mind, well furnished with historical facts, and an extensive acquaintance with men and things, and the Constitution of his own country in particular, and with every part of his dominions; he ought also to be a gentleman of established integrity and extensive benevolence, who esteems the happiness of every part of the State his own highest happiness and glory. Such a person will do honour to a public station, and diffuse peace and joy through the State; while the person destitute of these qualifications is really a nuisance and a curse to the publick in any exalted sphere. Have these gentlemen, therefore, who speak and think so lightly of this eastern country, all these necessary qualifications? Have they any of them? Not to mention their profound acquaintance with history, ancient and modern, and the grand and interesting occasions of the rise and fall of the States, Kingdoms, and Empires, do they know any more of a valuable part of their own dominions than they know of the extent of country and the nature of the soil in the moon? And are not their integrity and benevolence strongly to be suspected, when they openly oppose everything that is motioned for the benefit of this infant country, if attended with a trifling expense, and publicly declare their willingness that thousands of wholesome inhabitants, and as brave a people as any on the face of the earth, should perish in all the horrors of famine and war? But they are my superiors. Our situation is far more deplorable than the situation of the Boston people ever was, till the town was shut up; and perhaps we are as useful members of the State. Yet donations were generously heaped upon them from almost every quarter. But did we ever ask for charity? Some of the principal inhabitants of this place, it is true, petitioned for a scanty pittance for their Minister; and the ostensible reason assigned for not granting it was, the petition does not come before us in a parliamentary way. The sums asked for, with this single exception, have always been requested as a loan, which we think we shall be able to pay, with interest, when the times are settled. I suspect, however, that this honourable Court, in general, have too contemptible an opinion of this part of the eastern country. I beg leave, therefore, to speak a few words in its commendation. I have travelled over a great part of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, New-York, Connecticut, Rhode-Island, Boston Government, and Nova-Scotia, and been an inhabitant of all these States, except Connecticut and Rhode-Island, and call myself something of a judge of lands; and I must say, that this eastern country, in my opinion, is equal to any I ever saw. The climate, if not so pleasant as some others, is more healthy, and the natural increase of inhabitants greater; the soil is exceedingly natural to grass, and when properly subdued, will produce quantities of beef, butter, cheese, &c. It produces excellent wheat, rye, barley, oats, peas, beans, hemp, flax, and some Indian corn in the internal parts, and almost all kinds of roots. The proportion of barren lands is probably less than in most other countries. To these things I must add the fishing on the coasts, which will in time support an incredible number of people, and furnish our navy with able seamen. However meanly, therefore, people may think of this eastern and extensive portion of the Continent, I assert, without claiming the spirit of prophecy, that it will one day vie with the other States of America in greatness and glory, if not give them laws. Your settlements here are promising children in their minority, who must be tenderly nursed, and when grown to manhood will become the support and consolation of their aged parents. Should your Honours, notwithstanding, think them a moth, and not worth keeping, I beg you dispose of the country, together with the right of dominion, and give us, the inhabitants, the offer. We will engage to procure purchasers, who will give you fifteen times as much as it has cost you. We shall then soon become a free and independent State ourselves. And I assure you we shall think Nova-Scotia worth annexing to our dominions. But if your Honours think us worth keeping, I beseech you, by all the tender emotions of the human heart, and by everything sacred, to take some care of us. The coast would be worthy of a guard were there not an inhabitant upon it; but the inhabitants amount to thousands, who are a hardy, brave people, and acquainted with the climate and the nature of the soil, and therefore are better than twice the number that could be sent here, for such would have everything to learn. But—pardon my freedom—instead of encouraging and supporting us hitherto, as we ought to have been, this honourable Court has neglected us, and taken our privateers, our principal strength, which cost us our blood, from us. And in consequence of this, a number of industrious fishermen, and all on which we depended for present subsistence, have been taken by British robbers, and a number of our respectable people—men, women, and children—carried into captivity. If any of our people have represented these two privateers as useless while here, they certainly mistook our true interest. They were a terror to our enemies, and, under God, if I mistake not, our salvation last summer. Now they are gone our enemy's barges infest our harbours and take our vessels. Should your Honours now ask what I mean by all this, I reply, I earnestly request you to send one of your frigates, or two or three of your ablest privateers, to take the ship that infests our coast, and clear the way for fishermen and coasters; and then, perhaps, some generous persons may be disposed to send us bread, and take some of our lumber. I ask for a small army, to subdue Nova-Scotia, or at least that some person or persons may have leave to raise men, and to go against that Province at their own risk. I believe men enough might be found in this country who would cheerfully undertake it without any assistance from Government. The people this way are so very anxious about this matter, that they would go in whale-boats rather than not go, provided they might call what they take their own, in common with the good people of that Province. I confess I am so avaricious, that I would go with the utmost cheerfulness. I hope, however, I should have some noble views, for I think it our duty to relieve our distressed brethren, and bestow upon them the same glorious privileges which we enjoy, if possible, and to deprive our enemies, especially those on this Continent, of their power to hurt us.

With these views, the Committee of this place once petitioned for leave to go against that Province. And had our request been granted, in all probability that country had now been entirely ours, and vast quantities of provision would have been cut off from our enemies. Messrs. Shaw, Foster, and Smith, would now do the business. But were our General Court, at their own expense, to take Nova-Scotia, the other States of America would have no pretensions to any part of it; and the acquisition would be unspeakably great. That Province is invaluable, and would make ample amends for the expense, and we must have it, or our fishing is lost. Now it is nearly defenceless, and nearly nine-tenths of its inhabitants would bid us a hearty welcome; and now it may be taken without much loss of blood, if any, but hereafter it may cost us very dear.

I highly approve of the noble spirit and resolution of Captain Eddy, and heartily wish him success, and all the honour of reducing Nova-Scotia, provided our General Court do not see fit that any of their own subjects should share it with him. The reduction of that Province is a matter of the utmost consequence to this place, and would relieve us of many of our distresses.

Should it be thought that I meddle with matters which do not belong to me, and that the Committee of Machias ought to have written, I acknowledge that their writing would have been the parliamentary way; but at present, this is almost impracticable, for they are much distressed and broken to pieces: two of them are taken by the enemy, and one at the westward. Indeed, we are all in a poor, broken situation. If, therefore, the Committee cannot write, why may not I—especially when I write nearly the sense of all the members of the Committee whom I have seen, and the sense of almost every inhabitant? The meanest subject of a free State may complain, when aggrieved, to the highest Court, and draw near to the supreme authority with filial confidence and freedom. I mean to do no more. This is my birthright; and should feel, if I neglect to improve it when confidence and the distresses of all around me command, your Honours yourselves would blame me. But I forget myself, and intrude too far.

I am, with great deference and respect, your Honours' most faithful but distressed servant and subject,

JAS. LYON.

To the Honourable the Council and House of Commons of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

P. S. I am heartily sorry that the officer I recommended to this honourable Court has not acted with all that dignity and honour that could be wished. When I wrote in his favour, I had no knowledge of his inclinations to impose on the publick.

The vessels lately taken going out of this place were a brig from St. Croix, John Coulson master, the sloop Unity, formerly belonging to Captain Ichabod Jones, and a sloop belonging to Mr. Jonathan Pierson, of Newbury.

RESOLVE OF THE GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY,
AUGUST 31, 1776.

Resolved, That a Committee of suitable persons be appointed immediately to repair to the State of New-Hampshire, and apply to the Government there, and, if practicable, with the loan of as many Cannon as can be spared from this State, to effect the fixing out the Continental Ship now under the direction of Mr. Langdon; and to take immediate measures that such number of Cannon and other necessities, as without distressing the State may be lent to the Continent, may be safely and expeditiously transported to Portsmouth. This Ship to be fixed out for the purpose of attacking the Milford, or other ships of war distressing our coasts.

And in case said Ship can within any reasonable time be equipped for the sea,

Resolved, That two or more Colony armed Vessels be directed to act in concert with her; and that the Committee be, and hereby are, empowered to engage as many sea-coast Soldiers east of Boston as may incline to enter for said service, and in general to do everything necessary for effecting the aforesaid purpose; and that the pay of the sea-coast men continue, in addition to emoluments of the sea service. The said Cannon and other articles, that may be lent as aforesaid, to be returned as soon as the cruise shall be over, or as soon as they shall be called for by this Government.

In Council, September 2, 1776.

Whereas Benjamin Greenleaf and Oliver Wendell, Esqs., and Captain George Williams, are appointed a Committee to repair to Portsmouth, in the State of New-Hampshire, to procure the Continental Frigate to cruise after the Milford and other Frigates of the enemy, that are infesting the sea-coast of these United States:

Resolved, That the said Committee be directed to represent to the Legislative authority of the State of New-Hampshire the expediency of forthwith passing an act to prohibit the exportation of Lumber, for a limited time, similar to that passed by this State for that purpose.

Sent down for concurrence.

LETTER I.—TO THE INHABITANTS OF THE MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

GENTLEMEN: Conscious of an upright design to promote and perpetuate the liberties of the State, and that I have given you no just occasion to suspect my patriotism while I have had the happiness of residing among you, I promise myself that you will hear with candour what I have now to offer.

The peculiarity of the times hath made it necessary to alter the forms of Government in almost every Colony upon the Continent, and hath afforded an opportunity of moulding them so as to favour the original rights of human nature. In some these rights are more fully and better secured than in others; this we may ascribe to the different manners and usages of the inhabitants which must be consulted, that so confusion may be prevented, and invincible prejudices be gratified; though it is your felicity to have enjoyed from the beginning a form of Government that contained the leading principles of liberty, so that you want not, in this important crisis of America, to establish a form absolutely and entirely new, but to have the present corrected and improved, in order to its being perfect. Your Legislature always consisted of more than one branch; and it is of the highest consequence that it should continue to do so. A gentleman, (to whom you are under great obligations, and whose name, was I to mention it, would meet with universal respect,) in a letter to his friend, containing Thoughts on Government, printed at Philadelphia, thus expresses himself from page the 10th to the 14th:

"A representation of the people in one Assembly being obtained, a question arises, whether all the powers of Government, legislative, executive, and judicial, shall be left in this body? I think a people cannot be long free, nor ever happy, whose Government is in one Assembly. My reasons for this opinion are as follow:

"1. A single Assembly is liable to all the vices, follies, and frailties of an individual; subject to fits of humour, starts of passion, flights of enthusiasm, partialities of prejudice, and consequently productive of hasty results and absurd judgments; and all these errors ought to be corrected and defects supplied by some controlling power.

"2. A single Assembly is apt to be avaricious, and in time will not scruple to exempt itself from burdens which it will lay without compunction on its constituents.

"3. A single Assembly is apt to grow ambitious, and after a time will not hesitate to vote itself perpetual. This was one fault of the Long Parliament; but more particularly of Holland, whose Assembly first voted themselves from annual to septennial, then for life, and after a course of years, that all vacancies happening by death or otherwise should be filled by themselves, without any application to constituents at all.

"4. A Representative Assembly, although extremely well qualified, and absolutely necessary as a branch of the Legislature, is unfit to exercise the Executive power, for want of two essential properties, secrecy and despatch.

"5. A Representative Assembly is still less qualified for the Judicial power, because it is too numerous, too slow, and too little skilled in the laws.

"6. Because a single Assembly, possessed of all the powers of Government, would make arbitrary laws for their own interest, execute all laws arbitrarily for their own interest, and adjudge all controversies in their own favour.

"But shall the whole power of legislation rest in one Assembly? Most of the foregoing reasons apply equally to prove that the Legislative power ought to be more complex; to which we may add, that if the Legislative power is wholly in one Assembly, and the Executive in another, or in a single person, these two powers will oppose and encroach upon each other, until the contest shall end in war, and the whole power, Legislative and Executive, be usurped by the strongest."

The wisdom of the Continent, so far as it can be collected from the forms that have been already established, hath given it in favour of a complex Legislature, against its consisting of one branch only. From his Excellency Archibald Bullock's speech to the Provincial Congress of Georgia, it seems that the whole Legislature rested in that one representative body; but no publication, that I have been able to get the sight of, has informed us whether the Georgians have yet agreed upon and fixed their form of Government. It may be only the original temporary expedient continued. South-Carolina was the first that resolved upon a fixed plan, and concluded that the Legislative authority should be vested in the President and Commander-in-Chief, the General Assembly, and Legislative Council. I do not object to the Legislature's consisting of more than two branches, though these, well modelled, might suffice, but to a single person's making the third branch. The author of that celebrated pamphlet Common Sense, judiciously observed, in that or one of his letters signed Forester, that it was too much for any one man whatsoever to be intrusted with the power of negating the acts of two large legislating bodies. I have not his words, and can only give you his meaning, which is so level to the understanding of every mortal, that when once mentioned it is a wonder that it is not universally assented to. The abilities and good qualities of a Rutledge may prevent the South-Carolinians finding a speedy disadvantage from their having invested the President with so great a power; but while men are fallible, changeable, and mortal, the rights of a people should not depend upon the abilities and good qualities of a President; no, not for a year.

The Virginians, in their plan of Government, declare: "The Legislative department shall be formed of two distinct branches, who, together, shall be a complete Legislature. They shall meet once, or oftener, every year, and shall be called the General Assembly of Virginia. One of these shall be called the House of Delegates; the other shall be called the Senate."

New-Jersey have agreed that the Government of that Province should be vested in a Governour, Legislative Council, and General Assembly; but legislation is confined to the Council and Assembly unitedly, and the Governour has no further concern therein other than as constant President of the Council, and having a casting vote in their proceedings.

The rest of the Colonies that had their forms of Government to settle, have not yet agreed upon, or published the same. However, it is extremely probable that they will in general determine upon having more than a single branch for the Legislature. Could I suppose that this Colony would consent to set aside the Council, and to intrust an Assembly with the sole power of legislating, I should dread the consequences—not for myself as an individual, for having been already transplanted, I am not strongly rooted to a particular spot, and can easily remove to a free soil wherever to be met with. I should dread the consequences on account of the publick; for such Assembly would soon give us as great a cause for complaining as ever the British Legislature has done, would be full as arbitrary and tyrannical, and far more dangerous, from their being in the midst of us, instead of three thousand miles distant. We are fighting against a tyranny without us; let us guard against a tyranny within us; or the only difference in our case will be, that instead of being devoured by aliens, we shall be devoured one of another. Gentlemen, let us retain a Council as an essential branch of the Legislature, that so our laws, by being subject to the revisal of that Board, may be the more matured for publick service, and that so, should the Assembly fall into the vices, follies, and frailties of individuals, they may have the assistance of the Council to recover them before they have rendered themselves ridiculous, or have thrown the State into a convulsion. But while I am arguing for the continuance of a Council as one branch of the Legislature, I would not be thought to approve of its continuing upon the usual footing. It should upon no account whatsoever have a vote in its own election, and I am glad to find that that absurdity is more attended to than formerly. It should also be so independent of the House, as that its members may be in nowise under any undue influence from that. The Council hath only the name of a separate branch of the Legislature, unless they are entirely free to act their own judgments. Wherein one branch sways the other to go against its own opinion, it therein engrosses the whole power. It is upon this principle that the King of Great Britain is absolute; for though he doth not act without the Parliament, by places, pensions, honours, and promises, he obtains the sanction of the Parliament for doing as he pleases. The ancient form is preserved, but the spirit of the Constitution is evaporated. Whether it would be best that the choice of the Council should remain with the House, or be taken up by the publick, who are the fountain of all civil power, and may resume the exercise of it as oft as they judge necessary or expedient, I am at a loss to determine. But however chosen, the Board should certainly be considered as much the Representatives of the people as the House. In South-Carolina, the General Assembly choose the Legislative Council. In Virginia, the electors at large choose the Senate, (or Council,) voting for them at the same time that they vote for the House of Delegates. 'Tis after the same manner in the Jerseys. The Senate or Council of Virginia consists of twenty-four members, which are changed by rotation, six new ones being chosen annually in the room of six that go out, till the whole are changed. And it is so settled that the same individuals cannot be rechosen till they have been out of the Senate four years; but then, after the first rotation, each set will continue in as long. When Councillors are chosen by the people annually, and can be displaced, or rather passed by, at pleasure, it seems unnecessary to insist upon a change; but it may be prudent for the electors to make it once in a while, that so the legislative power may not continue almost invariably among a certain set. Should the Council be chosen by the House, then, I apprehend, a settled change by rotation becomes requisite, and it might be effected after some such manner as the following: Let us suppose the number of the Council thirty. Let it be agreed that none of these shall serve more than three years successively, while they depend solely upon the annual election of the House for serving longer than the first, and that ten of them shall be dropped every year to make room for the admission of new ones. After the Council hath been chosen, let the House immediately determine upon the ten who shall not be eligible on the following election. By this means the people, if they approve of it, will have the opportunity of concluding upon returning them the next year to the House, and of enjoying their assistance among the Representatives, and they themselves will be under no temptation to deviate from their own sentiments, or to alter their own opinion, that they may secure an election the ensuing year. Let no one that is thus declared ineligible, and so left out, be eligible again till he has been out of the Council as long as he was successively in it. This mode of rotation is nearly the same with what was proposed by a writer in the New-York paper some months since, and I have used his expressions wherein they would serve. The said writer, in support of his plan, observes: "These kinds of rotation would be an hinderance to individuals conspiring to engross the management of publick affairs into their own hands, to the exclusion of others equally deserving; would excite a laudable ambition in the rising generation to qualify themselves for the first posts of honour and importance in the State, while the door of admittance was kept open by the Constitution, and not secured by a party; would disconcert the plans of any dark, deep, designing knave (such there will be in America as well as in the rest of the world) that might mean to exalt himself into a degree of power dangerous to the publick, while he was making himself popular, and deceiving the generality, by bawling out and stunning every one near him with the cry of liberty, and would increase the number of persons qualified for business in any of the upper departments of the State." I shall beg the liberty of troubling you further in some following letters, with more of my thoughts on a plan of Government. Before I close the present, would repeat the fifth article in the Declaration of Rights made by the Representatives of the good people of Virginia, assembled in full and free Convention, wherein it is asserted "that the Legislative and Executive powers of the State should be distinct from the Judicative; and that the members of the two first may be restrained from oppression by feeling and participating the burdens of the people, they should, at fixed periods, be reduced to a private station, return into that body from which they were originally taken, and the vacancies be supplied by frequent, certain, and regular elections." The same arguments that weigh for their being reduced to a private station, weigh also for their being kept for a time in that private station. The reasons, gentlemen, why I shall sign my real name, are, an apprehension that you ought to know every man that proposes a plan of Government, that, so from their characters you may judge whether they have interested views and are biassed, and that I may be at liberty to pass by unnoticed any writers I please, to avoid altercation about what I advance, for it is not disputation or victory, but the good of the State, that is proposed by your very humble servant,

WILLIAM GORDON.

Roxbury, August 31, 1776.

PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, July 5, 1776.

Present: George Clymer, Chairman, Joseph Parker, James Biddle, George Gray, John Cadwalader, Owen Biddle, John Nixon, David Rittenhouse.

Resolved, That Mr. James Dunlap be employed as Surgeon of the Naval Armament (the ship excepted) and Artillery and superintendence of the Hospital, and that he be allowed 10s. per day and three rations.

The Fly armed vessel having arrived at New-York with six Cannon for the use of this Province, being a part of the twenty ordered by Congress,

Resolved, That Messrs. Levi Hollingsworth and Thomas Richardson be requested to go to New-York, and endeavour to convey the said Cannon to this city in the most expeditious manner; that they be authorized to hire carriages for that purpose, either in this city or any other place, as they may judge most proper.

Upon application of Congress for a quantity of Flints for the use of the Army under General Washington, by order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver thirty thousand of them; and in order to their being conveyed to New-York with the greatest expedition, four chaises were employed for that purpose, two of which set off yesterday evening, and the other two four o'clock this morning, with a request to the different Committees to aid and assist with fresh horses, if found necessary.

Adjourned to five o'clock; when the following Members met: George Clymer, Chairman, Owen Biddle, George Gray, John Nixon, Joseph Parker, David Rittenhouse, John Cadwalader.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on Michael Hillegas, Esq., in favour of Colonel Samuel Miles, for £1,000, for the use of the Battalion under his command.

Captain Joseph Moulder having exhibited a list of necessities to equip his military Company for service,

Resolved, That Robert Towers, Commissary, supply such articles of said list as he has in store.

That Captain Moulder procure such articles as the Commissary can't furnish, on the most reasonable terms, and bring in a bill for cost, for payment.

Resolved, That Mr. Palmer and Mr. Nicholson be requested to examine and value the Arms collected from the Non-Associators in this city, and make report of such valuation to this Board, and that they be paid a reasonable allowance for their trouble.

Captain Alexander was desired to deliver Robert Towers, Commissary, all the Powder and Arms taken out of the Brig Nancy near Cape May.

As the Militia of this Province is immediately to be called into service, it will be necessary to collect a considerable quantity of old Linen for Bandages and Lint; the Committee therefore most earnestly requests the good women of this City to furnish as much as they can spare. The bearer, is empowered to receive the same, and such charitable ladies as will take the trouble to make Lint and furnish it will merit particular thanks from the publick.

Resolved, That Robert Eastbourne and be employed to collect the old Linen, &c., as mentioned in the above address.

Resolved, That Dr. Thomas Bond, jun., be requested to procure all the Rags in the Commissary's store to be made into Bandages and Lint, and this Committee will defray the expense.

It being reported to this Committee that there is at present scarcity of suitable Linen for making Tents to accommodate the Associators who are about to march to the assistance of our brethren of the Colony of New-Jersey, and that there is a number of Awnings in this city suitable for that purpose,

Resolved, That the Committee of Inspection and Observation be requested to apply to all such persons who are possessed of the same, to spare them to the publick upon this pressing emergency, allowing them a reasonable price for the same; and it is hoped that no persons will be so lost to all regard to the publick welfare to refuse to spare the same. If any such there be, they are to return their names to this Committee, that a proper estimate may be made of their attachment to their country.

In Committee of Safety, July 6, 1776.

Present: George Clymer, Chairman, Joseph Parker, Samuel Howell, James Biddle, Samuel Morris, Jun., Thomas Wharton, Jun., George Gray, Samuel Miles, Owen Biddle, Daniel Roberdeau.

The honourable Congress sent the following Resolve to this Board, which is directed to be entered on the Minutes:

"Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania be directed to take the parole of Allan McDonald, of Kingsborough, who is now confined in the Jail of this city, and upon his signing his parole, that they assign him his place of residence, and treat him agreeable to resolutions of Congress.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHAS. THOMSON, Secretary."

Agreeable to the above Resolve of Congress, the said Allan McDonald gave his parole and word of honour to go to Reading, in Berks County, and other matters, as will appear by his parole.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, July 10, 1776.

Present: Owen Biddle, Chairman, Joseph Parker, John Nixon, Alexander Wilcocks, Samuel Howell, James Biddle, George Gray, George Clymer, Samuel Morris, Jun.

Resolved; That Doctor Dunlap be desired to receive the Bandages and Rags that Doctor Bond received, and had made by order of this Board.

Yesterday ten of the men confined in Jail, that were taken with Captain Campbell, some time past, were discharged, they having been qualified to proceed to Yorktown, and reside there, or within such distance as the Committee of Inspection of that town shall limit.

Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Captain Cowperthwaite four Fire-locks, with the Accoutrements, for the use of his Light-Infantry Company.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Joseph Moulder, for £25, to be charged to his account for purchasing Tin for the use of the Province.

Resolved, That this Committee will pay £50 to any person or persons who shall apprehend Major Rogers and deliver him to this Board.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Captain Francis Wade, for £70, which is directed to be charged to his account.

Resolved, That Mr. Towers be directed to deliver to General Roberdeau's order, all the Provincial Arms in his possession, that a just distribution be made of them amongst the four Musket Battalions of Associators in this city.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of George Spangler, for £10, for the defraying the expenses of Captain Campbell's men discharged from confinement and ordered to Yorktown, which is directed to be charged to his account.

Resolved, That George Spangler conduct the Prisoners of War from this city to Yorktown, there to be stationed under the care of the Committee of that town.

In Committee of Safety, July 11, 1776.

Present: Alexander Wilcocks, Chairman, George Clymer, James Mease, Samuel Howell, Joseph Parker, Owen Biddle, Samuel Miles, Thomas Wharton, Jun., David Rittenhouse, John Nixon, George Gray.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Mr. Clement Biddle, Quartermaster-General, the following articles, taking a receipt for the same: three hundred and fifty Knapsacks, nine hundred Cartouch-Boxes, nine hundred Bayonet Belts, one thousand Brushes and Wires, six hampers Tent Pins, twelve Awnings, Intrenching Tools to make up one half of the whole quantity in store.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of John Pollard, for £23 12s. 6d., the amount of five Rifles purchased by Colonel Timothy Matlack, for the use of his Battalion.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Messrs. B. Smith, William Ball, and B. Harbison, for £25, for purchasing Awnings for making Tents.

Captain Loxley and Mr. Daniel King are hereby ordered to take immediate possession of Morgan Bustead's Air Furnace, for the publick use, and this Committee will be answerable to the said Bustead.

Resolved, That Mr. Robert Smith, Sailmaker, be requested to attend Messrs. Smith, Ball, and Harbison, to inspect and value such Awnings as they may show him, for which they are to pay the several owners agreeable to the valuation, and which he is desired to make up with all possible speed into Tents.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, for £250, in favour of Mr. Abraham Mason, for the purchase of Canvass for Tents.

Resolved, That Mr. Kimble and John Young, Jun., be desired immediately to deliver Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary, such Fire-Arms as are in their possession; and such as are fit for use, or may conveniently be made so, be valued by him, and this Committee will pay for them.

The Board understanding that Captain Loxley and Mr. King are about to erect a Boring Mill near the city, it is recommended to them to complete the work without loss of time, as it may be immediately employed greatly to the publick service.

Resolved, That Mr. Owen Biddle procure, for the use of this Province, double the quantity of Intrenching Tools already provided.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, July 12, 1776.

Present: Samuel Howell, Chairman, Michael Hillegas, Owen Biddle, Joseph Parker, James Biddle, David Rittenhouse, Samuel Miles, Thomas Wharton, Jr., Samuel Morris, Jun., George Clymer, John Nixon, John Cadwalader.

This Committee some time past freighted and hired the Brigantine Nancy, Captain Montgomery, on a voyage for procuring Arms and Ammunition on account of this Province; and having engaged to secure the value of the said vessel to the owners in case of loss; and whereas the said Brigantine

Nancy, on her return from St. Thomas's with Powder and other goods, was run on shore near Cape-May and lost; in consequence thereof the owners of said vessel exhibited an account against this Committee for the value of the said brigantine, and other matters therein mentioned:

Therefore, Resolved, That Robert Morris, Thomas Wharton, Jun., and Robert Whyte, Esquires, the Committee for importing Powder, Arms, &c., be authorized to settle the above-mentioned Account, and make report to this Board.

Resolved, That Messrs. George Gray, James Biddle, George Clymer, and Owen Biddle, be a Committee to draw up a plan for the support of the families of the poor Associators that are gone and now going upon the present expedition into the Jerseys, and make report of their proceedings to-morrow.

The Powder Committee report, that they have examined the Accounts exhibited by Joseph Shallockcross & Co., respecting the loss of the Brigantine Nancy, amounting to £1,457 10s., and find it reasonable and just. In consequence thereof an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of said Joseph Shallockcross & Co., for the said sum of £1,457 10s.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Henry McKeever, for £4 15s., being the price of a Rifle sold Colonel Matlack for the use of his Battalion.

Upon application of General Roberdeau for the following articles, for the use of the armed Brigantine Venus, going on a voyage for Arms and Ammunition, Robert Towers, Commissary, is directed to deliver them; and are as follows: half a hundred of Gunpowder; sixty pounds of Musket Shot, sixty Swivel Shot, twelve two-pound Shot.

Resolved, That the pay of the Artillery Company of this Province, under the command of Captain Proctor, be increased to Continental pay.

A Letter was this day received from James Potts, Esq., enclosing his Commission as Major in the Musket Battalion in the service of this Province, desiring leave to resign his appointment.

Resolved, That Major James Potts have leave to resign his Commission.

Adjourned to three o'clock; when the following Members met: Samuel Howell, Chairman, George Clymer, Owen Biddle, James Biddle, Thomas Wharton, Junior, George Gray, Samuel Miles.

Lieutenant Webb, of the armed boat Bull Dog, having been suspended from duty by a Court-Martial during the pleasure of the Commodore, who has resigned his appointment as commander of the fleet,

Therefore, Resolved, That the said Lieutenant John Webb be restored to his command as Lieutenant.

The honourable Congress having requested this Board to recommend proper persons as Lieutenants and Ensigns to the four Companies of Germans to be raised in this Province for the Continental service,

Resolved, That the following gentlemen be recommended to Congress as proper persons to be appointed as aforesaid:

As First Lieutenants: Frederick Rowllwagon, Peter Boyer, William Rice, Jacob Bower.

As Second Lieutenants: George Hawbecker, John Laudenberg, George Schaeffer, Frederick Yeiser.

As Ensigns: John Weidman, Christian Helm, Jacob Cramer, Christian Godfried Swartz.

The following Representation was this day drawn up, approved, and copies directed to be sent to the Committees of Inspection and Observation of the different Counties of this State:

Whereas the Assembly, in one of their late Sessions, did authorize and direct the Committees of Inspection and Observation to collect all the Arms from Non-Associators within the Province, which, there is great reason to believe, has not in many places been executed with sufficient care and diligence: And as there is a pressing and immediate necessity of arming all the Associators in the Province, our lives, our fortunes, and liberties depending: probably on the efforts made this campaign; the respective Committees of Inspection and Observation are reminded of this important part of their duty; and the Committee of Safety most earnestly recommend to them a vigorous exertion of all their power to accomplish the views and intentions of the Assembly in this respect.

In Committee of Safety, July 13, 1776.

Present: George Clymer, Alexander Wilcocks, Owen Biddle, Joseph Parker, Samuel Morris.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of John Cobourne, for £250, which is directed to be charged to his Account.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, July 15, 1776.

Present: James Mease, Chairman, George Clymer, David Rittenhouse, Samuel Morris, Samuel Howell, Joseph Parker, John Nixon, George Ross.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver to Colonel George Ross fifteen Rifles, for the use of his Battalion of Associators, taking receipts for the same.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Doctor Harris, for £100, to be charged to his Account, for manufacturing Gunpowder.

At a Board held yesterday evening at the Coffee-House, the following Resolve was entered into:

Resolved, That Mr. Towers be directed to put up in boxes one hundred thousand Musket Cartridges, to be sent to Jersey, agreeably to a requisition of Congress, to be replaced immediately by the Marine Committee.

Resolved, That no person at present employed in any branch of the manufactory of Small Arms should be suffered to leave that necessary business, and every officer of the Militia is requested to pay proper attention to this resolve.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Messrs. Wilcocks, De Haven, and Peters, for £500, to be charged to their Account.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Samuel Morris, Esq., for £650, towards the payment of Timber for Chevaux-de-Frise at Billingsport.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Robert Smith, for £500, to be charged to his account, for building Chevaux-de-Frise, &c., at Billingsport.

Abraham Marshall having applied to this Board for leave to resign his commission as Captain of a Company in the Musket Battalion in the service of this Province,

Resolved, That the said Abraham Marshall have leave to resign.

Resolved, That Mr. Joseph McClellan, at present a Lieutenant in the Battalion of Musketry, be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in said Battalion, in the room of Captain Marshall, resigned.

Resolved, That Mr. James Lang, at present an Ensign in the Musket Battalion, be, and he is hereby, appointed a Lieutenant in said Battalion, in the room of Joseph McClellan, promoted.

This Board being informed that Mr. John Baker, of Nor-rington, has a number of Provincial Fire-Arms in his possession, by order of the Board he was directed to deliver them to Colonel Hill, taking a receipt for the same.

Ordered, That the Commissary inquire into the value of the Musket lost by Jasper Carpenter, in the service, and supply him with one of equal value out of the publick store.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Benjamin Wetherby, for £50, being for the payment of a House purchased of him, on the Land purchased for account of Congress for erecting Fortifications at Billingsport, which sum is directed to be charged to account of Congress.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Captain James Sterling, for $100, being towards the payment of the expenses of thirteen Men, applied for as an escort to the Prisoners from Burlington, going, by order of Congress, to Yorktown, in this Province.

Resolved, That, agreeable to the request of General Roberdeau, the thirteen Men that go as a Guard with the party under the command of Captain Sterling, with the Prisoners from Burlington, be allowed Horses at the expense of the Continent.

By order of the Board, Reuben Hains was directed to furnish Jacob Miers with ten shilling Beer, as he may want it.

In pursuance of a requisition from Congress to this Committee, to order all the British Officers prisoners in this city, immediately to the respective places of their destination,

Resolved, That the said Officers be required to leave this city within twenty-four hours, and repair straightway to the places where they are ordered to reside; and that a copy of this resolve be served on each of them, to the end it may be strictly complied with.

Whereas the Assembly of this Province did, in a former Session, resolve "That if any Associator called into actual service shall have a family not of ability to maintain themselves in his absence, the Overseers of the Poor, with the concurrence of one Justice of the Peace of the City or County where such Associator did reside, shall immediately make provision, by way of out-pension, for the maintenance of such family; and a true and proper account being kept thereof, shall be returned to the Assembly, in order that the same may be made a Provincial expense, and paid accordingly;" and as it is the opinion of this Committee that the funds of the said Overseers will prove greatly insufficient whenever any considerable number of Associators shall be drawn into actual service, and that the administering to the wants of such families by the hands of the Overseers will not be satisfactory to the Associators, or be likely to answer the good ends proposed,

Therefore, Resolved, That this Committee will, out of the funds of which they have the disposition, make such provision as shall be thought necessary to answer the said purposes, and that it be recommended to the Committees of Inspection and Observation of the City of Philadelphia and the several Counties in the Province, to nominate and appoint a proper number of judicious persons, residing in the said City and Counties respectively, to distribute to such distressed families the allowance they shall judge reasonable; and that the said Committees be empowered to draw, as they shall see occasion, on this Board, for the necessary sums of money, to be by them lodged in the hands of the persons so nominated and appointed, to be applied as is above directed; the said Committees to return accounts to this Board of the expenditure of the same.

Resolved, That the above be published in the different Newspapers of this City.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Mr. Allan McDonald, for £7 10s., being so much allowed for taking him and his son to Reading, which is directed to be charged to account of Congress, they being two of the North-Carolina prisoners released from confinement by order of Congress.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on Michael Hillegas, Esq., in favour of Colonel Samuel Atlee, for the use of the Battalion under his command, for £600.

The families who have Leaden Window or Clock Weights are earnestly requested to give them up immediately to the persons appointed to collect them. Such families may be assured that they will be supplied as soon as possible with Weights of Iron, and it is hoped the trifling inconvenience of being for a few days without them will not be put in competition with the danger that may arise to this country from the want of a sufficient quantity of Lead for our defence.

It being recommended to this Committee by the Convention to take the necessary steps respecting the Guard directed by Congress to be kept in this City:

Resolved, That the four Companies of Militia in this City and Liberties detained by General Roberdeau as Guards for this City, viz: Captain Smyther's of the First Battalion, Captain Peters's of the Second, Captain Wharton's of the Third, and the Company late commanded by Captain Burkhard of the Fourth, be required to attend their duty regularly and punctually under the orders and command of Captain Peters. And the Commanding Officers of the said Companies are required to enroll into the same all such Associators as, from particular circumstances, cannot march with the Militia now called into service for the Flying-Camp. And all such Associators are earnestly exhorted to enroll themselves in some one of the said Companies for this necessary and important service, in which they are to continue during the absence of the Companies to which they respectively belong.

Resolved, That the baggage taken on board the Transport, and now in the care of Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary, be valued by some indifferent person, and such part of it as is needful for the publick service be delivered to Clement Biddle, Deputy Quartermaster-General, on his order or application for that purpose.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, July 18, 1776.

Present: James Biddle, Chairman, Michael Hillegas, James Mease, Samuel Howell, George Gray, Samuel Morris, Jun., James Parker.

WM. GOVETT, Secretary.

Council of Safety Chamber, July 24, 1776.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Owen Biddle, James Cannon, Joseph Blewer, Frederick Kuhl, Colonel John Bull, and Timothy Matlack, a quorum of gentlemen appointed by the Convention of the State of Pennsylvania, and George Ross, Esq., Vice-President of Convention.

The following Resolution of Convention was read:

"In Convention for the State of Pennsylvania,
July 24, 1776, A. M. }

"Resolved, That the Members of the Council of Safety, before they enter upon the execution of their office, shall take and subscribe the following Oath or Affirmation, viz:

"I, , do declare that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain, and that I will, steadily and firmly, at all times, promote the most effectual means, according to the best of my skill and knowledge, to oppose the tyrannical proceedings of the King and Parliament of Great Britain against the American States, and that I will, according to the best of my judgment, execute with fidelity the trust reposed in me as a Member of the Council of Safety."

"And that the Vice-President of this Convention administer the said oath or affirmation to such a number of the said Council of Safety as may be sufficient to make a quorum, and then that the President of the said Board for the time being qualify the rest."

"JOHN MORRIS, Secretary."

Thereupon the said Declaration was taken and subscribed accordingly, and Mr. Ross withdrew.

Mr. Rittenhouse was requested to take the Chair for the day.

Samuel Morris, Sen., Esq., appeared and took the qualification directed by the Convention.

Dr. Thomas Young, of Philadelphia Rifle Battalion, laid an Account before the Board for necessities supplied by him for the said Battalion, amounting to £12 19s. 5d., and certified by William Shippen, Jun., Surgeon-General and Director of the Hospital.

Ordered, That Michael Hillegas, Esq., be requested to pay the said Account, and charge it to Congress.

It being represented to this Board that a number of Colonel Miles's men were sick in the Barracks, and stood in need of better accommodations and necessities for their recovery,

Resolved, That Dr. Thomas Parke be directed to attend them, and have the necessary provision for their accommodation made.

Resolved, That Captain Peters be authorized to have the stage in the State-House yard fitted up for the accommodation of the Guard, and that he provide a sufficient number of Camp-Kettles for their use.

On motion, Agreed, That an order be issued to Thomas Palmer to deliver Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary of Stores, the seventeen Rifles, and to Mr. Balwin to deliver Mr. Towers eight Rifles, and that Mr. Towers deliver them to Captain John Douglass.

Resolved, That Colonel Bull be empowered to procure sixty Pikes and a sufficient number of Tomahawks for the use of the Battalion, and that the arms of his Battalion be repaired at the Provincial Factory.

In Council of Safety, July 24, 1776, P. M.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Owen Biddle, James Cannon, Frederick Kuhl, Edward Bartholomew, Timothy Matlack, John Bull.

A Letter from the Committee of Berks County was laid before the Board; and the same being considered, and it being therein represented to the Board that some misrepresentation of the intention of Congress has arisen among the Associators of this State and the Officers who were appointed to form the Flying-Camp, with respect to the march and arrangement of the Associators and Militia who were to compose the said Camp; and in order that it may be better understood, it is

Resolved, That all the Militia who may be furnished and equipped agreeable to the Resolve of Congress, do march to such place as they have been respectively ordered by Congress; and that the persons who have been appointed Captains in the Flying-Camp and have not enlisted twenty-five men for the service, do return them to their respective corps of Associators to which they formerly belonged, and continue with them; the appointment of the Officers for the Flying-Camp still to continue, and the men already enlisted to be considered as bound by their enlistment, and to be continued in service when the Militia may be permitted to return, and subject to the further orders of the Convention or of this Board. And it is further recommended that those Companies which have been raised to form the Flying-Camp, which already consist of twenty-five Privates and upwards, do immediately proceed to Trenton or Brunswick, as heretofore directed.

Resolved, That this Board will allow the Officers who were appointed to command the Flying-Camp all such reasonable expenses as have accrued in the recruiting service.

The following Letter was wrote to the Committee of Berks County, and signed by the Chairman:

"GENTLEMEN: Your Letter of the 22d instant to the Hon. Benjamin Franklin, Esq., President of the Convention, was referred by the honourable Convention to the Council of Safety. They must acknowledge the laudable zeal with which your Committee has at all times carried into execution the recommendation of such powers acted under the people, but particularly your ready and cheerful obedience to the ordinance of Convention for disarming of Non-Associators. The embarrassments you labour under in consequence of resolves of Congress, and others, which, from the confused state of the times, appeared somewhat contradictory, appear to be excusable. In order to render the intention of Congress more plain and comprehensive, and to answer their expectations, the Council of Safety have enclosed you their Resolution upon that matter, requesting that you will take such measures to publish it through your district as will be most effectual and expeditious, and that you would encourage the Associators to turn out upon this very important emergency."

"By order of the Council of Safety."

In Council of Safety, July 25, 1776.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Chairman, Timothy Matlack, Samuel Morris, Sen., Joseph Blewer, Owen Biddle, Frederick Kuhl, James Cannon, B. Bartholomew, John Moore.

Mr. Bartholomew and Mr. Moore took and subscribed the qualification directed by Convention.

Moved and Agreed, That Jacob S. Howell be appointed Secretary to this Board until further order be taken herein.

Henry Keppile appeared, and took and subscribed the qualification directed by Convention.

A Resolve of Convention was read, which is as follows:

"In Convention for the State of Pennsylvania,
July 24, 1776, A. M. }

On motion, Resolved, That the two Companies of fifty men each now raising by the Committee of Westmoreland, for the defence of the frontiers, be considered as Militia in actual service from the time of their enlistment to the 5th day of August next; and also, that it be referred to the Council of Safety to consider whether they will keep the same in pay until the 15th day of September next, provided the officers or any of them should not be sooner appointed in, or any of the men before that time enter into the Continental Battalion now to be raised in Bedford and Westmoreland Counties.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"JOHN MORRIS, Secretary."

The above being considered,

Resolved, That the said two Companies be continued in pay until the 15th of September next, and that application be made to Congress to defray the expense thereof.

Mr. Wharton appeared, and took and subscribed the qualification directed by Convention.

In Council of Safety, July 26, 1776.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Chairman, Samuel Morris, Sen., Frederick Kuhl, Timothy Matlack, Joseph Blewer, James Cannon, Henry Keppely, Owen Biddle, Thomas Wharton.

Mr. Rittenhouse and Mr. Morris were appointed to wait on Mr. Samuel Howell and Mr. Samuel Morris, Jun., to know whether they will serve in this Council; who report, that they both decline serving for the present.

A Petition was presented from Charles Lawrence, William Watkins, and Robert Tatnall, Captains of Guard Boats stationed at Darby Creek, setting forth the inconvenience of taking their Provisions from the Fort, and praying that Mr. Sketchly Morton may be appointed to supply them in future.

Ordered, That Mr. Sketchly Morton do supply the said Boats with Provisions until further orders.

Two Orders were drawn on Michael Hillegas, Esq., in favour of Benjamin Davis—one for £79 15s. for Colours, Drums, &c., supplied Colonel Miles's Battalion; the other for £60 11s. 9d., for Colours and Drums supplied Colonel Atlee's Battalion.

An Order was drawn on M. Hillegas, Esq., in favour of John Messersmith for £12 10s.

On a Petition from John Peal, Boatswain of the Ranger, setting forth that he was in confinement, and prays to be released and removed to another boat, Ordered, That a Court-Martial be held on the said Peal, and a Court of Inquiry on the officer who confined him, as soon as possible, and report the sentence to this Board.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was directed to deliver Colonel Robert Lewis fifty Muskets and Bayonets.

In consequence of an application made by Daniel King to have Captain Loxley returned to this city, the following Letter was wrote to General Roberdeau, signed by the Chairman:

"SIR: As you are not unacquainted with the resolutions of the late Committee of Safety to have a number of brass field-pieces cast, and the necessity which gave rise to it, it will be needless to enlarge thereon; but as the Board have not had the success they wish in their attempt to cast iron cannon, it becomes more necessary for this Board to promote and forward the said intention to the utmost of their power; but the absence of Captain Loxley with his artillery company, who has the chief management and superintendence of the foundry, has occasioned almost the entire stoppage of that important business. The Council of Safety have therefore to request you to return Captain Loxley to the cannon foundry, as he will be likely to serve his country more effectually in that station than any other. A day's delay in this business may be attended with the most serious consequences; we do therefore hope it will be done as soon as possible."

In Council of Safety, July 27, 1776.

Present: Samuel Morris, Chairman, David Rittenhouse, Frederick Kuhl, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Joseph Blewer, Owen Biddle, Henry Kepple, James Cannon, Colonel John Bull.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers was ordered to deliver to Colonel Porter seven Muskets, taking his receipt.

Resolved, That John Maxwell Nesbitt, Esq., be appointed Treasurer to this Board, and that he enter into bond with two respectable Freeholders for £5,000, for the faithful discharge of his office.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Marshall Edwards for £2 5s.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Edward Bartholomew, for £500, towards Haversacks, &c., purchased for the use of the Militia, and directed the same to be charged to his Account.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers was ordered to deliver Colonel Clement Biddle, Deputy Quartermaster-General, or his Assistants here, two tons of Lead and two tons of Powder, made into Cartridges, for the use of the Army under General Mercer; to be charged to Congress.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Colonel George Ross, for £63 16s., being for Arms purchased for the use of his Battalion; to be charged to his Account.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers was ordered to deliver Peter Dehaven & Co., one hundred weight of Brass, for the use of the Gun Factory.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Peter Dehaven & Co., for £500, for the use of the Gun Factory.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on Michael Hillegas, Esq., Treasurer of the Province, in favour of John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer to this Board, for £10,000, to be charged to Mr. Nesbitt's Account.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers was ordered to deliver Colonel Thomas Smith and the other Members of Convention, for Bedford County, five hundred weight of Powder and half a ton of Lead, for the use of the Associators, to be delivered to the Committee of Inspection for said County, and by them distributed.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers was ordered to deliver Major Swoop forty Muskets for the use of the First Battalion of York County, and eight for the use of the Third Battalion of said County.

Mr. Wharton, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Kepple, being a Committee to examine the Accounts of Jos. Fox, Esq., do report that they have inspected said Accounts and vouchers, and find the same right.

In Council of Safety, July 29, 1776, P. M.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Chairman, Thomas Wharton, Jun., James Cannon, Frederick Kuhl, Joseph Blewer, Samuel Morris, Sen., H. Kepple, Jun., John Moore, Owen Biddle, Timothy Matlack, John Weitzel.

By order of the Board, Robert Towers was directed to deliver Major Bell twenty stand of Arms for the use of Colonel Montgomery's Battalion.

Mr. John Weitzel appeared, and took and subscribed the qualification directed by Convention.

On motion, Resolved, That the Resolve of the 15th instant, July, of the late Committee of Safety, recommending to the Committee of Inspection and Observation of this City and the several County Committees of this Province, to nominate and appoint a proper number of judicious persons residing in the said City and Counties, respectively, to distribute to distressed families, whose husbands are now in actual service, the allowance they may think reasonable; and that the said Committees be empowered to draw, as they shall see occasion, on the Board for the necessary sums of money, to be by them lodged in the hands of the persons so nominated, to be applied as above directed, the said Committee to return accounts to this Board of the expenditure of the same, be and hereby is agreed to and confirmed.

Ordered, That Messrs. Peter Dehaven & Co. do in future superintend the contract made by Joseph Fox, Esq., with John Nicholson, for Arms.

By order of the Board, Captain William Richards was directed to deliver Mr. John Colburn two new Cables and as much small rigging as he may want for sinking the pier for fixing a Boom at Fort Island.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary of Stores, was directed to deliver Mr. Thomas Hazlewood two hundred pounds Brimstone for the use of the Fire-Rafts.

Ordered, That Mr. Morris, Mr. Wharton, and Mr. Kepple, be a Committee to inspect and pass Accounts relative to the Flying-Camp and Militia.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was directed to deliver Colonel James Moore, of Chester County, fifty Muskets, for the use of his Battalion.

Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. Kuhl, and Mr. Biddle, be a Committee to superintend the work at Fort Island, and to audit and settle the Accounts respecting the same.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Captain John Hazlewood, or his son, for £20, to be charged to Captain Hazlewood's Account.

“In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, July 31, 1776.

“To Captain RICHARD PETERS, or the Officer of Guard:

“SIR: You are directed forthwith to seize the persons of John Hale and Martha Ash, as persons charged upon oath with a conspiracy against the State, and confine them, one in the Jail and the other in the Workhouse of this City, and take proper care that they do not converse with each other.

“By order of the Council of Safety:

“DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Chairman.”

“State of PENNSYLVANIA, ss.

“You are authorized and required to seize the bodies of Arthur Thomas, his two sons, Arthur Thomas and John Thomas, or either of them, and to secure their papers, they standing suspected, by evidence taken on oath, of having conspired against the State; and in so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

“By order of the Council of Safety:

“To Joseph M. Lane, present.”

In Council of Safety, July 31, 1776, P. M.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Chairman, Timothy Matlack, James Cannon, Owen Biddle, John Weitzel, Henry Keppele, Jun., Samuel Morris, Sen., Joseph Blewer.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary, was desired to deliver to Mr. Robert Martin and others, Delegates in Convention for Northumberland County, seven hundred and fifty weight of Powder, and fifteen hundred weight of Lead, to be delivered to the Committee of Inspection for that County, and by them distributed to the Militia in such quantities as they may stand in need of for the defence of said County.

Deposition of JOHN WALKER.

“On the 31st day of July, 1776, before the Council of Safety of the State of Pennsylvania, came John Walker, of the City of Philadelphia, and being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, did depose and say, that about six or eight days after the time of Colonel Kirkland's escape from the Jail, John Hale ordered this deponent to fill a pair of new saddle-bags with oats, and John Hale himself put into the saddle-bags a bottle; (which this deponent apprehended to be a bottle of brandy or other spirits,) and put a cloth over it; that the saddle-bags, thus filled, were put on a horse belonging to John Hale, and the horse delivered to a son of Arthur Thomas, and the horse was in the evening, about four or five o'clock, taken away by Mr. Thomas's oldest apprentice; that some time afterwards, the deponent heard Arthur Thomas, Jr., say, that he had assisted Colonel Kirkland in his escape; and also that the deponent did hear the said Arthur Thomas, Jr., say to John Hale, that Colonel Kirkland rode the first night after his escape forty miles to the house of a man in New-Jersey, who, Mr. Thomas said, had been taken up the day before for having entertained a soldier at his house; that Mr. Kirkland made his escape, through some surprise, out of a window; that Mr. Kirkland was lost for several days, and when he was found he did not know the person who found him, and drew his knife, charging him to keep off, but that on his giving the watchword, Kirkland went with him; that Colonel Kirkland had attempted to go on board the man-of-war by means of a boat, but that the man-of-war was gone too far off, and the boat was obliged to return; that he also heard the said Arthur Thomas tell Mr. Hale that Captain Bauger refused to break his word of honour, which he had pledged for the liberty he enjoyed; that the said Thomas damned him for talking of honour to or among thieves and rogues; and that the said Arthur Thomas said to Mr. Hale, that it was not the thing for him (meaning Captain Bauser) not to go off after the trouble they had taken to send him a horse; that Mrs. Ash told this deponent that she had heard one of the *Thomas*es say to Mr. Hale that he (Mr. Thomas) had furnished Colonel Kirkland with a rope for the purpose of making his escape from jail; that this deponent understood the horse above-mentioned was intended for the use of Colonel Kirkland to facilitate his escape; and further this deponent saith not.

"JOHN WALKER, his X mark."

Martha Ash was brought before the Board by order, and being examined, made and subscribed the following Deposition:

"In Council of Safety for the State of Pennsylvania.

"PENNSYLVANIA, ss:

"On the 31st day of July, 1776, appeared personally before the Council of Safety for the said State Martha Ash, who, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, did depose and say, that some time after the escape of Colonel Kirkland she heard one of Arthur Thomas's sons inform John Hale that he had assisted Colonel Kirkland with a ladder of rope to make his escape from the Jail, but which of the said Thomas's sons it was she cannot recollect; and she doth further depose and say, that some time after the escape a boy returned a horse to the said Hale, which had been obtained from him, with a pair of saddlebags that contained some oats and biscuit, and that this deponent believed that the said Kirkland made his escape with the same horse; that this deponent mentioned such her suspicion to the said Hale, who replied, that he believed he had.

MARTHA ASH.

In Council of Safety, August 1, 1776.

Present: Samuel Morris, Chairman, David Rittenhouse, Henry Keppeler, Jun., Fred. Kuhl, Owen Biddle, James Cannon, Timothy Matlack, Joseph Blewer, John Moore, John Bull, Thos. Wharton, Sen.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary, was desired to deliver to Mr. Henry Wynkoop, of Bucks County, a quarter cask of Powder, to be by him delivered to the Associators as he shall see convenient.

Moved, That Jacob Barge be requested to attend this Board to-morrow morning at seven o'clock; otherwise Mary Hutton may remove her goods to such place as she may think proper within the city, &c., subject to the claims of rent as if the same were not removed.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Council of Safety that the Rules and Regulations of the late House of Assembly respecting the Associators ought to be complied with, and that no Company or Companies ought to be permitted to leave a Battalion so as to leave less than six Companies in a Battalion, nor be permitted to leave their respective Battalions until at least six Companies of Supernumeraries can agree to form a new Battalion.

By order of the Board, John Maxwell Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, was directed to pay an Order drawn on this Board by James Pollock and Samuel Laird, Commissioners of Cumberland County, in favour of John Pollock, for £600, towards purchasing Muskets; to be charged to their Account.

By order of the Board, Mr. R. Towers, Commissary, was desired to deliver to Daniel King one of the old Cannon in the State-House yard to bore.

By order of the Board, Commodore Davison was desired to deliver to Colonel Matlack twelve Rifles from on board the ship Montgomery.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was directed to deliver Colonel Clement Biddle, Deputy Quartermaster-General, or his Assistants here, one ton of Grape Shot and one ton of Buck Shot, to be forwarded to the camp in Jersey, to be charged to Congress.

Colonel James Moore, of Chester County, made application for fifty Bayonets or Tomahawks, thirty Hatchets, one hundred Screws, and one hundred Worms, for the use of the Battalion. Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary, was desired to supply Colonel Moore with the above articles, taking his receipt.

By order of the Board, Joseph Ferree, Esq., of German-town, was desired to deliver to Mr. Carpenter Wharton twenty bushels of the Salt stored under his direction, on Mr. Wharton's producing John M. Nesbitt, Esq.'s, certificate of his having accounted with him for the same, at 7s. 6d. per bushel for the Salt, and 6d. per bushel for carriage and storage.

By order of the Board, John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, was desired to pay to Colonel Kirkbride, £138 15s. 6d., for seventy-two Arms purchased for the use of his Battalion.

Resolved, That an application be made to Congress for eleven hundred stand of Arms for the service of the Flying-Camp.

A Letter was received from Captain John Hamilton, of the Congress, and Captain James Montgomery, of the Chatham, armed-boats, resigning their commissions in the service of this State, as they expected to serve in a larger sphere of action, whereby they may have an opportunity of rendering their country some more essential service than they have any prospect of here.

Therefore, Resolved, That their resignations be accepted; and they are hereby discharged from the service of this State.

The Board then adjourned till three o'clock, afternoon, when the following Members met:

Samuel Morris, Sen., Chairman, James Cannon, David Rittenhouse, John Moore, Frederick Kuhl, Owen Biddle, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Timothy Matlack, Joseph Blewer, Henry Keppeler, Jun., John Bull.

Ordered, That Colonel Matlack be desired to make the necessary inquiry of Congress respecting the authority this Board has over the State Prison, &c.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Jacob Miers, for £24 13s. 2½d., for men's wages, for work done at Fort Island, for which he is to be accountable to the workmen, and the sum charged to his Account.

By order of the Board, Joseph Ferree, Esq., of German-town, was desired to deliver to Henry Huber, one ton of Saltpetre out of the stores in German-town under his direction.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was desired to deliver Henry Huber three hundred weight of Sulphur; to be charged to Congress.

In Council of Safety, August 2, 1776.

Present: Thomas Wharton, Junior, Chairman, James Cannon, Timothy Matlack, John Weitzel, Owen Biddle, Frederick Kuhl, John Moore, John Bull, H. Keppeler, Jun., Samuel Morris, Sen., David Rittenhouse.

The following Accounts were passed, and J. M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, desired to pay them:

By order of the Board, the following Warrant was issued for apprehending John Thomas and Arthur Thomas, Jun.:

"In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, August 2, 1776.

"SIR: You are hereby authorized, empowered, and required, to go in search of, and seize, the persons of John Thomas and Arthur Thomas, Jun., or either of them, and to deliver them to the keeper of the State Prison of the city of Philadelphia; and make return to this Council; and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

"By order of the Council:

"THOS. WHARTON, Jun., Chairman.

"To Mr. Mains."

A Warrant was issued for apprehending John Hatton, Sen., and John Hatton, Jun., in form following:

"In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, August 2, 1776.

"SIR: You are hereby directed to go to the Committee of Inspection of Salem County, in the State of New-Jersey, and to apply to them for proper powers and assistance to go in search of, and take, the persons of John Hatton, Sen., and John Hatton, Jun., and bring them before the Council, unless the Committee of Inspection should object to their being brought out of that State; in such case you are to leave them in the custody of the said Committee, they being charged with treasonable practices against the States of America. And you are further desired to use your best endeavours to seize Colonel Kirkland, whom this Board has reason to suspect is still in Jersey; and in so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

"By order of the Council:

"THOS. WHARTON, Jun., Chairman.

"To Mr. James Read."

"N. B. The more secrecy you observe, the more likely to effect your purpose."

With the above Warrant the following Letter was sent to the Committee of Inspection of Salem County:

"GENTLEMEN: In the course of our inquiry into the case of Kirkland's escape from the jail of the city, evidence appears against John Hatton, of your County, and his son, sufficient to induce us to request you will exert your utmost endeavours to secure them. We have sent you an officer in whom we can confide, who will assist in taking him, and also bring him to this city, if you shall think it proper to send him here.

"We apprehend that Colonel Kirkland is still in your County, somewhere about Morris's River, as it appears probable, from circumstances given in evidence before us, that he failed in his attempt to get on board of the men-of-war. We make no doubt but that you will use every means in your power to secure a man so dangerous to the liberty of this country. The reward which is offered for taking him is considerable, and perhaps may excite some, who would not from other motives, to endeavour by all means to secure him. From your attachment to the cause of liberty, we expect exertions of a more extended kind, and on more generous principles, and firmly hope your endeavours will meet with success in securing two men who are enemies to our country and dangerous spies upon our actions.

"By order of the Council:

"THOS. WHARTON, Jun., Chairman."

An Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, for £10, in favour of Henry Huber, Powder-Maker; to be charged to his Account.

By order of the Board, Abm. Mason was directed to deliver to Thomas Hazelwood as much old Sail-cloth as he may want to cover Fire-rafts.

By order of the Board, an Order was drawn on John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Peter Dehaven & Co., for £500; to be charged to their Account.

By order of the Board, John Hanlon was directed to deliver Colonel Paschal, of Philadelphia County, seventeen Rifles, which Mr. Dehaven was desired to repair.

Mr. John Hubly appeared, took and subscribed the qualification directed by Convention.

Resolved, That an Order be drawn on Mr. Nesbitt, in favour of Mr. Lodowick Lowman, for £200, to be delivered to the Committee of Inspection and Observation of Lancaster County, and by them distributed to the Wives and Families of poor Associators, who are now in actual service; and an Order was drawn accordingly.

A Letter was received from John McKinley, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Newcastle County, dated August 2, 1776, from Colonel Bedford, informing this Board that they had sent a certain Alexander Morris to this city, under Colonel Bedford's care, he being a person strongly suspected of practices inimical to the States of America. Whereupon the Board ordered the said Maurice to be committed to the State Prison.

The following Order was sent to Colonel Bedford for that purpose:

"In Council of Safety, August 5, 1776.

"SIR: You are hereby required and empowered to send the body of Alexander Maurice, in your custody, to the State Jail in the city, he being inimical to the American States, for which he is to answer; and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant. And the said Jailer is hereby required to receive the body of the said Alexander Maurice, and keep him in safe custody until properly discharged.

"By order of the Council:

"DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Chairman.

"To Colonel Bedford, at the Barracks."

The following Letter was sent to the Delegates of this State in Congress:

"In Council of Safety, August 5, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: The Militia of this State having been all ordered out by the honourable Congress, this Board finds it impossible to supply them with arms as fast as they come in, and they seem uneasy at being detained. You will oblige this Board by applying to Congress on behalf of this Board for as many of the arms lately brought in as they possibly can spare, to be returned when the Militia is discharged, or as fast as they can be made by the workmen employed by this Board.

"By order of the Council:

"DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Chairman.

"To the Delegates in Congress for the State of Pennsylvania."

The Board adjourned till five o'clock, afternoon.

When the following Members met: David Rittenhouse, Chairman, Samuel Morris, Sen., Joseph Blewer, John Hubly, John Bull, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Frederick Kuhl, Owen Biddle, John Moore, James Cannon.

In consequence of a Warrant issued by this Board, Lieutenant James Read brought John Hatton; whereupon, the Board committed said Hatton to the State Prison, for examination.

"In Council of Safety.

"Whereupon, John Hatton, Sen., stands charged before the Council of Safety aforesaid, of practices inimical to the States of America; you are therefore hereby required and enjoined to receive into your custody the body of the said John Hatton, and him safely keep, until he be duly discharged by the said Council, or by order of Congress; and for your so doing, this shall be your warrant. Given under my hand this fifth day of August, 1776.

"By order of the Council:

"D. RITTENHOUSE, Chairman.

"To Mr. Robert Jewell, Keeper of the State Prison."

By order of the Board, Mr. R. Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Major Fullerton twenty-five stand of Arms for the use of Colonel James Crawford's Battalion, of Lancaster County, taking his receipt for the same.

In Council of Safety, August 6, 1776.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Chairman, John Moore, Owen Biddle, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Samuel Morris, John Bull, James Cannon, Frederick Kuhl, John Hubly, Joseph Blewer.

By order of the Board, the following Accounts were passed, and John Maxwell Nesbitt, Esq., directed to pay them, to wit:

James McClelland's Account, amounting to £2 12s.; to be charged to Congress.

Robert Thomson's Account, amounting to £2 6s. 8d.; to be charged to Congress.

Colonel James Moore's Account, amounting to £41 13s. 8d., for necessities for his Battalion.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary of Stores, was directed to deliver Colonel John Bull thirty-five stand of Arms, for the use of his Battalion, taking his receipt.

In consequence of a request of this Board to the Committees of Inspection and Observation of the different Counties to appoint suitable persons to hear the complaints of the Families of those Associators that have gone to Camp, and to supply them with such necessities as they may stand in need of, the Committee of this City and Liberties have recommended the following gentlemen for that purpose, viz:

For the First Battalion: Isaac Coats, William Moulder, Jacob Schriener.

For the Second Battalion: Moses Bartram, Gasper Guyer, Ephraim Bonham.

For the Third Battalion: George Meade, Richard De-mois, Robert Bailly.

For the Fourth Battalion: George Greene, Frederick Dushon, Peter Knight.

For the Fifth Battalion: John Hart, John Tittermary, William Drewry.

Resolved, therefore, That they be, and are hereby appointed accordingly.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was directed to deliver Colonel James Smith, of York County, twenty-four stand of Arms, for the use of Captain McDonald's Company, in his Battalion, taking his receipt.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was directed to deliver Colonel Richard Thomas, of Chester County, one hundred stand of Arms, for the use of his Battalion, taking his receipt.

The Board proceeded to the choice of a President and Vice-President, by ballot; when Mr. Thomas Wharton, Jun., was chosen President, and Mr. David Rittenhouse, Vice-President; and Mr. Wharton took the chair accordingly.

Resolved, That the Town of Lancaster shall be supplied with sixty stand of Arms, as soon as it is in the power of this Council.

Resolved, That twenty-three bundles of Blankets, which Colonel Miles left at Chester, in the Publick Stores, under the care of Mr. Nicholas Fairlamb, be delivered to Clement Biddle, D. Q. M. G. of the Flying-Camp, for the use of the Pennsylvanians in New-Jersey, to be forwarded to him by his Assistant immediately.

In Council of Safety, August 7, 1776.

Present: Thomas Wharton, Jun., President, David Rittenhouse, Vice-President, Samuel Morris, Frederick Kuhl, James Cannon, Henry Wynkoop, Owen Biddle, John Hubly, Timothy Matlack, Joseph Blewer, John Bull.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Colonel Matthew Dill, of York County, twenty-three stand of Arms, for the use of his Battalion, taking his receipt. Signed by Mr. S. Morris.

By order of the Board, Mr. R. Towers was directed to deliver Colonel James Moore, of Chester County, thirty stand of Arms, for the use of his Battalion, taking his receipt.

By order of the Board, an order was drawn on J. M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Colonel Thomas Smith, for £13 7s. 6d., for carriage of Ammunition to Bedford County.

By order of the Board, Mr. R. Towers was directed to deliver Major Fullerton twenty stand of Arms, for the use of Colonel Crawford's Battalion, of Lancaster County, taking his receipt.

Resolved, That the Mustermaster do pass Colonel Richard Thomas's Battalion of Chester County, with the present number of Officers and Men.

By order of the Board, an order was drawn on Mr. J. M. Nesbitt, Esq., Treasurer, in favour of Mr. John Britton, for £662 10s., being for fifty thousand feet of three-inch Plank, purchased by order of the late Committee of Safety, per resolve of the 21st June last, for the Fortification at Billingsport; to charge to Congress.

An application from Colonel Richard Thomas, of Chester County, for Accoutrements, was laid before the Board.

Mr. Robert Towers was ordered to supply him, if in his possession; if not, Colonel Thomas was desired to purchase them, and bring his Account to this Board.

By order of the Board, Mr. Robert Towers was directed to deliver sixty stand of Arms for the use of his Battalion.

Resolved, That so many Workmen, employed by Colonel William Devees, as will keep one fire at work in the making Gun-Scalps for the publick service, be detained from marching to Camp in New-Jersey.

Resolved, That the Deputy Quartermaster General's Assistants be authorized to quarter Troops in the several places of worship in this city, in turn, provided they cannot procure suitable Quarters elsewhere.

Ordered, That the said Assistants furnish the Wardens or Elders of the several places of worship with a copy of the above Resolve.

Resolved, That Colonel Matlack lay before the Convention the necessity of raising the Flying-Camp, and to request them to take the most effectual measures to encourage the same by allowing what may be esteemed a sufficient bounty.

As any delay to the marching of the Associators of the State now in the city will be attended with great inconveniences to the publick service, be it therefore

Resolved, That Colonel John Bull be requested to examine into the state of all the Companies of the said Associators, and that all such as are sufficiently provided are hereby ordered to proceed forward to the Camp without delay.

By order of the Board, Captain William Richards was directed to deliver Mr. John Coburn what Rope he may have occasion for on account of the State.

By order of the Board, Mr. Wert was ordered to assist Mr. John Coburn with the Sloop under his command in any matters he may be required for the advantage of this State.

Resolved, That Mr. Owen Biddle be desired to procure the necessary Clothing for Colonel Atlee's Battalion, and forward them to him with all despatch.

Captain James Murry £6 6s., for Canteens, &c., for his Company, of Colonel Bird's Battalion, of Lancaster County; to be charged to the Colonel.

The Council having heard the complaints made against Commodore Samuel Davison, with the proofs brought to support them, and taking into consideration the situation of the Naval Armaments belonging to this State, are of opinion, that most of the charges made against the said Samuel Davison are frivolous, and discover a dangerous spirit of licentiousness amongst the other officers, inconsistent with the duty they owe their country, and not to be justified on military principles, which exacts a due obedience at all times to the orders of superiors. But as it appears to the Council that the officers of the fleet in general have not that respect for, nor confidence in, the said Samuel Davison which is absolutely necessary to give vigour and efficacy to the command, and that notwithstanding the known merit of said Davison, yet the charge of incompetency to so important a trust is not altogether without foundation: It is therefore Resolved, That the said Samuel Davison, Esq., be no longer continued in the command of the Naval Armament of this State, and he is accordingly dismissed from the same.

Resolved, That Captain Henry Dougherty be appointed to the command of the Galley building at Kensington by Mr. Williams, and that she be called the Delaware.

Resolved, That Captain John Rice be appointed to the command of the Galley called the Convention.

Agreeable to a Resolve of the honourable Congress and by direction of the Board, the following Commissions for Privateers were granted, viz:

To John Hamilton, of the Brig General Mifflin, of twelve carriage guns and ninety men, owned by John Cox, John Chaloner & Co.

To Charles Furgeson, commander of the Brig General Putnam, of twelve carriage guns and ninety men, owned by Matthew Irwin, Benjamin Harbeson & Co.

"In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, August 27, 1776.

"Fifty Dollars Reward.

"Whereas a dangerous riot was excited this day, at or near the barracks of this city, and at the same time a great violence and abuse offered to the family of Mr. Lawrence Fegan, whereby his wife was wounded, his house robbed, and his property destroyed to a great amount: In order to discourage such wicked and mischievous practices for the future, and to bring the offenders to condign punishment, the Council of Safety hereby offer a reward of fifty dollars to any person who shall apprehend and convict the ring-leaders and perpetrators of the above-mentioned riot and robbery.

"By order of the Council:

"DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Vice President."

Whereas this Council have received certain information that many persons within this Province, inimical to the liberties of America, have offered larger sums of the Bills of Credit emitted by the Congresses held at Hillsborough and Halifax, than at the rate of eight Shillings in exchange for Spanish milled Dollars; and also that many persons, equally disaffected, have asked and demanded in payment for articles of merchandise, higher prices when to be paid in said Bills of Credit than they have for the same articles when to be paid for in Proclamation Money, debenture Bills, or in Gold or Silver, with a manifest intention to depreciate and undervalue the said Dollar Bills of Credit, emitted for the express purpose of securing and defending the lives, liberties, and properties of the good people of this Province:

It is therefore Resolved, That the Committees of the several Counties and Towns in this Province do immediately call on every such person within their respective Towns and Counties, and on proper proof being made thereof, to cause such person or persons to render an inventory, on oath, of all and singular their Real and Personal Estate; and in case of neglect or refusal, they do direct the Commanding Officer of the County forthwith to cause such suspected person or persons to be apprehended and sent to this Board.

Whereas it appears that the Salt Works directed by the Congress to be established in this Province will not furnish a sufficient quantity of that necessary article for the consumption of the inhabitants thereof; and it being requisite that other Works be erected for that purpose, and Mr. Richard Blackledge being willing and desirous of undertaking a Salt Work, exclusive of the other Commissioners:

Resolved, That Mr. Richard Blackledge be allowed at the rate of 20s. per day for every day he shall attend the said Works himself, or by some skillful person, to commence from the time he shall begin to erect said Works.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to the said Richard Blackledge the sum of £500, to enable

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, July 15, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

It appearing to the Council that the Rev. George Micklejohn, of Orange County, has not, agreeable to the Resolve of the Provincial Congress, removed himself into the County of Perquimans, in that part of the said County on the south side of the river, which he ought to have done, in pursuance of the said resolve, within fourteen days after the passing thereof; for which disobedience,

It is Resolved, That the said George Micklejohn be immediately removed into the said County, at his own expense, in order to carry into execution the said resolve of Congress; and that the Commanding Officer of the Second Regiment of the County of Orange see this resolve carried into effect.

Resolved, That the following persons be appointed Commissioners, viz: Mr. Francis Brice, at the Town of Wilmington; Mr. John Green, at the Town of Newbern; Robert Hardy, Esq., at the Town of Edenton; Thomas Respass, Sen., Esq., at the Town of Bath: to purchase within their several districts Gunpowder, Lead, and Cannon Ball, Sail Duck, Osnaburghs, coarse Linens, coarse Cloths, Blankets, Shoes, and Leather, for the use of the Continental Troops stationed in this Province, and make a just return of the purchases made by them to this Council; and that each of the said Commissioners are hereby empowered to draw on either of the Treasurers for the sum of £1,000, first giving bond, with good and sufficient security, in the sum of £2,000, to the Hon. Samuel Johnston, Esq., President of the Congress, and his successors in office, for the faithful application of such moneys; and that they render a true and just account to the Provincial Congress; and also, that they produce to such Treasurer the bond, properly executed, before any money is advanced by him.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Tuesday, July 16, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Captain John Forster the sum of £500, for so much by him advanced for the use of the publick, to be accounted for in the settlement of his Accounts; and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Nicholas Long, Esq., Deputy Quartermaster-General, the sum of £600, for so much by him advanced for the use of the publick, to be accounted for in the settlement of his Accounts; and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

The Council adjourned to the Town of Halifax, in the County of Halifax.

Halifax, July 21, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

It appearing to the Council that there is an absolute necessity for placing in the hands of Matthew Lock, Esq., a sum of money, to pay off the Militia in the Salisbury Brigade,

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Matthew Lock, Esq., Paymaster to the Salisbury Brigade, the sum of £3,000, to be hereafter accounted for; and that they be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Matthew Lock, Esq., Paymaster to the Salisbury Brigade, a further sum of £2,000, to be hereafter accounted for; and that they be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That Mr. Robert Rowan or Mr. Peter Mallet, or either of them, their factors, agents, or clerks, at Cross Creek, do deliver to the Commissaries of the Salisbury District, three hundred bushels of Salt, such Commissaries first producing an order from under the hand of Brigadier-General Rutherford, before any of the said Salt is delivered to them.

Brigadier-General Person, one of the Members of the Council of Safety, appeared, and took his seat.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, July 22, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

The Continental Congress having, on the 4th day of July last, declared the Thirteen United Colonies free and independent States:

Resolved, That the Committees of the respective Towns and Counties in this Colony, on receiving the said Declaration, do cause the same to be proclaimed in the most publick manner, in order that the good people of this Colony may be fully informed thereof.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Tuesday, July 23, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Brigadier-General Person immediately furnish forth five hundred Men, properly armed and accoutred, from the Hillsborough Brigade, and that Colonel Joseph Taylor have the command of the same; and that he march with the Troops with all expedition to the Western frontiers, and join Brigadier-General Rutherford.

The Council being informed that William Miller and Andrew Wilson, (the former in close confinement, the latter on his parole,) in Halifax, are dangerous persons to the liberties of this country; and it being necessary that they should be immediately separated:

Resolved, That William Miller be sent to the County of Johnston on his parole, within three miles of the Court-House, and that he appear at the house of Mr. John Smith once every day; Andrew Wilson to the Town of Hillsborough, on his parole, within the limits of that Town; and that he appear once every day at the house of Mr. William Courtney; and that the Commanding Officer of the County of Halifax see this resolution faithfully carried into execution.

Resolved, That William Clarke, who was ordered by the Congress to remove himself to the Town of Nixonton, and remain on his parole within the limits of the said Town, have his parole extended to the County of Pasquotank, and there to remain, unless it shall be otherwise ordered by this Council or the Congress.

The Council received from James Pamplin, in three wagons from Virginia, two tons of Gunpowder and one barrel of Jesuits' Bark.

Resolved, That twelve hundred and twenty-two weight of Gunpowder be immediately sent off from this place for the District of Salisbury; that two hundred and twenty-two weight of which be left at Hillsborough, to replace that quantity sent by Doctor Burk to General Rutherford; the remaining one thousand weight to be forwarded by General Person to the District of Salisbury; and that four hundred weight be also sent to Hillsborough, for the use of that District, to be disposed of as Brigadier-General Person may direct.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Wednesday, July 24, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Thursday, July 25, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Whereas the Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, at Philadelphia, on the 4th day of July last, declared the Thirteen United Colonies free and independent States, and that the good people thereof were absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown; and that the said Declaration renders the Test, as directed to be subscribed by the late Congress at Halifax, improper and nugatory:

Resolved, That a Test, as follows, be substituted in lieu thereof, and subscribed by the Members of this Board:

We, the subscribers, do solemnly profess, testify, and declare, that we do absolutely believe that neither the Parliament of Great Britain, nor any member or constituent branch thereof, hath a right to impose taxes upon these Colonies, to regulate the internal police thereof; and that all attempts, by fraud or force, to establish and exercise such claims and powers are violations of the peace and security of the people, and ought to be resisted to the utmost; and that the people of this Province, singly and collectively, are bound by the Acts and Resolutions of the Continental and Provincial Congresses, because in both they are freely represented by persons chosen by themselves; and we do solemnly and sincerely promise and engage, under the sanction of virtue, honour, and the sacred love of liberty and our country, to maintain and support all and every the Acts, Resolutions, and Regulations, of the said Continental and Provincial Congresses, to the utmost of our power and abilities. In testimony whereof, we have hereto set our hands, at Halifax, this 24th day of July, 1776.

CORNS. HARNETT,	JOHN SIMPSON,
WILLIE JONES,	JOS. JNO. WILLIAMS,
THOS. PERSON,	THOS. JONES,
WHITMILL HILL,	JAMES COOR.
THOMAS EATON,

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board be given to Brigadier-General Ashe and the Officers and Soldiers under his command, who so readily and spiritedly assisted in quelling the late unhappy mutiny among the Regular Troops in Wilmington.

Resolved, That John Hunter, Jun., be immediately sent off to the Town of Martinborough, there to remain on his parole within the limits of the said Town, and that the Commanding Officer of the County of Halifax see this Resolution carried into execution.

Resolved, further, That the said Hunter appear once every day at the house of Mr. George Falconer, between the hours of six and twelve o'clock, in the Town aforesaid; in default of which, (sickness excepted,) and in case he shall break the limits aforesaid, Mr. George Falconer is hereby required to send the said Hunter immediately to Halifax Jail.

In order to encourage the importation of common Salt, an article essentially necessary and greatly wanted in this Colony:

Resolved, That all known friends to the American Independency will, on application to this Board, be permitted to export any kind of Staves or Heading, first entering into bond, with sufficient security, to import in return Salt, Arms, Ammunition, and other warlike stores, to the full amount of the net proceeds of such Staves and Heading.

Whereas it is absolutely necessary to prevent, as far as possible, all kinds of forestalling and imposition on the inhabitants of this Colony in the article of common Salt:

Resolved, That for the future no retailer of Salt shall be permitted to receive more than twenty-five per cent. on the prime cost for any Salt purchased in this Colony, and that the Committees of the respective Counties and Towns see that this Resolve be strictly observed, and send under guard to this Board every person who shall presume to take or receive a greater advance than is hereby allowed and permitted for Salt purchased in this Colony as aforesaid.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Friday, July 26, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Whereas it is necessary that the directions of the Congress respecting Exportation, be fully and strictly observed:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the different Ports do receive from the Captains of all Vessels, on oath, a Manifest of their Cargo, before they grant any clearance or permit to leave this Colony; and that the Commanders of the Armed Vessels, the Companies of Militia on the sea-coast, and of the different Forts in this Colony, are hereby empowered and required to stop and detain all Vessels, and prevent their leaving this Colony until they produce proper clearances from the Commissioners of the Ports of Edenton, Bath, Newbern, or Wilmington.

Resolved, That Colonel Folsome deliver to Brigadier-General Person one hundred bushels of Salt from Cross-Creek, out of the quantity intended for Granville County.

Resolved, That Robert Neilson, master and owner of the Brigantine Polly, be permitted to export to some Port in Spain and Portugal the following articles, to wit: sixty thousand pipe Staves, four thousand five hundred hogshead Staves, three thousand weight of Beeswax, and twenty barrels of Turpentine, he having entered into bond, with security, in the sum of £5,000, to import into this Province the net proceeds of the Staves above mentioned, in Salt, Arms, Ammunition, and other warlike stores.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, July 27, 1776.

Met according to adjournment:

Whereas Robert Neilson, master and owner of the Brig Polly, in the Port of Edenton, hath agreed to import into this Colony a quantity of Salt, Arms, and Ammunition, and hath given bond and sufficient security to perform the same within eight months from the date hereof:

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Commissioners of the Port of Edenton to suffer the said Brig Polly, with her cargo, consisting of sixty thousand pipe, and four thousand five hundred hogshead Staves, three thousand weight of Beeswax, and twenty barrels of Turpentine, to depart this Province for some of the Ports belonging to the Kingdom of Portugal or Spain, for the purposes aforesaid.

Brigadier-General Person, one of the Managers of the Iron Works in this Colony, produced to this Council their Report on the same; also, a Deed and Trust in behalf of the publick, and a Bond from Wilcocks and England; which were approved, and ordered to be filed.

Ordered, That William Turner be immediately committed to Jail for passing Counterfeit Money.

Ordered, That Jonathan Carpenter, William Carpenter, and Benjamin Carpenter, be committed to Jail till further orders from this Council, they being strongly suspected of passing Counterfeit Money.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Commissioners for superintending the Iron Works in this Province, to pay to Mr. James Mills £6 15s., for his expenses nine days in attending the Council and making report with respect to the said Works.

Whereas there appears to have been no Paymaster appointed to the Independent Companies on the sea-coast in this Colony:

Resolved, That Mr. John Easton, of Carteret County, is hereby appointed Paymaster to the two Independent Companies commanded by Captain James Anderson and Captain Enoch Ward, in the District of Newbern; and that Richard Caswell, Esq., Treasurer for the Southern District in this Colony, do, on receiving bond and security in the sum of £5,000, payable to the Hon. Samuel Johnston, Esq., President, and his successors, pay into the hands of the said John Easton, Esq., the sum of £1,000, Proclamation Money, for the purposes aforesaid.

Resolved, That Richard Caswell, Esq., Treasurer of the Southern District, do, on receiving bond and security for faithfully accounting for the same, pay into the hands of Captain James Anderson the sum of £200, for the purpose of procuring good and sufficient Guns, Drums, and Colours, for the use of his Independent Company, on the sea-coast in this Colony.

Resolved, That Mr. Richard Cogdell do furnish from the Magazine in Newbern, to Captain James Anderson, fifty weight of Gunpowder, and one hundred weight of Lead, for the use of his Independent Company.

Resolved, That Captain James Anderson, who commands the Independent Company stationed at Occacock, do, as soon as possible, send an Officer, with a sufficient number of men under his command, to Cape Hatteras Banks, and to remove three pieces of iron Ordnance over the said Banks to Pamlico Sound, and to transport the Cannon from thence to South Key, on Black Water, and there deliver the same to the Virginia Commissioners appointed by the Convention of that Colony to build and fit out two Gallies for the protection of the trade of Occacock; and that all the expense attending the hiring of carriages, &c., will be paid by this Colony.

The Continental Congress having, on the fourth day of this instant, July, declared the Thirteen United Colonies of America free and independent States:

Resolved, That Thursday, the first day of August next, be set apart for proclaiming the said Declaration, at the Court-House in the Town of Halifax. The Freeholders and Inhabitants of the County of Halifax are requested to give their attendance at the time and place aforesaid.

Ordered, That the Council of Safety leave this Town next Friday week, for some interior part of this Colony.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Sunday, July 28, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, July 29, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Captain Christopher Dudley do immediately deliver, out of the Magazine in the Town of Halifax, to William Sheppard, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of the County of Surry, one hundred and fifty pounds of Gunpowder, for the use of the said County, and take his receipt for the same; and which the said Committee must account for to the next Congress.

Resolved, That Matthew Lock, Esq., do furnish the Committee of Surry County with five hundred weight of Lead, out of the quantity he may receive from the Managers of Chiswell's Mines; to be accounted for to the publick by the said Committee.

Whereas, by a Resolution of the Continental Congress, entered into on the 24th day of June last, with respect to Treason, as also one other Resolution, entered into on the 26th day of the same month, giving a Bounty to non-commissioned Officers and Soldiers who may be willing to enlist into the Continental service for the term of three years, have been transmitted to this Council:

Resolved, That copies of the same be immediately sent to the respective Counties and Towns in this Colony, to be made publick.

Stephen Scarborough, of Wake County, being brought before this Council for passing Counterfeit Money, was examined, and committed to Halifax Jail.

Stephen Scarborough having deposed on oath that he received a quantity of Counterfeit Money, which was found upon him, of a certain William Harrel, living in Wake County,

Resolved, That John Cook, of Bute County, be, and he is hereby, directed to apprehend and bring the said William Harrel immediately before this Board; and the said John Cook is hereby empowered to take with him such assistance as he may think necessary to carry this order into execution.

Resolved, also, That the said John Cook be, and he is hereby, directed to search the said Harrel's house, his desks, chests, &c., for Counterfeit Money.

The Council, taking into consideration the requisition of John Page, President of the Council of State in the Colony of Virginia, of three hundred Men to join the Virginia armament, destined against the Overhill Cherokees:

Resolved, That General Rutherford be, and he is hereby, directed to order three hundred Men, from the District of Salisbury, to march with all possible expedition to Stal-nacker's, on Holstein River, to act in concert with the Virginia forces against the Overhill Cherokees.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Tuesday, July 30, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Ordered, That Benjamin Sherwood be immediately sent for and brought before this Board, to give testimony against sundry persons to be examined respecting Counterfeit Money; and that John Geddy see this resolve carried into execution.

The Council being of opinion that Shadrach Kennebrew, on his examination respecting persons concerned in making and passing Counterfeit Money, has given testimony of the greatest importance, and with great candour and ingenuity discovered all he knew:

Resolved, That the said Kennebrew, for the reasons above mentioned, ought not to be prosecuted for the part which he has taken in passing Counterfeit Money, but that it be recommended to the Congress to admit him an evidence for the Province against other offenders.

Resolved, That Lewis Williamson, Ananias Randle, Howel Edmunds, Michael Harris, Benjamin De Berry, Benjamin Branch, James Sikes, and Jacob Kinnebrew, be immediately committed to the Jail of Halifax for further examination.

Resolved, That the Colonel of Dobbs County do take an inventory of the Estate of Thomas Harrison, who has been suspected of being an enemy to this Colony; and that he keep the said Harrison in custody until he pay the expense of bringing him to this Council, and give security in the sum of £500, payable to the President of the Congress and his successors, for his future good behaviour.

Resolved, That the Colonel of the County of Dobbs do take an inventory of the Estate of William Taylor, who has been an enemy to this Colony, and that he keep the said Taylor in custody until he pay the expense of bringing him to this Council, and give security in the sum of £150, payable to the President of the Congress and his successors, for his future good behaviour.

This Council having received information from the Committee of the County of Surry that Michael Henderson, present Ranger, has been guilty of malpractices in that office,

Resolved, That Mr. John Shead, Major Joseph Winston, and Mr. Paul Patrick, be appointed Rangers in the said County of Surry, in the room and stead of the said Michael Henderson.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Wednesday, July 31, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Colonel Joel Lane, Commissioner for the County of Wake, be empowered to receive one hundred bushels of Salt out of that taken by the Court-Martial heretofore held at Cross Creek, and the Commissioners, or in their absence Colonel Folesome, deliver the same, and that Colonel Lane distribute the same in the most equitable manner amongst the Officers and Soldiers who turned out in the late expedition to Moore's Creek; and that Samuel Smith, of Granville County, be empowered to receive one hundred bushels, and distribute the same in like manner.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Thursday, August 1, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Mr. John Gale or William Calvert be appointed to the command of the Brigantine Betsey, now lying in Edenton Bay, and laden with a cargo of Tobacco on the Continental account, and bound on a voyage to Europe; and should they both refuse to take the command of the said Brigantine, in that case the Committee of the Town of Edenton be empowered to appoint some person well skilled in the art of navigation, and who is a known friend to the American independency, to the command of the said Brigantine Betsey.

Resolved, That Robert Smith, Esq., of Edenton, be permitted to export to any of the French or Neutral Islands in the Sloop Betsey, James Ferguson, master, the following articles, to wit: twenty thousand hogshead Staves and Heading, he having entered into bond, with security, in the sum of £1,000, to import into this Province the net proceeds of the Staves above-mentioned in Salt, Arms, Ammunition, and other warlike stores.

Resolved, That Henry Montfort be allowed an additional sum of £80, for four hundred weight of Powder imported into this Province and sold to Samuel Johnston, Esq., for the use of this Province; that the Treasurers, or either of them, pay him the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That the Sheriff of Halifax County do, on receiving a certificate from Mr. Willie Jones or Joseph John Williams, that James Lowe, now a prisoner in the Jail of the said County, hath given bond and security in the sum of £100 for his future good behaviour, release and discharge him from the said Jail.

Resolved, That Thomas Collins, now confined to Halifax Town on parole, be discharged therefrom, on giving security in the sum of £500 to the Council for his future good behaviour; and to this end that he have leave to go home, on condition that he appear before this Board in thirty days from this time, with his securities, or failing thereof, return again to Halifax on parole as before.

Whereas there appears to have been no Paymaster appointed to the Independent Companies on the sea-coast in this Colony:

Resolved, That Colonel Samuel Jarvis, of Currituck County, is hereby appointed Paymaster to the Independent Company commanded by Captain Dennis Dauge, in the District of Edenton, and William Wilkinson Paymaster to the two Independent Companies commanded by Captain William Purviance and Captain Selby Harney; and that the Treasurers, or either of them, do, on receiving bonds and security, the former in the sum of £2,500, the latter in the sum of £5,000, payable to the Hon. Samuel Johnston, Esq., President, and his successors, for the faithful discharge of their offices, pay into the hands of the said Samuel Jarvis the sum of £750, and into the hands of William Wilkinson the sum of £1,000, for the purposes aforesaid.

Hezekiah Alexander, Esq., one of the Members of this Board, appeared.

Resolved, That Samuel Jarvis, Esq., be appointed Commissioner for the Port of Currituck, in this Province, and that he enter into bond with security in the sum of £5,000 for the faithful discharge of his office.

Resolved, That Daniel Fisher be immediately brought before this Council to answer such complaints as may be exhibited against him, and that Mr. Chappel Gee be appointed to execute this Resolve.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Friday, August 2, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the three Wagons now at Whitfield's Ferry, on Neuse River, be directed by Quartermaster-General Long to proceed to Captain Stephen Cobb's, on Cotentnea Creek, and there to receive from said Stephen Cobb a full load of Bacon and Pork belonging to the publick, and proceed with the same to Wilmington, and deliver it to the said Quartermaster-General Long, or his order, and that he so dispose of the said Bacon and Pork either to the Commissaries, or to private persons, as he may judge most for the benefit of the publick.

Resolved, That Mr. Charles Bonfield, of Edenton, deliver out of the Publick Magazine in that Town to Captain Dennis Dauge twenty-five weight of Gunpowder, for the use of his Independent Company on the sea-coast in this Province.

Resolved, That John Smith, of Halifax County, be immediately brought before this Council for passing Counterfeit Money; that Mr. Philip Harney and Mr. William Harris be summoned to appear as witnesses at the same time; and that the Commanding Officer of said County see this resolution carried into execution.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, August 3, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Whereas it appears to the Council, by the oath of James Williams, of the County of Perquimans, that a certain John Pitts did, on the night of the twenty-fifth day of July last past, in a clandestine manner, take from this deponent, and carry out of the said County of Perquimans, the following Negro slaves, to wit: Abb, Toby, Martin, and Sall, as also four Horses, being part of the estate of Joseph Williams, deceased; and in order to do justice to the legal representatives of the said Joseph Williams, these are therefore to empower you, or either of you, to make diligent search within the limits of this State for the said Negro slaves and Horses, and when found, take the same into your possession, as also the body of the said John Pitts, and them bring before the Council; and should the said John Pitts make resistance, in that case you must call to your aid sufficient force in order that this order may be carried into execution.

Whereas this Board, anxious to detect all persons concerned in counterfeiting the currency of this State, and influenced by reports injurious to Mr. William Edwards's character, and by misinformation, ordered Mr. Edwards to be brought before us for examination, and he was brought and examined accordingly, we, in justice to injured innocence, and to prevent that imputation of guilt which might arise from the circumstance of apprehending Mr. Edwards, do, with infinite pleasure, declare, that, after the strictest scrutiny into his conduct, the charge was found totally groundless, and he was most honourably acquitted.

Resolved, That Brigadier-General Person and Mr. Joseph John Williams do each of them agree with a proper person for the purpose of instructing the inhabitants of Anson County, and other the western parts of this Colony, in their duty to Almighty God, and for explaining to them the justice and necessity of the measures pursued by the United States of America, as the only means under God of supporting and maintaining our civil and religious liberties, and thereby induce the good people of this Colony firmly to unite in supporting their just rights and privileges; and that the persons who may be intrusted with the execution of this important service be by the said General Person and Mr. Joseph John Williams, supplied with the sum of £25 each, in order to defray their travelling expenses, and that the Treasurers, or either of them, pay the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That Mr. James Mills, of Bute County, be employed immediately to proceed to the Northern States, there to contract in behalf of this State with one or more persons well skilled in the art of casting Pig Iron, Cannon, Cannon-Ball, and Hollow Ware, and that it be recommended to the Delegates in Congress for this State to give Mr. Mills such aid as may be necessary, by advice and a proper supply of money.

Resolved, That either of the Treasurers pay into the hands of Brigadier-General Person the sum of £1,000, for the use of the Commissary who may be appointed to furnish with Provisions the Detachment ordered from the District of Hillsborough to reinforce General Rutherford, and that he take bond and security from the said Commissary to account with the next Congress for the due application of the said sum.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Sunday, August 4, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, August 5, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That John Webb, of Halifax, be permitted to export to any of the French or Dutch Islands, in the Sloop King-Fisher, James Ducaine Master, eighteen thousand Hogshead Staves, he having entered into bond and security in the sum of £2,000 to import into this Province the net proceeds of the Staves above mentioned in Salt, Arms, Ammunition, and other warlike stores.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Tuesday, August 6, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay into the hands of Mr. Walter Gibson, Commissary to the Newbern and Wilmington Brigades of Militia at Wilmington, the sum of £1,000, it appearing to the Council the said Walter Gibson is in advance that sum to the publick, and be allowed the same in the settlement of their Accounts with the publick.

The Continental Congress, on the 4th day of July last, declared the Thirteen United Colonies of America free and independent States; and as it appears that there is no Committee in the County of Cumberland:

Resolved, That Colonel Ebenezer Folesome and Colonel David Smith, or either of them, on receiving the said Declaration, call a general meeting of the inhabitants of the said County, and that they, or either of them, cause the same to be read and proclaimed in the most publick manner, in order that the good people of this State may be informed thereof; and that at the same time the Resolve of the said Congress respecting Treason be published, and that he proclaim the same to the Regiment stationed at Cross Creek.

Resolved, That John Crook be allowed the sum of £16 for himself, William Wood, and Edmund Dinson, for bringing under guard to this Council a certain William Harrard, of Wake County; that the Treasurers, or either of them, pay him the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Wednesday, August 7, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Captain Hardy, owner of the Brig Betsey, bound on a voyage to Hamburg, on Continental service, having represented to this Board that he himself risks the vessel against the danger of the seas and the barratry of the masters, and that Gale and Colvert, nominated by this Board as proper persons to take the command of her, are strangers to him, and he apprehends unacquainted with those seas to which she is bound,

Resolved, That the former Resolution respecting this matter, so far as it relates to Gale and Colvert, be rescinded, and that the Committee of Edenton do appoint any known friend of American Independence to the command of the said Brig.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay unto Mr. James Davis the sum of £125, being for the half year's Salary due him the 1st day of June last, agreeable to an Act of Assembly, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Thursday, August 8, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay into the hands of Captain Thomas Bloodworth the sum of £300, to enable him to pay off his Minute Company, and that he account for the same with the next Provincial Congress, and be allowed the same in the settlement of their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That Henry Buford be allowed the sum of £40, for six months' rent of the northeast Bridge, from the 18th February, 1776, to the 18th August, inclusive, for sundry Troops, Wagons, Horses, &c., passing and repassing the same, and that the Treasurers, or either of them, pay him the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That Austin Parrat and Michael Henry be discharged from custody, they first entering into bond for their personal appearance at the next Congress, and that Francis Roberts be committed to Jail, there to remain until further orders.

Ordered, That Benjamin Branch and Jacob Kennebrew be discharged from custody, they entering into bond for their appearance at the next Congress.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Friday, August 9, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

The Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, at Philadelphia, the 4th day of July, 1776, having determined that the Thirteen United Colonies are free and independent States, and in consequence thereof have published a Declaration of Independence:

Resolved, That it be recommended to the good people of this now independent State of North-Carolina to pay the greatest attention to the Election, to be held on the 15th day of October next, of Delegates to represent them in Congress, and to have particularly in view this important consideration: that it will be the business of the Delegates then chosen not only to make laws for the good government of, but also to form a Constitution for this State; that this last, as it is the corner-stone of all law, so it ought to be fixed and permanent; and that, according as it is well or ill ordered, it must tend in the first degree to promote the happiness or misery of the State.

Resolved, also, That it be recommended to the inhabitants of this State to elect five Delegates, properly qualified, for each County, to sit and vote in the next Congress, as business of the last importance will come before them.

Whereas the Provincial Council, heretofore held at John Smith's, on Neuse River, did order and direct by Resolve that the Books, Papers, and Accounts belonging to Anthony Warwick & Co., in the possession of Lewis Williamson, should be delivered to the said Anthony Warwick & Co., and it now appearing to this Council that the carrying the said Order and Resolution into effect would be injurious to many of the inhabitants of this State, Resolved, therefore, That the said Resolution be rescinded, and that the said Lewis Williamson keep in his possession the said Books and Papers till further orders.

Richard Dunnivan, lately belonging to the Syren man-of-war, a prisoner on parole in Halifax, came before the Council and moved that he might be naturalized and admitted to the privileges of a free citizen of this State, and to this end declared that he was willing to take an oath of allegiance to the State; which being granted, and he having taken and subscribed to an oath for that purpose,

Resolved, therefore, That the said Richard Dunnivan be discharged from his parole, and that he be henceforward considered as a member and free citizen of this State.

William Miller, a prisoner on parole in Halifax, but late of Wilmington, came before the Council, and moved that he might be admitted to the privileges of a free citizen; and to this end declared he was willing to take an oath of allegiance to this State; which being granted, and he having taken and subscribed to an oath for that purpose,

Resolved, therefore, That the said William Miller be discharged from his parole, and that he be henceforward considered as a member and free citizen of this State.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, August 10, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Samuel Ashe, Esq., one of the Members of the Council of Safety for the District of Wilmington, appeared.

Whereas there is now on hand in the Town of Halifax a large quantity of Beef and Pork purchased by John Webb for the use of the publick, a great proportion of which, for want of due management and care, is much damaged and unfit for the use of the Army, and as there is also a considerable quantity of Provisions belonging to the publick in the Town of Tarborough, under the care of Colonel Irwin, part of which is also damaged; in order, therefore, to prevent the total loss thereof,

Resolved, That Colonel Nicholas Long be empowered and required to dispose of the said Beef and Pork in the best and most advantageous manner he may think proper, either at publick or private sale, and may, if he judge it necessary, give three months' credit to the purchasers, and make return of such sale to the Congress.

Resolved, That Colonel Willis Alston do procure Wagons and Team and a guard of twelve good and trusty men, properly armed, with an Officer to command them, in order to transport a quantity of Ammunition and other articles from the Town of Halifax to Wilmington.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Sunday, August 11, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, August 12, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

This Board being informed there is in the County of Halifax, on a place called Great Fishing Creek, a Lead Mine, and some of the Ore having been produced and tried, from which it appears there is a probability of procuring Lead for the use of this State; therefore, for employing proper persons to examine and make a more full discovery of the quality and quantity of the said Ore,

Resolved, That either of the Treasurers pay into the hands of Francis Ward or John Williams the sum of £50, Proclamation money, and that they do account for the due application of the same to the next Congress.

Resolved, That Colonel Nicholas Long deliver to Francis Ward and John Williams five pounds of Gunpowder, for the use of blowing rocks in exploring the Lead Mines on Fishing Creek.

Resolved, That Richard Dunnovan, lately a prisoner on parole at Halifax, be allowed £1 16s., for three weeks' board, and that the Treasurers, or either of them, pay him the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

It appearing to this Board, by the oath of Frances Pitts, wife of John Pitts, that on or about the fourth of this instant August, that as the said John Pitts was travelling the high-road through the County of Halifax, he was assaulted and inhumanly beat by a certain James Sweeny, and by him robbed of a Horse, one Watch, nine Dollars in Bills, one Gold Ring, one Trunk, one Dutch Blanket, one Tobacco-Box, and one Tickler:

Resolved, therefore, That Bottom Stegall be hereby authorized and empowered to take with him such aid and assistance as he may judge necessary to apprehend the said Sweeney, and bring him before this Board, or a Committee of the County of Halifax, to answer the above charge.

Resolved, That Mr. James Williams and Mr. Joseph Turner do take into their possession three Negroes, now in the Town of Halifax, and one at the Plantation of Mr. James Colton, the property of the Heirs of Mr. Joseph Williams, of Perquimans County, deceased, and deliver them into the hands of Colonel William Skinner, to be by him secured for the use of the Orphans, agreeable to the Will of the said Williams, until the further order of Congress.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock

Tuesday, August 13, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

It appearing that Nicholas Long, Esq., Quartermaster-General of the Continental Troops, hath advanced large sums of money for Supplies for the said Troops, as also for Colonel Muhlenberg's Virginia Regiment:

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay into the hands of Nicholas Long the sum of £1,000, to be accounted for by him at the next Provincial Congress, and that they be allowed the same in their Accounts with the publick.

It appearing that Henry Giffard, Commissary of the Militia stationed at Cross Creek, under the command of Colonel Folesome, hath advanced a large sum of money for Supplies for the said Militia:

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay into the hands of the said Henry Giffard the sum of £400, to be accounted for by him at the next Provincial Congress, and be allowed the same in their Accounts with the publick.

James Childs, of Anson County, charged on oath with practices inimical to the cause of liberty, was brought before the Council, and being examined, declared that he was a preacher of the New-Light Baptist persuasion; that one of the tenets of his church was not to bear arms, either offensively or defensively, and that he had preached this doctrine not only in his particular church, but in all the churches of his communion, and that he had inculcated it by the terrors of excommunication. And the said James Childs, being required to take an oath of allegiance to this State, refused:

Resolved, That the aforesaid doctrine, especially at this crisis, has an evil tendency, and that James Childs, by preaching the same, and by excommunicating such of his followers as did not implicitly subscribe to this doctrine, and by refusing to take the oath of allegiance, deserves to be considered as an enemy to this State; therefore, that he be sent to the Town of Edenton, on his parole, within the limits of the same, not to depart therefrom without permission of this Council or the Congress.

Resolved, That Colonel Ebenezer Folesome take into his possession and keep safe all the Salt which he rendered an account of to this Board; except such as has been otherwise ordered, subject to the further order of this Council.

On the application of Mr. Wyriot, from Georgia,

Resolved, That the Officers from that State be permitted to recruit Soldiers in this State, provided they do not enlist any Regular Soldiers or Marines, already engaged here in the Continental service or the service of this State, or indented Servants or Apprentices, without first obtaining leave from their masters. And it is recommended to the several County and Town Committees to afford them all possible assistance, as the Soldiers about to be enlisted are to be on the Continental establishment.

Resolved, That Thomas Erskin, now a prisoner at Halifax, be removed to Harrisburg, in the County of Granville, there to remain on his parole, within one mile of the said Town, until further orders of this Council or the Provincial Congress.

"To the Jailer of HALIFAX County :

"Herewith you will receive the body of James Sweeney, charged on the oath of Frances Pitts, wife of John Pitts, of having feloniously stolen from the said John Pitts one Horse, one Watch, nine Dollars in bills, one Gold Ring, one Trunk, one Dutch Blanket, one Tobacco-box, and one Tickler."

John Campbell, a prisoner on parole in Halifax, came before the Council, and moved that he might be admitted to the privileges of a free citizen, and to this end declared that he was willing to take an oath of allegiance to this State; which being granted, and he having taken and subscribed to an oath for that purpose:

Resolved, therefore, That the said John Campbell be discharged from his parole, and that he be henceforward considered as a member and free citizen of this State.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay into the hands of Willis Alston, Esq., the sum of £50, for the purpose of employing Guards for the Town of Halifax, to be accounted for at the next Congress, and be allowed the same in their Accounts with the publick.

Malcom McNiel and Joseph Smith, prisoners on parole at Halifax, came before this Council, and being desirous to take an oath not to take up or bear Arms, on any pretence, against the inhabitants of the United States of America, nor carry out more than £50 of Gold and Silver, equal in value to £50 Carolina currency, and they having subscribed to an oath for that purpose:

Resolved, That the said Malcom McNiel and Joseph Smith be permitted to leave this State, and proceed to any of the French or Neutral Islands in the West-Indies, and that they have leave from this Board to take shipping from any Port in this State where they can obtain the same.

The Council adjourned to Wake County, at the house of Mr. Joel Lane.

Wake County, Wednesday, August 21, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

The Council proceeded to make choice of a President, in the room of Cornelius Harnett, Esq., who has leave of absence; when Samuel Ashe, Esq., was unanimously chosen, and placed in the Chair accordingly.

It being represented to the Council by Captain John Jones that he, at the request of Richard Blackledge, applied to Richard Nassau Stevens, of Bath-Town, for certain Kettles to the said Stevens belonging, for the purpose of making Salt by boiling; that he (John Jones) agreed to give the price demanded by Stevens, but that Stevens refused to take it, unless paid in old Proclamation or Continental money:

Resolved, That the said John Jones be, and he is hereby, empowered to apply again to the said Stevens for the Kettles above-mentioned; and if he shall refuse to receive payment for the same in the Dollar Bills of this State, then, and in such case, to take them unpaid for, and refer the said Stevens to this Council for remedy.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Thursday, August 22, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

The Petition of the Committee of the Settlements of Watauga and Holstein, called by them Washington District, and of the inhabitants thereof, was read, setting forth the manner in which they first settled that country, and the nature of their title, showing, that from the commencement of the present dispute between Great Britain and the Colonies, they have adhered to the Association and Resolutions of the Continental Congress, and promoted as far as they could the common cause of liberty; that the said Settlements are within the bounds of this State, and praying that they may be received into and considered as part thereof. The said Petition being considered,

Resolved, That the Council do approve of the conduct of the Committee and inhabitants of the above-mentioned Settlements in regard to the present disputes; and that it be, and is hereby, recommended to the freemen of the said Settlements to hold a free and impartial election at some convenient place in the said District, on the 15th day of October next, then and there to elect five Delegates to represent the said District; and that it be recommended to the Delegates so elected to attend at Halifax-Town, in this State, on the 10th day of November next, then and there to lay their case before the Congress of this State.

Whereas the Cherokees, unprovoked by the inhabitants of Watauga and Holstein, and instigated under the influence of Cameron, Stewart, and other emissaries of the British Government, by the refusal of the said inhabitants to join and coöperate with the enemies of America, have attacked the said inhabitants of Watauga and Holstein, murdered some of them, ravaged their country, destroyed their crops, and driven off their stocks of Cattle and Horses, and carried off other effects:

Resolved, That it be recommended to the gentlemen, Officers and Soldiers of the armaments which have marched or may march from Virginia and this State against the Cherokees, to restore to the owners, on recapture, all such Cattle, Horses, and other effects, sufficient proof being first made of the property.

Christopher Neal, Esq., Judge of the Court of Justice for Port Newbern, exhibited his Account against the Brig William, Captain Drew commander, lately condemned in the said Court, whereby it appears there is a balance due to the publick of £108 18s. 6½d:

Resolved, That the said Christopher Neal pay the said sum of £108 18s. 6½d., into the hands of the Southern Treasurer, and take his receipt for the same.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Friday, August 23, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Whereas the Council have received information that John Cowper, of Beaufort County, Merchant, has at this time by him a large quantity of common Salt, which he refuses to dispose of, pretending, as it is said, that he keeps the same for the use of two of the Independent Companies on the sea board; and whereas the numerous armaments now in the service of this State on the frontiers are in the greatest want of Salt:

It is therefore, Resolved, That James Bonner, Esq., do immediately call on the said John Cowper, requiring him to deliver, upon oath, an exact account of the quantity of Salt he has now in his possession, and that the same remain in the care of the said John Cowper for the use of the publick, until he receives the further order of this Board; and that the said James Bonner immediately certify to this Board the exact quantity of said Salt.

Whereas this Board have had information that the Cherokees of the Lower, Middle, and Valley Settlements have abandoned their Towns, and that the force already collected under General Rutherford, with the three hundred men marched from Hillsborough District is fully adequate to the protection and security of the frontiers:

Resolved, That the Brigadier-General of Hillsborough District be directed to countermand the raising or marching of the remaining two hundred ordered from the said District, until further orders from the Council.

Resolved, That Colonel Ebenezer Folesome furnish to the Commissioners appointed to manage and superintend the Iron Works, fifteen bushels of the publick Salt in his possession, for the use of the labourers at said Works.

Whereas sundry persons of the Militia in Hillsborough District, disregarding the Resolutions of Congress relative to the Militia, and also in contempt of an Order of this Council, lately issued, directing the raising and marching of five hundred men to the assistance of General Rutherford, have failed to attend the Musters in their respective Counties, and when draughted have refused or neglected to march, and by such conduct incurred the penalties by the Resolutions of Congress inflicted:

Resolved, That the Colonels in the respective Counties be, and they are hereby, directed to hold Courts-Martial for the trial of such delinquents; that they administer the following Oath to the Members thereof, to wit: "You shall swear well and truly to try and determine, according to the evidence in the matter now before you, between the independent State of North-Carolina and the prisoner to be tried;" that they inquire into facts and pass sentence, and return their proceedings to this Board, deferring execution until further orders of the Council or the Congress.

Resolved, That Conner Doud be directed to sell the Salt in his possession, being about one hundred and ten bushels, to the Whigs who bore arms in the late expedition against the Tories at Moore's Creek, at 10s. per bushel, not selling more than half a bushel to each man.

Resolved, That Mr. Archibald Simpson be directed to sell ten bushels of his Salt to Henry Giffard, Commissary for the Horse under the command of Colonel Folesome, at 10s. per bushel.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Saturday, August 24, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Read the Petition of a number of inhabitants of Cumberland County, complaining of many abuses committed by Colonel Ebenezer Folesome; which was ordered to be filed, and that notice be given at a future day for a hearing of the parties.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Sunday, August 25, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Monday, August 26, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That a copy of the Valuation and Appraisement of sundry Vessels some time since sunk to obstruct the navigation of Cape Fear River, be transmitted to Nicholas Long, Esq.; that he apply to the Committee of Wilmington for the Inventories therein mentioned, and take into his possession the Masts, Yards, Sails, Rigging, Cables, Anchors, and other apparel to the said Vessels belonging, and deposite them in the care of one or more trusty person or persons, there to remain subject to the further orders of the Council or Congress, and that he transmit an account of his doing herein, and an Inventory of the various articles, and with whom lodged, to this Board.

And whereas the Council are informed that a certain William Campbell, late owner of the Ship Alexander, a vessel sunk for the purpose above-mentioned, refuses to deliver up the Sails, &c., to her belonging, detaining them until he shall be allowed for sundry materials prepared for the repair of the said Ship Alexander:

Resolved, That Nicholas Long call on said William Campbell for delivery of the Sails and other articles aforesaid, and on his refusal to deliver them, summon sufficient aid and take them by force, and proceed to take care of them as above directed.

Resolved, also, That the Committee of Wilmington be, and they are hereby, directed to appoint five indifferent persons to value and appraise the materials prepared for the repairs of the Ship Alexander, lately belonging to William Campbell, the said Campbell first deposing on oath that they were actually prepared for that purpose, and render an Inventory and Appraisement thereof to next Congress, that they may determine of said Campbell's claim for the said materials.

Resolved, That the Commissioners or Colonel Folesome deliver to Mr. James Williams sixty bushels of Salt, out of that taken at Cross Creek, for the use of the County of Chatham, he or they complying with the Resolution of Congress respecting the same.

It appearing on examination of Major James Moore's Account, rendered to, and allowed by, the last Congress, that there was an error in extending the pay of fifty-two Privates in the Minute-service, for twenty-eight days, at 1s. 10³/₄d., of £26 0s. 1d., it being carried out £112 0s. 3d., instead of £138 0s. 4d.:

Resolved, That the said James Moore be allowed the sum of £26 0s. 1d., for said error; that the Treasurers, or either of them, pay him the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Tuesday, August 27, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

William Crawford having applied to this Board for leave to depart this State for the Island of Bermuda:

Resolved, He have leave accordingly.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Wednesday, August 28, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Reneca Julian and James Walker be sent to the Jail of Halifax, it appearing to this Council that they are both inimical to this State; and that Messrs. William Bell, Richardson Owen, and Francis Harper, Commissioners appointed by Congress to take care of the estate of Prisoners put out of this State from the County of Guilford, take an inventory of the Estate of the said Reneca Julian, and to take all the care in their power to prevent waste and embezzlement; and to make return thereof to next Congress, but at the same time pay particular attention to his wife and children, to see that they do not want the common necessities of life; and that his Estate shall remain where it was, except Arms and Ammunition, under the protection of this Council, until some future order of this Board or the Congress; and that the Colonel of Wake County do see the first part of this Resolve carried into execution.

Jacob Elliot, Abraham Woodward, James Wilson, William Draper, John Underhill, and Reneca Julian, being brought before this Board from Guilford County as persons inimical to the cause of America,

Resolved, That the aforesaid persons, by equal proportions, pay to Thomas Jenkins, Captain of the Guard, for himself and seven others, the sum of £20 8s. 6d., for their expense in bringing them before this Council.

Resolved, That Thomas Jenkins be allowed the sum of £3 8s. 1d. for himself and Guard bringing to this Board James Walker, of Guilford County. That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay him the same, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

John Hamilton appearing before this Board in behalf of John Hamilton & Company, and suggesting that they had been aggrieved by the determination of this Board relative to the Brigantine William, directed by the Congress held at Halifax, in April last, to be seized as British property, and praying an appeal from the determination of this Board to the next Congress, and that all further proceedings be stayed until the direction of Congress be had thereon :

Resolved, That the said John Hamilton, in behalf of the Company, be permitted to appeal to the next Congress; and that the said John Hamilton & Company, and all other persons, the Officers of the Courts of Justice excepted, who have received any moneys arising from the sale of the said Brigantine William, replace the same in the hands of Christopher Neale, Esq., until the resolution of the next Congress.

Resolved, That Messrs. Francis Price and George Merrick be appointed Commissioners for the Port of Wilmington, in this Province, and that they enter into bond, with security, in the sum of £5,000, for the faithful discharge of their office.

Resolved, That the Commissioners appointed at the Ports of Edenton, Bath, Newbern, and Wilmington, be empowered to give permits to Vessels to load with Staves and Heading for any of the French, Spanish, Dutch, or Donish Islands, in the West-Indies, the owner or owners of such Vessels first giving bond, with a good and sufficient security in the sum of £2,000, which bond must be made payable to the President of the Congress of this State, and his successors, that Salt, Arms, Ammunition, and other warlike stores, shall only be imported, in return for the net proceeds of such Staves and Heading; and that no person or persons shall be entitled to this privilege but known friends to the American independency.

Resolved, That Mr. William Brown be appointed Commissioner for the Port of Bath, and that he enter into bond, with security, in the sum of £2,000, for the faithful discharge of his office; which bond is to be lodged with the President of the Provincial Congress.

The Council adjourned to Salisbury, in the County of Rowan.

Salisbury, September 6, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

James Hunter and Joseph Dobson, both of Guilford County, voluntarily came before the Council, moved that they might be admitted to the privileges of free citizens, and declared that they were willing to take an oath of allegiance to this State; which being granted, and they having taken and subscribed to an oath for that purpose,

Resolved, That they henceforward be considered as free citizens and members of this State.

Jacob Williams, of Anson County, being brought before this Council for having spoken some words inimical to the cause of liberty, and regardless of a solemn declaration by him signed at the Congress at Hillsborough,

Resolved, That the said Williams enter into bond, with security, in the sum of £300, conditioned that he appear at the next Congress to be held at Halifax, and not depart without leave; otherwise to be committed to the common Jail of Salisbury, there to remain until further orders of this Council or Congress.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, September 7, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the Troops stationed on the frontiers of Tryon County, by order of General Rutherford, for the protection of this State, be continued till further orders of this Board, General Rutherford, or the Congress.

Ambrose Mills and John Austin, of Tryon County, having been brought before this Board, for acting inimical to the cause of American freedom, and after examination, it was thought proper to discharge them, the first having entered into bond and taken the oath of allegiance to this State, the other having also taken the said oath of allegiance.

Adjourned till Monday morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, September 9, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

On the Petition of Mary Hughs, wife of Joseph Hughs, for leave for her husband to appear before this Board, to be admitted as a free citizen of this State,

Resolved, That the said Joseph Hughs be permitted to appear before this Council, on or before the 11th of this instant, September, for the purpose aforesaid.

Read in Council, the Petition of James Hepburn, on parole to Mecklenburgh County, and a Certificate from Waightstill Avery, Esq., one of the Committee of the said County, showing that the said James Hepburn cannot procure a house within the limits of his said parole:

Resolved, That the said James Hepburn have leave to remove himself to the Town of Salisbury, there to be on parole, within the limits and bounds of the said Town, and within two miles thereof.

Read, the Petition of Michael Holt, late of Orange County, at present under confinement in the City of Philadelphia, praying releasement, &c.; also a Petition from the Committee of said County, setting forth, that, in their opinion, the releasement of the said Michael Holt would not in anywise injure the cause of liberty in this State. This Board, taking the said Petition into consideration, and having collected all the evidence for and against the said Holt, with respect to his march in order to join McDonald's Army, find many circumstances in his favour; inasmuch, when he was fully acquainted with the intention of the Tories, he did actually return home, and was the means of inducing a number of others to follow his example, without a junction with the Scotch Army:

Resolved, That he be recommended to the Continental Congress as an object of compassion, and that the Delegates from this State use their utmost endeavour to get him discharged from his present imprisonment, in order that he may return home to his family; he first taking an oath to this State, a copy of which is ordered to be enclosed to the said Delegates.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Tuesday, September 10, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Whereas, in February last, James McCoy, with a number of men, was employed in disarming the Tories for some time, and was allowed at Congress the sum of £102, for the payment of the men in that department; and whereas a certain controversy has arisen among the men, concerning the distribution of the money, and application having been made to this Board concerning the same: It is the opinion of this Council that the said James McCoy, in order that equal justice be done, pay each man according to the time of his being in actual service.

Resolved, That Colonel Ebenezer Folesome, or, in his absence, the Commissioners at Cross Creek, deliver thirty bushels of the publick Salt to Captain John Hamlin, to be by him distributed in the following proportions, to wit: eighteen bushels among the Officers and Soldiers of the Company in the late expedition, and twelve bushels among the families of the Officers and Soldiers in the present expedition against the Indians.

Benjamin Booth Boote, lately a prisoner in South-Carolina, from this State, permitted to return on parole, came before this Board, and took an oath of fidelity to the State:

Resolved, therefore, That he be discharged from such parole, and that he be henceforward considered as a friend and free citizen of this State.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Wednesday, September 11, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That John Dunn be paroled to the Town of Salisbury, there to remain until further orders of this Council or Congress, and to appear once a day at the house of Mr. Maxwell Chambers; and further, that he enter into bond, with security, in the sum of £1,000, for his future good behaviour, and in case of breach of his parole, to be committed, by the Committee of the Town, to close prison.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Thursday, September 12, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

George Wolfendon, Thomas Ferguson, James Morgan, and James Gibson, offered to the Council sundry pieces of Linen, claiming the several bounties, pursuant to a Resolve of the Congress held at Hillsborough, on the tenth day of September, 1775. The Board, examining into the premises, and finding that the said several pieces of Linen were manufactured in this State, pursuant to the said Resolve of Congress, and that they are so near in quality that a determination cannot be had with precision, but that they are entitled to the several bounties in the said Resolve:

It is Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay unto the said George Wolfendon, Thomas Ferguson, James Morgan, and James Gibson, £23 15s., each, it being their equal part of the several bounties allowed by the said Resolve; and that the same shall be allowed the Treasurers in their Accounts with the publick—the parties being present, and consenting to an equal dividend of the aforesaid bounties.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Friday, September 13, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Joseph Hughs came before this Board according to the prayer of a Petition exhibited by his wife Mary. The Council taking the same into consideration,

Resolved, That the said Joseph Hughs be paroled to the limits of the Town of Salisbury, there to remain until further orders of this Council or Congress, and to appear once a day at the house of Maxwell Chambers; and in case of a breach of parole, to be committed by the Committee of the Town to close prison; and further, that he enter into bond with security in the sum of £500, for his future good behaviour.

Resolved, That the several Militia Officers and Captains of the Forts and Garrisons on the frontiers of Rowan and Tryon furnish Mr. Avery with a sufficient escort of men for a guard on his way to General Rutherford, and also to give the said Avery all the necessary aid and assistance in their power.

Resolved, That Abel Armstrong, or any other officer of the Militia of the District of Salisbury, furnish Joseph Thompson and James Gallaspee, Wagoners in the service of this State, on their way to and from Chiswell's Mines, with a guard of four men to escort them to and from the same.

Resolved, That Jesse Nighton pay unto James Hackett, for himself, James Kerr, and Robert Grier, the sum of £1 10s., for bringing the said Nighton before this Board pursuant to its order.

The Council adjourned to the Town of Halifax, in the County of Halifax.

Halifax, September, 27, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

The Council proceeded to make choice of a President in the room of Samuel Ashe, Esq., who has leave of absence; when Willie Jones, Esq., was unanimously chosen, and placed in the chair accordingly.

James Walker, who was imprisoned by order of this Board, for acting inimical to the liberties of America, was brought before the Council and discharged, on taking and subscribing to an oath of allegiance to the State.

Whereas it appears, from the oath of William Alston, that Hance Hamilton, of Granville County, is a person inimical to the liberties of America:

Resolved, therefore, That his Honour the President issue a Warrant to bring the said Hamilton before the Congress, to be examined concerning the premises.

It appearing that James Walker, who was imprisoned on suspicion of his being an enemy to the States, is a pauper,

Resolved, That the expenses and fees attending the conveyance and imprisonment of the said James Walker be paid by the publick.

Resolved, That the several Sheriffs and Collectors of Duties in this State do attend the next Congress, to be held at Halifax, on the 10th day of November next, then and there to settle their accounts of Taxes and Duties received, and prepare themselves to pay at that time all sums of money which may be due from them to this State.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Officers of the Continental Forces in this State, and the Officers of the Provincials, not to suffer any Soldiers to be or appear at the ensuing election of Delegates for the various Counties and Towns in this State, such only excepted as have a right to vote upon the occasion.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, September 28, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Philip Perry the sum of £3, for apprehending Elijah King, a deserter from Captain Brinkley's Company, in the Third Regiment of Continental Troops in this Province.

Adjourned till Monday morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, September 30, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to John Daves, Quartermaster to the Second Regiment of Continental Troops in this State, £200, to enable him to procure Forage, &c., for the Horses in the said Regiment, and be allowed in their Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That John Daves be appointed Ensign in Captain Crawford's Company, in the Second Regiment of Continental Troops in this State.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Tuesday, October 1, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That John Plummer, Messenger and Door-Keeper to this Board, be allowed £27 12s. 2d., for his services, and that Richard Caswell, Esq., Treasurer of the Southern District in this State, pay the same, and be allowed in his Accounts with the publick.

Resolved, That the Horses now in possession of sundry persons in Bute and Granville Counties, the property of Josiah Martin, late Governour, be brought to the next Congress in as good order as they received them of the Committee of Bute County.

William Stuart, a prisoner, who was committed on suspicion of being a confidential emissary and spy of Josiah Martin, was brought before this Board, and on examination the allegations not appearing true, the said William Stuart was discharged on taking the State oath, without payment of fees. It appearing that the said William Stuart is very poor:

Resolved, That the Prison fees due from said Stuart be paid by the publick.

Resolved, That the Commissary of Stores, or his Deputy, or Captain Forster, at Wilmington, do deliver to the Commissioners at Edenton, appointed to fit out the armed vessel King Taminy, out of the publick stores at Wilmington, such materials as the said Commissioners may apply for, taking a receipt for the same.

Resolved, That Sylvanus Pendleton, Esq., Commander of the armed Brig King Taminy, fitted out by this State, do, with all possible expedition, proceed to Occacock Bar, and there lie for the protection of the trade until the return of the Pennsylvania Farmer from her intended cruise; and then that the said Sylvanus Pendleton shall immediately proceed to sea on a cruise for the term of one month, against the enemies of the United States of America, and to take as many of the merchant ships, the property of the subjects of Great Britain, as may be in his power, and for that purpose to cruise between the latitudes of thirty-two and thirty-five and ten, and to keep within the distance of eighty leagues of the American shore; and that after the expiration of the one month's cruise, the said Sylvanus Pendleton shall return to Occacock Bar; and should he take any prizes, the same must be sent to Occacock, or some other convenient Port.

Resolved, That Joshua Hampstead, Esq., Commander of the armed vessel Pennsylvania Farmer, fitted out by this State, do immediately proceed to sea, and cruise for the term of one month, against the enemies of the United States of America, and to take as many of the British ships, the property of the subjects of Great Britain, as may be in his power; and for that purpose to cruise between the latitudes of thirty-two and thirty-five and ten, and to keep within the distance of eighty leagues of the American shore; and that after the expiration of the one month's cruise, the said Joshua Hampstead shall return to Occacock, and should he take any prizes, the same must be sent to Occacock, or some other convenient Port.

Samuel Andrews and Thomas Kersey, who were committed to the Jail in Halifax, were brought before this Board, and discharged on taking the State oath, and entering into recognizance for their appearance at next Congress.

The Council adjourned to meet at this Town of Halifax, on the 17th of October instant.

Thursday, October 17, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Friday, October 18, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Saturday, October 19, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That General Moore be desired to lay before this Board on Monday morning a state of the Continental Forces in this State.

Resolved, That Ambrose Knox & Company, William Brown, John Chace, and Daniel Cartwright, be permitted to send to sea the Sloop Polly, taken into possession by Andrew Little and Robert Hardy, in consequence of a Resolve of this Board, on the said Ambrose Knox & Company, William Brown and John Chace's giving bond and security to the President of the Congress of this State, and his successor, in the sum of £135, being the value of Daniel Cartwright's part of said Sloop, and on leaving one-third part of the debts left in the hands of William Skinner, subject to the payment of such demands as may be due this State from the said Daniel Cartwright, on account of a cargo shipped by this State on board the said Sloop commanded by the said Daniel Cartwright.

Resolved, That Andrew Little and Robert Hardy be directed to attend the execution of the above Resolve, and on the said Resolve's being complied with, to grant a certificate thereof to the Commissioner of the Port of Edenton.

Adjourned till Monday morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, October 21, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Mr. John Chase made application for Letters of Marque and Reprisal for the Sloop Polly, belonging to Ambrose & Company, William Brown, John Chase, and Daniel Cartwright, of this State, and hath also delivered in a schedule of the number of guns, the names of the officers, the provisions and warlike stores on board, and hath given bond and security agreeable to the Resolutions of the Continental Congress:

Resolved, That Commissions issue for the said Sloop Polly, accordingly.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Henry Giffard, Commissary to the detachment of Militia in service under Colonel Folesome, the sum of £500, to enable him to pay in part for the Provisions purchased for said Companies.

Whereas it hath been represented that the armed Brig Pennsylvania Farmer, ordered by this Board on a cruise, is not at this time fit to proceed to sea, and that the Jamaica Fleet, the object in view, may pass our latitudes before the said Brig can be in readiness, and thereby defeat the purpose of said cruise:

Resolved, That Sylvanus Pendleton, Esq., Commander of the armed vessel King Taminy, fitted out by this State, do immediately proceed to sea, and cruise the term of six weeks against the enemies of the United States of America, and to take as many of the British ships as may be in his power, sending the same as soon as possible into some of the ports in this State for trial and condemnation; and for that purpose to cruise between the latitudes of thirty and thirty-six, and that after the expiration of the said term of six weeks the said Sylvanus Pendleton shall return with the said vessel to Occacock, or some other convenient Port within the limits of this State.

The armed vessels King Taminy and Pennsylvania Farmer being ordered on a cruise against the enemies of the United States of America,

Resolved, That Captain John Forster, Commander of the armed Brig the General Washington, now lying at Wilmington, do proceed with all possible despatch to Occacock Bar, and to remain within the said Bar, in order to protect the trading vessels which may be coming into or going out of that port, until one of the aforesaid armed vessels shall return there, or he shall be otherwise ordered.

Whereas it is represented by the Commissioners for establishing a Manufactory of Guns in the District of Hillsborough that proper iron for that purpose cannot be obtained in this State, and that our currency will not purchase it in any other:

Resolved, therefore, That Samuel Johnston, Esquire, be directed and empowered to draw on the Continental Treasury in favour of the said Commissioners, or either of them, or their order, for £100, to be considered as part of the sum of £1,000 voted by Congress for the above-mentioned purpose.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Whereas, by a Resolve of this Board of the 30th of September last, Joshua Hampstead, Esq., Commander of the armed Brig Pennsylvania Farmer, was directed to proceed to sea, and cruise for the term of one month within eight leagues of the American shore; and whereas the time and distance prescribed in the aforesaid Resolve may in a measure frustrate the intentions of the said voyage:

Resolved, That the said Joshua Hampstead be permitted to cruise for the term of six weeks between the latitudes of thirty and thirty-six, for the purpose aforesaid.

A Resolution of the Continental Congress of the 16th of September last, leaving it to the Council of State to suspend or execute a former order of Congress, dated the 3d of the said month, directing Brigadier-General Moore to march two North-Carolina Continental Battalions to New-York, being read and considered, and it appearing from General Moore's return that the Continental Battalions in this State are far from being complete, that they are sickly, and ill-provided with clothing, and by no means prepared to march to a northern climate; and further, that if two Battalions should march to New-York, the remainder would not be adequate to the defence of the State in case of an attack:

Resolved, That the execution of the said Resolution be suspended.

Resolved, also, That General Moore be required to station for the present the Continental Forces in this State in the District of Newbern and Wilmington at such places as he may think best for the recovery of their health, and to use every means in his power to have them immediately recruited to their full complement.

Resolved, That Nathaniel Rochester, Commissary of Stores, be, and he is hereby, directed to deliver to General Moore's order as much Osnaburgs as may be necessary to make Tents for the Continental Battalions in this State, and Bell-Tents for securing their Arms, and one Bell-Tent to every Company, allowing thirty yards for a Tent for every eight men, and twenty yards for each Bell-Tent, thirty-five yards for a tent for the Non-Commissioned Officers of each Company, and one hundred yards for a Hospital Tent for each Battalion.

Whereas Samuel Johnston, Esq., on the application of Mr. Peter Mallet, Acting Commissary of the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Regiments, and at the instance of Mr. Willie Jones, paid to the said Peter Mallet £3,000 during the recess of the Council:

Resolved, That the Council do approve of the said payment, and that Mr. Johnston be allowed for the same in his Account against the State, in like manner as if a Warrant for the money had issued previous to the payment thereof.

Resolved, That the Treasurers, or either of them, pay to Mr. Peter Mallet, Commissary to the Sixth Regiment of Continental Forces in this State, the sum of £1,000, and be allowed the same in their Accounts with the publick.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Thursday, October 24, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Mr. Nathaniel Rochester, Commissary of Stores, send to Tarborough for sundry Woollens purchased of Colonel Irwin for the publick, and convey them to Wilmington, and that he employ Tailors to cut out and make up the same and all other publick Cloths in his possession, such finer Cloths as are intended for Officers excepted, into short Coats and Breeches, and dispose of them to the Soldiers, taking care that no one man have more than one short Coat and one pair of Breeches.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Friday, October 25, 1776.

Met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That Richard Caswell, Esq., publick Treasurer of the Southern District, pay into the hands of Colonel James Thackston the sum of £248, for the purpose of recruiting men in this State according to the new system, and that he debit the Paymaster for the same.

Resolved, further, That the said Colonel James Thackston account with the Paymaster for the aforesaid sum.

Whereas this Council are well informed that certain Officers in the service of the State of South-Carolina have inlisted sundry Regulars of this State out of the North-Carolina Continental Troops now in Georgia:

Resolved, That this Board do utterly disapprove of such measure; that it is unjustifiable, and has an obvious tendency to obstruct the regular service in this State, and to endanger the common defence of North and South-Carolina; and therefore that General Howe be, and he is hereby, directed to reclaim the Soldiers so as above-mentioned in-listed by the South-Carolina Officers; and he is also further directed to remand the whole of the North-Carolina Troops now in Georgia immediately to this State.

Whereas the Council are informed that many things belonging to the State, such as tory Horses and Wagons, condemned by last Congress, and also Horses which have been purchased by the publick, and have strayed away, are now dispersed about in different parts, so that they will probably be lost if longer unattended to:

Resolved, therefore, That Nicholas Long, Esq., be, and he is hereby, directed and empowered to take into his possession all such Wagons and Horses; and for the disposition thereof he is directed to employ in the service such of the Wagons and Horses as are fit for the same, and to sell such as are not, rendering an account of his proceedings to the Council or the Congress.

Thomas Erskine, a prisoner on parole in Halifax County, having represented to the Council that his constitution is so impaired by sickness and the effects of the climate, that death must probably be the consequence unless he is allowed to remov out of this State, and that in leaving it he has no intentions adverse to the United States; and having also made oath that he will not, directly nor indirectly, communicate to the enemies of the free and independent States of America any intelligence whatever which may tend to their prejudice:

Resolved, That he be permitted to leave this State, and that he immediately go to Edenton, and depart from thence in the first vessel that sails for the West-Indies.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Board that the Commissioners appointed in Cumberland County to inventory the effects of the Tories, deliver to Mr. Alexander Stewart's order the Cloths of the said Stewart taken out of the possession of Mr. Gilless, upon the said Gilless or some persons proving that the same were lodged with him as the property of the said Stewart.

Resolved, That Captain Dudley be directed to deliver to the Colonel of each Battalion of Continental Forces in this State eleven sets of Simms's Military Guide, and two sets of the New System of Military Discipline, they giving a receipt for the same.

By order: WILLIE JONES, President.
J. GLASGOW, Secretary.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

At a meeting of a Provincial Congress for the Province of New-York, at the Court-House in the Town of White-Plains, in the County of Westchester, on Tuesday, July 9, 1776:

The Deputies from a majority of the Counties appeared, and they produced their Credentials, and proceeded to the choice of the following Officers, to wit:

General NATHANIEL WOODHULL, President.
JOHN MCKESSON, and } Secretaries.
ROBERT BENSON, }
Doorkeeper.

The Deputies from the City and County of New-York not producing their Credentials, the Secretaries informed the House that soon after the late election for Deputies to represent the City and County of New-York, Colonel Remsen delivered in to Congress a certified extract of the Minutes of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, whereby it appeared that an election was held, and twenty-one Members were chosen, pursuant and agreeable to the Resolutions of the Provincial Congress of this Colony, to represent the said City and County, and that five of them be a quorum; that the said extract is mislaid, and cannot be found at present.

Ordered, That the Deputies present from New-York take their seats, and that they take measures to procure a copy of their Credentials.

The Deputies from the City and County of Albany appeared, but have omitted or forgotten to procure and bring with them a copy of their Credentials.

The Deputies from the County of Orange produced their Credentials in due form, whereby it appeared that at an election for choosing of Delegates, conformable to the Resolutions of the late Provincial Congress, Colonel William Allison, Mr. Little, John Herring, David Pye, and Mr. Outwater, were chosen, with full powers to represent said County.

Ordered, That the Deputies present take their seats.

The Deputies from the County of Suffolk produced a Certificate from the Committee of said County, dated the 27th of June, 1776, and signed by William Smith, Chairman, whereby it appears that General Nathaniel Woodhull, Ezra L'Hommedieu, John Sloss Hobart, Burnet Miller, Thomas Dearing, David Gilston, Wm. Smith, and Thomas Tredwell, Esquires, or any three of them, were duly elected to represent said County in this Congress, with powers to establish a new form of Government.

Ordered, That the Deputies from Suffolk take their seats.

The Deputies from the County of Dutchess produced their Credentials, by which it appears that Zephaniah Platt, Esq., Mr. Sackett, Gilbert Livingston, Esq., Dr. Crane, and Henry Schenck, were duly elected, and constituted with full powers to represent said County in this Congress.

Thereupon, Ordered, That the said Deputies from Dutchess County take their seats.

The Deputies from Westchester, attending, produced their Credentials, whereby it appeared that Colonel Lewis Graham, Colonel Pierre Van Cortlandt, Major Lockwood, William Paulding, Jonathan Platt, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Mills, Gilbert Drake, Jonathan G. Tompkins, General Morris, and Gouverneur Morris, were duly elected, with full powers to represent the said County in this Congress.

Ordered, That the Deputies present from Westchester County take their seats.

The Deputies from the County of Queen's, attending, produced a Certificate of the Committee of said County, whereby it appeared that at an election held on the 24th ult., Colonel Jacob Blackwell, Captain Jonathan Lawrence, Waters Smith,

Samuel Townsend, Cornelius Van Wyck, James Townsend, and the Rev. Abraham Ketletas, and Benjamin Sands, were elected to represent said County, until the second Tuesday in May next, with power to determine of the subject of erecting and constituting a new form of Government, to the exclusion of all foreign jurisdiction, was read and filed.

Thereupon, Ordered, That the said Deputies from Queen's County take their seats.

The Deputies from Charlotte County did not produce any Credentials.

The Deputies from Cumberland County, attending, produced a Certificate, signed by James Clay, Chairman of the County Committee, and dated at Westminster, the 28th June last, whereby it appears that Colonel Joseph Marsh, Simon Stevens, and John Sessins, have been duly elected to represent said County in this Congress, and invested with full powers of legislation, &c.

Ordered, That the Deputies from Cumberland County take their seats.

Ordered, That the Resolution empowering the General to call out the Militia be published.

Ordered, That the Secretary draw up the Resolutions lately passed, relative to the Stock on Nassau and Staten Islands, into form, so that they may be published.

All the new Members present, that is to say, Colonel Van Cortlandt, Mr. Yates, Mr. Ketletas, Mr. Mills, Mr. Sacket, Mr. Stephens, Mr. Platt, Mr. Sessins, Mr. Crane, Mr. Jonathan Platt, Mr. W. Smith, Mr. Miller, Mr. Adgate, and such of the old Members who had not been sworn, took the general oath of secrecy.

Mr. Benjamin Smith refused to take the oath of secrecy, and was therefore desired to withdraw and consider the matter maturely, and he accordingly withdrew.

Mr. Jay, seconded by Mr. Van Wyck, moved that,

Whereas the Rev. Mr. Ketletas, one of the Deputies from Queen's County, has been solemnly devoted to the service of God and the care of souls, has good right to expect and claim an exemption from all such employments as would divert his attention from the affairs of that Kingdom which is not of this world:

Resolved, That the said Mr. Ketletas be at liberty to attend this House at such times only as he may think proper, and that his absence be not considered as a neglect of his duty.

Debates arose thereon, and the question being put, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following, that is to say:

For the Motion.	Against the Motion.
8 New-York,	3 Orange,
4 Queen's ,	4 Suffolk,
6 Albany,	5 Dutchess,
3 Tryon,	2 Cumberland,

A Letter from the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress, of the 2d July, instant, on the subject of Independence, and requesting Instructions from this Congress, was received and read.

A Letter from the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress, enclosing the Declaration of Independence, was received and read, and is in the words following, to wit:

[The Letter not inserted in the Minutes.]

The Declaration of Independence, enclosed in the above-mentioned Letter, was then read, and is in the words following, that is to say:

"A Declaration by the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA in general Congress assembled.

"When, in the course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the Earth the separate and equal Station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent Respect to the Opinions of Mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the Separation.

"We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created Equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness—That to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these Ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its Foundations on such Principles, and organizing its Powers in such Form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient Causes; and accordingly all Experience hath shown, that Mankind are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the Forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of Abuses and Usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a Design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their Right, it is their Duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future Security. Such has been the patient Sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the Necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated Injuries and Usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid World.

"He has refused his assent to Laws the most wholesome and necessary for the publick Good.

"He has forbidden his Governours to pass Laws of immediate and pressing Importance, unless suspended in their Operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

"He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large Districts of People, unless those People would relinquish the Right of Representation in the Legislature, a Right inestimable to them, and formidable to Tyrants only.

"He has called together Legislative Bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their publick Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

"He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the People.

"He has refused for a long time, after such Dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative Powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of Invasion from without, and Convulsions within.

"He has endeavoured to prevent the Population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of Lands.

"He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

"He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone for the tenure of their Offices, and the amount and payment of their Salaries.

"He has erected a multitude of new Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their substance.

"He has kept among us, in times of Peace, Standing Armies, without the consent of our Legislatures.

"He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil Power.

"He has combined with others to subject us to a Jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution, and unacknowledged by our Laws; giving his assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

"For quartering large bodies of Armed Troops among us:

"For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from Punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

"For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the World:

"For imposing Taxes on us without our consent:

"For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury:

"For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences:

"For abolishing the free system of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an arbitrary Government, and enlarging its Boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

"For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

"For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

"He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us.

"He has plundered our Seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our Towns, and destroyed the Lives of our People.

"He is, at this time, transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of Death, Desolation, and Tyranny, already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous Ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized Nation.

"He has constrained our fellow-citizens taken captive on the high seas to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

"He has excited domestick Insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our Frontiers the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

"In every stage of these Oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms: our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated Injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the Ruler of a free People.

"Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their Legislature to extend an unwarrantable Jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in war, in peace, Friends.

"We, therefore, the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in GENERAL CONGRESS Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our Intentions, do, in the Name, and by the Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly Publish and Declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political Connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, they have full power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which INDEPENDENT STATES may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm Reliance on the Protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honour."

Ordered, That the said Letter and Declaration be referred to a Committee, to consist of Mr. Jay, Mr. Yates, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Brasher, and Mr. William Smith.

A Letter from Colonel Joseph Reed, Adjutant-General of the American Army, was received and read, and is in the words following, that is to say:

"Head-Quarters, New-York, July 5, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: I am directed by the General to solicit the attention of your honourable body to the Resolve of the Continental Congress touching the prisoners-of-war. By that resolve they are put wholly in the disposition of the Legislature of the respective Colonies, who are authorized to appoint a Commissary to make provision for them, and they are to be taken to such places as shall be deemed the most secure.

"There are now a number of prisoners in the Jail, some of them of some rank; their expenses run much higher than if in the country, and in our present situation extremely dangerous. His Excellency requests no time may be lost in removing not only those who have been taken prisoners-of-war, but those committed for practices against the State; and if some direction was taken with respect to the prisoners for debt, it would be proper, as there is too much reason to fear that, in case of an attack, if the doors were not opened by the Jailer, the whole would rise and force them open. Any assistance that may be wanted for this purpose, the General begs leave to tender. I have also in charge to mention to you the impropriety of suffering Burrows to continue in the care of the Jail, as from his connections, his appointment, and other circumstances, there is the utmost reason to suspect him.

"The distance to which the Congress has removed will make it very difficult to have their advice and assistance on occasions which frequently present. The General would suggest the propriety of their appointing a small Committee in the City to regulate such matters of internal concern as daily present themselves.

"The great hurry and engagements of the General prevent his writing personally; but he begs his respectful compliments may be made to your honourable body.

"I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

"JOSEPH REED, Adjutant-General."

Ordered, That the said Letter be referred to a Committee, to consist of Mr. John Van Cortlandt, Mr. Gansevoort, and Colonel L. Graham.

Ordered, That Mr. Miller, Mr. Jay, and Colonel Rensselaer, be a Committee to take into consideration and report on all the Letters received from Congress and our Delegates on the subject of the new Regiment to be raised in this Colony, and also Colonel Fleming's Letter, and the Letter of William Goforth,* of the 6th instant, complaining of being superseded in his rank, and resigning his commission as Major.

White-Plains, P. M., July 9, 1776.

The Convention met.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

NEW-YORK.—Mr. Bancker, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Mr. Jay, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Rutgers.

ALBANY.—Mr. Yates, Mr. Gansevoort, Colonel Rensselaer, Mr. Adgate.

SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Miller, Mr. Gelston, Mr. William Smith.

TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. W. Harper.

ORANGE.—Colonel Allison, Mr. Little.

CUMBERLAND.—Mr. Stephens, Mr. Sesscins.

DUTCHESS.—Mr. Platt, Mr. Crane, Mr. Sacket.

WESTCHESTER.—Colonel L. Graham, Colonel Van Cortlandt, Major Lockwood, Mr. Paulding, Captain J. Platt, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Mills, Colonel G. Drake, Mr. Tompkins, General Morris, Gouverneur Morris.

CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

QUEEN'S.—Mr. S. Townsend, Mr. J. Townsend, Mr. Van Wyck, Mr. Ketletas.

A Letter from P. T. Curtenius, of the 3d instant, requesting an advance of £5,000, on account; and mentioning that

* New-York, July 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Having, in the course of the last year, been called by you from private life, without any solicitation, to the most honourable of all services, that of my country, I obeyed the call, and have, to the utmost of my poor abilities, exerted myself for the general good; and having, on my return home, found my toil amply rewarded, inasmuch as I had so far fallen under your notice as to be appointed to a Majority, which promotion I view as great as I could reasonably expect, or even have desired. Nevertheless, when I look over the arrangement which you were pleased to make the last year, and call to mind that you then determined that the First Regiment should take rank of the Second, and find that I had the rank of fourth Captain in the First, and that Lewis DuBois, Esq., had the rank of fourth Captain, and Jacobus Bruyn, Esq., that of seventh in the Third Regiment, I view my appointment as speaking two things: first, that you have found men of greater merit than myself, and men who are better qualified for the publick service, of which I am extremely glad; and, secondly, that your now appointing me to serve under two junior officers, is no more than taking the most genteel way of discharging me from the publick service as an officer. Perhaps it may be said this is no time to dispute about rank. If so, I would just beg leave to inform you that, when in Canada last winter, I viewed this argument to be of great force, but at present conceive myself to be in the state in which I was when I left home, and beg leave to decline the service, and with the utmost deference to subscribe myself, as in reality I am, a true friend to the free and rising States of America, and at the same time your most obedient and most humble servant,

WILLIAM GOFORTH.

To the Hon. the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York.

the British had landed on Staten-Island without opposition, and detachments had advanced towards Bergen-Point and Elizabethtown, Thereupon, Ordered, That Peter Van B. Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, advance to Colonel Peter T. Curtenius the sum of £5,000, on account, and take his receipt for the same.

A Letter from Colonel Malcom, enclosing a Certificate from Doctor John Jones, of the qualifications of William Adams, as a Surgeon, and requesting the said Adams be appointed Surgeon to his Regiment, was read:

Ordered, That William Adams be, and he is hereby, appointed Surgeon to the Second Regiment of Militia, (raised for reinforcing the Continental Army at New-York,) whereof William Malcom, Esq., is Colonel.

Mr. Robert Yates, Mr. Veeder, Mr. Newhurst, Mr. Paris, Mr. H. Schenck, and Mr. Harper, took the general oath of secrecy.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration the Letter from our Delegates in Continental Congress, and the Declaration of Independence, reported the following, which was unanimously agreed to, and is in the words following, that is to say:

"In Convention of the Representatives of the State of } New-York, White-Plains, July 9, 1776. }

"Resolved, unanimously, That the reasons assigned by the Continental Congress for declaring the United Colonies free and independent States, are cogent and conclusive; and that while we lament the cruel necessity which has rendered that measure unavoidable, we approve the same, and will, at the risk of our lives and fortunes, join with the other Colonies in supporting it.

"Resolved, That a copy of the said Declaration, and the foregoing Resolution, be sent to the Chairman of the Committee of the County of Westchester, with orders to publish the same with beat of drum, at this place, on Thursday next, and to give directions that it be published with all convenient speed in the several Districts within the said County, and that copies thereof be forthwith transmitted to the other County Committees within the State of New-York, with orders to cause the same to be published in the several Districts of their respective Counties.

"Resolved, That five hundred copies of the Declaration of Independence, with the two last-mentioned Resolutions of this Congress for approving and proclaiming the same, be published in handbills, and sent to all the County Committees in this State.

"Resolved, That the Delegates of this State in Continental Congress, be, and they are hereby, authorized to consent to and adopt all such measures as they may deem conducive to the happiness and welfare of the United States of America."

Ordered, That copies of the aforesaid Resolutions be transmitted to the Continental Congress.

General Morris's daughter being extremely ill, he requested and obtained leave of absence.

Resolved, That the Sheriffs of this State do, and they are hereby respectively authorized and directed to retain and keep in their custody all persons of whatever kind which are or may be in their custody, until the further order of this Convention; or until such of them as may be confined for debt on civil process shall be released by the plaintiffs so brought against them.

Ordered, That the above-mentioned Resolution be published.

Ordered, That Mr. Bancker, Mr. Brasher, and Mr. Paulding be a Committee to consider of and report the proper places for the reception and means of support of the poor inhabitants of the City and County of New-York.

The Committee appointed this morning to take into consideration the Letter of Adjutant-General Reed, reported several Resolutions, which, being amended, were agreed to, and are in the words following, that is to say:

Resolved, That the Committee appointed to carry into execution certain Resolves of this Congress with respect to disaffected persons, and the Committee appointed to confer with General Washington, and examine into the conspiracy lately discovered, be, and they are hereby, united and made one Committee.

Resolved, That the following powers be, and they are hereby, given to them, in addition to those before vested in the said Committee, to wit:

A power to dispose of all Prisoners that shall be taken in, or brought to, the City of New-York, other than Prisoners of War.

A power to appoint a Commissary to provide for the said Prisoners.

A power to remove, if they should think necessary, all Prisoners confined in the City of New-York, other than Prisoners of War as aforesaid, to such place or places of safety as they shall think proper.

A power to inquire into the conduct of Burrows, the Jailer of the Jail in the City and County of New-York; and, if they should think it necessary that he should be removed from his office, to request the Sheriff to appoint a more suitable person in his stead.

And whereas this Congress, on the 30th June last, being then about to adjourn to this place, were under the necessity of giving General Washington the trouble of apprehending and securing such dangerous and disaffected persons as he should think necessary for the security of this Colony and the liberties of America; and whereas that business may now be conveniently executed by the above-mentioned Committee:
